DEDICATION.

To the dear, departed ones, whose busy hands changed the giant forests into fertile fields; whose love of home established the hearthstones, the tender ties of which yet bind together the heartstrings of the native born; whose patriotism gave the best of their lives and substance for the defense of their country; whose graves make sacred the soil their feet so often trod.

FOREWORD

All life and achievement is evolution; present wisdom comes from past experience, and present commercial prosperity has come only from past exertion and suffering. The deeds and motives of the men who have gone before have been instrumental in shaping the destinies of later communities and states. The development of a new country was at once a task and a privilege. It required great courage, sacrifice and privation. Compare the present conditions of the people of Clinton county, Ohio, with what they were one hundred years ago. From a trackless wilderness and virgin land, it has come to be a center of prosperity and civilization, with millions of wealth, systems of railways, grand educational institutions, splendid industries and immense agricultural and mineral productions. Can any thinking person be insensible to the fascination of the study which discloses the aspirations and efforts of the early pioneers who so strongly laid the foundation upon which has been reared the magnificent prosperity of later days? To perpetuate the story of these people and to trace and record the social, political and industrial progress of the community from its first inception, is the function of the local historian. A sincere purpose to preserve facts and personal memoirs that are deserving of perpetuation, and which unite the present to the past, is the motive for the present publication. A specially valuable and interesting department is that one devoted to the sketches of representative citizens of these counties whose records deserve preservation because of their worth, effort and accomplishment. The publishers desire to extend their thanks to the gentlemen who have so faithfully labored to this end. Thanks are also due to the citizens of Clinton county for the uniform kindness with which they have regarded this undertaking, and for their many services rendered in the gaining of necessary information.

In placing the "History of Clinton county, Ohio," before the citizens, the publishers can conscientiously claim that they have carried out the plan as outlined in the prospectus. Every biographical sketch in the work has been submitted to the party interested, for correction, and therefore any error of fact, if there be any, is solely due to the person for whom the sketch was prepared. Confident that our effort to please will fully meet the approbation of the public, we are,

Respectfully,

THE PUBLISHERS.

CHAPTER I.

RELATED STATE HISTORY.

The first white men to set foot upon the Northwest Territory were French traders and missionaries under the leadership of La Salle. This was about the year 1670, and subsequent discoveries and explorations in this region by the French gave that nation practically undisputed possession of all the territory organized in 1787 as the Northwest Territory. It is true that the English colonies of Virginia, Connecticut and Massachusetts claimed that their charters extended their grants westward to the Mississippi river. However, France claimed this territory and successfully maintained possession of it until the close of the French and Indian War in 1763. At that time the treaty of Paris transferred all of the French claims east of the Mississippi river to England as well as all claims of France to territory on the mainland of North America. For the next twenty years the Northwest Territory was under the undisputed control of England, but became a part of the United States by the treaty which terminated the Revolutionary War in 1783. Thus the flags of three nations have floated over the territory now comprehended within the present state of Ohio—the tri-color of France, the union jack of England and the stars and stripes of the United States.

History will record the fact that there was another nation, however, which claimed possession of this territory and, while the Indians can hardly be called a nation, yet they made a gallant fight to retain their hunting grounds. The real owners of this territory struggled against heavy odds to maintain their supremacy and it was not until the battle of Tippecanoe, in the fall of 1811, that the Indians gave up the unequal struggle. Tecumseh, the Washington of his race, fought fiercely to save this territory for his people, but the white man finally overwhelmed him, and "Lo, the poor Indian" was pushed westward across the Mississippi. The history of the Northwest Territory is full of the bitter fights which the Indian waged in trying to drive the white man out, and the defeat which the Indians inflicted on General St. Clair on November 4, 1792, will go down in the annals of American history as the worst defeat which an American army ever suffered at the hands of the Indians. The greatest battle which has ever been fought in the United States against the Indians occurred in the state of Ohio. This was the battle of Fallen Timbers, and occurred August 20, 1794, the scene of the battle being within the present county of Defiance. After the close of the Revolutionary War the Indians, urged on by the British, caused the settlers in the Northwest Territory continual trouble and defeated every detachment sent against them previous to their defeat by Gen. Anthony Wayne at the battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794. Although there was some trouble with the Indians after this time, they never offered serious resistance after this memorable defeat until the fall of 1811, when Gen. William Henry Harrison completely routed them at the battle of Tippecanoe.

TERRITORY NORTHWEST OF THE OHIO (1670-1754).

Ohio was the first state created out of the old Northwest Territory, although Indiana had been previously organized as a territory. When the land comprehended within the Northwest Territory was discovered by the French under La Salle about 1670, it was a battle ground of various Indian tribes, although the Eries, who were located along the shores of Lake Erie, were the only ones with a more or less definite territory.

From 1670 to 1763, the close of the French and Indian War, the French were in possession of this teritory and established their claims in a positive manner by extensive exploration and scattered settlements. The chief centers of French settlement were at Detroit, Vincennes, Kaskaskia, Fort Crevecour and at several missionary stations around the shores of the great lakes. The French did not succeed in doing this without incurring the hostility of the Iroquois Indians, a bitter enmity which was brought about chiefly because the French helped the Shawnees, Wyandots and Miamis to drive the Iroquois out of the territory west of the Muskingum river in Ohio.

It must not be forgotten that the English also laid claim to the Northwest Territory, basing their claim on the discoveries of the Cabots and the subsequent charters of Virginia, Massachusetts and Connecticut. These charters extended the limits of these three colonies westward to the Pacific ocean, although, as a matter of fact, none of the three colonies made a settlement west of the Alleghanies until after the Revolutionary War. New York sought to strengthen her claim to territory west of the Alleghanies in 1701, by getting from the Iroquois, the bitter enemies of the French, a grant to the territory from which the French and their Indian allies had previously expelled them. Athough this grant was renewed in 1726 and again confirmed in 1744, it gave New York only a nominal claim and one which was never recognized by the French in any way.

English traders from Pennsylvania and Virginia began in 1730 to pay more attention to the claims of their country west of the Alleghanies and north of the Ohio river. When their activities reached the ears of the French the governor of French Canada sent Celeron de Bienville up and down the Ohio and the rivers and streams running into it from the north and took formal possession of the territory by planting lead plates at the mouth of every river and stream of any importance. This peculiar method of the French in seeking to establish their claims occurred in the year 1749 and opened the eyes of England to the necessity of taking some immediate action. George II, the king of England at the time, at once granted a charter for the first Ohio Company (there were two others by the same name later organized), composed of London merchants and enterprising Virginians, and the company at once proceeded to formulate plans to secure possession of the territory north of the Ohio and west of the Mississippi. Christopher Gist was sent down the Ohio river in 1750 to explore the country as far west as the mouth of the Scioto river, and made several treaties with the Indians. Things were now rapidly approaching a crisis and it was soon evident that there would be a struggle of arms between England and France for the disputed region. In 1754 the English started to build a fort at the confluence of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, on the site of the present city of Pittsburgh, but before the fort was completed the French appeared on the scene, drove the English away and finished the fort which had been begun.

FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR (1754-63.)

The crisis had finally come. The struggle which followed between the two nations ultimately resulted in the expulsion of the French from the mainland of America as well as from the immediate territory in dispute. The war is known in America as the French and Indian War and in the history of the world as the Seven Years' War, the latter designation being due to the fact that it lasted that length of time. The struggle developed into a world-wide conflict and the two nations fought over three continents, America, Europe and Asia. It is not within the province of this resume of the history of Ohio to go into the details of this memorable struggle. It is sufficient for the purpose at hand to state that the treaty of Paris, which terminated the war in 1763, left France without any of her former possessions on the mainland of America.

PONTIAC'S CONSPIRACY (1763-64).

With the English in control of America east of the Mississippi river and the French regime forever ended, the Indians next command the attention of the historian who deals with the Northwest Territory. The French were undoubtedly responsible for stirring up their former Indian allies and Pontiac's conspiracy must be credited to the influence of that nation. This formidable uprising was successfully overthrown by Henry Bouquet, who led an expedition in 1764 into the present state of Ohio and compelled the Wyandots, Delawares and Shawnees to sue for peace.

NORTHWEST TERRITORY AND QUEBEC ACT.

From 1764 to 1774, no events of particular importance occurred within the territory north of the Ohio river, but in the latter year (June 22, 1774), England, then at the breaking point with the colonies, passed the Quebec act, which attached this territory to the province of Quebec for administrative purposes. This intensified the feeling of resentment which the colonies bore against their mother country and is given specific mention in their list of grievances which they enumerated in their Declaration of Independence. The Revolutionary War came on at once and this act, of course, was never put into execution.

REVOLUTIONARY PERIOD (1775-83).

During the War of Independence (1775-1783), the various states with claims to western lands agreed with the Continental Congress to surrender their claims to the national government. In fact, the Articles of Confederation were not signed until all of the states had agreed to do this, and Maryland withheld her assent to the articles until March 1, 1780, on this account. In accordance with this agreement New York ceded her claim to the United States in 1780, Virginia in 1784, Massachusetts in 1785 and Connecticut in 1786, although the latter state excepted a one-hundred-and-twenty-mile strip of three million five hundred thousand acres bordering on Lake Erie. This strip was formally relinquished in 1800, with the understanding that the United States would guarantee the titles already issued by that state. Virginia was also allowed a reservation, known as the Virginia Military District, which lay between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, the same being for distribution among her Revolutionary veterans. There is one other fact which should be mentioned in connection with the territory north of the Ohio in the Revolutionary period. This was the memorable conquest of the territory by Gen. George Rogers Clark. During the years 1778 and 1779, this redoubtable leader captured Kaskaskia, Cahokia and Vincennes and thereby drove the English out of the Northwest Territory. It is probable that this notable campaign secured this territory for the Americans and that without it we would not have had it included in our possessions in the treaty which closed the Revolutionary War.

FIRST SURVEYS AND EARLY SETTLERS.

The next period in the history of the territory north of the Ohio begins with the passage of a congressional act (May 20, 1785), which provided for the present system of land surveys into townships six miles square. As soon as this was put into operation, settlers—and most Revolutionary soldiers—began to pour into the newly surveyed territiry. A second Ohio Company was organized in the spring of 1786, made up chiefly of Revolutionary officers and soldiers from New England, and this company proposed to establish a state somewhere between Lake Erie and the Ohio river. At this juncture Congress realized that definite steps should be made at once for some kind of government over this extensive territory, a territory which now includes the present states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and about a third of Minnesota. Various plans were proposed in Congress and most of the session of 1786 and the first half of 1787 were consumed in trying to formulate a suitable form of government for the extensive territory. The result of all these deliberations resulted in the famous Ordinance of 1787, which was finally passed on July 13, 1787.

ORDINANCE OF 1787.

There have been many volumes written about this instrument of government and to this day there is a difference of opinion as to who was its author. The present article can do no more than merely sketch its outline and set forth the main provisions. It was intended to provide only a temporary government and to serve until such a time as the population of the territory would warrant the creation of states with the same rights and privileges which the thirteen original states enjoyed. It stipulated that not less than three nor more than five states should ever be created out of the whole territory and the maximum number was finally organized, although it was not until 1848 that the last state, Wisconsin, was admitted to the Union. The third article, "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged," has given these five states the basis for their excellent system of public schools, state normals, colleges and universities. Probably the most widely discussed article was the sixth, which provided that slavery and involuntary servitude should never be permitted within the territory and by the use of the word "forever" made the territory free for all time. It is interesting to note in this connection that both Indiana and Illinois before their admission to the Union sought to have this provision set aside, but every petition from the two states was refused by Congress in accordance with the provision of the Ordinance.

FIRST STAGE OF GOVERNMENT UNDER THE ORDINANCE.

The ordinance contemplated two grades of territorial government. During the operation of the first grade of government the governor, his secretary and the three judges provided by the ordinance were to be appointed by Congress and the governor in turn was to appoint "such magistrates and other civil officers in each county and township as he shall deem necessary for the preservation of the peace and good will of the same." After the federal government was organized a statutory provision took the appointment of these officers out of the hands of Congress and placed it in the hands of the President of the United States. All executive authority was given to the governor, all judicial authority to the three judges, while the governor and judges, in joint session, constituted the legislative body. This means that during the first stage of territorial government the people had absolutely no voice in the affairs of government and this state of affairs lasted until 1799, a period of twelve years.

SECOND STAGE OF GOVERNMENT UNDER THE ORDINANCE.

The second stage of government in the territory was to begin whenever the governor was satisfied that there were at least five thousand free male inhabitants of the age of twenty-one and above. The main difference between the first and second stages of territorial government lay in the fact that the legislative functions were taken from the governor and judges and given to a "general assembly or legislature." The ordinance provided for the election of one representative for each five hundred free male inhabitants, the tenure of the office to be two years. While the members of the lower house were to be elected by the qualified voters of the territory, the upper house, to consist of five members, were to be appointed by Congress in a somewhat complicated manner. The house of representatives were to select ten men and these ten names were to be sent to Congress and out of this number five were to be selected by Congress. This provision, like the appointment of the governor, was later changed so as to make the upper house the appointees of the President of the United States. The five men so selected were called councilors and held office for five years.

ORGANIZATION OF THE NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

The first governor of the newly organized territory was Gen. Arthur St. Clair, a gallant soldier of the Revolution, who was appointed on October 5, 1787, and ordered to report for duty on the first of the following February. He held the office until November 22, 1802, when he was dismissed by President Jefferson "for the disorganizing spirit, and tendency of every example, violating the rules of conduct enjoined by his public station, as displayed in his address to the convention." The governor's duties were performed by his secretary, Charles W. Byrd, until March 1, 1803, when the state officials took their office. The first judges appointed were Samuel Holden Parsons, James Mitchell Varnum and John Armstrong. Before the time came for the judges to qualify, Armstrong resigned and John Cleves Symmes was appointed in his place. The first secretary was Winthrop Sargent, who held the position until he was appointed governor of Mississippi Territory by the President on May 2, 1798. Sargent was succeeded by William Henry Harrison, who was appointed by the President on June 26, 1798, and confirmed by the Senate two days later. Harrison was later elected as the first delegate of the organized Northwest Territory to Congress and the President then appointed Charles Willing Byrd as secretary of the Territory, Byrd's appointment being confirmed by the Senate on December 31, 1799.

REPRESENTATIVE STAGE OF GOVERNMENT (1799-1803).

The Northwest Territory remained under the government of the first stage until September 16, 1799, when it formally advanced to the second or representative stage. In the summer of 1798 Governor St. Clair had ascertained that the territory had a population of at least five thousand free male inhabitants and, in accordance with the provisions of the Ordinance of 1787, was ready to make the change in its form of government. On October 29, 1798, the governor issued a proclamation to the qualified voters of the territory directing them to choose members for the lower house of the Territorial Legislature at an election to be held on the third Monday of the following December. The twenty-two members so elected met on January 16, 1799, and, pursuant to the provisions of the ordinance, selected the ten men from whom the President of the United States later chose five for the Legislative Council. They then adjourned to meet on September 16, 1799, but since there was not a quorum on that day they held adjourned sessions until the 23rd, at which time a quorum was present.

At the time the change in the form of government went into effect there were only nine counties in the whole territory. These counties had been organized either by the governor or his secretary. The following table gives the nine counties organized before 1799, with the dates of their organization and the number of legislators proportioned to each by the governor:

County.	Date of organization.	Number of representatives.
Washington	July 27, 1788	2
Hamilton	January 4, 1790	7
St. Clair	April 27, 1790	1
Knox	June 20, 1790	1
Randolph	October 5, 1795	1
Wayne	August 6, 1796	3
Adams	July 10, 1797	2
Jefferson	July 29, 1797	1
Ross	August 20, 1798	4

FIRST TERRITORIAL LEGISLATURE OF NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

The twenty-two representatives and five councilors were the first representative body to meet in the Northwest Territory and they represented a constituency scattered over a territory of more than two hundred and sixty-five thousand square miles, an area greater than Germany or France, or even Austria-Hungary. It would be interesting to tell something of the deliberations of these twenty-seven sterling pioneers, but the limits of the present article forbid. It is necessary, however, to make mention of one important thing which they did in view of the fact that it throws much light on the subsequent history of the Northwest Territory.

DIVISION OF 1800.

The Legislature was authorized to elect a delegate to Congress and two candidates for the honor presented their names to the Legislature, William Henry Harrison and Arthur St. Clair, Jr., the son of the governor. The Legislature, by a joint ballot on October 3, 1799, elected Harrison by a vote of eleven to ten. The defeat of his son undoubtedly had considerable to do with the subsequent estrangement which arose between the governor and his legislature and incidentally hastened the division of the Northwest Territory. Within two years from the time the territory had advanced to the second stage of government the division had taken place. On May 7, 1800, Congress passed an act dividing the Northwest Territory by a line drawn from the mouth of the Kentucky river to Fort Recovery, in Mercer county, Ohio, and thence due north to the boundary line between the United States and Canada. Governor St. Clair favored the division because he thought it would delay the organization of a state and thus give him a longer lease on his position, but he did not favor the division as finally determined. He was constantly growing in disfavor with the people on account of his overbearing manner and he felt that he would get rid of some of his bitterest enemies if the western inhabitants were set off into a new territory. However, the most of the credit for the division must be given to Harrison, who, as a delegate to Congress, was in a position to have the most influence. Harrison also was satisfied that in case a new territory should be formed he would be appointed its first governor and he was not disappointed. The territory west of the line above mentioned was immediately organized and designated as Indiana Territory, while the eastern portion retained the existing government and the old name—Northwest Territory. It is frequently overlooked that the Northwest Territory existed in fact and in name up until March 1, 1803.

CENSUS OF NORTHWEST TERRITORY IN 1800.

The division of 1800 left the Northwest Territory with only about one-third of its original area. The census of the territory taken by the United States government in 1800 showed it to have a total population of forty-five thousand three hundred and sixty-five, which fell short by about fifteen thousand of being sufficient for the creation of a state as provided by the Ordinance of 1787, which fixed the minimum population at sixty thousand. The counties left in the Northwest Territory, with their respective population, are set forth in the appended table, all of which were within the present state of Ohio, except Wayne:

Adams	3,432
Hamilton	14,632
Jefferson	8,766
Ross	8,540
Trumbull	1,302
Washington	5,427
Wayne	3,206
Total	45,365

The population as classified by the census with respect to age and sex is interesting and particularly so in showing that considerably more than one-third of the total population were children under ten years of age.

	Males.	Females.
Whites up to ten years of age	9,362	8,644
Whites from ten to sixteen	3,647	3,353
Whites from sixteen to twenty-six	4,636	3,861
Whites from twenty-six to forty-five	4,833	3,342
Whites forty-five and upward	1,955	1,395
Total	24,433	20,595
Total of both sexes		45,028
Total of other persons, not Indians		337
Grand total		45,365

A digression is necessary at this point in order to trace the growth of settlement of the territory now within the present state of Ohio up to 1803, when it was admitted to the Union as a state. Marietta, founded in July, 1788, by the Ohio Company, is the oldest permanent settlement in the state. A number of New Jersey settlers were organized by John Cleves Symmes, and Symmes succeeded in securing a grant of land from Congress (1788-1792) containing two hundred forty-eight thousand five hundred and forty acres, located between the Great Miami and Little Miami rivers. This grant of land is known in Ohio history as the Symmes Purchase and contained the settlements of Columbia (1788) and Cincinnati (1789), although the latter place was first christened Losantiville. The man who devised this name exercised no small amount of ingenuity in its manufacture. The proposed settlement happened to be located at the mouth of the Licking river, and this circumstance, with a little knowledge of Latin and a vivid imagination, was responsible for this hybrid word. The Latin word for town is "villa" and for mouth "os." These three Latin words account for the completed word, with the exception of the "L," and this letter is the initial letter of Licking. To make the word clear it must be read backward, syllable at a time—thus L-os-anti-ville, which being interpreted means the town opposite the mouth of the Licking.

The Virginia Military District, to which reference has been made, was settled largely by people from that state. The Connecticut Reserve, along Lake Erie, attracted many settlers from that state, among whom should be mentioned Moses Cleaveland, who, in 1796, founded the city which bears his name. The northern part of the state did not begin to fill up rapidly until after 1832, when the Ohio-Erie canal was opened for traffic. There have been estimates running from fifteen to twenty thousand as to the number of people who floated down the Ohio river within a year after the Ordinance of 1787 went into effect.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION (1788-1810).

It has already been stated that there were nine counties within the Northwest Territory in 1799, when it advanced to the second stage of territorial government. According to the provisions of the ordinance, the creation of new counties was in the hands of the governor, although after the federal constitution went into effect the secretary was also given the same power. Knox and Wayne counties were started by Secretary Winthrop Sargent according to this provision. The state of Ohio is now divided into eighty-eight counties, ten of which were created before the state was admitted to the Union on March 1, 1803. The counties organized by Governor St. Clair, or his secretary, from 1788, when Washington county was organized, up to 1803, when the state was admitted to the Union, are ten in number: Washington, Hamilton, Wayne, Adams, Jefferson, Ross, Trumbull, Clermont, Fairfield and Belmont. The dates of the creation of the first six have already been given. Trumbull county was organized on July 10, 1800; Clermont and Fairfield, December 9, 1800; Belmont, September 7, 1801.

Between the years 1803 and 1810, when Fayette county was organized, there were no less than twenty-four counties organized within the state of Ohio. The first session of the General Assembly of the state organized eight counties, as follow: Franklin, Gallia, Greene, Scioto, Warren, Butler, Montgomery and Columbiana. Muskingum started its independent existence on the first day of March, 1804. In 1805 there were four counties created, Champaign, Athens, Geauga and Highland. The session of 1807 added four more to the rapidly growing state, Miami, Ashtabula, Cuyahoga and Portage. The following year saw six new counties opened for entry, Delaware, Stark, Tuscarawas, Preble, Knox and Licking. One county, Huron, was created in 1899. The five counties organized in 1810 included Fayette, Pickaway, Guernsey, Clinton and Madison. This makes a total of thirty-nine counties up to and including the year 1810. In this year Cincinnati, the largest city of the state, boasted of a population of two thousand three hundred and twenty.

INDIAN WARS (1787-1803).

The period from 1787 to 1803 in the Northwest Territory was marked by several bitter conflicts with the Indians. Just as at the close of the French and Indian War had the French stirred up the Indians against the Americans, so at the close of the Revolutionary War did the English do the same thing. This inciting of the Indians by the British was one of the causes of the War of 1812, a struggle which has very appropriately been called the second War of Independence. The various uprisings of the Indians up to 1794 retarded the influx of settlers and was a constant menace to those who did venture into the territory. Three distinct campaigns were waged against the Indians during this period before they were finally subdued. The first campaign was under the command of Gen. Josiah Harmar, 1790, and resulted in a decisive defeat for the whites. The second expedition was under the leadership of Gen. Arthur St. Clair, the governor of the territory, and was marked by one of the worst defeats every suffered by an American army at the hands of the Indians. A lack of knowledge of Indian methods of warfare, combined with reckless mismanagement, sufficiently accounts for both disasters. It remained for Gen. Anthony Wayne, the "Mad Anthony," of Revolutionary fame, to bring the Indians to terms. The battle which closed his campaign against the Indians is known as the battle of Fallen Timbers, and was fought on August 20, 1794. The scene of the battle lies along the Maumee river, within the limits of the present county of Defiance. This crushing defeat of the Indians, a rout in which they had lost twelve out of thirteen chiefs, was so complete that the Indians were glad to sue for peace. On June 10, 1795, delegates from the various Indian tribes, headed by their chiefs, met at Greenville, Ohio, to formulate a treaty. The United States government appointed General Wayne as commissioner plenipotentiary to draft the treaty and, after nearly two months of bickering, a treaty was drawn up on August 3, 1795. It was signed by General Wayne on behalf of the United States and by ninety chiefs and the delegates of twelve interested tribes. The treaty was faithfully kept by the Indians and ever afterwards Little Turtle, the real leader of the Indians, was a true friend of the whites. It may be said that this battle of Fallen Timbers was the most important battle fought in America between the close of the War for Independence and the battle of Tippecanoe in the fall of 1811. To Gen. Anthony Wayne will remain the honor of opening the way for permanent settlement of the Northwest Territory.

THE FORMATION OF A NEW STATE.

The three years intervening between the creation of Indiana Territory (May 7, 1800), and the admission of Ohio to the Union (March 1, 1803), are marked by an acrimonious struggle, during which Governor St. Clair was constantly growing in disfavor with his Legislature and the great mass of the people of the territory. The Legislature wanted a state formed as soon as possible, and succeeded in getting Congress to pass an act, April 30, 1802, authorizing the calling of a constitutional convention. This act established the limits of the proposed new state, as follow: "That part of the Northwest Territory bounded east by Pennsylvania, south by the Ohio river, west by a line drawn from the mouth of the Big Miami river due north to an east and west line passing through the south extremity of Lake Michigan, and by this line and the Canada line through Lake Erie to the west line of Pennsylvania." Since these boundaries omitted the eastern half of the present state of Michigan, which had been left a part of the Northwest Territory by the division of May 7, 1800, it was denounced as a fraud by the Federalists in the omitted territory. However, it is very plain that Congress carried out the intent of the Ordinance of 1787 by their act and the charge of political trickery fails of substantiation in the light of the specific provisions therein set forth regarding the creation of states out of the Northwest Territory. The enabling act provided for an election of delegates to the constitutional convention to be held in September, of the same year (1802), the delegates to meet at Chillicothe on the first Monday of the following November. The thirty-five delegates met at the appointed time and by a vote of thirty-four to one, the negative vote being cast by Ephraim Cutler, decided to proceed at once to the organization of a state government and the formation of a constitution. The convention was in session until November 29th, at which time it had completed the first constitution for the state and the one which lasted until 1851, when a second constitution was adopted.

WHEN WAS OHIO ADMITTED TO THE UNION?

It is interesting to note the difficulty which Ohio historians have had in trying to fix upon the date which marks the formal admission of the state to the Union.

The natal day of Ohio has given rise to more dispute than the natal day of any other state in the Union. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that Congress never passed an act formally admitting it to the Union. There have been no less than five dates assigned by as many different authorities, and each group of historians substantiate their claim by the citation of facts. These five dates are as follow: April 30, 1802; November 29, 1802; February 19, 1803; March 1, 1803; March 3, 1803.

The first date (April 30, 1802), has for its chief sponsor the editor of the "United States Statutes at Large." This date is not tenable at all, since the territorial judges were in office for several months after this date and were, by congressional act of February 21, 1806, paid their full salaries up to March 1, 1803. The second date (November 29, 1802), is advanced by Hickey, in his volume, "The Constitution," on the ground that the constitution was adopted on that day. The third date (February 19, 1803), has been held by several good authorities, notably, Caleb Atwater, in his "Political Manual;" G. W. Pascal, in his "Annotated Constitution," and the late president of Marietta College, I. W. Andrews. It was upon this date that Congress passed an act to "provide for the due execution of the laws of the United States within the state of Ohio." This would seem to indicate that Congress recognized February 19, 1803, as the date of the admission of Ohio to the Union, but when it is recalled that Congress had not yet appointed the necessary judicial officers, it must be concluded that this is not the proper date. The fourth date (March 1, 1803), is now recognized officially as the actual day on which Ohio formally entered the Union, although it was an act of Congress passed nearly three years later which definitely settled this fact. The question arose in 1806 in Congress regarding the payment of the territorial officers, and the act of February 21st of that year ordered that the governor and judges be paid for their services up to March 1, 1803. There can be no question but that Congress placed its official approval on this date as being the first day of Ohio's existence as a separate state. The fifth and last date (March 3, 1803), was advanced as the real date of the admission of the state, for the reason that on this date Congress gave its approval to certain changes in the constitution of the state which had been adopted on November 29, 1802. These changes related to the disposition of certain school lands within the state and were of minor importance and in no sense advocated any radical changes in the constitution of the state. However, on March 3, 1803, the state had been in full operation for a space of three days and exercising all the rights and privileges of a state; the governor had been installed; the Legislature was in session and the various state officials were discharging their duties in accordance with the constitution. Thus it must be concluded from all available evidence that Ohio was admitted to the Union on March 1, 1803.

CAPITALS OF NORTHWEST TERRITORY AND OHIO.

The capital of the Northwest Territory was located within the present limits of Ohio during the whole existence of the Territory both before and after the division of the Territory in 1800. When the Ordinance of 1787 was formally put into operation, on July 17, 1788, the capital was established at Marietta, the name being chosen by the directors of the Ohio Company on July 2, 1788. The name of Marietta was selected in honor of the French Queen Marie Antoinette, compounded by a curious combination of the first and last syllables of her name.

The capital remained at Marietta until 1800, when it was moved by the congressional act of May 7th of that year to Chillicothe and by the constitution adopted in 1802 the capital was to remain there at least until 1808. The Legislaure of 1809 moved the capital to Zanesville until such time as a permanent site should be selected. The Legislature at the same time that it moved the capital to Zanesville appointed commissioners to report at the following sessions "the most eligible and central spot for permanently establishing it." The approaching War of 1812 made it necessary to take the capital back to Chillicothe, where there was less danger from attack by the Indians and British. The commissioners appointed by the Legislature of 1809 selected a small village by the name of Dublin, on the Scioto, about fourteen miles north of Columbus, but the Legislature refused to abide by their choice.

The capital was permanently located at Columbus by the legislative act of February 14, 1812, although no less than nine different sites were under consideration before the final decision was made. The act selecting the site did not choose a name for the proposed city and this honor belongs to Joseph Foos, the senator from Franklin county, who had been largely instrumental in the selection of the Legislature. At that time there was a solitary log cabin on the site and the whole tract was covered with a dense forest. The act of February 17, 1816, formally designated Columbus as the capital "from and after the second Tuesday of October, 1816." During the War of 1812, and until the buildings were ready at Columbus, the capital remained at Chillicothe.

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF OHIO.

The state of Ohio has had four constitutional conventions: 1802, 1850-51, 1873-74 and 1912. The constitution of 1802, it is interesting to note, was never submitted to the people for ratification. Between the adoption of the first and second constitutions there was an effort to hold a constitutional convention. A resolution, passed December 25, 1818, authorized a vote on the question of holding a constitutional convention, but at the election which was subsequently held it was decided adversely by a vote of 29,315 to 6,987.

The main facts concerning the second constitutional convention may be briefly summed up, as follow: The Legislature on October 9, 1849, authorized a vote on the question of holding a convention and the voters of the state cast a majority of 94,531 in favor of the constitutional convention. The vote stood 145,698 for and 51,167 against the convention. On April 1, 1850, the one hundred and eight delegates were elected and on the 6th of the following May they met at Columbus. The convention was in continous session until July 9, 1850, and then, not having yet completed their deliberations, adjourned to meet again on December 2, 1850. The second session continued to hold daily meetings until March 10, 1851, when it finally concluded its labors after having spent a total of one hundred and sixty-three days. The constitution was submitted to the people of the state on June 17, 1851, and adopted by a vote of 125,564 to 109,276.

An attempt to adopt a new constitution was made in 1874, but failed. On March 30, 1871, the Legislature provided for a vote on the question of holding a constitutional convention and at an election held October 10, 1871, it was decided, by a vote of 267,618 to 104,231, to hold such a convention. On April 6, 1873, the one hundred and five delegates to the convention were elected and on the 13th of the following month they met and organized. The convention continued in session from that date until August 8th, and, after a recess, met on December 2d and remained in continuous session until May 15th of the following year. The convention held daily sessions for one hundred and eighty days, one of the longest constitutional conventions ever held in the United States. With all this deliberation it would seem that a satisfactory constitution could have been framed, but the voters of the state, on August 18, 1874, rejected it by a vote of 250,169 to 102,885. This expensive attempt to make a new constitution was sufficient to thwart all efforts along this line for several years. However, the changes in economic, social and industrial conditions became more pronounced year by year, and on March 9, 1909, the Legislature submitted the question of holding a constitutional convention. At an election held on November 8, 1910, it was decided, by a vote of 693,263 to 67,718, to select delegates to a constitutional convention. The convention met on the second Tuesday of January, 1912, and remained in session until June 8, 1912, when it finally concluded its labors. This convention submitted forty-two changes in the existing constitution and on September 3rd of the same year the qualified voters of the state accepted all but eight of the proposed amendments. The eight amendments lost are as follow: Suffrage, good roads, advertising, injunctions, capital punishment, voting machines, eligibility of women and elimination of word "white" from the constitution. The amendments which carried by various majorities concerned the following subjects: Jury system, depositions, suits, wrongful death, initiative and referendum, investigations, limiting veto, mechanics' lien, welfare, compensations, conservation of natural resources, eight-hour day, removal of officials, expert testimony, land titles, prison contracts, extra sessions, reform of the judiciary, county judges, justices, school boards, school commissioners, insurance, abolishing of board of public works, taxation, corporations, double liability, state printing, civil service, submission of amendments, home rule for cities, schedule and license. The fight was the most bitter on woman's suffrage and the initiative and referendum. The vote on the first proposition was 249,420 to 336,875, and was defeated largely on account of the activity of the liquor interests. The initiative and referendum carried by a vote of 312,592 to 231,312, despite the fact that every ruse and trick known to professional politicians was used to compass its defeat.

On November 3, 1914, there were four constitutional amendments submitted to the voters of the state and the two which caused the most discussion, viz., woman's suffrage and prohibition, were defeated. The other two amendments related to home rule for cities and the regulation of the liquor traffic.

MILITARY RECORD.

The state of Ohio has had its citizens in four wars in which the United States has engaged since 1803: the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War. It is very unfortunate that the public records of Ohio contain no list of the soldiers of the state who fought in the War of 1812, although large numbers of the citizens served in the field under various commanders. The records as regards the Mexican War are fairly complete and show that a total of 5,536 men were sent to the front by the state. When the call was first issued for troops, Ohio was called upon to furnish three thousand men, and within a short time forty companies reported at Camp

Washington, near Cincinnati. Thirty companies were formed into three regiments, commanded by Cols. Alexander M. Mitchell, George W. Morgan and Samuel R. Curtis. These troops were sent down the Ohio in July, 1846, and joined General Taylor on the Rio Grande. In 1847 additional troops were sent from Ohio, but none of them saw any active service. The regiment under the command of Mitchell was the only one to take part in a battle, and it distinguished itself in the storming of Monterey. The state of Ohio suffered a severe loss in the death of Brig.-Gen. Thomas L. Hammer, one of the most prominent men of the state at that time. He was a member of Congress at the time of the opening of the war, but left Congress, enlisted as a private and soon after received a commission as brigadier-general. He was in the operations around Monterey and shortly afterward was stricken with a fatal disease and died on December 30, 1846.

The part which Ohio played in the Civil War can be only briefly noticed in this resume of the history of the state. That Ohio did her full duty as a loyal member of the Union is a fact which is known to everyone. Within twenty-four hours from the time the President issued his first call for troops on April 16, 1860, the Legislature had passed a bill appropriating one million dollars for military purposes. Two days later (April 19th) two regiments of Ohio troops left by rail for Washington. The ease and quickness with which this was accomplished is an indication of the intense loyalty of the state. It is a glowing tribute to the state of Ohio that although there were only thirteen regiments assigned to the state under the first call, enough men presented themselves to make more than seventy regiments. This outburst of loyalty was such that the Legislature authorized the governor to accept ten more regiments, and the state itself equipped and paid these additional men and enrolled them for the defense of the state. By October 1, 1862, the state had enrolled militia to the number of 425,147 and the state sent out for duty outside of its own limits 319,659 men, although their quota was only 306,322. This gives the state the honor of furnishing more than one-tenth of the total enlistment of men in the Northern army. In number of troops furnished, Ohio was third among all the state and in losses was second. The soldiers were a part of every army, participated in every campaign, fought in every important battle from Bull Run to Bentonville, from Sabine Cross Roads to Gettysburg. No less than forty-three Ohio regiments of infantry were present at the sanguinary engagement at Missionary Ridge and they were in like proportion at the other battles. Twelve thousand brave Ohio men were killed or mortally wounded and at least forty thousand received wounds of some kind. Thirteen thousand died of disease in the service and twenty thousand were discharged for disability arising from wounds or disease. These figures give some idea of the prominent part which the soldiers of Ohio played in the great struggle.

It is pertinent to say something of the activity of the anti-war party in the state during the time the struggle was going on. In the summer of 1863 the Democrats of the state nominated Vallandigham for governor, a man who was very outspoken in his denunciation of the war, but John Brough, a stanch Union man, had no difficulty in defeating him for the governorship. The part which Vallandigham subsequently played in the history of this state is sufficient proof that it was for the best interests of the state that he was defeated.

The Spanish-American War of 1898 has been he last one in which troops from Ohio have taken any part. Following the call of President McKinley for seventy-five thousand volunteers, Ohio had no difficulty in filling their quota. This war opened officially on April 25th and formally came to an end by the signing of a protocol on August 12th. The battles of Manila Bay, Santiago, El Caney and San Juan Hill were the only engagements of importance. According to the treaty of Paris, which was signed on December 12, 1898, Spain relinquished her sovereignty over Cuba, ceded to the United States Porto Rico and her other West India possessions and the Island of Guam, and transferred her rights in the Philippines for a sum of twenty million dollars paid to her for public works and improvements which belonged to the Spanish government.

THE LAND GRANTS OF OHIO.

Ohio was the first state organized out of the territory north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi river and was divided into several grants, reservations and military districts of one kind or another. These various divisions have led to an endless amount of confusion in the surveying of lands in the state and in many cases to expensive litigation. A brief summary of each one of these divisions is here presented.

THE OHIO LAND COMPANY PURCHASE.

This company was organized March 3, 1786, at Boston and on October 27, 1787, bought from the government 1,500,000 acres of land and received, outside of the portions reserved by Congress, 1,064,285 acres. Congress set aside the sixteenth section of each township for school purposes, the twenty-ninth section for religious purposes and the eighth, eleventh and twenty-sixth for such purposes as Congress might determine in the future. This tract included what was known as the "Donation Tract" of 100,000 acres, the same now being the northern part of Washington county. For this immense tract the Ohio Company paid the government sixty-six and two-thirds cents an acre.

THE FRENCH GRANT.

The secretary of the United Board of Treasury, William Duer, was instrumental in helping the Ohio Company to secure from Congress the option on 3,000,000 acres lying west and north of the original purchase of this company. The title to this tract remained in the government and out of this peculiar arrangement arose the Scioto Company, which was organized in France. Hundreds of deluded Frenchmen invested their money in this tract and received cloudy titles which caused no little trouble in later years. A large number of these French settlers landed on the banks of the Ohio on October 20, 1790, on the site of the present city of Gallipolis, which they founded and named. The Scioto Company was incompetently managed, became insolvent and the land on which the unfortunate Frenchmen had settled reverted to the United States government. While the most of them remained, there were many of them who went on farther west and located where other French settlers had previously established themselves. The United States treated the remaining French settlers in a very generous manner and by the act of March 3, 1795, granted them 24,000 acres on the Ohio river within the present limits of Scioto county.

THE SYMMES PURCHASE.

In 1788 John Cleves Symmes and other men of New Jersey organized the Miami Company and bought from the United States 1,000,000 acres, for which the company agreed to pay sixty-six cents an acre. As in the case of the purchase of the Ohio Company, the government made reservations of school and church sections, as well as three additional sections for general purposes. The Miami Company later found out that they had contracted for more than they could pay and the records show that they received and paid for only 311,682 acres in the southern part of the tract. It is interesting to note that the present site of Cincinnati was sold by the company to one Matthias Denman for the sum of five hundred dollars. The city of Cincinnati was founded the following year and the monument in that city on Third street, between Broadway and Ludlow streets, marks the location of Fort Washington, which was erected to protect the infant city from the Indians.

CONNECTICUT RESERVE.

In the year 1786 the state of Connecticut relinquished all her claims to lands in the Northwest Territory with the exception of a strip of 3,500,000 acres bordering Lake Erie. This immense tract became an integral part of Ohio as the result of two separate acts on the part of Connecticut. The state granted 500,000 acres in the western part of the reserve in 1792 to those citizens of Connecticut whose homes had been burned by the British during the Revolutionary War. The towns of Norwalk, Greenwich, Fairfield, New Haven and New London furnished the greater part of the eighteen hundred who took advantage of the generous offer of their state. The land was surveyed into townships of five miles square and divided among the settlers in proportion to their losses. In 1795 the Connecticut Land Company purchased the rest of the reserve, amounting to 3,000,000 acres, and on April 28, 1800, the United States government passed an act which paved the way for the final absorption of the tract by the state of Ohio. In May, 1800, the Connecticut Legislature accepted the offer of the United States and formally renounced all claims to the territory in favor of the state of Ohio.

THE VIRGINIA MILITARY DISTRICT.

The reservation was retained by Virginia when the state relinquished her claim to Congress in 1784, being retained by the state for the use of the Revolutionary soldiers who had enlisted from Virginia. It comprised the territory between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, but was not to be sold unless the lands claimed by Virginia south of the Ohio river proved insufficient to pay all of the bounties promised by Virginia to her soldiers. By the year 1790 it was seen that Virginia would not have enough territory south of the Ohio to satisfy all of her needs and accordingly, in August of that year, Congress passed an act allowing the state to use the optional territory north of the Ohio river. Owing to the fact that the territory was not surveyed according to any definite plan, the various allotments assigned to the Virginia soldiers frequently overlapped and in many instances confusion and litigation resulted.

THE UNITED STATES MILITARY LANDS.

The Continental Congress during the Revolutionary War offered bounties of Western lands in order to increase enlistments, and soldiers so secured were given land warrants which they later presented to Congress and exchanged for land. On June 1, 1796, Congress passed an act which called upon the surveyor-general of the United States to locate a tract in the Northwest Territory for the purpose of enabling the government to have land to take up the land warrants which it had issued during the late war. The limits of this particular tract began "at the northwest corner of the Seven Ranges, thence south fifty miles, thence west to the Scioto river and along that river to the Greenville treaty line, thence along that line and east to the place of beginning." These lands were surveyed into townships five miles square and each owner received a patent for his land signed by the President of the United States.

THE REFUGEE TRACT.

This tract was set aside by the Continental Congress in April, 1783, for the benefit of such people as left Canada and Nova Scotia to help the American colonies in their fight against England during the Revolution. The subsequent congressional act of 1798 confirmed the act of the Continental Congress, and on February 18, 1801, Congress definitely selected "those fractional townships of the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth, twenty-first and twenty-second ranges of townships joining the southern boundary line of the military lands." This tract of four and a half miles in width, and extending forty-two miles east of the Scioto river, contained more than twice as much as was needed to satisfy the claims of the refugees. The part unclaimed by those for whom it was set aside was attached to the Chillicothe land district and sold as Congress lands. It so happened that the future capital of the state, Columbus, is in the extreme western side of this tract.

CONGRESS LANDS.

Some of the tracts of land already described were Congress lands, viz., the French Grant, the Seven Ranges and the Refugee Tract. Congress retained and sold all lands not specifically relinquished to land companies and established land offices for the purpose at different times at Marietta, Cincinnati, Steubenville, Chillicothe, Zanesville, Canton, Wooster, Piqua, Delaware, Wapakoneta, Lima and Upper Sandusky.

THE MORAVIAN GRANT.

The congressional grant to the Ohio Company in 1787 reserved ten thousand acres in what is now Tuscarawas county for the use of the Moravians and Christian Indians who had previously settled there, the title being vested in the Moravian Brethren at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. A few years later two thousand acres were added to the original grant and in 1823 the territory reverted to the United States, with the exception of the cemeteries, churchyards and a few special leases.

DOHRMAN'S GRANT.

Congress granted all of township 13, range 7, in Tuscarawas county, to one Henry Dohrman, a Portuguese citizen, who rendered valuable services to the colonies during the Revolutionary War.

THE MAUMEE ROAD LANDS.

In 1823 Congress granted to the state of Ohio about sixty thousand acres for the purpose of constructing a road from the lower rapids of the Maumee river to the western limits of the Western Reserve of Connecticut.

THE TURNPIKE LANDS.

In 1827 Congress granted to the state of Ohio forty-nine sections of land in Seneca, Crawford and Marion counties, for the construction of a road from Columbus to Sandusky.

CANAL GRANT.

Between 1825 and 1845 Congress at different times made special grants of land to the state of Ohio for canal purposes, and a total of about one million acres were thus secured by the state. By the year 1842 the state had completed six hundred and fifty-eight miles of canals, at the staggering cost to the state of $14,688,666.97, although before they were all completed the railroads were in operation in the state.

SALT SECTIONS.

In the early history of the Northwest Territory salt was a commodity hard to secure and necessarily high in price. Congress reserved every place where it was thought salt could be obtained, and in this way helped the settlers to get salt at least expense. In Ohio an entire township within the present county of Jackson was reserved, as well as about four thousand acres in Delaware county. In 1824 Congress relinquished its claim in favor of Ohio.

THE ZANE SECTIONS.

Ebenezer Zane, one of the most prominent of the men in the early history of the state, was granted three sections by Congress in 1796 in return for his services in opening a road from Wheeling to Maysville. These three sections were located at Zanesville, Chillicothe and Lancaster. Isaac Zane was granted three sections in Champaign county by Congress for valuable service to the colonies during the Revolution. Isaac Zane had been captured by the Indians when a small boy and spent the major portion of his life with them, and his influence with the Indians was such that he proved to be of great assistance to the colonies in handling them.

THE MINISTERIAL LANDS.

These lands have been previously mentioned and were reserved only in two grants, those of the Ohio Land Company and the Symmes Purchase. The grants to both set aside section twenty-nine of each township for religious purposes.

SCHOOL SECTIONS.

Provisions for public schools were made in all states created by the United States after the adoption of the constitution. The Ordinance of 1787 had made specific mention of the value of schools and a wise Congress set aside section sixteen of every township, which was surveyed into townships six miles square. The United States military lands were surveyed into townships, five miles square, but Congress reserved one thirty-sixth of the whole area for school purposes. There are no reservations in the Connecticut Reserve and Virginia Military District for school purposes, but Congress made up for this by setting aside an amount equivalent to one thirty-sixth of the area in each tract from other lands belonging to the United States. As a mater of fact, one thirty-sixth of the whole state was reserved for school purposes as well as three townships for universities.

OHIO POLITICS.

The politics of Ohio presents many interesting features, but this brief summary can do little more than indicate the more important landmarks in the political history of the state. The first governor of the Northwest Territory, Arthur St. Clair, was an ardent Federalist and undoubtedly his pronounced political views had something to do with his removal from the office on November 22, 1802. From that time until 1836 the Democratic party, or the Republican or Democratic-Republican, as it was at first called, controlled the state, and it was not until William Henry Harrison, a "favorite son," became a candidate for the Presidency, that the Whigs were able to break the strength of the Democratic party of the state. In 1836, 1840 and 1844 the Whigs carried the state for the President. The panic of 1837, the popularity of Harrison and the Texas question were largely determining factors in the success of the Whigs. The Democrats regained sufficient power in 1848 to carry the state again, and repeated their victory in 1852. In 1856 John C. Fremont carried the state for the newly-organized Republican party and since that year there has been only one Democratic electoral vote in the state of Ohio. In 1892 Grover Cleveland received one of Ohio's twenty-three electoral votes, but with this exception the state has cast a solid Republican vote for President every year since 1856. Ohio has furnished five Presidents of the United States: William Henry Harrison, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, William McKinley and William H. Taft.

While the state has been registering Republican votes for the President, it has had eight Democratic governors, and has frequently elected them by large majorities. A complete list of the governors of the state, with the years of their tenure and their politics, is given at this point for reference:

Frank B. Willis	1915-	Republican

The political history of Ohio can not be dismissed without reference to the amendments incorporated in the new constitution in 1912 which have made the constitution practically a new instrument of government. The general tendency of the thirty-three amendments is to make a freer expression of democracy through the medium of the initiative and referendum, direct primaries and home rule for cities. A workmen's compensation law was enacted which provides for compulsory contributions to an insurance fund by the employers of the state. Many changes were made in providing for improvements in social and industrial conditions. Ohio now has a constitution which is sufficiently flexible to allow changes to be made by amendment without the trouble of a constitutional convention.

BOUNDARY LINES.

The state boundaries of Ohio have been the cause for most animated discussions, not only in regard to state limits but county and township lines as well. In 1817, and again in 1834, a severe controversy arose over the boundary between Ohio and Michigan, which was settled only after violent demonstration and government interference.

In primitive times the geographical position, extent and surface diversities were but meagerly comprehended. In truth, it may be asserted they could not have been more at variance with actual facts had they been laid out "haphazard." The Ordinance of 1787 represented Lake Michigan far north of its real position, and even as late as 1812 its size and location had not been definitely ascertained. During that year Amos Spafford addressed a clear, comprehensive letter to the governor of Ohio relative to the boundary lines between Michigan and Ohio. Several lines of survey were laid out as the first course, but either Michigan or Ohio expressed disapproval in every case. This dispute came to a climax in 1835, when the party beginning a "permanent" survey began at the northwest corner of the state and was attacked by a force of Michigan settlers, who sent them away badly routed and beaten. No effort was made to return to the work until the state and various parties had weighed the subject, and finally the interposition of the government became necessary. A settlement resulted in the establishment of the present boundary line between the two states, Michigan being pacified with the grant of a large tract in the northern peninsula.

Ohio is situated between the 38° 25′ and 42° north latitude, and 80° 30′ and 84° 50′ west longitude from Greenwich, or 3° 30′ and 7° 50′ west from Washington. From north to south it extends over two hundred and ten miles, and from east to west two hundred and twenty miles—comprising thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and sixty-four square miles.

The state is generally higher than the Ohio river. In the southern counties the surface is greatly diversified by the inequalities produced by the excavating power of the Ohio river and its tributaries. The greater portion of the state was originally covered with timber, although in the central and northwestern sections some prairies were found. The crest, or watershed, between the waters of Lake Erie and those of the Ohio is less elevated than in New York or Pennsylvania. Sailing upon the Ohio the country appears to be mountainous, bluffs rising to the height of two hundred and fifty to six hundred feet above the bed of the river. Ascending the tributaries of the Ohio, these precipitous hills gradually lessen until they are resolved into gentle undulations and toward the sources of these streams the land becomes low and level.

Although Ohio has no inland lakes of importance, it possesses a favorable river system, which gives the state a convenient water transportation. The lake on the northern boundary, and the Ohio river on the south afford convenient outlets by water to important points. The means of communication and transportation are superior in every respect, and are constantly being increased by railroad and electric lines.

CHAPTER II.

GEOGRAPHY, TOPOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY.

Clinton county is located in the southwestern portion of the state of Ohio. It is bounded on the north by Greene and a part of Fayette county, east by Fayette, south and southeast by Brown and Highland counties, and west by Warren county. Its county seat, Wilmington, is only fifty-six miles, by rail, northeast of Cincinnati. Brown county only intervenes on the south between Clinton county and the Ohio river, while on the west it is separated by two counties, Warren and Butler, from the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana. It lies on the dividing ridge between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, waters draining from it into both of these streams. Clinton county includes an area of four hundred square miles.

TOPOGRAPHY.

Clinton county, in its natural features, is greatly diversified. In the northern and southern portions of the county are large areas which are included in level and fertile plains, while along the numerous streams the topography is more broken. It becomes more or less hilly in some sections, and in many places even abrupt and bluffy. The greater portion of the drainage of the county is into the tributaries of the Little Miami river, which are also the principal waterways. Todd's fork, the greatest of these tributaries, flows west and southwest and was named previous to 1787, probably from some of the Todds who settled early in Ohio and were among its prominent pioneers and Indian fighters. It has for its branches, East fork of Todd's fork, named for its location; Cowan's, named for John Cowan, who owned R. Campbell's survey No. 2249, on that stream; Lytle's creek (named for Gen. William Lytle, also a surveyor of these lands), draining the central portion of the county; Caesar's creek, flowing across the extreme northwest corner, named for a favorite servant of some of the early surveyors, who died and was buried on its banks; Anderson's fork, rising in the northeast part of the county, flowing west and northwest and draining the northern portion of the county, deriving its name from Col. Richard C. Anderson, the principal surveyor; East fork of the Little Miami, flowing southerly from the Snow Hill locality and forming a portion of the boundary line between Clinton and Highland counties; Little East fork of the Little Miami, Silver creek, Stone lick and numerous smaller streams also assist in the drainage. Wilson's branch of Rattlesnake creek (named for Amos and Isaac Wilson, early settlers), drains into the Scioto from the northeast part of the county—Richland and Wilson townships—while Lee's creek, also a tributary of the Scioto and named in honor of Peter Lee, a surveyor of Virginia military lands, drains a portion of Wayne township. The derivation of the names, Dutch creek, Buck run and Turkey run, can easily be understood.

Todd's fork of the Little Miami is the largest stream in the county, and, in the days of the early settlements, furnished fair water power, which was available most of the year. At present, owing to the lowering of the water line and the lack of steady feed from the head streams, there is little power except at seasons when the stream is swollen by rain or melting snow. Todd's fork was widely known at the beginning of the nineteenth century, for on its banks some of the most prominent among the early settlements in the county were made. All the streams in this region are subject to sudden, and sometimes disastrous, freshets, which subside quite as rapidly as they rise. The nature of the country is such that no great natural reservoirs exist, and the streams are, therefore, without a reserve supply to keep them steady, for, with the clearing away of the timber, the swamps have been drained and this source cut off.

Anderson's fork runs in places upon strata of the Niagara limestone, and is generally not much above bedded stone. This stream cuts through a portion of the pentamerous beds of the Niagara formation to a depth of from five to ten feet at Port William, in Liberty township. Above Port William and along this stream is a tract known as the "prairie," extending a number of miles and possessing a deep, rich, black soil. It was doubtless once the location of a swamp or shallow lake. Northeast of this prairie is supposed to be the highest point of land in the county, it being between seven hundred and eight hundred feet above low water mark of the Ohio river at Cincinnati. In the southern part of the county, at a place a short distance east of New Vienna, on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, the elevation is seven hundred and thirty-seven and one-half feet above the same comparative location. Anderson's fork receives but few tributaries in all its course, the tract which it drains being comparatively long and narrow. The bedded stone in its channel is of the Niagara formation as far down as the Lumberton quarries, where it strikes and cuts very nearly through the formation known to geologists as Clinton, and, at a point farther down stream, at Ingalls' dam, just outside of Clinton county, it cuts about four feet of purple red shale underlying the Clinton, and strikes the higher of the Cincinnati group, or blue limestone. The East fork of Todd's fork also penetrates the blue limestone, cutting into it to a depth of nearly one hundred feet within three or four miles of Clarksville.

GEOLOGY.

Volume three of the state geological report contains an article of merit on the geology of Clinton county prepared by John Hussey, as follows:

"If we trace the line of outcrops of the various formations from the point in the western part of Clinton county, where Todd's fork leaves the county, we shall find that the strata of stone seen under those we meet proceed to the east, and if a well were dug deep enough at Wilmington or Washington, it would cut through all the strata found to the west as far as Cincinnati. The great Niagara system lies immediately beneath Wilmington; next, the Clinton iron ore and stratified stone of this formation, about thirty feet in thickness; then, underlying this and underlaid by the blue limestone of the Cincinnati group, there is a thickness of some three or four feet of ferruginous clay.

DENUDING AGENCIES.

"After the deposition of the rocks now found in Clinton county, the surface was not long, at an early geological period, beneath the surface of the sea. While the deposit of sandstone which extends almost from the very border of Fayette county to the south indefinitely, and to the east, underlying the coal, was being made, the land to the north was above water, as well as when the deposits above the sandstone were made; at least, whatever material, organic or inorganic, was ever deposited here, has long since disappeared. We have some evidence, however, that the slate which immediately underlies the sandstone extended somewhat farther north than the sandstone itself has been found. * * * Where formations in Clinton county, which were formerly continuous, have been partially removed, as on Cliff run, the Clinton formation is seen in its full thickness, while excavations show that its continuity is broken to the east of this locality, so that the exposure of white limestone on Cliff run is a mere island of that kind of stone. Besides the wearing away of the general surface and the removal of particular parts of formations, there were causes at work which have excavated channels far below the general surface. Ice, in the form of glaciers, is generally regarded as the means by which the denudation above alluded to has been effected. At this point it may be well to take up the ice age and its effects on this region in a more detailed form.

"Dr. G. M. Austin prepared an article in 1911 from which we have the privilege of taking extracts. 'As early as the middle of the Devonian age a long narrow strip of the ancient sea bottom, extending from central Kentucky to Lake Erie, near Sandusky, and including the territory of Clinton county, was lifted above the surface and has since then formed a part of the dry land of the earth.

"'On this new island, for such it then was, the rains soon gave rise to streams, and these, acting upon the surface through the countless ages that followed, cut deep channels into the strata and in time widened these, in many places, into broad valleys. Indeed, so extensive was this erosion that long before the beginning of the Ice age the land in these parts had been changed from the comparatively level plain it was at first, into a region of rough hills and deep, intersecting valleys such as we may now see in Pike county and other such eastern counties of our state which lie outside the area of glacial action.'

"Wilmington is built over one of these ancient filled-up valleys, while the college stands on the high ground that then formed its eastern limit. Could one have stood at the latter point at the close of the Pliocene age and looked toward the west, his eyes would have beheld an immense depression two-thirds as deep as the valley of the Miami at Ft. Ancient, stretching away toward the south and east beyond the limits of vision. The area of this ancient valley must have been fully seventy square miles. The erosion caused by our modern streams and the use of the drill in sinking wells have shown that its boundaries were about as follow: On the north beginning at Hawe's chapel, it follows an irregular course toward the southwest, passing a mile north of Starbucktown, near the Children's Home and parallel to Todd's fork to below Sligo; on the west, by way of Ogden and Villars' chapel to Midland City; on the south from Midland City, not far from the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, to the neighborhood of Farmers' Station; on the east from Farmers' Station, by way of Snow Hill and New Antioch, to Wilmington, including within its limits all of Washington township, and large portions of Union, Adams, Vernon, Marion, Clark, Jefferson and Greene. A considerable stream, probably as large as the Little Miami, must have flowed through this valley, coming from the south and passing out of the county toward the northeast by way of Starbucktown and Bloomington. Many lesser valleys and ravines, each furnishing an outlet for some rivulet or stream, must have opened into this great central valley, but most of these are now deeply buried under the drift and their location and extent will not be known until the drill has been sunk in every part of the county and the records of its findings brought together and compared.

"Such, in brief, was the topography of our county in these ancient times, and yet, though it differed so greatly from the present that the two possess scarcely a single feature in common, the difference is no more extreme than exists between the climates and life forms of the two periods.

"Authorities are agreed that even so late as the closing epoch of the Tertiary period a sub-tropical, or warm temperate, climate prevailed as far north as the latitude of the Great Lakes; a climate as now exists in Mexico and southern Florida. These conclusions are based largely on the character of the flora and fauna that flourished in those early days.

"The land appears to have been as heavily forested then as in recent times, but, while we recognize among the fossil wreckage of those old forests such familiar forms as the poplar, maple, hickory, beech and the sycamore, with them are the live oak, magnolia, cinnamon, wild fig and several species of palms, plant forms that are now restricted to the warm regions of the south.

"Yet varied and magnificent as was the flora that then clothed the land, it sinks into insignificance when compared with the marvelous fauna of that day. For hugeness of bulk and number of species, its mammals have not been equalled in any other age. Had we before us a list of all the animals from the different parts of the world that have been assigned to this age, it would present a lengthy and magnificent array. When a list of those whose remains have been found so near our home that we may be reasonably sure that they once inhabited this locality, cannot fail to impress us by the number and character of its forms. Such a list would include a lion as large as that now found in Africa; two saber-toothed tigers, one of these as large as the modern Bengal tiger; a great wolf; a weasel the size of the otter, and a bear which equalled if not exceeded in size the largest grizzly; also a huge ox, a gigantic animal, one-third larger than the largest buffalo of the plains, with widely-spreading horns that measured fully ten feet from tip to tip; two extinct species related to the musk ox of the north; an elk as large as the Irish elk; an extinct peccary, and two other species related to that genus; two species of tapir; two of the horse; a gigantic beaver as large as the American black bear; a porcupine as large as a small deer; three genera, each represented by a number of species of the giant sloth, one at least of which was as large as the rhinoceros; and, finally, two elephants, the mammoth and the mastodon. But these are only the larger animals that then lived; to make the catalog complete, there should be added a number of small species now extinct, and still others whose representatives are still living.

"These were the conditions of topography, climate and life that prevailed in this state and locality in the early days of the post-pliocene era—an era that seems but little farther removed from the present day than yesterday when measured by the countless ages that reach back from it to the beginning of geological changes on our planet. For splendid as was that time, with its warmth of climate and wealth of life, its end was close at hand, and the changes were already under way which were to reach their climax in that remarkable age of ice at the close of which the present dates its beginning.

"As early as the middle of the pliocene, a slowly-falling temperature began to develop in the northern hemisphere, and gradually, as these thermic changes went on through many centuries, the warm and equable temperature that had prevailed so long ago gave place to one of decided chill. Each winter became colder than the previous and the summers more chilly and damp. The more tender animals gradually died out and the less hardy plants began to be winter killed or failed to mature their fruits.

"As the forests were thus decimated, other and hardier species replaced those which had disappeared. The animals also which had perished from cold were replaced by others migrating from colder regions, which, in the course of generations, seem to have become dwarfed and covered with a more shaggy coat of fur.

"The winter snows at length failed to melt upon the hill tops and in time gave rise to glaciers which crept slowly downward into the valleys. The cold grew more intense and at length the ice and snow were everywhere. The last of the hardy plants and animals were overwhelmed and all the northern lands lay dead and frozen under the pall of the glacial winter.

"How long this period of bitter cold continued cannot be ascertained. Its dreary reign was undoubtedly a very long one. In the White mountains it has been shown that the ice had time to attain a thickness of 6,000 feet; in northern New England, 5,000 feet; in southwestern Massachusetts, 2,800 feet; in southern Connecticut, 1,000 feet, and in the Catskills, 3,000 feet. This mighty sheet of ice moved slowly towards the south at a rate, judging from the movements of the modern glaciers, of not more than two or three feet a day. Yet so long did the age continue that ample time was given for the transportation of boulders, wrenched from the cliffs of the Canadian highlands, quite down to the Ohio river. Under the heavy heel of this enormous moving mass the land was stripped bare of its ancient soil, the hills were ground down, the valleys filled with wreckage to their brims and the surface changed into a level plain.

Once, at least, in the midst of this remarkable age there was a break in the rigor of the climate, the heavy ice sheet retreated back toward the north and, on the uncovered land, peat bogs formed in the depressions and forests of birch, hemlock and cedar sprang up from the soil. A peat bed of this period, containing fossil insects and grasses, underlies a part of Wilmington, while throughout the county traces of the old forest have been met with in many places. But this intermission was of comparatively short duration; the bitter chill of the Arctics again settled over the land, the ice for a second time came slowly down to the Ohio river and the glacial winter continued its rule for many centuries longer.

"At last, however, its long, gloomy reign was ended. Its unhospitable climate gave place to the mild temperature of the present day and out of the chaos it had wrought, slowly emerged a new era, the noblest of all that have yet been, the Age of Man.

"As a result of the amelioration of the glacial climate, the surface of the land within the area of glacial action was again subject to a series of changes only second in importance to those already described. We have seen how the advance of the ice totally effaced the physical landmarks of the old era and reduced its hills and valleys to a level plain. Now, during its period of dissolution, the order is reversed and we see the plain changed into the gentle, rolling country of upland and valley as it now exists. Practically all our modern streams within the drift area date their beginning from this period of glacial decadence. Commencing at the southern limit of the ice sheet, they slowly lengthened their channels to the northward as the ice retreated until they reached their present limits, sometimes making their way along the course of some ancient stream, sometimes across the filled-up valleys, but more frequently along new routes where no stream had flowed before. In this county, Lytle's creek, Wilson's branch and Silver creek flow their entire length across an ancient valley, while the lower reaches of Cowan's creek and East fork, all of Sewall's run and much of Todd's fork are along recent channels cut in the bedded rock.

"The melting of so vast a mass of ice made this a period of annual floods, greater in volume than any the world has since known. With each return of the summer, the whole land was deluged with water and the streams were changed for a time into veritable rivers which cut deeply and widely into the glacial clays and hollowed out deep gorges in the underlying rocks.

"Along the flanks of these new valleys were then deposited those extensive beds of glacial gravel which have proved so valuable in the building of our modern roads, while on the uplands, recessional moraines, kames and drumlins marked the line of glacial retreat. Many of these last-named deposits may now be seen in our county; one of the moraines, the largest, which crosses the county by way of Bloomington and Reesville, forms the divide between the Miami and Scioto rivers.

"Innumerable depressions were left in the glacial clays, which became the sights of ponds and lakelets that at first must have covered most of the level parts of the county.

"In the meantime, the ice very slowly retreated beyond our borders, the floods ceased, the streams dwindled to their present volume and the naked land differed little from the present time as far as its physical contour of upland and valley is concerned. It was merely waiting the return of life. On the stiff, barren clays of this new land vegetation gradually extended until its surface was again clothed in verdure, forests of modern trees took the place of groves of ancient cinnamon and figs, and the ponds and lakes began to fill with decayed vegetation, thus storing up material for the fertile black soils whose wide distribution has contributed so largely to the wealth and prosperity of our county. With the return of vegetation, a new race of animals also appeared, and man, and thus at last the great cycle of changes wrought by the Age of Ice was fully complete.

THE DRIFT.

"Judging from the present evidences which we can find in the sinking of wells, this land was once covered with water. This was probably accomplished by the land sinking down beneath the surface of the water. Every indication points to water as the medium by which the deposits were made. Upon the stone everywhere are found traces of more or less loose material. The study of this material will prove that it is a sort of drift, composed of clay with varying proportions of sand and gravel, with occasional rounded blocks of granite rock, and with the remains of trees and, sometimes, other vegetation. The greatest thickness of the drift in our district is in Clinton county, east of the "prairie," where a deposit of over one hundred feet is found. Whether the whole surface of the country was once covered as deeply as this limited area, may admit of doubt; but there are reasons for believing that the surface was once covered with a heavy drift deposit. In some places the soft material has been washed away, leaving large accumulations of sand and gravel; in other places, as the level region between the East fork of Todd's fork and Blanchester, the material of the drift was a finer sediment than is found in other places, and has not been removed or disturbed to such a degree as in other portions of the county, and, consequently, even if sand and gravel exist in it, there are no such beds of these substances as are found where the sediment had a fine character or was subsequently washed in currents of water. The clays of the drift are both blue and yellow, the former apparently prevailing in both counties, as shown in the excavations for wells. There was considerable variation in reports of the strata penetrated in sinking wells, but blue clay—or, as it is frequently called, blue mud—from its appearance, was uniformly found, though there was no uniformity on the thickness of it. Sometimes it is but a few feet in thickness, and in other places, not a mile distant, it is no less than forty feet thick. It is generally interstratified with sand and fine gravel, but sometimes no such stratification is seen. Water is found very nearly everywhere within a few feet of the surface of the earth, so that it is seldom that excavations are farther than from ten to twenty feet below the surface, and our knowledge is limited of the material underlying to this slight extent. * * * In some parts of this district, particularly those which are flat, there does not occur, within the usual range of the wells, much, if any, yellow clay. If it found, it is just below the soil for from three to ten feet, where fine, grained blue clay invariably occurs interstratified with sand.

BOULDERS.

"These are found scattered over the surface and belong above the blue clay deposit, rather than in it. The largest boulder, perhaps, which is found so far south in this state, is found in Clinton county on the county infirmary farm, near Wilmington, and this lies on the fine-grained blue clay, upon which it would seem to have fallen by the washing away of the clay in which it was formerly imbedded, and which, at a higher level, lies near it on all sides. This boulder contains about one thousand two hundred cubic feet, and weighs upward of ninety tons. * * * Smaller ones are found more or less abundantly, especially in the northern half of the county. They are found lying on or near the surface, where they have been left by the removal of the water which carried away the material deposited with them.

GRAVEL AND SAND.

"Mingled with the drift is always found a considerable proportion of these substances, being scattered through the whole mass, or, at most, showing only a slight tendency to be distinct in strata, more or less mixed with soft material. Where the original drift is in quantity and undisturbed, the sand and gravel in it are not available for economic purposes. A few years ago, these counties were thought to be lacking in these important adjuncts to civilization. Previous to 1878, a short time, the demand for gravel road material became so exceedingly urgent that thorough and exhaustive, and, as the result proved successful, search was made for it. It is now known that no real deficiency exists. People know where to look for it. When the currents of water carried away the lighter materials of the drift deposit, those constituents which were heaviest were left behind. We may regard the highest land as the former level of the region we are speaking of. There was then a deposit of loose material, sometimes a hundred feet in thickness, above the bedded stone. This material was manifestly deposited from water, and, to account for the character of the markings upon the rock surface and the promiscuous intermixture of clays, sand and gravel, and sometimes a certain limited measure of stratification, or assorting materials according to their weight, and for the evidently remote origin of the stony constituents, requiring that they should have been brought hither, and especially for the numerous boulders, conspicuous both for their size and clear marks of foreign origin, the conclusion is reached, unhesitatingly, that ice in some form contributed to the same end. Water in a liquid state alone could not carry such material so far without having an enormous velocity, sufficient to move before it not only the loose material, but the very stone beneath it. When the water subsided, new lines of drainage appeared, corresponding, more or less, depending upon the physical features of the country, with preexisting ones. The emergence of the land was gradual, and the subdividing water stood for greater or less periods of time at different levels, which may be pointed out today with more or less distinctness. During the emergence of the solid earth, the currents of water carried away some of the material constituting the drift sediment of the former period. The channels of drainage mark the direction of the current.

"Within these channels, the drift deposits were removed sometimes to the bedded rock. The varying force of the current distributed the material as we see it now. Strong currents carried all before them; weaker currents only the more refined sediment. Any current bearing substance will deposit the heavier material first when the current becomes checked. It is thus that matters carried in currents of water became more assorted and distributed. When a current bearing sediment finds a wider channel and expands, the current is checked at the side upon which it finds room to spread out. Here will be a deposit of the heavier part of its freight. If two currents meet at the point of intersection, they will be retarded, especially if one be more swollen than the other, and the heavier material will be carried out and deposited first. Where now are mere brooks, the ample extent of the washing, the broad valleys, show that rivers once flowed. Whenever the drift clays were not washed, the gravels were interspersed through them; but where the clays are broken, where valleys have been cut in them, on the sides of these cuts, on the escarpment of the broken clay and gravel drifts, the clay has been removed and the gravel is left in beds. Following the principles referred to before in regard to the laws of sedimentary deposits, the road-maker of today may find the deposits of gravel he needs. Along the declivity, where two former currents met, far back from the meeting point of the diminutive streams of the present time, on a point and looking from the higher land, he who seeks this useful material need not look in vain. As there were various levels of the water at that far-distant period, so are there several elevations at which gravel is actually found. In addition to these beds on the escarpment of the hills, there are found hillocks or natural mounds of gravel which represent eddies, or places in which, for some cause, the water was more quiet, and hence unable to carry its load of sediment forward. Besides these, the soil of the present bottoms is, in many places, underlaid with ample deposits of gravel.

"Drifted wood is found in the blue clay in all our districts. The instances in which wood has been found in the clay beds, penetrated in well digging, are by no means few, nearly every neighborhood furnishing one or more. A kind of jointed grass, or rush, was obtained from a well, near Reesville, in Clinton county.

BONES.

"The gravel which lay so long hidden from the knowledge of the present inhabitants was almost uniformly made use of as places of interment by some former race of people. Scarcely a gravel bed has been extensively worked in which abundance of human bones have not been found. The skeletons are usually discovered within two or three feet of the surface. We are left to conjecture, in giving any reason why this material was used in which to make interments of the dead. Trinkets of any description are extremely rare in such graves, although not entirely unknown. In none of which I heard were there any indications of unusual care or elaborateness in the interments. Possibly, the ease in excavating a grave in such material may have determined the choice. But it is not a little singular that the inhabitants of a long ago should have known the position of these beds of gravel, covered as they were with a dense forest, while two generations of the intelligent people of this age have not thought of their existence until within half a dozen years.

STONE IMPLEMENTS.

"Flint arrow and lance points, stone hammers, bark peelers, hematite fishing bobs or sinkers, and other articles of this class are found, especially along the water courses. As no value and but a passing interest have been attached to them, they have not been preserved, but most of them have been broken up or lost. Many are still found by persons working the soil. No one locality has furnished more than the borders of Deer creek, but they are common on all the streams, and, indeed, over the whole surface of the county are they found. As the soil in Fayette and parts of Clinton has not been subject to the plow as much as in other places, and, of course, some of it not plowed at all, there perhaps remain more still to be gathered than have ever been found. Some persons, seeing in these articles the story of a former race of human beings, who have left but little else to tell of their manners of civilization, are gathering them up, to preserve from destruction. Nothing more amazes one in contemplating these relics of a people of a long past age than the immense number of them scattered over the surface of the earth. Perhaps no single acre of ground in central or southern Ohio but has furnished at least one flint arrow point; but the average would be greater than one to the acre, and it is not too much to say that every farm, at least, has at some time given up a stone hatchet or bark peeler.

HEMATITE BOULDER.

In Clinton county a hematite boulder was found. It weighed about two hundred and fifty pounds. This was extremely hard, and seemed to be of the same material from which the sinkers referred to in the last paragraph were made. This is the only boulder of this kind found in the county.

BOUNDARY LINE OF THE CINCINNATI GROUP.

"The line separating the blue limestone and the Clinton white limestone is easily distinguished. It may be distinguished in all the streams in the western part of Clinton county, which all cut abruptly through the Clinton and into the blue limestone. The line where this runs can be easily indicated, beginning just outside the county, on Anderson's fork, near Ingall's dam, where the upper beds of the Cincinnati group and the Clinton formation are seen at one glance. To the west a mile or two, on Cliff run, as well as on Buck run, the Clinton stone may be seen forming low cliffs, cut off from the main body of the formation; but the true line is on Anderson's fork, as mentioned before. On Todd's fork, just above the crossing of the Lebanon road, near the line which divides the surveys 1554 and 1556, the same formations are seen in juxtaposition. Farther south, on Lytle's creek, it was not seen, but on the next stream, Cowan's creek, the line of the Clinton sweeps around to the east and appears above the village of Antioch, but it does not here rise above the surface of the earth. The next point in the line is back to the west, about one mile northeast of Martinsville, where it is quarried, and then its next appearance is at a point about one mile south of Farmer's Station, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and on a tributary stream of the east fork of the Little Miami. The last point at which the blue limestone is seen on the east fork of the Little Miami is on the edge of White's survey, not far from where the Pitzer meeting house stood.

THE CLINTON FORMATION.

"This is seen on Anderson's fork, at Oglesby's quarry and in Todd's fork, from the point of its first appearance near the Lebanon road to Babb's quarry in the base of the Niagara. At either of these localities the whole of the formation may be studied. The lower strata have the distinctly sand constitution characteristic of this formation, from which the stone is frequently called sandstone. These strata are good fire-stones, and resist the action of fire as a back wall in fireplaces for generations without softening or crumbling. But the strata a few feet higher are burned into lime, and make a medium quality for building purposes, and no doubt a very good quality of caustic lime for softening straw in the manufacture of paper. Some part of the ten feet of massive stone furnishes good building material. This stone has been obtained in Todd's fork, but is expensive, on account of the superincumbent stone of a poor quality, which must be removed before a good quality of stone can be reached. On Anderson's fork, at Oglesby's quarry, the same stone is more accessible, and is the best building stone obtained from this formation. The quality of this stone at Oglesby's has led some to prefer it to the Niagara; but it has the hardness and gritty character of the Clinton, and on surfaces which have been exposed in the quarry to the action of the atmospheric conditions and agencies for several years, it is seen to be composed almost wholly of a solid mass of broken encrinitic stems. Aside from lithological characters, this stone at Oglesby's is in the Clinton horizon, about midway from top to bottom, exclusive of the iron ore in the upper part. In this part the imbedded fossils are deeply covered by the iron. The twelve feet from the top of the Clinton is well seen from the under strata at Babb's quarry, on Todd's fork, down stream to the locality of the iron furnace, formerly erected to work the ore. This twelve feet is highly fossiliferous throughout, but it is only in a few feet at the bottom that the portion of iron is large enough to entitle it to the name of iron ore. For some reason the furnace erected here (about 1850) did not prove a success and was abandoned, although the quality of iron was regarded as very smooth. The rich ore is a brittle stone, mostly composed of small, exteriorly smooth and shiny lenticular grains, reminding one of flax seed. The ore is easily crumbled in the hand, and contains numerous disjointed crinoidal disks, partially eroded. The species of fossils become more numerous as we approach the higher strata. Sometimes the stone is highly granular or crystaline, while still crumbling easily in the fingers, and is less ferruginous and the imbedded fossils become light colored. The iron ore occurs in considerable quantities, being exposed in an outcrop along the slopes for several miles, and large quantities could be obtained by stripping. If it were more convenient, or nearer furnaces in operation, it might become valuable to mix with other ores in making certain qualities of iron, particularly if it should be found to serve likewise as a flux. The fossils in the upper beds are better preserved than in the lower, but good cabinet specimens are difficult to obtain. That locality alluded to as Grubb's quarry, in the southern part of the county, abounds in fossils, and is a promising field for palaeontological research. It was but little opened at that time, but as the stone obtained seemed to answer well for building purposes, it will probably furnish many fossils.

NIAGARA FORMATION.

"The Niagara formation is not exposed very extensively in Clinton county and dips far under the surface in Fayette. It lies immediately on the iron stone, or ore, just referred to at Babb's quarry, on Todd's fork. Here, proceeding from the upper strata of Clinton, thence upward: Blue clay, with purple tint, four inches; blue clay, four inches; stone stratum, one inch; purple or red clay, unctuous feeling, four inches; blue clay, four inches. Here is the best Niagara building stone in the county—smooth, fine grained, even bedded limestone—approaching in quality some kinds of marble.

"The supply of this building stone, however, is limited and much below the demand. In the inferior strata, no trace of organic remains was found, their fine, even texture suggesting that they may have been deposited as calcareous mud in quiet water. In no part of the twelve or fifteen feet here exposed were organic remains found, except in the most meager quantity. Here and there occurs a small mass of coral which is completely incorporated in the substance of the stone, being broken and standing upright as it was formed, having been silted up by fine sedimentary deposits. Above this building stone, the system assumes that loose and porous character so often observed in this formation, full of casts of large Pentamerous oblongus and other fossils, with numerous small cavities stained with carbonaceous matter. At Port William, the exposure on Anderson's fork was perfectly characteristic of this formation, the jagged and cavernous masses being worn and corroded by the elements into fantastic shapes. But the most interesting exposure of this formation in the county is that known as Black's quarry, near Snow Hill, where the strata belong to the upper portion of the Niagara. This is a highly fossiliferous stone, but unsuitable for building purposes, as it is soft and porous and can be crumbled in the hand. The stone used in constructing the New Vienna and Wilmington turnpike was obtained here. The fossils are difficult to obtain without being broken, but many of them are very good specimens, the most delicate markings being preserved. The stone is so fragile that the specimens are greatly injured by handling, and can not be packed in the usual manner without detriment. The paleontologists can surely find some valuable material in this district."

CHAPTER III.

ORGANIZATION OF CLINTON COUNTY.

The General Assembly of the state of Ohio, on February 19, 1810, passed an act establishing the county of Clinton. The boundaries of the county as set forth in the act were as follow:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That all those parts of the counties of Warren and Highland within the following boundaries be and the same are hereby erected into a separate county, to be known by the name of Clinton: Beginning at the southeast corner of Greene county, running east five miles; thence south to Highland county line; thence west with said line within four miles of the eastern line of Warren county; thence southwardly so far as to intersect a line one mile east from the southeast corner of Warren county; thence west, and from the beginning west so far that a line south will leave Warren county a constitutional boundary."

The county received the name of Clinton in honor of George Clinton, a distinguished citizen of New York and at that time vice-president of the United States. The territory described above was taken in almost equal portions from Warren and Highland counties, the old division line passing through the present town of Wilmington.

At that time the state constitution contained the following clause: "No new county shall be established by the General Assembly which shall reduce the county or counties, or either of them, from which it shall be taken, to less contents than four hundred square miles; nor shall any county be laid off of less contents." The area of Clinton county, through some error, probably in estimate, fell short of the requisite four hundred square miles. When the deficiency was finally discovered is not known, but the state Legislature took the matter in hand and on the 4th of February, 1813, passed an act as follows, entitled, "An act to attach a part of Highland county to the county of Clinton":

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That all that part of Highland county within the following boundaries be and the same is hereby attached to and shall remain the county of Clinton: Beginning at the southeast corner of Clinton county, adjoining Fayette county, thence running a line in a southwesterly direction to strike the line of Clinton county at such a point as to include four hundred square miles in the county of Clinton.

"Sec. 2. That the county surveyor of Ross shall, within thirty days after being duly notified by the commissioners of Clinton county, proceed to survey said county of Clinton and annex thereto so much of the county of Highland as shall make said county of Clinton contain four hundred square miles, agreeable to the provisions of the first section of this act; and said surveyor shall take to his assistance chainmen and axmen who are not inhabitants either of the counties of Warren, Clinton or Highland, and who have no interest therein, who shall be duly sworn as the law directs; and said surveyor shall make out two accurate surveys, or plats thereof, one of which he shall return to the court of common pleas for said county of Clinton, who shall record the same in the records of the court of said county, and the other he shall deposit in the office of the secretary of state, who shall preserve the same with this act; which survey, when made and recorded, shall be the perpetual boundaries of the said county of Clinton, and said surveyor shall receive two dollars per day and said chainmen and axmen shall each receive one dollar per day for all the time they are respectively employed in such service, to be paid out of the treasury of the county of Clinton."

We quote from the manuscript of the late Judge R. B. Harlan: "The records of the commissioners of Clinton county show that, in conformity with the above act, they did, on March 3, 1813, issue a notification to the surveyor of Ross county to proceed and survey the county of Clinton and annex thereto so much of the county of Highland as would make the county of Clinton contain the requisite number of square miles.

"John Evans, Esq., the surveyor of Ross county, on the 6th day of April, 1813, proceeded to make the survey required by the above act, and July 10, 1813, returned to the clerk of the court of common pleas of Clinton county a report of his proceedings under said act. In this report he said that, on the 6th day of April, 1813, he proceeded to survey the county of Clinton, agreeably to the provisions of the act of February 4, 1813. He 'began at four gums, two elms, two burr oaks and one maple, a corner of Clinton and Highland counties, standing north eighty-nine and one-quarter degrees east, one mile from the northeast corner of Clermont county; thence with the line of Highland and Clermont counties south eighty-nine and one-quarter degrees west nine miles and two hundred and sixteen poles, passing the corner of Highland county at one mile, with the variation of forty-five seconds from the cardinal point, to a red elm, two maples and a white oak, a black oak and thorn bush, southeast corner of Warren county, as it was then run, to contain its constitutional bounds; thence with the line of Warren county, allowing the aforesaid variation of forty-five seconds west, twenty-one miles and one hundred and fifty-eight poles to a large ash tree, two sugar trees, and two thorn bushes, northeast corner of Warren county, and in the line of Greene county, which was formerly run and marked; thence with said line east twenty miles and two hundred and thirty-one poles, passing the corner of Fayette county at fifteen miles and two hundred and thirty-one poles, to a large maple tree, marked as a corner and with the letters C. C. F. C., being a corner of Fayette county; thence with the line of said county south eleven miles and ninety poles to two oaks and an elm in the line of Highland county; thence I ran a line to attach a part of Highland county to the county of Clinton, viz., south four degrees, forty-five seconds west fourteen miles, two hundred and twenty-three poles, to the first place of beginning, being the most eastwardly end of the line of Clinton county called for in the first section of the aforesaid act (February 4, 1813), in which bounds there is only contained three hundred and eighty-five square miles and six hundred and twenty-two acres. Therefore, I find it impossible with all the provisions of the aforesaid law; for, by striking or intersecting the line of Clinton county, a deficiency of fourteen square miles and eighteen acres exist, and to include four hundred square miles in the county of Clinton, the line strikes a point considerably to the east of the line of Clinton county, which the aforesaid law contemplated for the line to strike. I then run and marked the following lines, which include the constitutional bounds in Clinton county: Commencing at the same corner, from which the aforesaid line is run; thence south forty degrees west twelve miles and one hundred and ninety-seven poles to two jack oaks, hickory and gum, all marked as a corner; and this line is represented on the plat as running from A (east corner of Clinton county), to C, two miles and three hundred poles, the beginning corner of Highland and Clinton counties, in which is contained four hundred square miles. Finding this conflict in the law and the express provision for including four hundred square miles in the county of Clinton, I perceive no better mode to reconcile the difficulty than the one adopted, which shows the relation which each of these lines bears to the law under which I am bound to act.'

"The same day on which Mr. Evans filed this report, he produced to the commissioners of Clinton county, his account for his services as such surveyor, amounting to the sum of seventy-two dollars and fifty cents, and also an account for the services of chain bearers and markers upon said survey, amounting to the sum of sixty-six dollars, which accounts being inspected, were allowed on July 10, 1813; vouchers 514, 515, 516, 517, 518. The chainmen were Abel Crossley, Philip Hartman and William Clevenger.

"To make up the deficiency thus ascertained, the Legislature, on January 30, 1815, provided that eleven square miles of the territory of Warren county lying upon the eastern boundary of the county of Warren, and extending parallel to the said eastern boundary line along the whole length of it from north to south, should be and the same were attached to and made a part of the county of Clinton; and it was made the duty of the surveyor of Ross county, within thirty days after being notified by the commissioners of Clinton county, to proceed and survey and set off to the county of Clinton the eleven square miles as aforesaid, by running a straight line from north to south through the county of Warren, parallel to the eastern boundary thereof, a strip about one-half mile wide, so as to include the eleven square miles aforesaid. The act also prescribed the manner in which the survey should be made, the qualifications of the chainmen and axmen, with other necessary details.

"By the same act (January 30, 1815), section 4, it was provided that three square miles and eighteen acres of the county of Highland should be and the same were attached to the county of Clinton: 'Beginning where the line run by the surveyor of Ross, as described in the foregoing section, crosses the East fork of the Little Miami river, and extending down the said East fork until a line due west to the line of the county of Clermont, between the counties of Clermont and Highland, will include in the county of Clinton three square miles and eighteen acres of land, as aforesaid'; and the same was directed to be surveyed and laid off by the surveyor of Ross county, in the same way prescribed by the second section of the act to attach part of Highland county to the county of Clinton (February 4, 1813).

"In the month of October, 1817, Moses Collier, surveyor of Greene county, made a survey of the three square miles and eighteen acres of land off from the county of Highland to become a part of the county of Clinton; since which time this three square miles and eighteen acres of land have been a part of the territory of the county of Clinton, and the county invested with her constitutional number of square miles.

"A meeting of the commissioners of Clinton county; present Joseph Doan, Mahlon Haworth and Samuel Ruble, commissioners; date, June 4, 1817, allowance No. 53: 'Walter Dillon, for conveying notice to the surveyor of Greene county to run off eleven miles from the county of Warren, and three square miles and eighteen acres from the county of Highland to become a part of the county of Clinton, agreeably to an act entitled, "An act to attach part of the county of Butler to the county of Warren, and for other purposes," and an act amendatory of said act. Order issued, forty-two dollars and twenty-five cents.'

"Meeting of commissioners, October 21, 1817; present Joseph Doan and Samuel Ruble, commissioners. The commissioners proceeded to adjust demands against the county and allowed voucher No. 96. 'No. 96, Moses Collier, surveyor of Greene county, for making survey of three square miles and eighteen acres from the county of Highland to become part of Clinton; nine days at two dollars, and two chainmen and one axman eight days at one dollar, and justices' certificate, twenty-five cents. Allowed. Order issued, forty-two dollars and twenty-five cents.'

"Act of February 19, 1810, section 2, contains this provision, that 'after March 1 next (1810), said county shall be vested with all privileges and ammunities (immunities) of a separate and distinct township: Provided, that the sheriffs, coroners, constables, collectors, and all other township officers in the county aforesaid shall continue to perform their respective duties as prescribed by law, within the said county of Clinton, before said division; and suits of law which were or may be pending at the time of said division shall be adjusted in the same manner as if the division had not taken place.'

"Section 3 required the legal voters residing in Clinton county to assemble on the first Monday in March next ensuing, in their respective townships, and elect their several county officers, who should hold their offices until the next annual meeting.

"Section 4. By this section the place of holding the courts of the county was established at the house of Jesse Hughes, two miles southeast of Wilmington, until a permanent seat of justice should be established in said county as directed by law. And this act was made to take effect and to be in force from and after March 1, 1810."

LOCATION OF THE COUNTY SEAT.

Still quoting from the manuscript of the late Judge R. B. Harlan:

"Clinton county having been established, it became necessary to select a county seat or place for holding the courts of the county. By the act of March 28, 1803, it was provided that, 'For each new county established during the present or any future session of the Legislature, three commissioners shall be appointed by resolution of both houses of the Legislature, whose duty it shall be to examine and determine what part of said county so established is the most eligible for holding the several courts within the county; and that it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to notify the persons of their several appointments.'

"Upon the passage of the act creating the county of Clinton, both branches of the Legislature, by a joint resolution, appointed three commissioners to examine and determine what part of said county was most eligible for the seat of justice. One of these commissioners was John Polloack, several times elected to the House of Representatives from Clermont county and speaker for the same body for the sessions of 1812-13, 1813-14, 1814-15; Mr. Stewart, either of Ross or Pickaway county, is supposed to have been a second. Who the third was, the writer of these notes has not the means of knowing.

"These commissioners, having been notified by the secretary of state, proceeded, as required by the statute, to give twenty days' notice to the inhabitants of the new county of the time, place and purport of their meeting, in the county, and, having taken the oath required by the statute in such cases, proceeded to examine and selected the most proper place, in their opinion, for the said seat of justice, as near the center of the county as possible, paying regard to the situation, extent of population, and quality of land, together with the general convenience and interest of the inhabitants of the county. The examination resulted in the selection of the present county seat, and the report thereof was made to the court of common pleas next holden in and for the county.

"This was an extra session of the court for the transaction of official business, held at the house of Jesse Hughes, Sr. Present, Peter Burr, Jesse Hughes and Thomas Hinkson; Warren Sabin, clerk pro tem. This report of the commissioners was filed in the court, May 16, 1810, and was opened, as shown by the minutes of the court.

"On its appearing that no town had been previously laid out at the place agreed upon, it became the duty of the court, under the law, to appoint a director whose duty it was, after giving surety for the faithful performance of his work, to purchase the land for the use and behoof of the county, to lay it off into lots, streets and alleys, under the regulations as prescribed by the court, to dispose of the lots either at private or public sale as the court might think proper, and to make conveyances for the same in fee simple to the purchaser. The person selected for this office of director was James McManis, a resident of the neighborhood in which Clarksville has since been laid out. He was a brother of George McManis, one of the first three county commissioners, who, soon after, on the resignation of Peter Burr, one of the associate judges, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

"It is believed that no offers to donate land, goods or money were made to the commissioners for the use of the county on condition that a different site for the county seat would be selected from the one proposed. Indeed, if there was any competition, or any sharp or excited controversy about the location of the county seat, no record or tradition of it has been preserved. Two concurrent offers to donate land for the use of the county were made the commissioners on the condition that the county seat be established on the site selected, namely, sixty acres, one lot of fifty acres, by David Faulkner, and another of ten acres by Joseph Doan. Both offers were accepted. The lands thus offered lay partly in David Faulkner's tract of three hundred and fifty acres, and partly in Joseph Doan's tract of three hundred and fifty-seven acres—tracts which lay side by side, and were parts of General Posey's survey, No. 1,057.

"But the question in regard to the county seat was not settled. There was still existing an unpleasant uncertainty in regard to it. It appears quite plain that the donors of the land sought to be acquired, and those having charge of the location of the county seat, had met with some cause for discouragement. It might have been about the character of the conveyances to be made, as, for example, whether upon some contingency occurring in future, the land should or should not revert back to the donors or their heirs. Be this as it may, on June 20, the court ordered that 'except David Faulkner and Joseph Doan come forward and make a good and sufficient title in fee simple for their respective donations, within fifteen days, then and in that case the court order the director to proceed to give notice to the commissioners to select the next most eligible place for the seat of justice for the aforesaid county.' What effect this order had, if any, cannot be ascertained, after such a lapse of time, with much certainty. But this much is shown by the minutes of the court for the next day succeeding the one on which this order was made: 'Deed executed by David Faulkner to the director of the county, agreeably to law' (June 21, 1810). Joseph Doan had previously, on the 7th of June, conveyed the title of his donation to the county.

"At a term of the court of common pleas, on June 21, 1810, present Jesse Hughes, Thomas Hinkson and George McManis, associate judges, and Warren Sabin, clerk pro tem., the court ordered that the director proceed to lay out the town for the county seat, and, after advertising the sale in the Chillicothe and Lebanon newspapers so long as he might think necessary, to sell every odd-numbered lot at a credit, one-third in six, one-third in twelve and one-third in eighteen months, by the purchaser giving bond with approved security.

"Accordingly, Mr. McManis proceeded to lay out the town, and, by August 2, 1810, had ready a plat representing the lots regularly numbered and the streets properly named, and, on the 5th and 7th of the same month, one-half of the lots were sold to the highest bidders for the same. The sale was largely attended and competition ran high. The name given the town on the official plat was Clinton, from Gen. George Clinton, of New York, for whom the county had been named. The deeds of these lots frequently, if not generally, bore date early in September. The first deed was dated September 3. The highest price paid for any lot was one hundred dollars, for No. 71, extending from Main street north to the alley, with the right of the lot on the east side of South street, bought by William Ferguson. The lowest price paid was for lot No. 82, on Sugartree street, now owned by the railroad company. It was sold to Isaiah Morris on time for four dollars and twelve and one-half cents. No. 57, next to the court house on the west, was sold for sixty dollars. John Cox bought lot No. 59, the old hotel property of Warren Sabin, where James Henry's grocery store now is, for eighty-four dollars. The Buckeye property was sold to Mahlos Haworth for sixty dollars. The corner lot on which William Hibben so long resided was bought for thirty-six dollars. The lot on the southeast corner of South and Locust streets (lot No. 69) was bought by Jesse and David Hughes. William Polk bought lot No. 17, dated September 3, for six dollars; Absalom Haworth, lot No. 179, South street, dated September 3, 1810; Joseph Doan, lot No. 28, for thirty-five dollars, dated December 5, 1810; William Hobson, lots Nos. 6 and 11, August 7, 1810.

"On September 10, 1810, the court ordered the name of the town to be changed from 'Clinton' to 'Armenia.' On December 31, the name was again changed by the court on request of the donors, to Mount Pleasant (the name is written Mount Vernon, but the name is marked out with a pen and 'Pleasant' written after it). But this last name was not more satisfactory than the others had been, and, on February 10, 1811, the court of common pleas, which had charge of the matter, made an order that the county seat be called Wilmington, from cities of the name in Delaware and North Carolina, from which states emigrants had come to this locality, and that the name be not again altered without legislative act."

ERECTION OF TOWNSHIPS AND THEIR SUBSEQUENT SUBDIVISIONS.

The first division of Clinton county into townships occurred at a meeting of the commissioners of the county held on April 6, 1810. At this meeting were present George McManis, James Birdsall and Henry Babb, commissioners. It was "Ordered, that all that part of Clinton county east of the old boundary line of Warren county shall be one township known by the name of Richland; and all that part of said Clinton county that is within the old boundary line of Warren and north of Lytle's creek, and from the mouth of said creek west to the boundary line of Clinton county, shall be known by the name of Chester township; and all that part of the aforesaid county that lies south of Lytle's creek and south of the south boundary line of Chester and west of Richland, shall be set off as a separate township known by the name of Vernon."

Two additional townships, Union and Green, were created on August 21, 1813, and the first election for township officers in each was held on the second Tuesday in October following. Clark township was formed from Green and Vernon on July 14, 1817, and Liberty township was erected on the same date. The remaining townships of the county were organized at the following dates: Marion, August, 1830; Washington, June, 1835; Wayne, March, 1837; Jefferson, March, 1839; Adams, May, 1849; Wilson, August, 1850.

COURT HOUSES.

In 1812 the people of Clinton county consented to be taxed for the purpose of erecting a court house. The commissioners at this time were Mahlon Haworth, Joseph Doan and Henry Babb.

Again quoting from the notes of the late Judge R. B. Harlan, it is found that the court house was "to be built of brick on a stone foundation, sunk in the ground one foot and rising above the ground one foot; to be forty feet square outside of the wall; to be two stories high; the lower floor to be laid part with brick and part with inch plank, well seasoned, jointed, planed and grooved. The ground story to be fifteen feet high, and the wall eighteen inches thick; the second story to be ten feet high, with walls thirteen and a half inches thick. Cornice to be of brick; to have two chimneys in the upper story, both built in the north end, two and a half feet in the back. To have two doors, one fronting each street, four feet wide; nine windows, each of twenty-four lights, one of which was to be placed above the judge's bench; eight windows above, each of twenty-four lights; all the windows to be filled with glass eight by ten. To have a cupola ten feet square and seventeen feet high above the roof of the house, with a square roof, a spire, weather-boarded, the boards to be planed and painted white, the roof painted brown. The doors to be paneled doors. The building to be made of good materials and in a workmanlike manner, and to be completed in two years from the date of sale. The payments to be two hundred and fifty dollars in advance; one-fourth of the residue in six months, one-fourth in twelve months, one-fourth in eighteen months, and one-fourth in two years from the date of sale.

"'Jacob Hale bid one thousand, seven hundred and forty-two dollars, and, no person bidding lower, the building of the court house was publicly cried off and sold to the said Jacob Hale for the sum as aforesaid bid. This was Friday, March 27, 1812, according to the record. The commissioners had held a consultation on the 18th of February preceding, and then determined to build a court house forty feet square and two stories high. And thereupon the said Jacob Hale, together with James Birdsall and Samuel Cox, who are approved by the commissioners as sureties, executed bond for the performance of the building aforesaid.'

"On March 5, 1816, the commissioners entered into an agreement with Henry Vanderburgh for performing certain work on the court house, 'that is to say, to make Venetian blinds for the cupola of the court house, which is to be done in a workmanlike manner; one to be hung with hinges, the others nailed fast—all to be painted green; the work to be finished in a good and substantial and workmanlike manner. The said Henry Vanderburgh to furnish all materials and finish the same against the fifth day of May, next.' The price for the work and material was fixed at twenty-eight dollars, part to be paid in advance, and the residue on the completion of the work."

This building did service for twenty-six years. At the March, 1837, session of the county commissioners, the auditor was directed to have published in the Democrat and Herald a notice that "Sealed proposals will be received on or before twelve o'clock of the first Monday of April next, for delivering one hundred thousand or more good merchantable brick in the kiln within half a mile of the center stone of the town of Wilmington, on or before the first day of November next." At an extra session in April following, Elisha Doan offered to "burn one hundred and fifty thousand good merchantable brick," etc., at four dollars and twenty-five cents per thousand, and his proposal was accepted and a sum of money paid him in advance. John and Joshua Haynes hauled stone from the quarry for the foundations of the new building in December, 1837. Doan's kiln of brick was not ready at the time specified and he was given further time. On the 2nd of January, 1838, it was examined by a man appointed for that purpose, and as they found the brick to be not merchantable, the commissioners rejected them, compelled Doan to pay back the one hundred dollars he had been advanced, besides some contingent expenses, and canceled the contract with him.

Plans for the new court house were received and accepted January 13, 1838. It was drawn by John B. Posey, a member of the board. Notice for sealed proposals for doing the brick and carpenter work on the new building was ordered published in the Democrat and Herald, and on the 12th of February, 1838, they were opened and read. The contract for the carpenter and joiner work, and all except brick and mason's work, was awarded to John Bush for eleven thousand dollars; that for the brick and mason work and plastering to Thomas and Alfred Shockley and William and Joshua Noble for eleven thousand one hundred and forty-six dollars. John B. Posey was appointed superintendent of construction of the new building, and on the 7th of March, 1838, the old court house was sold to George Fallis and John B. Posey for two hundred and forty dollars. On May 17, 1838, the commissioners met and "proceeded to lay off the foundation of the new court house, and agreed to enlarge said building five feet in width, making said building fifty feet wide." The new structure was painted by Samuel Peele. The final settlement with the brick and mason work contractors was made December 24, 1839, and that with J. H. Bush, carpenter work, etc., March 3, 1840. The offices in the new building were occupied in December, 1839. Some changes were made in the original plan of the building, owing to the inability of the contractors to get a portion of the materials in time, and this made the cost something less than it would have been otherwise. Additional expenses were incurred for numerous other items, and the total cost of the building, with outside wall (or fence), stone steps on south side, etc., was in the neighborhood of twenty-two thousand dollars. This building is still in use. The front is to the east, on South street, where is a portico supported by heavy columns. A bell weighing five hundred pounds, purchased at Cincinnati, of G. W. Coffin, for one hundred and fifty dollars, was placed on the court house in May, 1846. The building has been in use for seventy-six years.

JAILS.

At the sixth meeting of the county commissioners, held on September 22, 1810, the following plan for a county jail was presented, accepted and recorded: "Twenty by eighteen feet; a wall of good stone two feet thick, sunk two feet below the surface of the earth; the first floor one foot thick of hewed joint timber, to extend with the extremity of the above named wall; the first story to be nine feet high from the first floor, of a wall of hewed timber, two thicknesses of nine inches each, thicknesses laid close—a space of six inches wide between the aforesaid thicknesses, on each side and end of the first story, to be filled completely with stone to average one foot square each in the aforesaid first story taken up, the first wall dove-tailed at each corner, and the inside wall taken up, half dove-tailed at each corner, and laid close. Four windows in the aforesaid first story, one foot square each; one bar of iron, two inches one way and one inch the other, let sufficiently into the wood, placed in each light, crossed with another bar of iron one inch square, running through the upright bar. The second floor, of timber, one foot thick, hewed and jointed close, extending with the outside wall of the first story; a door in the center of the last named floor, three by two feet, the shutter two inches thick, of white oak planks one inch thick, spiked strongly together, and hung with iron hinges one inch in diameter each; three straps of iron on each side of the shutter, one inch and a half wide and a quarter of an inch thick, extending with the extremity of the first story, taken up, dove-tailed on each corner, and laid close; a sufficient number of joined, eight by four inches; the third floor, of one and one-half inch plank, spiked strongly to the joint and jointed close; a pertition (partition) of two-inch plank in the second story, running crossways of the building, sufficiently secure; a sufficient door in said partition wall, with a common prison lock thereon; a good and sufficient joint shingle roof, and the gable end sufficiently weatherboarded; three nine-inch light windows in the second story, each secured with three bars of iron, each bar half an inch one way, and an inch and a half the other, crossed with three bars of iron to each light, three-fourths of an inch square. A common size door in the second story, sufficiently cased and hung, and a common prison lock thereon; a sufficient set of steps leading from the ground to a platform three feet square at the above named door, the platform and steps sufficiently hand-railed. All to be completed in a masterly and workmanlike manner."

The record of the same day says: "Solomon Stanbury (also spelled Stanbrough on the records), undertakes the building of the aforesaid jail at the price of six hundred dollars. Enters Joseph Doan for security. Allowed fifty dollars advance. The work to be completed nine months from the above date, namely, 22d of September, 1810."

This jail stood on the east end of the lot occupied by the present jail building. Before the close of the War of 1812, a man by the name of Spencer, while confined in it for violation of the civil law, fighting and other misdemeanors, set fire to it, burst the lock and escaped, and let the building burn.

Nothing further is found on the commissioners' records concerning a jail until January 29, 1819, when, at a special meeting, the commissioners devised plans for a temporary jail building. On February 5, 1819, the contract for erecting the building was awarded to William Butler. The late Dr. A. Jones gives the following description of this jail: "In the construction of the new jail-house he (Butler) used unhewn and round beech logs, from twelve to fifteen inches in diameter, notched in so as to fit tightly, and so arranged that a crow-bar could not enter between them. The house had two high windows so provided that it was impossible to enter them from the outside. The building had two strong doors—one on the inside and one on the outside. The upper and lower floors were made of beech logs, fitted tightly. The floor was covered with two-inch oak plank, and the under side of the upper floor with the like quality of oak plank, well spiked on. This jail was named 'Fort Butler'—after the builder—and was the strongest and best fitted to retain prisoners and offenders of the law of all the jail-houses that have ever been constructed in Clinton county."

However, Fort Butler did not remain long in use. At the December session, 1821, of the commissioners, it was agreed to advertise for proposals for one hundred and fifty perch of stone, suitable for the erection of a stone jail, and, on the 5th of the following January (1822), the contract for furnishing them was awarded to George Haworth at seventy-four and a half cents a perch. The contract for the construction of the building was awarded on June 12, 1822, to Levi Shepard for five hundred and eight dollars. This jail was to be twenty by twenty-six feet, long way north and south, two stories high, walls of lower story three feet, and upper story two feet thick; lower story, six feet, and upper story, seven feet and four inches in the clear; the building to be completed by July 1, 1823. Jacob Doan and Samuel Myers furnished one hundred perch of stone, in addition to the first hundred and fifty, and the irons of the old jail were sold to John A. Hays for nine dollars, sixty-two and a half cents. On August 1, 1823, the commissioners inspected and accepted the new jail. The contract for making and hanging five iron doors in the building was awarded to John McElwain for one hundred and nine dollars.

The matter of a county jail was before the commissioners again on March 1, 1830, when they ordered that an advertisement for bids for the work be published in the Constitutional Republican, then being issued in Wilmington. The records show that Joel Woodruff furnished the timber and did the woodwork on the new building, and that the masonry was laid by Jacob Miller. The work of both contractors was accepted—Woodruff's in November, 1831, and Miller's in January, 1832. This building was considerably damaged by fire in the fall of 1841, and a considerable sum of money spent in repairs on it.

On July 17, 1850, the subject of a jail again made its appearance before the commissioners of the county. The old one was torn down and the debris removed from the lot, and, in August of that year, the new building was commenced. Azel Walker was appointed superintendent of construction. The building, which is of brick and fitted both for jail and residence, was completed in 1852, costing about seven thousand dollars. This structure is still standing and still in use as the county jail.

COUNTY OFFICE BUILDINGS.

In 1824, the commissioners formed a plan for a building for public offices, thirty-five by eighteen feet in dimensions, one story high and to be erected on the court-house lot. The contract for its construction was given to Levi Sheppard and the building was completed and accepted by the commissioners on August 13, 1825. The building was torn down and the materials in it sold at public auction in December, 1841. John B. Posey also built for the county, in 1833, fire-proof offices costing about five hundred dollars.

In 1881 the commissioners erected, on lot No. 73 in Wilmington, a building in which the offices of the probate judge, recorder, and several other county officers are located. The building was built by Robert and Charles McMillan and William M. Cleveland, and the contract price was, at the time of settlement, February 7, 1882, nine thousand four hundred eighteen dollars and ninety-seven cents. The building was occupied in February and March, 1882. This building will be razed to make way for the new court house.

THE NEW COURT HOUSE AND JAIL.

The present Clinton county court house was erected in 1838 and, consequently, is over three-quarters of a century old—in fact, it is one of the oldest court houses in the whole state of Ohio. For several years there has been much agitation looking toward the erection of a new court house, but it was not until 1915 that the bond issue was ratified by the village voters. On January 18, 1915, the county commissioners—Job Clark, Zene G. Hadley and Charles Skimming—took the first definite steps in the matter of a new court house. On that date they set February 16, 1915, for a vote on the question and, according to law, if a majority of all the votes cast were in favor of the erection of the said building, the commissioners were then to take steps to provide a site for and the erection of the building.

During the winter of 1914-15, the proposed new building was an all-absorbing question of discussion throughout the county. Perhaps some of the opposition to the proposed building was due to the fact that the taxpayers of the county were afraid that the large sum of money which was to be handled might be frittered away in such a manner that the people might not get the full benefit. In order to allay any opposition on this score, Judge West announced several weeks before the election the names of the men who were to act with the county commissioners in the selection of the site and the subsequent erection of the building. With the appointment of such men as A. J. Wilson, M. R. Denver, J. W. Sparks and J. F. Fitzhugh, the judge silenced all opposition which might arise from this source. It would have been difficult to have selected any other four men in whom the people of the county had as full confidence, and to this wise move on the part of Judge West may be attributed the final favorable vote on the question. The final vote on the question resulted in a vote of two thousand ninety-nine affirmatives to one thousand eight hundred sixty negatives, an affirmative majority of two hundred thirty-nine.

With the matter of a new building decided, the commission of seven at once met and organized for the transaction of business. The voters had authorized the board to issue three hundred thousand dollars of five per cent. bonds in accordance with the laws of Ohio (section 5642-1, of the General Code of Ohio), "for the purpose of purchasing a site and the erection of a court house and jail thereon." The bonds were first offered for sale on June 1 at four and one-half per cent. but no bids were received. The bonds were offered for sale in denominations of five hundred dollars each, interest payable semi-annually, March 1 and September 1 of each year. The bonds were numbered from one to six hundred inclusive and come due between 1921 and 1944, twenty-four bonds falling due each year until 1944, when forty-eight fall due. Sealed proposals were received by the auditor until twelve o'clock, noon, Thursday, July 15, 1915, and on that date Tillotson & Wolcott Company, of Cleveland, were awarded the bonds, having offered a premium of eleven thousand three hundred sixty-one dollars and eighty cents for the total amount of three hundred thousand dollars, being the highest bidder by twenty dollars and thirty cents of the thirteen bidders.

As soon as it was decided to build a new court house, the question of a suitable location came to the front. It was evident that the present site could not be utilized; not only was it too small, but even with the addition of the remainder of the county property on the lot (lot No. 58 of the original plat), there was insufficient room for the court house and jail. At this point it seems pertinent to explain the peculiar history of lot No. 58, a part of which is occupied by the present court house, the remainder being occupied by four store-rooms facing South street. By referring to the plat it will be seen that the court house covers less than half of the lot. Just what was on the lots numbered 1, 2 and 3 prior to 1841, when they were first leased, is not known. According to the commissioners' records, these three lots (twenty by ninety feet) were leased on July 10, 1841, to the highest bidders for a term of ninety-nine years. Elisha Vance bid in lot 1 for an annual rental of thirty-one dollars and twenty-five cents; William Martin took lot 2 at thirty-two dollars and sixty-two and one-half cents, and Thomas Carothers had to pay only twenty-seven dollars to get lot 3. These lots were to be revalued every ten years and the rental changed to fit the new valuation. According to the terms of the leases, all buildings on the lots were to become the property of the county on the expiration of the ninety-nine years, which, by the way, will expire on July 10, 1940. These leases have changed hands many times in the past seventy-four years; lots 1 and 2 are now leased by John Egan and lot 3 by Orange Frazer and the Denver estate. The value of the leases has been changed every ten years according to the provisions of the original agreement. In 1914, lot No. 1 cost the lessee one hundred forty-five dollars less the taxes of seventy-one dollars; lot No. 2 cost eighty-five dollars, less the taxes of forty-seven dollars and sixteen cents, and lot No. 3 cost two hundred twenty-five dollars, less the taxes of one hundred fifteen dollars and forty-four cents.

When David Faulkner and Joseph Doan donated fifty and ten acres, respectively, for the town site in 1810, the commissioners appointed a director to lay off the town and reserve lots for county purposes. Lots 58 and 73 were set aside for the county at that time and both are still the property of the county. Lot 73 is diagonally across the street from lot 58 and is now occupied by the building housing the probate court and the recorder, as well as the county jail. There are also some other buildings on this lot.

To return to the location of the new court house. From the beginning of the agitation for the new building, it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that the square of which lot 78 was a part was the best location for the new court house and jail. This square contains lots 73, 74, 75, 76, 83, 84, 93 and 94, and is bounded by South and Walnut street on the west and east, and Main and Sugartree streets on the north and south. The commission of seven finally decided on this square, known as the Shadagee square, providing that it could be secured at a reasonable price. At the time this work went to the press the question of location had not been definitely decided. The case is now in the probate court, where condemnatory proceedings will establish the prices of the various lots in the square. If the total of the condemned property of the fifteen owners is not too excessive the commissioners will pay the condemnation price and the building of the court house and jail will then be commenced at once.

The commissioners have selected as architects, Weber, Werner & Adkins, of Cincinnati, and this firm has already submitted a tentative plan for the buildings. The court-house will occupy the center of the four-hundred-foot square, with the jail in the northeast corner facing the LaMax theater. The court house, as planned, presents a striking appearance. It will be of the Italian renaissance style of architecture, the finish being in buff Bedford stone. Besides an assembly room on the first floor, there will be a Grand Army Republic hall, a room for the relics of the county, and retiring rooms. The second floor will contain all the county offices, while the courts will occupy the third floor. The jail will house the heating plant for both buildings.

DISTRICT ASSESSOR.

Until the fall of 1913 the auditors of each county in Ohio were at the head of the taxing board of their respective counties. It was thought by many people that there should be created a new office in each county to have charge of this work, and so insistent became the demand that a law was passed by the General Assembly of Ohio at the 1913 session providing for a district assessor. This law, known as Warne's law, was approved by the governor on May 6, 1913, and by its provisions a district assessor for each county was to be appointed by the tax commission of Ohio. This official, in turn, was to select his own deputies from a list of applicants who were to be required to pass a civil service examination. It is probably true that the method of selecting the district assessor and his deputies led to the wide condemnation of the law by the ordinary citizen. He felt that his rights and privileges were being trampled upon and that he should be allowed to vote directly for the men who were to assess his property.

Whatever the merits may be of the Warne act, such stout opposition developed to it that the General Assembly of 1915 repealed it and by the Parrot-Whitemore act (approved May 8, 1915) abolished the newly-created office of district assessor and placed the duties of the office back in the hands of the county auditor. The Republicans say that the passage of the Warne act was a political scheme to build up a machine for Governor Cox; the Democrats upheld it ostensibly for economic reasons, and the average citizen execrated it because it took away his privilege of voting for a few petty officers. Be that as it may, the old order of affairs will be restored on January 1, 1916, and the state will revert to the former haphazard method of assessing.

The first district assessor of Clinton county was M. D. Barns, who was appointed in October, 1913, and held until his successor, J. B. Clarke, the present incumbent, was appointed and took the office on April 1, 1915. The office pays a yearly salary of fifteen hundred dollars; the deputy assessors receive four dollars a day, their work in Clinton taking them from thirty to fifty days, with an average of about forty days.

Clinton county has twelve sub-assessment districts, with fourteen deputy assessors. Two districts (Nos. 3 and 4) have two townships each. District No. 3 comprises Liberty and Wilson townships, and No. 4 contains Adams and Chester. Wilmington has one assessor; Green township has two.

Inasmuch as this office will last only a little more than two years and then disappear forever, the following table may be of interest in preserving for posterity the main facts: District No. 1, T. J. Fealey, deputy, Union township; No. 2, M. B. Mason, deputy, city of Wilmington; No. 3, G. H. Plummer, deputy, Wilson and Liberty townships; No. 4, Harry Wilkinson, deputy, Chester and Adams townships; No. 5, R. T. Stanfield, deputy, Vernon township; No. 6, J. E. Briggs, deputy, Washington township; No. 7, H. M. Hall, deputy, Marion township; No. 8, D. Uible, deputy, Jefferson township; No. 9, Charles Elton, deputy, Green township; No. 10, S. C. Turner, deputy, Clark township; No. 11, Robert Kaufman, deputy, Richland township; No. 12, A. H. Morris, deputy, Wayne township.

Nearly all of these deputies have held their position from the time the law went into effect. In district No. 4, J. A. Craig preceded Wilkinson; in district No. 9, Elton followed W. B. West; in district No. 11, F. L. Rhonemus, now the chief clerk in the district assessor's office at the county seat, was the first appointee, resigning to take up his present duties. In district No. 3, H. V. Harris has been appointed as an additional deputy, and in district No. 9, Charles Nordyke has been appointed as an additional deputy. All of these deputies will automaticcally lose their positions on January 1, 1916, when the Parret-Whitemore law goes into effect.

DEPUTY ASSESSORS' RETURNS FOR 1915.

The following table shows the number and value of each class of property found in Clinton county by the fourteen deputy assessors operating under District Assessor James B. Clark, for the year 1915, also the figures for 1914 for comparison:

BOARD OF SOLDIERS' RELIEF.

According to an act of the Legislature, the judge of the common pleas court in each county in the state appoints a board of three members to supervise the distribution of relief to veterans of the Civil War and to their wives and minor children. Since the establishment of this board, in 1901, the following persons in Clinton have served on this board:

Name.	Date appointed.	End of Term.	Appointed by.
George E. Daniels	May 19, 1899	April 1, 1901	D. B. Van Pelt
James W. McDonald	May 19, 1899	April 7, 1902	D. B. Van Pelt

CHAPTER IV.

LAND GRANTS, ENTRIES AND SURVEYS.

On December 20, 1783, the state of Virginia authorized its delegates to make a deed to the United States of all its rights in the territory northwest of the Ohio river, upon condition that the territory so ceded should "be laid out and formed into states, containing a suitable extent of territory, not less than one hundred nor more than one hundred fifty miles square, or as near thereunto as circumstances will admit; and that the states so formed shall be distinct republican states and admitted members of the federal union, having the same rights of sovereignty, freedom and independence as the other states."

These were only a part of the conditions. Among others were the following: "That the French and Canadian inhabitants and other settlers of the Kaskaskies, St. Vincents and the neighboring villages, who have professed themselves citizens of Virginia, shall have their possessions and titles confirmed to them and be protected in the enjoyment of their rights and liberties. That a quantity, not exceeding one hundred fifty thousand acres of land, promised by this state, shall be allowed and granted to then Colonel, now General, George Rogers Clark, and to the officers and soldiers of his regiment who marched with him when the posts Kaskaskies and St. Vincents were reduced, and to the officers and soldiers who have since been incorporated into the said regiment, to be laid off in one tract, the length of which not to exceed double the breadth, in such place, on the northwest side of the Ohio, as a majority of the officers shall choose, and to be afterward divided among the said officers and soldiers in due proportion, according to the laws of Virginia. That in case the quantity of good land on the southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of the Cumberland river, and between the Green river and the Tennessee river, which have been reserved by law for the Virginia troops upon continental establishment, should, from the North Carolina line bearing in farther upon the Cumberland lands than was expected, prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiencies should be made up to the said troops in good lands, to be laid off between the rivers Scioto and Little Miami, on the northwest side of the river Ohio, in such proportions as have been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia. That all the lands within the territories so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for or appropriated to any of the before mentioned purposes or disposed of as bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American army, shall be considered a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become, or shall become, members of the Confederation or Federal Alliance of the said states, Virginia included, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever."

In agreement with these conditions, a deed was made on March 1, 1784. The number of soldiers in the Virginia continental line proved to be one thousand one hundred twenty-four. The tract reserved for them between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers became known as the "Virginia Military Tract."

In 1783, the Continental line chose Col. Richard C. Anderson as principal surveyor on their behalf, and concluded a contract with him on December 17 in that year. On July 20, 1784, he opened an office at Louisville, Kentucky, but no entries were made north of the Ohio until August 1, 1787. The first work done on what is now Clinton county by a deputy surveyor was by Gen. Nathaniel Massie, whose name appears in 1792 and a number of subsequent years. Others were John Obannon, 1794; William Lytle, 1795; John Beasley, 1796; James Galloway, 1804; William Barlow, 1802; James Taylor, 1813; Walter Dun, 1820; Allen Latham, 1822; Cadwallader Wallace, 1822; E. P. Kendrick, 1833; A. D. Kendrick, 1847. These, with the exception of Walter Dun, all appear to have been employed on surveys through a number of years each, and probably the names of Nathaniel Massie and John Obannon are most frequently found on the records.

The following is the record of the first entry made in the territory now comprising the county of Clinton: "No. 550, August 4, 1787. Richard C. Anderson and Mayo Carrington enter 4,000 acres of land on Military warrant No. 856, on the waters of the Little Miami, beginning three miles southeast of Col. Logan's encampment, in October, 1786, when a man deserted from him; running southwest 400 poles, and, from the beginning northeast 400 poles; thence at right angles southeast from each end of this line for quantity." In the same record, page 58, is the survey, as follows:

"Surveyed for Richard Clough Anderson and Mayo Carrington 2,000 acres of land, on part of a military warrant No. 856, on the waters of the Little Miami, Beginning at a sugar tree, ash and black oak, running south forty-five degrees west 400 poles to three sugar trees; thence south forty five degrees east 800 poles, crossing a creek at 38 and at 200 poles to two sugar trees and a sassafras; thence north forty five degrees west 800 poles, crossing a branch at 70, and the creek at 360 poles, to the beginning.

John Obannon, D. S.

"Andrew Potter—C. C. March 3, 1794.

"Charles Pigman— June 23, 1794.

"David Flough, M."

Although this tract was the first one entered in the county, it was not the first surveyed, as Nathaniel Massie had made several surveys in 1792-93.

Several surveys were made August 6, 1787, being as follows: All on the "lower side of Caesar's creek;" No. 567, by Clement Biddle, assignee, 905 2-3 acres; No. 569, by Archibald Blair, heir, 1,000 acres; No. 570, by John Anderson, 1,000 acres; No. 571, by Albert Gallatin, assignee, 766 1-3 acres; No. 567, by Col. Abram Buford, 1,000 acres; No. 583, by Isaac Webb, 1,000 acres; No. 625, by Thomas Finn, 1,500 acres. The entire number of entries made in the Clinton county portion of the tract, during the month of August, 1787, was one hundred and sixteen.

Gen. Horatio Gates had for his share of the Virginia Military Tract twelve thousand five hundred acres, which he sold to his son-in-law, Dr. James Murray, who deeded to settlers such quantities of land as they chose to purchase, at the rate of "seven quarter dollars per acre." Murray's deeds are as follows:

December 3, 1803, John McGregor, 200 acres, survey 1,632.
December 3, 1803, James Magee, 250 acres, survey 1,632.
December 12, 1803, Joseph Carter, 100 acres, survey 1,559.
December 12, 1803, Robert Eachus, 160 acres, survey 1,558.
December 13, 1803, John Vestal, 690 acres survey 1,559.
December 13, 1803, James Moon, survey 1,558.
December 13, 1803, Isaac Perkins, 67 acres, survey 1,558.
December 13, 1803, James Odle, 159 acres, survey 1,558.
December 19, 1803, Layton Jay, 50 acres survey 1,558.
December 17, 1803, Jacob Haines, 125 acres survey 1,558.
December 15, 1803, Center meeting house, 15 acres, survey 1,558.
January 19, 1805, Solomon Stanbrough, 140 acres, survey 1,558.
January 19, 1807, Samuel Stanton, 100 acres, survey 1,558.
———————— David Ferris, 200 acres, survey 2,229.
August 5, 1809, Mahlon Farquhar, 175 acres, survey 2,231.

August 5, 1809, William Mendenhall, 170 acres, survey 1,554.
June 8, 1805, Nathan Linton, 122½ acres, survey 2,231.
June 8, 1805, Mordecai Mendenhall, 146 acres, survey 1,554.
December 17, 1806, Israel Wright, 517 acres, survey 1,554.
February 7, 1805, Nathan Hines, 94 acres, survey 2,258.
February 7, 1805, George Phillips, 200 acres, survey 2,232.
February 4, 1812, John Ballard, 75 acres, survey 1,557.
February 5, 1809, Daniel Linton, 100 acres, survey 2,248.
December 21, 1809, David Ballard, 122¾ acres, survey 1,556.
December 21, 1809, Hur Hodgson, 100 acres, survey 2,248.
August 5, 1809, Enoch Ballard, 110 acres, survey 2,248.
July 4, 1807, Enoch Wickersham, 200 acres, survey 2, 232.
July 12, 1808, Daniel Hodgson, 117½ acres, survey 2,248.
July 12, 1808, Jonathan Hodgson, 118 acres, survey 2,848.
December 26, 1806, Jacob Haines, 111 acres.
January 26, 1807, Benjamin Farquhar, 100 acres, survey 1,554.
August 5, 1809, John Hadley, 250 acres, survey 2,231.
Nathan Mendenhall, 170 acres, 1,554.
Stephen Mendenhall, survey 2,248.
David Patterson, 41 acres, survey 2,248.
September 20, 1824, Eekiel Leonard, 107¼ acres, survey 2,248.

Any person holding a warrant for land in the Virginia Military Tract had the privilege of locating it in such place and such shape in the district as he chose, provided he did not encroach on previous locations. Consequently, surveys were made in all conceivable shapes, with no system whatever, and that confusion and litigation were occasioned later was not surprising. The only limitation in shape was that which by a Virginia statute required the breadth of each survey to be at least one-third its length in every part, unless the breadth was restricted by mountains, water courses or previous locations. Because of this lack of system, there were numerous interferences and encroachments of one land entry upon another, and there is at the present time great difficulty in the matter of tracing titles to these lands.

The difficulties and dangers encountered by the early surveyors can hardly be understood by the people of the present generation, but so great were they that in the Virginia Military Tract a large portion of the tillable land in the entry—one-fourth, one-third or one-half—was often paid the surveyor for his labor. Not only here, but throughout all the lands of the West, the surveys were made principally in the winter, there being less danger then from the Indians, who were in their winter quarters. Surveying with deep snow on the ground and in the midst of heavy forests was not especially conducive to accuracy, and, in the case of the "Congress lands," as they are known, many blunders were made which were only discovered when the snow had melted and the face of the country was in full view. Gen. Nathaniel Massey was the most extensive surveyor and land speculator in Ohio in his time and was usually accompanied by three assistant surveyors, with each of whom were six men. Great caution was observed in their movements. The hunter went ahead, looking for game and keeping a sharp watch for Indians; the surveyor, two chainmen and a marker followed; the man with the packhorse and baggage came next, and some distance in the rear was a watchman, following on the trail and guarding against an attack from that direction. From John McDonald's "Life of General Massie," the following extract is quoted:

"During the winter of 1794-95, Massie prepared a party to enter largely into the surveying business. Nathaniel Beasley, John Beasley and Peter Lee were employed as the assistant surveyors. The party set off from Manchester, well equipped, to prosecute their business, or, should an occasion offer, give battle to the Indians. They took the route of Logan's trace and proceeded to a place called the Deserted Camp, on Todd's fork of the Little Miami.

"At this point, they commenced surveying, and surveyed large portions of land on Todd's fork and up the Miami to the Chillicothe town, thence up Massie's creek and Cæsar's creek nearly to their heads. By the time the party had progressed thus far, winter had set in. The ground was covered with a sheet of snow from six to ten inches deep. During the tour, which continued upward of thirty days, the party had no bread. For the first two weeks, a pint of flour was distributed to each mess once a day, to mix with the soup in which meat had been boiled. When night came, four fires were made for cooking, that is, one for each mess. Around these fires, till sleeping time arrived, the company spent their time in the most social glee, singing songs and telling stories. When danger was not apparent or immediate, they were as merry a set of men as ever assembled. Resting time arriving, Massie always gave the signal, and the whole party would then leave their comfortable fires, carrying with them blankets, their fire arms and their little baggage, walking in perfect silence two or three hundred yards from their fires. They could then scrape away the snow and huddle down for the night. Each mess formed one bed. They would spread down on the ground one-half of the blankets, reserving the other half for covering. The covering blankets were fastened together by skewers, to prevent them from slipping apart. Thus prepared, the whole party crouched down for the night together, lying spoon fashion, with their rifles in their arms and their pouches under their heads for pillows. When one turned, the whole mess turned, or else the close range would be broken and the cold let in. When it was perfectly light, Massie would call up two of the men in whom he had most confidence and send them to reconnoiter and make a circuit around the fires, lest an ambuscade might be formed by the Indians to destroy the party as they returned to the fires. This was an invariable custom in every variety of weather. Self-preservation required this circumspection. Some time after this, while surveying on Cæsar's creek, his men attacked a party of Indians, and the savages broke and fled. After the defeat of the Indians by Wayne, the surveyors were not interrupted by them; but on one of their 'excursions, still remembered as 'the starving tour,' the whole party, consisting of twenty-eight men, suffered extremely in a driving snow storm for about four days. They were in a wilderness, exposed to this severe storm, without hut, tent or covering, and, what was still more appalling, without any provisions and without road or even track to retreat on, and nearly one hundred miles from any place of shelter. On the third day of the storm, they luckily killed two wild turkeys, which were boiled and divided into twenty-eight parts and devoured with great avidity, head, feet, entrails and all.

"In Symmes' Purchase, between the two Miami rivers, the territory was laid out into ranges, townships and sections, something after the system of the present government surveys, but in a manner which was defective. The sections were numbered from south to north, beginning at the southeast corner of each township. West of the Great Miami the surveys were made on the plan now in use by the government, which is the most complete and convenient of all. Section 16 in each government township, or one thirty-sixth part of each of the townships in the Symmes Purchase, was reserved for school purposes. In 1807, Congress enacted that a quantity of land equal to one thirty-sixth of the Virginia Military Tract should be selected for school purposes from the land lately purchased from the Indians and lying between the Western Reserve and the United States Military District. By an ordinance passed May 20, 1787, Congress provided for the reservation of section 16 for the use of schools, and the policy has since been adhered to. The deeds of these lands in Ohio have been made under the authority of the Legislature by the governor, and the proceeds form part of the irreducible state school fund."

OLDEST HOUSE IN CLINTON COUNTY.

CHAPTER V.

EARLY SETTLEMENT IN CLINTON COUNTY.

Brown-limbed and mighty were the forest trees
That lifted high their giant trunks in air;
Filled with sweet incense was the sighing breeze
Which touched, with soft caress, wild flowers fair;
The sunlight glanced among the foliage green,
And vainly strove to pierce the gloom beneath;
Glad swelled the heart of him who viewed the scene
And breathed the fragrance of the flowery heath.

So often have descriptions been written of the appearance of this region before the white settler had made it his home that all those who read must be familiar with the phraseology commonly employed. Yet there is not enough variety in the terms which can be used to write in a greatly different manner on the subject. A vast forest wilderness stretched north from the Ohio river, into the depths of which pushed bold pioneers from the states of North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey and others, most of them coming from the Virginians and the Carolinas.

The face of the country at the beginning of the settlement in Clinton county bore a vast difference in appearance to that of the present time. The soil was extremely fertile, and upon it grew, in the utmost luxuriance, the many varieties of trees and shrubs common to this latitude. Nearly the entire surface of the county was covered with a massive forest and the tangle of shrubs which grew beneath. Spicewood and the wild pea vine formed a mat through which the feet could push only with difficulty. From the leaves of the spicewood was made a decoction which was used in the place of "store tea" when the latter could not be obtained. Sassafras tea (called "sassafrak" in the vernacular of that day) was also used, and the sap of the sugar maple was a boon which the settlers well appreciated as an almost invaluable article in the economy of their households. Flowers in greatest variety grew and blossomed under the trees, and the rose, the wild lily, the dog wood, the red bud, and a hundred other varieties made a beautiful carpet for the magnificent forest aisles in their season.

Splendid as was the appearance of the country in the days when the "first settler" looked upon it, the fact remained that out of the forest depths homes must be carved. The task promised to be by no means an easy one, but the man who was bold enough to venture far from the older settlements and brave all of the difficulties he must of necessity encounter, was not disheartened with the prospect before him, and began at once the work he had resolved to accomplish. The ringing strokes of his axe echoed in the thick green wood, and the trees lay prostrate where for hundreds of years they had stood in their glory. The rays of the sun streamed into the little clearing; smoke curled upward from burning logs and brush-heaps; the rude cabin stood outlined against the dark and somber forest wall, and the new home was begun where never before the footsteps of civilization penetrated.

The land-office for the district of the Virginia military survey was opened August 1, 1787. Prior to this, in the same year this tract had been explored by Maj. John O'Bannon and Arthur Fox, two Kentucky surveyors, who wished to obtain a knowledge of the land for the purpose of making entries when the district should be opened up. O'Bannon became a prominent surveyor and did the major percentage of the surveying of this tract. He also entered considerable land himself and O'Bannon creek bears his name.

THE FIRST SETTLER.

The honor which is due the first settler of this county is a rather disputed subject, as no definite conclusion can be reached as to who really deserves this distinction. A dispute has arisen among those who have made investigations. It is stated by certain parties, and apparently on good authority, that the first settlement was made by William Smalley, who settled within the limits of the present township of Vernon, west of Clarksville, in the year 1797. If this were authentic, we would give him all the praise which is due, but the fact has been conclusively developed that Mr. Smalley's cabin was built about fifty rods west of the line which divides this county from Warren, in the township of Washington, in the said county. His purchase, however, extended over the line into Clinton county. Thus we are still very far from our goal.

It seems to be a difficult matter to really place the first actual settler who located within the territory now comprising Clinton county. The evidence seems to point to the fact that three persons came about the same time, and located at widely different points in the county. These were Morgan Van Meter, of Green township; Amos Wilson, of the township which bears his name and David Sewell, of Vernon township. There is trouble in ascertaining the date at which each of these men came to the county, but the latest investigation seems to fix them all in the year 1799. Morgan Van Meter has generally been accorded the honor of being the first arrival, although Squire C. C. Bowers, in writing the history of Green township, fixes the date of Van Meter's arrival at about 1800; however, this is not altogether authentic and was in all probability a year too late. The late Judge Harlan prepared the following sketch of Mr. Van Meter:

"Morgan Van Meter was the first settler within the limits of Clinton county as it now exists, having come here in 1798 or 1799. He was also the first tavern keeper within the same limits. His tavern was the first opened on any of the first roads, traces or paths leading from Chillicothe to Cincinnati. 'Van Meter's' was made a conspicuous point in the road guides published in the Pittsburg almanac of seventy years ago, for the information and direction of travelers by land from that town to Cincinnati. General Cass, in a conversation with one of our citizens a few years ago, made inquiries about this early public house, and stated that, having lain out all night in the woods a few miles southwest from Van Meter's, he was glad to find it in the morning in time for a late breakfast. This was in very early days.

"Morgan was the first of five sons of Joseph Van Meter. His brothers were Joseph, Isaac, Abraham and William, all of whom, except William, were at one time residents of the state of Ohio, and, we believe, of the old town of Deerfield, on the Little Miami river, in what is now Warren county. The brothers who came to Deerfield were said to have had families. Morgan lived in the lower part of the little town, not far from the river, in one end of a double cabin, or a cabin divided into two rooms, the other room being occupied by the family of the late Judge Michael H. Johnson, a well-known resident of the Hopkinsville neighborhood, Warren county. He (Van Meter) removed directly from Deerfield to the head of the east fork of the Little Miami, near where Snow Hill now is, in Clinton county. The point where he settled is a little east of south, and a distance of about two hundred yards from the present residence of Zephaniah Spears. Here, it is said, he found an unoccupied Indian wigwam. With the exception of this hut, there was not a human habitation within a radius of ten miles. Here he built his cabin and opened it to the public as a tavern. Here Morgantown was afterward laid out. His father, Joseph Van Meter, was a native of the state of Maryland. He was born upon the frontier, and, though frequently changing his residence, died upon the frontier. He seems to have belonged to that class of men, once quite numerous, who kept constantly on the border of civilization and followed close upon the footsteps of the Indians as they retired further west at the advance of the white man. He had removed from Maryland several years before the Revolutionary War and was living on the south bank of the Potomac river in Virginia, when his son, Morgan, his first child, was born. The family record of Morgan Van Meter's family, furnished by Mrs. James Van Meter, of Wiota, Lafayette county, Wisconsin, shows the year of Morgan's birth to be 1765. Between the birth of Morgan and of Joseph, his second son, he crossed the Alleghany mountains, descended the Monongahela, and settled at the forks of that river. At this point, Joseph and perhaps others of the family were born.

"In 1770, Joseph Van Meter, the elder, in company with three of the Zane brothers, removed with his family to the Ohio river, where the city of Wheeling now is. The Zanes settled at the mouth of Wheeling creek, while Mr. Van Meter settled a few miles above, on Short creek. Other settlements were commenced near by soon afterward. Block houses, being works of prime necessity on the frontier at that day were erected at several places in the settlements, as some protection against the Indians, though seldom adequate when assailed by a strong party. Near to these, the settlers built their cabins, as far as convenient, such a plan being considered as some protection against surprise attacks by small parties of the Indians. In 1774, a small military work was erected, under British authority, on the south bank of the Ohio river, not far above the mouth of Wheeling creek. The plan upon which it was built was said to have been drawn by the celebrated Gen. George Rogers Clark. It was called at first Ft. Fincastle, the name of the county in which it was located, but two years later, 1776, the name was changed to Ft. Henry, from the celebrated Patrick Henry, then governor of the state of Virginia. This was the only fort between Pittsburg and the south of the Great Kanawha, which was at that time considered tenable against a force of any great number. A stockade was in process of construction near West Liberty, on Short creek, in September, 1777, but was not yet complete when the Indians attacked Ft. Henry, late in September of that year. This stockade was intended to serve the double purpose of protecting the lives and property of the settlers and as county buildings, West Liberty at that time being the seat of justice for Ohio county. This rude structure was named Van Meter's fort, from Joseph Van Meter, the elder. Late in September, 1777, notice was given the settlers at and in the neighborhood where Wheeling now stands that a large Indian army was collecting on the Sandusky river to march against Ft. Henry and the settlements in the neighborhood. This friendly warning is said to have been sent by the brother of the Zanes, who had taken up his residence with the Indians, had adopted their dress and mode of living, and had married an Indian woman. The messenger had scarcely brought the direful news to the garrison before the Indians were before the walls of the fort, under the leadership of the renegade white man, Simon Girty. The Indians had gone to and crossed the Ohio unperceived, though a considerable force of the most capable and experienced scouts and Indian fighters on the frontier had been sent out into the woods on the north side of the Ohio, through which the enemy was expected to come, to discover, if possible, the force of the latter, and the time at which they would probably arrive. Girty, however, succeeded in bringing his warriors before the very walls of the fort before his approach was discovered. The force of the Indians was computed at from four to five hundred men. The entire force of the garrison and settlers was forty-two, all told, many of whom were old men and boys. In the course of the first night after the arrival of the Indians, the settlers and their families either took shelter in the fort or were brought in. The next morning, the Indians succeeded in killing one of the men belonging to the garrison. Fourteen men, sent out in pursuit of a small party of Indians, were surrounded, twelve of them were killed and one badly wounded. Twelve volunteers from the fort were sent to the relief of the first party, but were surrounded and eight of them killed. Two or three men were severely wounded, but were able to conceal themselves from the Indians, and came in or were brought in after the Indians withdrew. Not a man was killed or wounded inside the fort. On the third day of the siege, forty mounted men from Short creek and fourteen from Cross creek arrived at the fort and were admitted. These timely reinforcements so discouraged the Indians that they raised the siege and engaged in killing the cattle and burning the cabins and fences of the settlers.

"Two accounts are given of the part acted by Joseph Van Meter and his son, Morgan. One is that Joseph and his family took refuge in the fort without loss of time. The other is that father and son, on the second day of the siege, composed a part of the company of forty, who, on hearing of the dangerous condition of the people and garrison in the fort, left the settlement on Short creek, went to their relief, and were fortunate enough to be able to enter the fort without the loss of a man. Both accounts agree that Joseph and his son, Morgan, were in the fort while it was besieged by the Indians and participated in its defense. At one time during the siege, it is said, the rifles used by the men in the fort became so heated by the rapid fire as to become dangerous and, to some extent, useless, and recourse was then had to a lot of muskets, of which a sufficient number was found in the store house of the garrison. If this account be true—and it is credited in the history of the siege—it clearly shows that, if a party of the garrison was composed of old men and boys, they were at least acquainted with the use of the rifle.

"Joseph Van Meter, the elder, continued to reside on Short creek until his death. The manner of his death was never certainly ascertained. He went from home to fish, and never returned, nor was any vestige of him ever found. Some supposed that he had been drowned, while others were of the opinion that he had been taken prisoner by the Indians and burned at the stake.

"Morgan Van Meter came to Clinton county as early as 1798 or 1799. It is believed that he was settled at Deerfield, Warren county, with his brothers, Joseph and Isaac, as early as 1796, or at least 1797, having come here from Harrison county, Kentucky. Joseph could not have remained long at Deerfield if he came there in 1797, for in that year there is the most satisfactory evidence that he was located at the mouth of Dodson's creek, on the south side of the East fork of the Little Miami, a mile or so below Lynchburg, in what is now Highland county. Morgan Van Meter did not leave Deerfield, as is claimed, for a year or two after his brother did. William Van Meter, a very intelligent gentleman, a distant relative of the Van Meter brothers, who settled, when a boy, on the East fork, near Isaac and Joseph, is of the opinion that Morgan settled near where Snow Hill now is, in 1798. But Mrs. Leggett said he made his settlement in the year which she was married. Her family record, being produced, shows that her marriage occurred in 1799. Mrs. Leggett was a Shawhan, a sister of the late John Shawhan, Esq., long a resident near Deerfield, and of Amos Shawhan, of Morrow, and knew the three Van Meter brothers when she was a young woman and they were residing at Deerfield. Deerfield at that time was simply a cluster of houses. It was not laid off as a town until several years afterward. The houses were of a very rude construction, being designed for temporary shelter more than for permanent abode. On the arrival of any new emigrant, if he found an empty house, he took possession of it. If there was no vacant house, one was put up for him. Deerfield was simply a place to stop and stay until a selection for a permanent settlement could be made.

"The farm of Joseph Van Meter was on the southeast side of the East fork of the Little Miami, and is now generally known as the Michael Stroup farm. Mr. Van Meter removed to Illinois many years since, where he died. His brother Isaac settled at an early day in the neighborhood of his brother Joseph, on the northwest side of the East fork of the Little Miami, about one and a half miles north of where Lynchburg now is, in Clinton county. The farm owned by him was the old homestead of the late Hiram Connell and later owned by Mr. Connell's son, William. Mr. Van Meter sold the farm in 1814, and removed to Illinois.

"The College township road, which led from Chillicothe to College township, near where Oxford College has since been established, was, as far as where Clarksburg now is, the road from Chillicothe to Cincinnati. It is believed that it was surveyed and established in 1799, and, being blazed through, soon became a road much used by travelers. This road was not cut out or improved, at least in some parts of it, until 1804—although it was provided for by an act of the Legislature of 1802-03. Horsemen, guided by blazes made on the trees, followed the line of the road, and were thankful for this help.

"Morgan Van Meter has now lain in his grave more than eighty years. The son of a frontiersman, he had but little, if any, education. So far as we know, he never held an office or aspired to one, civil or military. The house he lived in has disappeared, and his grave is covered by a stable, or is in the public highway with no stone to mark it. But his name is perhaps more frequently spoken of by our people than that of any citizen of Clinton county who has been dead twenty-five years, with perhaps a few exceptions.

"Morgan Van Meter made his will during his last sickness. It bears date of March 28, 1813, and was admitted to record June 21, 1813.

"Amos Wilson, from whom Wilson township, Clinton county, was named, was one of three sons of John Wilson, a member of the first constitutional convention of Ohio, who was the son of John Wilson, an Irishman. Amos Wilson and his father before him, and several of his brothers and sisters were born in New Jersey. From that state his father removed with his family to the Redstone country in Pennsylvania, and from there to Washington county, Kentucky. He lived for several years in Washington and Green counties. His next removal was to Mill creek, in Hamilton county, Ohio, near Cincinnati. John Wilson, named for his grandfather, born December 29, 1786, informed the writer, on March 13, 1876, that his grandfather, after he sold his possessions in Kentucky, supposing that he would get his money in silver, took his grandson, then nine years of age, on a separate horse to Lexington, to bring the money home. He, however, was not paid cash, as he expected, but was given a draft on Cincinnati, on which he received his payments when they arrived there. This was in 1795. In 1796, John Wilson, with his family, and his sons and their families, left Kentucky and came to Cincinnati. That year, the party raised a crop on Mill creek. In the spring of that year George and Amos went to Middle run, in what is now Greene county, Ohio, and cleared a few acres of land, on part of which hemp was sown, and on the rest corn was planted. No fence was put up around the little clearing. The corn made a good crop; the deer took part of it, but the squirrels seemed shy of it, as if doubtful of its fitness for food. These young men returned to Mill creek and remained until fall, when each mounted on a horse and returned to their newly-opened farm to secure their crops. One night three Indians came and stole their horses. On discovery of their losses, the Wilsons, each armed with a rifle, started in pursuit. They traced the Indians by a devious and circuitous route, taken evidently to avoid pursuit, to the old site of the famous town of Chillicothe, on the Little Miami, north of where the town of Xenia now is. Here the Indians, three in number and all armed, were found encamped for the night. The pursuing party had, up to this time, supposed that there were only two Indians, with no advantage in numbers on either side; but here were three to two. The Indians watched their adversaries closely, and were constantly ready for action if a fight should be brought on. The Wilsons were not less vigilant and were ready, but by no means courting a combat. The Indians, after a time, offered them something to eat. This, however, was the only friendly act performed by either side. Sleep on neither side was taken. It is believed that neither party even nodded. At last the light of morning came, and the white men mounted their horses and rode rapidly away without molestation.

"In the spring of 1797 John Wilson commenced a settlement on Middle run. His improvement was immediately upon the road now leading from Waynesville to the town of Centerville, in Montgomery county, Ohio. His first dwelling, a rude structure, has disappeared, but near its site the house long his residence, still stands. It is situated on the south side of the road, and is in Greene county, though but a short distance from the line dividing the counties of Greene and Warren.

"The Wilsons came to Cincinnati in 1796, from Kentucky; 1797, they cropped on Mill creek, near Cincinnati; 1797, George and Amos, sons of John Wilson, raised a small crop of hemp and corn on Middle run, Greene county; 1797, George and John came up from Mill creek to look after their crops, and had their horses stolen by the Indians; 1797, John Wilson, in the fall of the year, moved to Middle run, in Greene county. In 1799, a Baptist church was organized at Middle run. About 1803 Amos Wilson began to preach in the Baptist church.

"It is claimed by some that the first permanent settlement in Clinton county was made by Amos Wilson and James Mills in what is now Wilson township, in 1799. They were brothers-in-law and came to the county together, but it seems to be clearly established that their settlement was not earlier than the fall of 1801, and possibly not until the spring of 1802. Amos Wilson, up to 1801, was living upon a pre-empted right about three miles northwest of where Waynesville now is. This pre-empted right he exchanged with the Rev. Joshua Carmen, well known to many of our citizens, for one hundred acres of land in the eastern quarter of the county. Mr. Carmen was, at that time, living in the state of Kentucky, near Louisville, and had come out into the Miami country on an exploring expedition. Having secured Mr. Wilson's claim, he returned to Kentucky for his family and, in the fall of the same year, brought them out to the Waynesville neighborhood. On his arrival Mr. Wilson vacated the house on the pre-emption, and Mr. Carmen entered into possession. Whether Mr. Wilson at once came up to settle on the land he had thus acquired, or not until the following spring, has not been ascertained with certainty.

"That Timothy Bennett made his settlement as early as March, 1801, is clearly established, and we have the best authority for believing that Morgan Van Meter had made his settlement where Snow Hill now is at least two, and perhaps three, years previous. Mr. Wilson was married four times. His first wife was Anna Mills, to whom he was married on the 22d day of June, 1791. In March, 1807, Mrs. Wilson died, and on September 27, 1807, he married Rachel James, with whom he lived until her death, in May, 1818. On July 12, 1818, he was married to Mary Coulter, who died in 1839. Mr. Wilson was married the last time in 1843, to Elizabeth Dowden, who survived him twenty years."

From data since obtained, it is evident that Judge Harlan was misled as to the actual time of the settlement of Mr. Wilson in this county. The latter's son, Amos Wilson, Jr., furnished information, which is confirmed by a record in the old family Bible, to the effect that Amos Wilson, Sr., located in Clinton county in 1799. The circumstances are these: He (Amos Wilson, Sr.) purchased two hundred acres (instead of one hundred) in the northeast corner of W. Taylor's survey, in what is now Wilson township, and, in order to find it, was directed to go to the locality of the Deserted Camp, and follow the survey line due northeast from there until he should cross Anderson's fork and Anderson's prairie, and reach the ridge land, or white oak land, beyond. He followed these directions, and, supposing he had reached his own land, at once began improving it. After two years' labor at this spot he found that he was upon what is known as the Hinkson farm, in the R. Eggleston survey, No. 886, and, moving south to the adjoining farm, began anew to improve. A year was spent there, when he was chagrined to learn that again he was on the wrong land, it being in W. Lindsay's survey, No. 732, on what is now known as the Reed farm. Being now discouraged, and having wasted three years in improving land not his own, he avowed his determination to return to the older settlements: but Joshua Carmen, from whom he had purchased the land, came along and showed him his own, and, to partially compensate him for his pains and to induce him to stay, donated to him a strip of land containing fifty acres, lying on the west side of the original two hundred acres. At this time, which was in the early spring of 1802, Mr. Carmen was accompanied by Mr. Wilson's brother-in-law, James Mills, who had purchased a farm immediately south of Wilson's, in the same survey. These two men proceeded at once to erect log cabins on their farms, and both structures were raised on the same day. The families occupied them, and on these farms lived Amos Wilson and James Mills until their death. In 1827, Mr. Wilson erected on his place the first brick house in the northeastern part of the county. Of the family of Mr. Wilson, not a representative is left in the county. The Mills farm is still owned by the descendants of the man who made the first improvements upon it in the spring of 1802.

"David Sewell, the first settler of Vernon township, is the third man claimed by some, and with perhaps equal evidence, to have been the first settler in Clinton county. Judge Harlan's account of him states that he bought land in the Archibald Campbell survey, No. 2250, early in 1798, and arranged to move upon it, his sons to go at once. One son, Aaron, was married, in April, 1798, in Frederick county, Virginia, and, with his wife, brother John and family, and their father and mother, started west, arriving at due time at Bedle's Station, in Warren county, Ohio. The Judge then states that they could not then find the land which had been purchased, nor a surveyor who could show it to them. The Judge places their arrival in this county in 1801, or later, giving reasons for his conclusions, which appear in another place. Cyrus L. Sewell made statements founded on what seems to be conclusive evidence showing that the Sewell families settled here in 1799, and that a division of the land was made in 1801.

TOWNSHIP SETTLEMENTS.

The settlements of the townships of Clinton county were made in the following order:

Clark Township.—The first settler was Thomas Johns, who located three miles southeast of Martinsville, on the east fork of the Little Miami. The date of his arrival is not known, but it must have been as early as 1800, or in the first part of 1801, as Isaac Miller, Joseph McKibben and Gideon McKibben all arrived in the latter year, and Mr. Johns had preceded them.

Union Township.—Timothy Bennett is credited with being the first to locate a home within the limits of what is now Union township, having settled east of the site of Wilmington in the month of March, 1801. No other family arrived for over two years, or until the fall of 1803, when George Haworth became the second settler in the township.

Chester Township.—The first actual settler in this township was Caleb Lucas, originally from New Jersey, and later a resident of Kentucky, who located here in 1802. Asa Jenkins had arrived in 1799 and George Mann in March, 1801, but, although both men owned land in Chester township, their dwellings were across the line in Greene county. They subsequently moved to Chester. The first brick house in Clinton county was built near Oakland, in Chester township, in 1807 by James Birdsall, and was standing as late as 1890. The bricks in its walls were manufactured on the place, by Mr. Birdsall, and it can readily be imagined the task in that day was not an easy one.

Liberty Township.—Stephen Mendenhall, a native of Tennessee, settled on Dutch creek in the spring of 1803, and was the first to erect his cabin in what is now Liberty township.

Wayne, Richland and Washington Townships.—These three townships were all settled in 1803. John Jackson, a native of Pennsylvania, located in Wayne in the spring of that year. Sometime during the year, Absalom and Samuel Reed, from Bourbon county, Kentucky, took up their abode in Richland township, while Isaac Wilson, from Virginia, settled on Colonel Carrington's survey, in Washington township, before the close of the year. Jonas Seaman and a man named Armstrong arrived soon after, and in 1805 opened, upon the present site of Cuba, the first house for the public entertainment in the township, and one of the earliest in the county, probably Morgan Van Meter's, in Greene township, being the only one to antedate it, if Armstrong's was not opened first.

Adams Township.—The first settler in this portion of the county was Samuel Lee, who came in 1804 and made his home near the present site of Springfield meeting house.

Jefferson Township.—This township was settled considerably later. The first cabin within its limits was built by Samuel Jackson, about 1812. Mr. Jackson came from Tennessee, and was a noted hunter. It is recorded that, during his life time, he killed two panthers, three hundred and sixty deer and eighty bears. Joseph Hockett built the first hewed-log house in this township, but it is unfortunate that no date can be given.

Marion Township.—The territory which latest received the attention of settlers in Clinton county is included in what is now Marion township. According to the statements of Squire J. W. Rice, who was the township historian, the first settlement was made in 1814, by Jonathan Baldwin, a native on Monongalia county, Virginia, who had located in Guernsey county, Ohio, in 1804, and in Warren county in 1806. He served under General Harrison in the War of 1812.

CHAPTER VI.

HIGHWAYS AND TRANSPORTATION.

EARLY ROADS OF THE COUNTY.

The first roads in Clinton county, as in every other county in the Middle West, were the Indian trails. These trails were narrow and well-worn, owing to the fact that the country was densely wooded and the making of new roads in the pioneer times was no easy task. There were also the trails and traces left by the expeditions which passed through this region against the hostile tribes of the Miamis on Mad river. The roads, which wound promiscuously through the country, were nothing more than neighborhood roads and would go from one house to another with no regularity.

Later, when surveys were made and the roads laid out on some definite system and the routes fixed, these pioneers, who had previously found the track running past their door, found that they were some distance from the road. As the county became more fixed and the boundaries determined, the zigzag paths were partially straightened and new building sites were consequently chosen nearer the line of highway. The most prominent localities, which in that day were the taverns, mills, etc., around which clustered a small settlement, were sure to be accommodated by a public road.

The first commissioners found on taking up their duties, in 1810, that the greater part of their labors consisted in laying out new roads and definitely establishing the ones which had been previously laid out. The early commissioners' records are filled with petitions, reports and orders on road matters. These early records will give the best history of the laying out of the roads which can possibly be taken. They follow and are partial duplicates of the records:

"The road from Wilmington to Lebanon was laid out by Daniel Cushing and Robert Eachus, under the act entitled, 'An act making further appropriation of the three per cent. fund, etc,' passed February 20, 1812." (This record was taken from the first volume of the commissioners' record, page 57.)

"The road commencing near Absalom Haworth's house, and running to Daniel Nordyke's, was laid out by John Wright's field, thence to Samuel Cox's mill, on Cowan's creek, thence by Daniel Bailey's and John Routh's farm to Daniel Nordyke's farm."

"The road Unthank's mill to Wilmington: Viewers, Thomas Babb, Sr., Stephen Mendenhall; John Woolman, surveyor; length of road, from mill to the south end of South street, seven miles and one hundred and eighty poles. Established June 7, 1815."

"From Highland county line, near Richard Barnard's, through Centerville, to intersect the Urbana road, two hundred poles south of James Gillespie's tavern. Established October 22, 1817. Viewers, John Wright, Leonard Morris and Joel Matthews; Hiram Madden, surveyor. Distance, seven miles and two hundred and eight poles."

"The Kenton Trace—This trace commenced on the bank of the Ohio river, opposite Maysville, and terminated at Urbana, Ohio. It was laid out by Gen. Simon Kenton, and passed through Williamsburg, New Market, Morgantown (by where Job R. Haynes now lives), crossing the prairie near where Thomas Stitt settled and lived, down the edge of the prairie, through the woods, for some distance, crossing the road leading from Wilmington to Washington, east of the bridge over Anderson's fork, where the Perkinses, father and son, had in former times a pottery on the road, and crossing the route of the present Urbana road at a point near the residence of William H. Polk." C. P. Gallaher, Esq., on July 27, 1877, said that when a boy he traveled this trace from the present Reesville to Morgantown, and passed the residence of John S. Frazer, a Quaker school master, from near Lebanon, whose school he had formerly attended.

Prairie Road—"The petition for this road was presented to the commissioners on June 3, 1816. Its beginning was at the end of a street near the northeast corner of the town of Wilmington, thence to run the nearest and best way to Gideon Edwards' lane; thence through the said lane and the nearest and best way to the 'lick' above the dwelling house of the elder Mr. Haws; thence on the nearest and best way to the prairie, to strike a line between the lands of Thomas Hinkinson, Esq., and John Coulter, and thence to run with the said line and intersect the Urbana road on the north of Kamoth Hawkins." The fourth mile tree was at the ford between the 'lick' and the Haws; the eighth mile tree was between Hinkson and Coulter. Total length of the road, nine miles and two hundred and eleven poles. The road was established June 14, 1816.

The road from Hillsboro to Waynesville via Cox mill and Wilmington: "At the meeting of the commissioners, September 3, 1810, present, George McManis and Henry Babb, a petition was presented by Walter Armstrong and others for a road leading in the following manner, to wit: At a road that runs from Hillsboro in a direction to Walter Armstrong's tavern on the College township road, and to continue on to said Armstrong's; from thence to John Cox's mill; thence to the seat of justice of Clinton county; Joseph Doan, William Adams and Daniel Moon, viewers; Peter Burr, Esq, surveyor. Return to be made the first Monday of December, 1810."

Road from Van Meter's to Waynesville—"Meeting of county commissioners; present, George McManis, James Birdsall and Henry Rabb. The petition of William Dakin and others for an alteration of the state road, leading from Van Meter's through Waynesville, was read. James Birdsall and Henry Cox bound for the expense on conditions an alteration between Cæsar's creek and the town of Oakland is thought improper by Benjamin Farquhar, Robert Eachus and Jacob Hale, who are appointed as viewers of the same. To make report on the third Monday of September, 1810; Joel Wright, surveyor. The viewers report that a certain alteration in said road between the town of Oakland and Cæsar's creek would be of public utility; the same is hereby established as a public highway, and all that part of the former state road between the two points, as surveyed by Joel Wright, is hereby declared void and useless."

"From Preserved Dakin's to the east end of James Dakin's improvements on the Waynesville road, and William Dakin's, to intersect the Bullskin road, at Anderson's fork (now Burlington): Viewers, Jacob Hale, Benjamin Farquhar and Job Jeffries. Established June 7, 1815. Nathan Linton, surveyor. Length of road, six miles and one hundred and sixty-six poles."

"Drake's Path—Van Meter's Trace—June 2, 1818. Present, Joseph Roberts and Samuel Ruble. A petition for a new road was this day presented and read as follows: Beginning at the Clermont county line, at or near where Drake's path crosses the same line, running thence on a northeast course into the Van Meter trace, where a new road has been cut out. From Jonathan Baldwin's to said trace, running near or through said Baldwin's lane; thence to Isaac Burrough's, Warren, for the purpose of meeting a county road, laid out from Lebanon to the Xenia state road. Viewers appointed, Elijah Burge, William Johns and Freeman Smalley. Nathan Linton, surveyor. Place appointed for meeting, the house of David Burrough's, on July 2, 1818. A survey of the above road was returned to the commissioners July 8, 1818."

"From the center of Paris (now Cuba) and running the nearest and best way to the east fork of Todd's fork, at or near David Wright's; thence the nearest and best way to the head of the West fork of Todd's to or near John Starr's; thence to the county line to where the county line crosses the head of Sycamore, to meet the county road from Williamsburg to Wilmington. Established October 7, 1818. William Johns, David Wright and Thomas Johns, viewers. Surveyor, N. Linton."

"From the Center meeting house, thence through to Richard Fallis's mill, as far as Benjamin Farquhar's lane, by Eli Maden's, Jacob Hale's, Joshua Nickerson's, near John Haden's mill, to intersect the road leading down Todd's fork, near William Harvey's, Viewers, Joseph Roberts, George Richards and William Butler. Nathan Linton, surveyor. Established June 8, 1819. Length of road, six miles and eighty-seven poles."

"September 28, 1819, an alteration of road made by William Moore on his land across Lee's creek, for the convenience of his farm. The old road is one hundred and twenty-seven poles, five feet and six inches in a through line. The new route is one hundred and thirty-seven poles. But said Moore agrees to make a road across the swamp of two rods and six feet of a hollow bridge, and cut a ditch through the swamp into the creek. He is given permission to turn the new road as proposed and have the old road vacated. Viewers, John Allen, Esq., Thomas Autrim and Solomon Sharp."

"April 11, 1820, a road established beginning at the road from Wilmington to Paris (now Cuba), at John Shield's mill; thence to Joshua Moore's mill, and thence past Lytle's Creek meeting house and crossing the Lebanon state road to Richard Fallis's mill. Length of road, five miles and three hundred and ten poles. Viewers, Robert Eachus, Mahlon Haworth and John Lewis."

The Urbana road was probably laid out before Clinton county was organized and the following note probably refers to a re-survey. This was taken from commissioners' record 2, 1, 179: "This road was run by Nathan Linton, surveyor, under the direction of James Gallaher, Thomas Howe and James Sherman, about the last of September or the first of October, 1820, and found that part which runs through Clinton county to be thirteen miles and two hundred and eighteen poles."

"State road from Wilmington through Clarksburg to the road through Cincinnati through Montgomery county. Surveyed by Nathan Linton, August 18, 1820, under the direction of Samuel Wilson, state road commissioner; begins at the center stone; total distance, ten miles and one hundred and fifty-seven poles, two poles of which are in Warren county."

"From David McMillan's barn by Enoch Wickersham's, by Nathan Scholey's barn on the left side, passing the lane between Samuel Stanton and Nathan Hines and crossing Dutch creek to a stone corner to Nathan Hines and Dr. John Greer; thence with Greer and Hur Hodgson's line, and passing through Greer's northeast corner to Hur Hodgson's northeast corner, crossing the Xenia road, passing Daniel Bailey's corner; thence through the lane between Daniel Bailey and Thomas Dillon to Amos Hodgson's corner, through Ezekiel Frazer's land, passing his house (and six-mile tree); passing Robert Lomax's house, on the south to Richard Lyon's corner, passing the three-mile tree to Adam Rynard's land, thence through his lane, passing the eight-mile tree, Isaac Johnson's well, thence to the Wilmington road five poles east of the five-mile tree. Total distance, eight miles and one hundred and forty-seven poles. Viewers, Joseph Smith, Joseph Doan and William Walker. Established December 3, 1822. Surveyor, Nathan Linton."

"From the east end of Martinsville to the College township road, through John Moon's lane; distance, two and one-half miles and eighteen poles. Viewers, Henry Cowgill, Asa Brown and Amos Wright; Robert Grant, surveyor."

Snow Hill to Locust Pond—"Begins at Charles Harris', thence with the College township road to the line between Lewis Giblet and said Harris; thence to Centerville (six miles and sixty poles from Snow Hill); thence to Locust Pond, four miles and one hundred and forty poles. Whole distance, ten miles and two hundred poles. Viewers, Paul Huls, Joseph Rulan and Samuel Harvey. Hiram Madden, surveyor. Established June 7, 1825."

"Road from Wilmington to Dayton, by an act passed at the session of 1835, was laid out by Caleb Lucas, John Shelby and David W. Brown."

"From Wilmington to Burlington. Distance, as shown by surveyor's plat and field notes, thirty miles and two hundred and sixty-eight and three-quarter poles. Distance through Clinton county is twelve miles and one hundred and five poles; through Greene county, ten miles and two hundred and eight poles; around Montgomery county, seventeen miles and two hundred and fifteen poles."

The College township road, so often mentioned, was established by the Legislature, February 18, 1804, passing from Chillicothe through Lebanon to Oxford. A route was determined on the same day for a road passing from Chillicothe through Hopkinsville and Montgomery to Cincinnati, and the first appropriation made for laying out these roads. They follow the same route, viz., from Chillicothe to a point in Clinton county west of Cuba, and about a mile and a half southeast of Clarksville, where they diverge, the College township road running via Smalley's and Ft. Ancient to Lebanon, and the Montgomery road passing south of it to Miranda's and Hopkinsville, crossing Todd's fork below Smalley's at the Cres farm.

In the case of Hallam vs. Adams, James Curtis, a witness, speaks of a trace from the Troxel, passing near where William Figgins lived and going up the Long Arm prairie into the Main prairie, between the Woods pond and Locust pond, and, crossing the prairie there, went on the direction of a cabin called Jackson's cabin on the big ranch.

The following is taken from an almanac of 1818: Cincinnati via Lebanon to Chillicothe: Reading, ten miles; Price, eight miles; Lebanon, fourteen miles; Rue's (Little Miami), six miles; Armstrong's, eleven miles; Van Meter's, thirteen miles; Clifton, thirteen miles; Greenfield, nine miles; Davis, five miles; Wiley, seven miles; Roger five miles; Chillicothe, ten miles.

TURNPIKES, PLANK ROADS AND EARLY IMPROVEMENTS.

By an act of the Legislature, passed March 22, 1837, the Goshen, Wilmington & Columbus Turnpike Company was incorporated, the Clinton county members being John Hadley, Eli Hale, Nathan Linton, Isaiah Morris, David Stratton, Lawrence Fitzhugh and Joseph Reed. The building of this turnpike had been commenced some years earlier and completed from Goshen to Cincinnati. In the spring of 1838 the work as far as Wilmington was under contract. The work was carried on principally by parties living along the route of this road. In 1840 the pike was completed and opened for public use. The cost of this turnpike was estimated at four thousand dollars per mile. The same company which finished this turnpike also graded and bridged the road between Wilmington and Sabina and, in the spring of 1850, sought to convert this into a plank road, but the project was unsuccessful. This was the largest incorporated turnpike company in the county, although there had been earlier ones formed and many were chartered after this time.

In 1823 the state Legislature authorized the building of a state road from Wilmington to Cincinnati, and another act of a similar nature was passed in 1835. All corporations had to be granted a charter by the state Legislature and, by referring to the laws of Ohio, the following turnpike companies, with portions of their lines in Clinton county, were incorporated in the years given below: Goshen, Martinsville & Leesburg, 1832; Clarksville, Cuba, Snow Hill, New Lexington & Leesburg, 1838; Wilmington, Jamestown & South Charleston, 1838; Wilmington & London, 1838; Waynesville & Wilmington, 1838; Dayton & Wilmington, 1839; Xenia & Wilmington, February 6, 1846; Circleville and the Port William, New Burlington & Adelphi, February 25, 1848.

In 1844 the Legislature passed an act for the establishment of free turnpikes and this brought about the formation, the following year, of a number of plank road companies. A later act, which applied to plank road companies, is given below. This was passed March 20, 1849, and the extract is from section one of the said act: "That any company heretofore incorporated in this state for the purpose of constructing a turnpike road may construct said road, or any part thereof, by covering the same with plank not less than two and one-half inches thick, of sufficient width for the accommodation of teams, and in a good and substantial manner, instead of covering the same with gravel: Provided, no company shall take any timber without the consent of the owner or owners thereof." Subsequent acts fully defined the powers and privileges of plank road companies.

By reference to the acts of the state of Ohio it is found that the following plank road companies were chartered by the Legislature in the years given below and having members and portions of their lines in Clinton county Goshen, Blanchester & Martinsville, 1844; Leesburg & Blanchester, session of 1850-51; New Lexington & Wilmington, session of 1850-51; Mount Pleasant & Martinsville, session of 1850-51; Blanchester & Wilmington, session of 1850-51; Martinsville, Westboro & Woodville, session of 1850-51; Port William & Wilmington, session of 1850-51. By glancing over this list, it is seen that the 'craze' struck the people in 1850 and evidently the Legislature of that year had their hands full in taking care of the petitioners for plank road charters. None of the above incorporated roads were ever laid out and but one plank road was ever built in the county. So the material improvements which plank roads did Clinton county was wholly on paper and not suitable to travel over.

On February 16, 1850, a meeting was held at Harveysburg, Warren county, to make arrangements for the organization of a company to construct a turnpike road from Waynesville to Wilmington, via Harveysburg. This road was to connect with the Little Miami railroad at Harveysburg. The Legislature, in the session of 1838-39 had granted the original charter to this company, but a definite organization had never been made. On April 1, 1850, subscription books were opened at Wilmington, Harveysburg and Waynesville for the sale of stock in this company.

The commissioners who had this matter in charge were from the three towns. Nathan Linton, of Clinton county, representing Wilmington. A. Brook was appointed secretary for the corporation. As early as April 2, of that year, a daily line of omnibuses was running over the road, and a short time later a new coach was put on and a daily mail carried. The headquarters of the omnibus line were located at Wilmington at the Buckeye House and E. Flood was appointed the agent for the line. Jacob Strickle, who lived on South street, was the proprietor. The fare from Wilmington to Waynesville was fifty cents. The stockholders of the road met on April 27, 1850, at Harveysburg to elect directors. The name of the company was then changed to the Waynesville & Wilmington Turnpike and Plank Road Company. Late in the fall of 1852 the road was completed as far as Wilmington and, of this distance, about seven miles was planked, two miles between Wilmington and Todd's fork and five miles between Dutch creek and Waynesville. This was the only plank road ever constructed in Clinton county. Some time later the whole route was covered with gravel and converted into an excellent turnpike. Toll was taken over this road as late as the spring of 1881. The last name of the company was the Waynesville & Wilmington Turnpike Company and Cyrus Linton was on the board of directors from 1857 until the company was dissolved.

The first free turnpikes, or macadamized roads, as they are now called, did not make their appearance until the middle of the fifties. At its session of 1853-54, the Ohio Legislature enacted a free turnpike or road improvement law. This act provided that, on the petition of three-fourths of all the resident landholders on each side of any state or county road, and within one mile of said road, to the auditor, his duty shall be to assess, in addition to the regular taxes, four mills to the dollar on all lands within a mile of the road, and on all personal property held in said boundaries by both freeholders and personal property holders. Said tax was to be applied to improving said road. The first action taken by the citizens of Clinton county to secure an improvement on the county roads was in May, 1859. George Sanders and J. S. Leaming undertook, under this law, to secure a free pike from Wilmington to the Washington line, about a mile south of Burtonville, along the line of the Wilmington and Martinsville road. The petition was presented with sixty-one signers. Jeff Hildebrant was employed as surveyor, Charles Jones was employed as flagman, Benjamin F. and Abner Lewis, chainmen, and in a few days the survey was made and the report, with the necessary calculations, returned to Auditor William Greer.

This project proved a failure through some unforeseen wire-pulling and the shortsightedness of some of the landholders along the proposed line, who preferred to travel in mud rather than pay for a pike along their property. The promoters were left to bear the cost of the undertaking, which amounted to forty-nine dollars. A failure quite often only proves a spur to incite men to further endeavors in their work. And this road failure, as contrasted to the first railroad venture, only served as an awakening to the citizens of the county in their need for better roads and internal improvements.

Many laws have been passed since that time which tends to make it easier to get free roads, and at present only a majority of freeholders interested in the road are required to sign the petition. As a result, free turnpikes are numerous and the condition of the roads in the county is in an excellent state.

RAILROADS.

The early citizens of Clinton county were among the first to realize the advantages and benefits to be gained by securing a railroad through the county. This desire for transportation and communication with the markets of the larger cities was a stimulus for securing one of the first roads through this section of the state.

A meeting was held at the court house in Wilmington on June 30, 1827, for the purpose of making arrangements to act with the citizens of Chillicothe, where a meeting had already been held, to induce the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company to extend its line west of the Ohio river to some suitable terminus on the Great Miami. This project in itself did not meet with immediate results as far as bringing the desired railroad through the county, but the seed was sown and the citizens were not to be discouraged in their attempt. The proposition was always uppermost in the minds of the citizens and finally their efforts were crowned with success.

CINCINNATI, WILMINGTON & ZANESVILLE RAILROAD.

Hon. R. B. Harlan, who was the representative in the lower house of the Legislature in 1850, introduced a bill in December of that year asking for a charter for the Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville Railroad. The bill passed and the charter was granted on February 4, 1851. The name of Wilmington was inserted out of respect to the county in which the bill originated. The aspirations of the promoters of this road was that it would be come a great trunk line, but the great mistake was made of connecting it with the Little Miami road at Morrow and running its trains over the tracks of that line from Morrow to Cincinnati, instead of building a separate and individual road. This interfered to a great extent with the success of the new road, which would have proved a better venture if its own tracks had extended to Cincinnati. The first surveys were made from Morrow to Lancaster, a distance of ninety miles, in November, 1850. The estimates were made and the contract let for building that part of the road to A. DeGaff.

At an election held in Clinton county it was voted that the county subscribe two hundred thousand dollars towards the construction of this railroad. Active work was first begun in December, 1851. In the November 26, 1852, issue of the Clinton Republican, it was stated that over two thousand tons of iron for this road had reached New Orleans, to be forwarded at once to Cincinnati, and the laying of the track was to begin as soon the following spring as the weather would permit. It was the expectations of the citizens of Wilmington that the road would be finished and trains of cars running by June 1, 1853. But the work on laying the track was not begun until the latter part of March and, on account of numerous difficult places which detained the work, it was not finished to Wilmington until in August. On the 11th day of that month, 1853, a massive celebration was held at Wilmington in honor of the event. It was estimated that the crowd numbered from ten to fifteen thousand people, and a general gala day was held. An old-time barbecue marked the zenith of the day's entertainment, in which five oxen and a number of sheep were served; the table which was erected to accommodate the crowd was in the form of a square and was one thousand two hundred feet long The train which bore the last of the visitors left at three-thirty P. M. and by six o'clock all was quiet again in the little village.

On August 15, 1853, trains began running regularly between Cincinnati and Wilmington, one a day each way. The fare between the points was one dollar and sixty cents. The road was completed to Washington C. H., Fayette county, November 24, 1853, and the company began to run its trains to that point, forty-one and one-half miles to Morrow, and seventy-seven and one-half miles from Cincinnati. The road was finished to Lancaster in 1854 and the same year the contract was let for building the part between Lancaster and Zanesville. This part of the road was not finished until late in 1855, but by 1856 trains were running uninterruptedly over the entire length of the road.

The first president of the road was Franklin Corwin, who served from 1851 to 1856 and was succeeded in July of the latter year by Erasmus Gest, who acted in the capacity of president and superintendent. The road was not a paying proposition, as seen by the report given out in March, 1857, which was as follows: Receipts, $472,899.04; expenditures, $492,508.81. The company thus sustained a loss of $20,000, besides the depreciation in the value of the property. In consequence of the loss to the stockholders, Mr. Gest was appointed receiver, in 1856, holding the position for twenty-six months, during which time a balance of over eighty thousand dollars was placed to the credit of the company and subsequently invested in rolling stock and improvements. Mr. Gest was succeeded, May 1, 1859, by Col. William Key Bond, who had charge of the affairs of the road for four and one-half years. The affairs of the company were again in bad financial straits and, in October, 1863, the road was sold at auction and purchased by Charles Moran, of New York, in trust for the original mortgage holders. In March of the following year the stock of the company was transferred by Mr. Bond to a reorganized company, which was composed entirely of original stockholders and creditors. This new company was organized upon a capitalized or reduced basis. Mr. Gest was again elected president and the business of the company began to flourish as before. The annual surplus reached forty thousand dollars. At this time the name of the road was changed to the Cincinnati & Zanesville Railroad Company.

Again the condition of the company began to run in narrow financial straits and subsequently the road, with all its franchises, real estate, machine shops, depot buildings and rolling stock, was sold at auction, December 1, 1869, at the door of the court house in Cincinnati. Judge Thomas L. Jewett, who was then president of the Pennsylvania Central Company, purchased the entire holdings for one million four thousand dollars. The road later, on May 1, 1873, passed by lease into the hands of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad Company, by which road it is still operated under the name of the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley Railroad.

MARIETTA & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.

The Marietta & Cincinnati Company, as originally organized, March 8, 1845, was chartered under the name of the Belpre & Cincinnati Railroad Company. The act of the charter authorized the stockholders to build a road from a point opposite Petersburg, Virginia, to Harmar, in Washington county, Ohio, as a majority of the commissioners should determine; thence by the most practical route up the Hocking valley by way of Athens and Chillicothe, to come point on the Little Miami railroad between Plainville, Hamilton county, and the mouth of O'Bannon creek, in Clermont county. This act was amended in March, 1850, and the company was authorized to build its road to any point so as to connect with any railroad or other improvement constructed to the Ohio river on the Virginia side; and a subsequent amendment, in the following year, authorized its completion to Cincinnati, with the privilege of connecting or crossing the Little Miami or any other railroad.

The name of the road was changed in March, 1851, and it was known as the Marietta & Cincinnati Railroad. Active work was begun in the spring of 1851, and the line was opened from Harmar to Loveland, Clermont county, a distance of one hundred and seventy-three miles, in 1857. Like many other roads of this early date, the stockholders found that with the completion of the line their resources were exhausted and they had no reserve on which to operate the road; consequently, it was placed in the hands of a receiver, who operated it until February 25, 1860, when, in May, the trustees of the road purchased the stock for the benefit of the stockholders. It continued to be operated by the trustees until August, 1860, when it was transferred by them to the reorganized company, which was known as the Marietta & Cincinnati Railroad Company. The extension from Loveland to Cincinnati, a distance of twenty-four miles, was begun by the newly re-organized company in 1864, and was completed to a point six miles from Cincinnati in February, 1866. From there to Cincinnati this road used the tracks of the Chicago, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad. Later the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company took over this road through a lease and it is operated under that name at present.

The Hillsboro & Cincinnati Railroad runs through the southern part of Clinton county and parallels the Baltimore & Ohio, Marietta & Cincinnati line, from Midland to Blanchester, where it makes a junction with that road. It is interesting to note that this was the first railroad built in Clinton county. It was completed from Loveland to Hillsboro in 1852. This road is also operated by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad through a lease.

DETROIT, TOLEDO & IRONTON RAILROAD.

This railroad runs through Liberty and into Chester township. An agitation for the construction of this line was first begun in December, 1875, when a meeting was held in Port William and the plan of building a narrow-gauge railroad from Waynesville, connecting there with the Miami Valley Railway, to Jeffersonville, and ultimately to Columbus, was presented by J. F. Ely, of Washington Court House.

The incorporators, J. F. Ely, Ethan Allen, J. M. Hussey, James Ellis and Doctor Marshall, immediately procured a charter and the proposed road was incorporated as the Waynesville, Port William & Jeffersonville Railroad. After a sufficient amount of stock was raised, an organization was effected in March, 1876. Meetings were held along the intended route and stock raised to the amount of sixty-five thousand dollars.

This road extended as far west as the Miami Valley railroad, a short distance below Roxana. Trains were run over this, the main line, for only a short time and then, either because of the condition of the track or the cramped condition of the stockholders, it was abandoned. A short time later a spur or feeder was begun. This branched off at McKay's Station and was to run southwest through Chester township and into Warren county. The grade was made as far west as Harveysburg, but rails were never laid any farther west than through Kingman. Later the rails that were laid west of Kingman, a mile in all, were taken up and the grade west through Harveysburg was abandoned. The old main line, or that part of it from McKay's Station through New Burlington and west, was abandoned and the rails taken up. The right of way was soon fenced in and only a few of the older settlers can ever remember seeing a train on this part of the road. That part from Port William to Kingman was made a standard gauge and is the road as we see it at the present time.

This road is now under the charge of the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton Railroad Company through a lease, but the traffic at present is very light and evidently the owners are awaiting an opportunity to make a junction with some other road.

PROPOSED ROADS.

There have been quite a number of railroads proposed in Clinton county and some even went so far as to sell a large amount of stock, but, for some unforeseen reason failed to materialize. The Ripley, Wilmington & Dayton Railroad Company was such a venture. The following men, as incorporators, M. M. Murphy and W. D. Young, of Ripley; Dr. L. B. Miles, of Georgetown; J. Fite, of New Hope; L. S. Vance, of Mount Orab, all of Brown county; A. T. Moon, of Highland county; D. Gould, of Martinsville; L. M. Moore, Cyrus Linton and J. W. Denver, of Wilmington; and S. F. Covington, of Cincinnati, chartered this road in the spring of 1878. The capital stock of the company was placed at two hundred thousand dollars and Gen. J. W. Denver, of Wilmington, was chosen as the first president.

The road as originally planned was to run from Ripley to Dayton, via Wilmington. In the spring of 1878 the survey was made to Wilmington by Lawrence Woolson, of Cincinnati, but has extended no farther. No work has been done on this road, although the organization existed as late as 1882. The officers of the company in 1882 were as follow: G. F. Early, president; Cyrus Linton, vice-president; E. C. Betts, secretary; Harley F. Walker, treasurer; Frank Moore, S. Q. Fulton, John Outcalt and Cyrus Linton, of Wilmington; William Turner, John Turner and Henry Walker, of Martinsville; Alva Moon, of Mount Orab; Judge Louden, of Georgetown, and G. F. Early and Ephraim Flougher, of Ripley, directors.

In 1879 this same company was granted a charter to construct a branch from Aberdeen to a point on the main line near Buford, Highland county. The officers of this branch company were Jeff Hildebrant, president, and Cyrus Linton, vice-president.

Another proposed railroad which failed to materialize was the Southern Ohio Railway Company. Certain capitalists of the East proposed, in the fall of 1871, to build a railroad that was to extend from the Ohio river at Huntington to Dayton. This road was to connect with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad at Huntington and give it an outlet over the tracks of that line. Colonel Trimble was the first president of this road and he proposed, on the part of the incorporators, to equip the road and advance the capital for its completion if the people along the line of the said road would raise eight hundred thousand dollars.

The first meeting in the interest of this enterprise in Chester township was held at the Methodist Episcopal church in New Burlington on the evening of November 21, 1871. At that meeting Peter Harrison was made temporary president and H. G. Cartwright, secretary. A committee of twelve was appointed to solicit stock and secure a right of way. This committee met at the store of John Grant on the evening of November 23 and organized by electing Samuel Lamar permanent chairman and A. H. Harlan, permanent secretary. Allen Linton presented a set of papers setting forth the conditions on which the people of Chester township would subscribe stock. On the motion of John Grant, these articles were adopted and have been copied verbatim: "We whose names are here unto subscribed do severally agree with and promise to the Southern Ohio Railway to take and pay for the number of shares of the stock of said company set opposite our names, of the value of $50 each, payable in installments on the total sum subscribed by each of us, as may hereinafter be required by the board of directors of said road: provided—first, that the aforementioned road will pass from Hillsboro to Dayton via Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, crossing Cæsar's creek in said county near the village of New Burlington, Ohio; that enough stock be taken to complete said road in accordance with the proposition of C. P. Huntington, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company; and provided further, that the amount subscribed by us be expended on the line between Wilmington and Dayton."

The interest at this meeting was great and forty-two shares of stock was subscribed, which amounted to two thousand one hundred dollars. These meetings for the sale of this stock were held every week and the enthusiasm often ran high. The meetings were well attended and thrilling speeches were made. The minutes of the meeting of December 5, 1871, are here copied: "Meeting called to order by secretary—the chairman not present. On motion of John Grant, Allen Binganon was asked to preside Members present: John Grant, Jesse Spray, Jr., Henry Hurley and George Mann. There not being a quorum present of the committee, the evening was spent in speeches. On the motion of John Grant, duly seconded, George Mann and Hurley were asked to address the committee, which parties agreed to, provided Mr. Grant would make the first one. The latter gentleman, being then called, arose and delivered a very neat little speech, setting forth the many inducements that were calling out the support of the people in this railroad enterprise. He was followed by George Mann, who arose only to excuse himself, and to insist upon Mr. Hurley addressing the committee. Mr. Hurley then addressed the meeting at considerable length, showing plainly the benefits to be derived from public improvements."

The last meeting held by the committee was on the evening of December 26, 1871, and the minutes as recorded are as follows: "Committee met at the store of John Grant; Samuel Lamar in the chair. The meeting was called to order, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and adopted. The meeting was largely attended, owing to an appointment made at a former meeting by James Swindler, Esq., to be present and address the committee on the railroad question. The speaker failed to come to time. Not much was done at this meeting, but, by hard work and perseverance, it was not altogether a failure, and the receipts of the evening were one share."

The list of the largest subscribers is given, with the number of shares which each subscribed: Samuel Lamar, twenty-two shares; G. E. and N. B. Stingley, ten shares; G. E. Stingley, ten shares; John Grant, twelve shares; Jesse Spray, twelve shares; Henry Spray, ten shares; William Hurley, nine shares; Solomon Huffman, Sr., ten shares; George Mills, ten shares; Levi D. Shambaugh, nine shares; Jacob S. Peterson, six shares; Jesse E. Jessup, six shares; Abram Peterson, six shares; Jonathan McKay, six shares; Archibald Peterson, six shares; John S. Lamar, five shares; Ebenezer Lucas, five shares; George W. McKay, five shares; Daniel H. McKay, five shares; M. C. McKay, five shares; John Lamar, five shares.

The people of this township subscribed to a total amount of twenty thousand dollars. The road was located, ten per cent. of the stock being paid in, but, from some unknown reason, which has not been ascertained by the historian, the enterprise failed and the money was refunded. So another failure on the part of the citizens of Clinton county to locate a railroad through this section is recorded.

MIDLAND RAILROAD.

The Journal, in its issue of February 21, 1883, set the machinery going in the agitation for the proposed railroad from Columbus to Cincinnati. This project was the work of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company and it was their desire to built this road in order that a direct line from Columbus to Cincinnati might be secured. This would run from Columbus to some point on the Marietta & Cincinnati railroad, probably via Washington Court House and New Vienna, or perhaps from Blanchester to Wilmington. The location depended to a certain extent on the enthusiasm which would be shown by the citizens of the different places and the assistance which they would give the proposed line. In other words, the route was open to the towns which made the best proposition.

In the Journal, April 18th issue, the following head line is set in large type. "Left Again. Proposed Road to Miss Wilmington, Owing to Lack of Interest of the Citizens of this City." Judging by the way things eventually turned out, this was a clever advertising scheme on the part of the promoters, for in this issue it set forth the possibilities which this road would have afforded the citizens of this town, but, through their lack of interest, the golden opportunity had been lost.

In the next issue of the Journal a lengthy article was written on the Midland line, the gist of this article being to the effect that it was not entirely too late for the citizens of Wilmington to secure this proposed line if they really wanted it and would show the proper enthusiasm.

The issue of May 9, 1883, bore these startling headlines: "$100.000 is the Price which the Midland Railroad will Cost this County." The proposition was set forth as follows: If the citizens of Clinton county would donate one hundred thousand dollars and the right of way, the proposed line would be run through this county. The route of this line would be through Sabina, Wilmington and Cuba. Previous to this, a meeting had been held at the court house and a committee appointed to meet with the stockholders of this road in an effort to come to some terms whereby the road would come through this county. R. E. Doan, John S. Savage, Madison Betts and Cyrus Linton presented the argument to this company for bringing this road through Clinton county. Colonel Yeoman made the speech for the directors. After several hours of deliberation on the part of the stockholders behind closed doors, the verdict, which was set forth in such astounding headlines by the Journal, was given. This money was to be divided between the three towns and townships, as follows: Wilmington and Union township, sixty thousand dollars; Sabina and Richland township, twenty-five thousand dollars; Cuba and Washington township, fifteen thousand dollars.

The proposition was accepted and a soliciting committee was appointed at an open meeting held in the court house. From this time until June 6 all the issues of the paper contain articles on the proposed line. In some of the articles the people are being urged to subscribe and pointing out the advantages. In others, the proposition is spoken of as sure to fail and the citizens who do not back the project are blamed. Hot air and the time limit are the chief lines of appeal. The issue of June 6 has this headline: "They will Run Cars on the Midland Railroad," and the list of contributors are printed. Over forty-eight thousand dollars had been subscribed and it was sure of success. In the next issue the entire proposition is rehashed and the last appeal made to the people of the county. It stated that the proposition was not altogether cinched and that at the last minute it might fail from the lack of a few hundred dollars.

The issue of June 27 allays all fears and insures the people that the road will come through Wilmington. The following was the contributions by townships: Wilmington and Union township, $66,441.50; Sabina and Richland township, $20,830; Cuba and Washington township, $10,118; total, $97,399.50; deficit, $2,618. This deficit was apportioned among the three townships, as follows: Wilmington and Union township, $1,560; Sabina and Richland township, $650; Cuba and Washington township, $390. The trustees who had been behind this movement went to Columbus to meet the officials of the road and deliver the report. After the report was given, the officials also asked for the right of way, in connection with the one hundred thousand dollars. This necessitated the raising of about six thousand five hundred dollars more.

But this was a small matter and the report that the Midland division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad would pass through Clinton county was met with great rejoicing. Meetings were held and the people gave vent to their feelings in all parts of the county. The stockholders arrived in Wilmington, October 3, 1883, and made a trip over the proposed route, viewing the right of way.

On October 8-9, 1883, work of grading began. The contractor arrived that day and all the paraphernalia and tools for making the cuts and fills was unloaded. The work was rushed through and it was hoped to have the road completed by July 1, 1884. The total amount of stock subscribed at this time was one hundred and eight thousand dollars. As different parts of the road was finished, trial trains were run over that part. The first train to make the through trip over the entire route from Columbus to Cincinnati passed through Wilmington, November 13. This was a special train and carried the members of the board of trade of Columbus. Several of the citizens of Wilmington accompanied this band in their initial trip over the line. The first time card went into effect on November 16. The rails laid on this division were sixty-pound steel and there were three thousand cross ties to the mile. The hopes and dreams of the citizens had been realized and Wilmington now had the services of two roads.

HIGHWAY STATISTICS.

According to the report of E. D. Trickey, the surveyor of Clinton county, the following statistics on the roads of the county are complete up to March 1, 1915: The 835 miles of roads in the county were divided into three classes: Macadam, 121; gravel, 627; earth, 87. This total of 835 miles of roads includes the 100 miles of state roads, part of which are macadamized, the most of them being gravel. There were a total of 748 miles of improved roads, of which 99.9 was listed as inter-county highways. The main market roads total 19.2 miles: the improved state roads totaled 8 miles. The last available statistics show that the county expended $72,363 for road and bridge construction and repairs during the last year. The main market road above mentioned is the Cleveland and Cincinnati road, running through Sabina, Wilmington and Clarksville. Of its total length of 259.1 miles, there are 24 miles in Clinton county, 19.2 of which are outside of municipalities. The 8 miles of improved state highway comprises that part of the Wilmington and Xenia highway in Clinton county.

The largest and oldest bridge in the county is the covered wooden bridge over Todd's fork at Clarksville. There are approximately 5,500 bridges and culverts in the county, the longest bridge having a span of 175 feet, with a clear water way of 20 feet. At least 100 bridges, ranging from 10 to 85 feet, have been constructed during the past year. All the culverts were made of stone or concrete.

The macadamized roads of the county range from ten to fourteen feet in width, most of them being ten feet. All of the state roads so far constructed have been fourteen feet wide. The average cost of a ten-foot macadamized highway (eight-inch rolled stone or thirteen-inch traffic packed) is about $3,600 per mile; a fourteen-foot highway of similar construction costs about $5,000 per mile. All roads are let out to the lowest bidder, the county surveyor having general charge of the construction. The repairing of the roads is in charge of road superintendents, each township having from one to three such officials.

Under a law which went into effect on September 1, 1915, the supervision of the county roads was placed in charge of a county highway superintendent. The law provides that the surveyors of each county shall be such highway superintendents and prescribes their duties in detail. The county highway superintendent has from one to four superintendents in each township, who are appointed by the township trustees. This law relieves the county commissioners of all administrative duties in connection with the highways and places the burden upon the highway superintendent, who, in turn, is responsible to the state highway commissioner.

Clinton county is fortunate in having plenty of limestone for road construction, although all of the gravel has to be shipped in from outside counties. The eastern part of the county is plentifully supplied with Clinton limestone, which outcrops in all of the eastern townships. The stone in the western part of the county comes mostly from the beds of the creeks and is known as the Cincinnati group of limestone. Vernon township is the only one operating a crusher of its own, all other crushers being owned by the contractors. The county owns three ten-ton road rollers, which are used only for repair work.

CHAPTER VII.

MILITARY HISTORY OF CLINTON COUNTY.

No one in this country wants or expects to see the gruesome shadow of the war-god visit this beautiful land of ours again. Yet neither North nor South would forego one tittle of the heroic savagery, of the brutal chivalry, that marked the shock of brother against brother in those never-to-be-forgotten battles of the Civil War. Yet from their bloody fields has arisen an imperishable understanding that must come when hostile members of the same stock try each other's mettle. And this is why we like to hear about it and they like to talk about it. Who is there that has not seen the gatherings in the country lanes, under the silver poplars before the village blacksmith shop, in the shade of the awnings that shelter the cove oysters and mackerel kits in front of the store. Crops are very essential affairs, and the prospects of rain must need be discussed as they foregather at the hallowed trysting places. But the conversation languishes after a while, until one pipes up: "Bill, d'ye remember so and so, and so and so?" Does Bill remember? Well, he should say, yes! And they fight it over again, until through the horned glaze in the eyes of the oldest of the old who took part there comes the light of other days, such as Byron only knew by proxy and had to tell second hand. Until finally Steve Johnson goes out in front, draws the line of attack in the dust of the village street, leads the ghostly corps in a forlorn attack, routs the enemy, lock, stock and barrel! Then they, at the call of the smith, hitch up and each wends his way back to the crops in the field, to the vegetable garden in the rear of the town home, where the pole beans are climbing high and the promise of early roastin' ears lends new vigor to aged hands, as they guide the hoe through the fast-growing grass, or whang a jimpson weed into the "kingdom come" of useless things.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

Clinton county has had residents in every war that our country has waged—the War of Independence, the War of 1812, the Indian struggles, the Mexican War, the war between the North and the South and, lastly, the war with Spain. It is hard to find the names of those who saw service in the Revolutionary War, but the following were Revolutionary pensioners who became residents of Clinton county: Thomas Fugate, private, Twenty-second United States Infantry, died September 11, 1833; William Spencer, private, Virginia Continental Line; William Venard, private, Tupper's brigade; Daniel Redington, private, Massachusetts Continental Line; John Allen, private, Virginia State Troops; Jacob Beard, private, Virginia Militia; Asa Disbrow, private, Connecticut State Troops; Abraham Ellis, private, Pennsylvania State Troops; William Lloyd, private, Virginia Continental Line; Thomas Gaddis, captain and colonel, Virginia State Troops; Isaac Grant, private, Virginia Continental Line; John Hall, private, Virginia State Troops; David Harwick, private, Virginia Cavalry; Thomas Hardin, private, Delaware Militia; John Jones, private, Pennsylvania Militia; Elijah Sabin, private, New York Militia; David Shields, private, Virginia Militia; James Spencer, private, Virginia Militia; John Wollard, private, Virginia Militia; Gordon Howard, private, Pennsylvania Continental Line; Dennis O'Laughlin, private, Pennsylvania Continental Line; Alexander Strickland, private, Virginia Continental Line; Michael Wolf, private, Virginia Continental Line; Abraham Westfall, New York Continental Line; Thomas Weekly, Connecticut Line.

The claim that he had fought under Washington in the Revolutionary War and under William Henry Harrison in the War of 1812, was always made by Capt. Joseph Parrott, who was living in the county in 1840, and was then a very old man.

WAR OF 1812.

There can be no doubt that Clinton county furnished men for the Army of the Northwest under Harrison, in the second war with Great Britain, but no lists can be found giving their names. At that time the county did not have many men to send, but no doubt can be entertained that she furnished her full quota.

MEXICAN WAR.

During the war with Mexico in 1847, R. B. Harlan, of Wilmington, raised a company of volunteers, but they were not used, as the quota of the state had been filled and they were not needed. Gen. James W. Denver, at that time a volunteer from the state of Missouri, but later a resident of Wilmington, achieved distinction in the Mexican War. Throughout the period before the Civil War, militia companies were organized in Ohio. Judge Robert B. Harlan, a resident of Wilmington, rose to the rank of major-general of Ohio Militia.

CIVIL WAR.

Then came those stirring times that tried men's souls. To us, as to them, it now seems like a dream. The call to arms, with a spontaneous response in North and South, that filled the ranks with city-born and country-bred; with the sophisticated and the simple; with the innocent from the farms and the early-wise wastrels from the docks of seaport cities; the riot in the streets of Baltimore; the earlier skirmishes, followed by the heart-deadening rout from Bull Run; then a setting down to the long, grim contest, with uncertain hopes and fears, until Vicksburg fell and the historic fight at Gettysburg pointed to the beginning of the end, when the flag of a lost cause should be furled forever and one banner again float over a reunited people.

There is no more magnificent record than that of Clinton county during this struggle. The Clinton Republican of Friday, April 19, 1861, has the following article, headed "Popular Excitement:"

"The news of the surrender of Fort Sumter fell heavily upon the citizens on Sunday evening, as it flashed along the wires, and on Monday, when the daily papers arrived confirming the report, and bringing the President's proclamation calling for seventy-five thousand volunteers, the excitement became intense. Preparations were immediately commenced for erecting a national flag on the top of the court house, whilst those of our citizens who happened to be possessed of national banners, immediately unfurled them to the breeze. About one o'clock, a large flag, displaying thirty-four stars, was run up on the court house, accompanied by the cheers of the hundreds of people who lined the sidewalks and thronged the streets. A large meeting of the citizens then spontaneously assembled in the court house, which was organized by the appointment of William Fuller, Esq., chairman, and Rodney Foos, secretary. The meeting was spiritedly addressed by Messrs. William Fuller, J. Q. Smith, R. B. Harlan, A. W. Doan, I. B. Allen, Leroy Pope, A. C. Diboll, J. D. Hines and David Linton. An agreement was then presented to the meeting of volunteers to be subject to the call of the proper authorities, to march to the defense of the Union whenever and wherever called, which was signed on the spot by the following named citizens: R. B. Harlan, J. D. Hines, I. B. Allen, A. W. Doan, H. B. Crumly, C. B. Lindsey, William S. Foos, William Adams, Jesse Hines, D. C. Kearns, James D. Roak, C. H. Morgan, S. J. Reed, E. Foos, H. S. Doan; J. W. Campbell, Jonathan Doan, Jr., C. T. Atkinson, A. H. Chapman, W. J. Speers and Samuel Woodruff.

"The following names have been added since: C. M. Robinson, Michael Heck, P. A. Stamats, James B. Ireland, Samuel S. Dunham, Eli Madden, Cyrus Hunt, Eden Andrew, Albert Harvey, S. T. Darbyshire, John Pennington, Stephen G. Job, Silas Page, Franklin Bayhan, John W. Shirey, Carey Johnson, John B. Abbott, W. B. Moore, G. P. Dunham, Elias Doan, G. D Bendel, William H. Garrett, G. D. Smith, C. P. Penn, J. Parkerson, A. Arnold, J. F. Dakin, Frank S. Wheeler, J. N. Clovin, Rockey Osborn, Michael Long, John J. Harris, Amos T. Sewell, Miles Reeder, Joseph Smith, W. N. Wilkerson, E. S. Cline, G. M. McKinsey, John Fugate, James Garrison, Thomas P. Tyrrell, Thomas M. Pugh, C. S. Outcalt, George M. Zeigler, and several others whose names we have not learned.

"Attention, Clinton County Volunteers! The volunteers of Clinton county will assemble in front of the court house in Wilmington today (Friday, at one o'clock P. M.) for the purpose of arranging to start to Washington on Monday next. Any suitable persons, desirous of joining the company, by attending at that time, may possibly have an opportunity to do so, but as the number is limited, it would be safer to apply before. By order of the captain. R. B. HARLAN."

At the meeting thus called, A. W. Doan was elected first lieutenant and J. D. Hines, second lieutenant. It was agreed that the non-commissioned officers should not be elected until they reached Columbus. A subscription of a thousand dollars, which was later greatly increased, was presented to the meeting for the future aid of the volunteers. By the Monday morning following the number of applicants for admission to the company were so many that there was almost enough to form two companies. At nine o'clock on that morning the ladies of Wilmington presented the company with a beautiful flag. The company left on a special train at nine-thirty o'clock for Columbus, where about sixty were dismissed owing to the great number of men offered in Ohio, and many returned home, while others joined other companies. Captain Harlan's company, as finally organized, contained about one hundred men. The following non-commissioned officers were appointed: First sergeant, Morris Harlan; second sergeant, C. B. Lindsey; third sergeant, A. H. Chapman; fourth sergeant, B. A. Hines; first corporal, J. V. Drake; second corporal, E. G. Rizer; third corporal, Hiram McKay; fourth corporal, H. S. Doan.

The following is a list of the private soldiers of this company, as shown by the original roll: P. A. Arthur, John B. Abbott, Anderson Arnold, Isaac B. Allen, C. T. Atkinson, Abraham H. Anson, John W. Bardsley, George D. Bendel, John J. Barlow, John Brehlman, John Briant, Andrew J. Brown, Henry C. Brown, John C. Cline, Ephraim S. Cline, Harvey F. Conklin, Martin V. Crossen, James Crossen, Burlington Carlisle, Thomas Conway, Henry B. Crumley, Lewis Dunn, Samuel S. Dunham, Jonathan Doan, Jr., John F. Dakin, James W. Eaton, William Foos, Edward Foos, William R. Gillespie, Timothy Garner, Jesse Hines, Sock Harlan, John Harris, William Hartman, Michael Heck, James E. Harman, A. J. Hodson, J. A. Johnson, Carey Johnson, James Johnson, Stephen G. Job, De C. Kearns, Jacob Moon, Samuel Marks, G. B. Long, David Lyon, William H. McLean, Jacob Moon, Samuel Marks, G. B. Miller, William Miller, Thomas I. Mercer, William B. Moore, P. R. Osborn, John Owens, Charles P. Penn, Silas Page, A. J. Pennington, Seymour J. Reed, James D. Rake, John B. Roberts, Elias Roberts, J. G. Smithson, J. D. Smith, Orlando Smith, Joseph F. Smith, James R. Smith, James M. Speers, W. J. Speers, William H. Stroad, Henry Sands, P. A. Stamats, John Standard, Isaac Sewell, John S. Surfas, W. F. Stivins, John Talbert, James Todd, Thomas Tyrrell, F. M. Underwood, Isaiah Wilkerson, William N. Wilkerson, Ellis B. Wall, Jesse R. Williams, Joshua R. Walker, Silas Woodmansee, Frank S. Wheeler and George M. Zeigler. The company, known as the "Clinton County Guards," was assigned to the Twelfth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Their term of enlistment was for three months.

The Twelfth Regiment took up its quarters at Camp Dennison, near Milford, May 8, 1861. Subsequently, Lieut. J. D. Hines was made adjutant of the regiment and I. B. Allen was appointed second lieutenant in his place. It is said that Colonel King, the commanding officer of the guard at Camp Jackson, Columbus, asserted that the "Clinton stavers" were worth any two companies of the regiment to preserve order and keep a good guard line.

A second company, known as the "Clinton Guards, No. 2," was organized in Wilmington almost immediately after the departure of Captain Harlan's company, its officers being, D. Linton, captain; Thomas Vantress, first lieutenant; Thomas Thatcher, second lieutenant. This company was offered to the state, but was not accepted, as the number of men from the county was so much greater than that called for. The company was then disbanded.

A fine company of Ellsworth Zouaves had been organized at Wilmington by the efforts of some of the young men of that place, and fifty-two men were enrolled by May 31, 1861. The officers chosen were, J. A. Farden, captain; H. P. Foos, first lieutenant, and Robert Dillon, second lieutenant. On this same date companies were organized and ready for service at Port William, Westboro, Sabina, Cuba, Reesville, New Vienna and Wilmington—seven in all, besides the one at Camp Dennison. In June of that year, Charles J. Ent had a company of boys between the ages of ten to fifteen in training which he called the "Wilmington Lancers." A number of citizens of Wilmington had also organized a rifle company and were intending to uniform and equip themselves. They elected A. Koogle, captain; John Rutherford, first lieutenant; S. Rulon, second lieutenant, and L. B. Welch, orderly sergeant.

By direction of the state military authorities, Capt. Rodney Foos established a military camp on the fair grounds at Wilmington early in May, 1861, for the temporary reception of soldiers. The first company assigned to it was that of Capt. Johnson, of Fayette county, which arrived previous to the 10th of that month and began regular drilling.

From the Clinton Republican of May 10, 1861, the following interesting bit is gleaned:

"We hereby agree to contribute the sums set opposite our names to aid and support the families of those volunteers who may be disabled or fall in defending the federal government against the assaults of traitors: James Fife, $200; W. C. Fife, $100; W. Hibben, $100; C. M. Bosworth, $100; L. B. Welch, $100; T. L. Carothers, $100; Thomas Hibben, $50; R. B. Mory, $50; Samuel Smith, $50; T. R. Wraith, $50; William Preston, $50; Samuel Haines, $50; J. W. Farren, $50; Eli Hadley, $50; J. Perrell, $50; Henry Babb, $25; Mahlon Wall, $25; A. T. Wall, $25; David Sanders, $25; I. R. Moody, $25; Samuel Knowlton, $25; E. Doan, $25; R. E. Doan, $25; J. M. Haworth, $25; W. B. Fisher, $25; W. Greer, $25; C. F. Truesdell, $25; William Reed, $25; E. S. Davis, $25; J. H. West, $25; R. Foos, $25; H. D. Sayers, $25; Levi Sheppard, $25; David Fife, $25; Thomas Custis, $25; James Henry, $25; H. H. Hankins, $20; C. Blazier, $50; J. F. Masters, $30; Levi Bennett, $20; William Knox, $20; John Holly, $20; E. L. Lacy, $25; R. Wickersham, $25."

During the month of May, 1861, enlistments began for the three-year service. Most of the members of the Clinton county company in the Twelfth Regiment signified their willingness to re-enlist for that period. However, it happened that a large portion of the men returned home, leaving but a small number who actually did enlist for three years. Lieut. A. W. Doan was elected captain of the reorganized three-year company, whose numbers by June 21 had swelled to ninety-three men. The company retained its original letter, and remained in the Twelfth Regiment.

During the week ending July 12, 1861, a fine company of three-year men was raised at Wilmington with R. B. Harlan as captain; Asa Higgins, of New Vienna, first lieutenant; A. H. Chapman, of Wilmington, second lieutenant, and P. A. Arthur, of New Vienna, orderly sergeant. This company, which was recruited for the Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry, left, on its organization, for Camp Dennison, where it received arms and equipments, and soon afterward joined the regiment in western Virginia. Capt. Robert B. Harlan, who was elected captain of the company raised for the Eleventh Regiment, stayed with his men until they left for Virginia, when he returned home, much to the regret of the men of the company; but his age was against him in the chances he must take in the field. However, he afterwards rendered valuable service in Ohio in the matter of raising fresh troops and performing other labors that fell to his lot.

The Clinton Republican for August 2, 1861, has the following notes: "The Clinton Grays of this place have applied for and obtained a place in the Groesbeck regiment, now at Camp Dennison, and will take their position there in a few days. Captain Farden's zouave company, of this place, has a position in Piatt's regiment, and will soon go to it. There is another company forming at Westboro, but whether they have a place assigned them yet or not, we do not know."

On August 9, the same paper has the following: "Captain Koogle left this place on last Monday with a full company for Camp Dennison, to join the Groesbeck regiment at that place. This is the second full company raised in Clinton county to serve during the war. Besides these, a portion of Captain Doan's company (B), about twenty-five in the Kentucky regiments, together with quite a number in divers other companies, were furnished by Clinton county. Nearly all of the first company of three months men have joined the various three companies above referred to, and are now in for the war."

Capt. George Vandergrift, a former resident of Wilmington, came to that place in the latter part of August, 1861, to recruit men for the three-year service in the Second Regiment. Judge J. H. West was at the same time authorized to receive and forward recruits for a regiment of infantry under Colonel Worthington. At this time any competent volunteer bringing thirty-five men was given a lieutenant's commission. It was announced on August 30, that "Lafe" Johnson, also a previous resident of Wilmington, was recruiting for an artillery regiment of sixty guns, which was to be raised in Ohio. He wanted able-bodied men for his company, which was to consist of one hundred members. Persons desirous of joining were asked to report to Captains Harlan and Babb, or to James M. Haworth at Wilmington. By September 1, 1861, this county had about four hundred and ten men in the field, with other companies nearly organized and ready for departure. A company for Colonel Worthington's regiment (the Forty-seventh), commanded by Capt. David Miller, was raised in the vicinity of Reesville, and left for Columbus, September 3. However, on arrival it was assigned to the regiment commanded by Col. Moses B. Walker. Another company, raised at Westboro and vicinity, was at this time with General Rosecrans. Its officers were A. S. Bundy, captain; A. F. Denniston, first lieutenant, and C. J. Cunningham, second lieutenant. A fine company was raised in the early part of September by Capt. Frank Spencer. Farden's company of zouaves left for Camp Dennison September 6. At this same time Captains Haworth and Vandergrift were recruiting in Wilmington. On September 13, Capt. Frank Spencer's company left for Camp Dennison and was assigned to the Seventeenth Regiment; on the same day a Zouave company left Blanchester. A few days later another company, under Captain Haworth, with C. J. Ent and John Barlow for lieutenants, left for Camp Chase, near Columbus, and on its arrival it was assigned to the Fortieth Regiment. On the 20th of the same month Vandergrift sent about thirty men to the Second Ohio Regiment at Camp Dennison. James A. Farden, of Wilmington, was appointed major in the Fifty-ninth Regiment, which was being formed about this time.

SOLDIERS' AID SOCIETY.

On October 4, 1861, a Soldiers' Aid Society was organized at a meeting of citizens in the court house at Wilmington, with R. B. Harlan, president; Rodney Foos, secretary, and Albert Hockett, treasurer. Their object was to "relieve the wants of the families of those that have gone into the service of our country." A board of control, consisting of A. H. Jenkins, Justus Taylor, D. S. King, T. R. Wraith and Elisha Doan, was chosen; a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions and was authorized to appoint a subcommittee in each school district of Union township. A depot for the reception and distribution of contributions was established at the store of T. R. Wraith.

MILITARY COMMITTEE FOR CLINTON COUNTY.

In the early part of October the congressional committee appointed a military committee for Clinton county, which held a meeting on the 14th of the month and completed its organization by electing R. B. Harlan, president; Rodney Foos, secretary, and H. D. Sayres, treasurer. It adopted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, that this committee earnestly recommend to the women of this county to form circles for knitting socks and mittens, and making undergarments for the volunteers now in and soon to go into service, and report from time to time the results of their labors.

"Resolved, that the committee use such means as they can command to procure blankets and other clothing that may be needful for our volunteers."

On Monday evening, May 26, 1862, the receipt of a telegram from Governor Tod asking for one hundred more men from the county to join the forces which were to be sent to Washington, which was in imminent danger, caused a great furor of excitement. The recruiting in response to this call did not progress very rapidly, while Fayette county forwarded her quota of men the morning following the receipt of the call. On July 3, Governor Tod again issued a call for more men from Ohio in response to a call from the President.

WARP AND WOOF.

Rev. S. A. Brewster, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Wilmington, was commissioned chaplain of the Fortieth Ohio Regiment, then at Camp Chase, and was released by the official members of his charge.

In December, 1861, a company raised in Richland township and commanded by Capt. William Reed, left that township to join the Seventy-fourth Regiment.

Lieutenant-colonel Parker, of the Forty-eighth Ohio, encamped near Wilmington in the latter part of December, for the purpose of raising recruits from that vicinity.

In February, 1862, there were two recruiting offices in Wilmington. Capt. J. J. Ennis was recruiting for the Fifty-second Regiment and enlisted about thirty men from Wilmington and Clarksville, who joined Company A, at Camp Dennison, on March 3. In February, W. P. Reid, editor of the Wilmington Watchman, was commissioned lieutenant and became a recruiting officer, W. S. Foos meantime editing the paper.

The ladies of Wilmington organized an aid society in the fall of 1861 and in March, 1862, Mrs. Rhoda C. Morris was president and Mrs. Caroline E. Harlan, vice-president. In March, 1862, they sent out a large box of clothing, blankets and delicacies by Lieutenant Ent to his company in the Fortieth Regiment.

About the same time there was a "School-girls' Soldiers' Aid Society," which was very industriously engaged in collecting articles and sending them to the front. Lizzie Work was president of this society, with Louisa Strickle, vice-president, Angie Outcalt, secretary, and Millie Hibben, treasurer. Other societies in existence about this time that were doing self-imposed missions in a noble manner were the "Ladies' Dime Circle" and a "Ladies' Soldiers' Relief Society."

On February 12, 1862, three trains from Zanesville, loaded with troops on their way to Kentucky, passed through Wilmington.

In July, 1862, many Clinton county men were sent with many others to Kentucky for a three months' campaign against the Confederate General Morgan, who had, by a threatened raid, frightened the people of Cincinnati and southwestern Ohio.

Governor Tod, in July, 1862, made the appointments for a new Ohio regiment—the Seventy-ninth—of which three companies were to be raised in Clinton county. The appointments were, R. B. Hayes, colonel; R. B. Harlan, lieutenant-colonel; Rodney Foos, adjutant. Colonel Hayes became the colonel of another regiment and Lieutenant-colonel Harlan never took the field. Company officers were appointed as follows: First company —I. B. Allen, of Wilmington, captain; John A. Smith, of Wilmington, first lieutenant; H. S. Doan, of Wilmington, second lieutenant. Second company—J. C. Moon, of Wilmington, captain; John Harrison, of New Vienna, first lieutenant; Bryant Robison, second lieutenant. Third company—G. B. Hicks, of Clarksville, captain; A. H. Botkin, of Port William, first lieutenant; John Reese, of Reesville, second lieutenant. Recruiting was begun at once and volunteers came in rapidly. The officers of the second company were later changed to Ethan Allen Spencer, of Wilson township, captain; Daniel Griffin, of Richland township, first lieutenant; John Harrison, of Green township, second lieutenant.

In the third week of August, 1862, the Wilmington papers reported that nearly every train west for ten days had taken out volunteers from Clinton county.

THE FIRST DRAFT.

In the latter part of August, 1862, Governor Tod appointed R. E. Doan, commissioner to superintendent the draft in this county, with Jentha Perrill as provost marshal, Dr. J. Walker, of Wilmington, as examining surgeon, and Marion Wilkerson, of Clarksville, assistant surgeon. Subsequently, Stephen Evans was appointed draft commissioner, and September 16 set as the day on which the draft should be made, with the following apportionment: Union township, 63; Vernon, 17; Green, 41; Wayne, 17; Washington, 12; Liberty, 17; Adams, 6; Richland, 27; Wilson, 23; Marion, 25; Jefferson, 26; Chester, 37; Clark, 23; total, 336. The draft was postponed until October 1, when the following persons were drawn:

Adams township—Nathan Newly, John T. Ward, Joseph Pennington, Henry M. Reese, Samuel Hutchinson, Archibald Jobe, and Josiah Anderson—7.

Wilson township—George Gray—1.

Wayne township—John M. C. Wilson, David Rollison, Eli Mathew, John Hoblett, Edmund West, Henry F. Johnson, James M. Syfferd, Joseph Sweetman, Daniel Dragoo, John Q. Adams, Jr., John Savage, John Butterfield, Henry L. Lutterell, Isaac Runnells and Ryden Van Pelt—15.

Washington township—James Skimmings, Armonia M. Hale, George King, Elijah G. Ford and William H. Florea—5.

Marion township—Thomas T. Sever, Jacob Burroughs and Milton A. Craft—3.

Liberty township—Joshua Pilcher, Allen Beal, Stephen Shafer, John A. Beal, William Almond, James Barton, Joseph Antram, Ira Scott, Thomas Linkhart, William S. Hoblett, Asa Oliphant, Calvin H. Antram, John Rankin and John Cline—14.

Green township—Washington Spears, Salathiel Harris, John W. Beam, Valentine Cox, Joel Sanderson, Michael Swingley, John R. Holmes and George W. Mory—8.

Chester township—Lawson M. Lafetra, Robert Reeves, Washington Nagles, Nathan McKay, Amos Mills, William Q. Hurton, Richard Williams, Jeremiah Jeffries, Samuel P. Bailey, James Austin, Emory H. McMillan, Philip Mills, Edward Evans, John Mendenhall, James Jay, Amos Haines, William H. Ferguson, Joshua Lucas, James Mannon, William Lister, Robert Carr, Clarkson McMillan and Nathan Kirk—23.

Union township—Michael O'Donnel, William J. Rouch, William Woods, Frederick Wgeman, Thomas W. Gaskill, Eli Thompson, Alfred C. Antram, Jesse H. Stout, James C. Boyd, George L. Fallis, Jesse Woods, Jacob Thompson, John Davis, William Smith, John M. Kirk, John Mussetter, Alfred Wilson, John Conway, James Wilson, James Thompson, Nathan Starbuck and William Welch—22.

Many of the above secured substitutes, to whom they paid from three to five hundred dollars each. The drafted men left for Camp Dennison October 6, 1862.

CINCINNATI THREATENED.

On September 3, 1862, rumors arrived over the telegraph that Cincinnati was in imminent danger of attack by a large force of Confederate troops approaching through Kentucky. The alarm spread rapidly and the week ending September 11 saw Wilmington and the entire county in great excitement. A meeting was called, to be held in the court house. The bells were rung. Posters were printed and widely circulated, calling on the citizens of the county to assemble at Wilmington the following day, bringing with them all kinds of available fire-arms for the purposes of organizing volunteer companies to be rushed to the defense of Cincinnati. Runners were sent over the county and the newspapers issued calls to arms. On the morning of the next day an immense gathering of people assembled at Wilmington, the men armed with squirrel rifles, shot-guns, muskets, etc. The boys were just as eager as their elders to do their share and asked to be enrolled. A call for volunteers was issued and in the forenoon four hundred and five men stepped forward. A special train was offered by the railroad company and at six o'clock, having been organized into companies about an hour before, they left for Cincinnati. They were officered as follows: First company—John Q. Smith, captain; Leroy Pope, first lieutenant; John A. Smith, second lieutenant. Second company—David Brown, captain; Elon B. Ward, first lieutenant; John W. Custis, second lieutenant. Third company—Mahlon Wall, captain; William C. Wilson, first lieutenant; Samuel Rulon, second lieutenant. Fourth company—A. E. Steele, captain; Christopher Ronemus, first lieutenant; M. P. Early, second lieutenant. These companies were all formed at Wilmington. A fifth, raised at Blanchester, had as its officers, John K. Trickey, captain; Joseph Kelsey, first lieutenant. They all proceeded to Cincinnati, where they were formed into a battalion. On arrival there they were sent to a position a few miles south of the city in Kentucky; but, after a few days, they were sent home, the Rebels failing to put in their appearance. These volunteers became known to history as the "squirrel hunters."

In May, 1863, eighteen of the colored citizens of the city of Wilmington (Erasmus Bennett, John Joels, James A. Rickman, Davis Adams, Nathaniel Stewart, O. S. Hightower, Levi Green, William Barber, William H. Thomas, Joseph Mace, A. Thomas, Jordan Robinson, Albert T. Felter, Seth C. Felter, Samuel Hill, Richard Jones, Simon Ratcliffe and Charles Chatman) volunteered in a Massachusetts colored regiment under a recruiting officer who arrived in Wilmington on the evening of May 15.

THE SECOND DRAFT.

In the summer of 1863, a new militia law in Ohio required that every able-bodied man in the state between the ages of eighteen and forty-five should either enroll himself in a militia company or pay a certain sum of money. Five years' service rendered each man exempt from further duty under the law. In June of that year, after a call from the President, it became necessary to raise men in Ohio to service six months, and three companies were to come from Clinton county. The townships were formed into military districts, and in Clinton county the following company officers were elected:

Union township, first district—Morris Harlan, captain; Lewis C. Walker, first lieutenant; John Rutherford, second lieutenant. Second district—William Frazer, captain; B. Leonard, first lieutenant; William H. Reed, second lieutenant. Third district—Henry S. Doan, captain; John K. Spencer, first lieutenant; Joseph Doan, second lieutenant. Fourth district—R. H. Smith, captain; C. W. Doan, first lieutenant; S. Jones, second lieutenant. Fifth district—John M. Underwood, captain; Lewis Boots, first lieutenant; William E. Parker, second lieutenant.

Liberty township, first district—James H. Hart, captain; Reese Stephens, first lieutenant; Cyrus Johnson, second lieutenant. Second district—Tilghman McKay, captain; A. C. Hiatt, first lieutenant; J. C. Cohagen, second lieutenant.

Chester township, first district—Benjamin Collett, captain; John Middleton, first lieutenant; C. H. Van Tress, second lieutenant. Second district—H. C. Colvin, captain; J. Blair, first lieutenant; M. M. Collett, second lieutenant.

Adams township, first district—J. M. Gorrelle, captain; P. R. Osborn, first lieutenant; S. Denney, second lieutenant.

Jefferson township, first district—C. J. Cunningham, captain; John T. Hammer, first lieutenant; George Hudson, second lieutenant. Second district—J. D. Hodson, captain; J. T. Jackson, first lieutenant; G. R. Jackson, second lieutenant.

Clark township, first district—Finley Moon, captain; George R. Moon, first lieutenant; J. P. Langden, second lieutenant.

Marion township, first district—C. P. Baldwin, captain; Joseph Garrison, first lieutenant; S. G. Clark, second lieutenant. Second district, Henry C. Smith, captain; Andrew J. Hodson, first lieutenant; J. M. Gustin, second lieutenant.

Vernon township, first district—Eli Hadley, captain; David Mann, first lieutenant; D. A. Kelly, second lieutenant. Second district—John M. Villars, captain; T. H. Townsend, first lieutenant; E. Cast, second lieutenant.

Washington township, first district—Samuel Briggs, captain; Daniel Stephenson, first lieutenant; Frank Mitchel, second lieutenant. Second district—William Clevenger, captain; Philip Smith, first lieutenant; Clark Brown, second lieutenant.

Wilson township, first district—Ethan A. Spencer, captain; M. P. Early, first lieutenant; O. B. Carroll, second lieutenant. Second district—William Pope, captain; I. C. Williams, first lieutenant; B. Brewer, second lieutenant.

Richland township, first district—H. H. Thorp, captain; Thomas Glass, first lieutenant; John Kenny, second lieutenant. Second district—C. Rhonemus, captain; William Ross, first lieutenant; Lewis Bigley, second lieutenant.

Wayne township, first district—J. Stout, captain; B. Davis, first lieutenant; J. Runnels, second lieutenant. Second district—James E. Pidgeon, captain; William H. Strode, first lieutenant; James Babb, second lieutenant.

Green township, first district—Joshua Hussey, captain; Granville Osborn, first lieutenant; W. W. Barnes, second lieutenant. Second district—Thomas Elliott, captain; Elijah Mathews, second lieutenant; M. Swingley, second lieutenant. Third district—William C. Wilson, captain; James V. Raynald, first lieutenant; Newton Shoemaker, second lieutenant.

THE SECOND MORGAN SCARE.

About the time the officers above mentioned were appointed to their respective places (July, 1863), news arrived that the Confederate General Morgan was pushing his way rapidly through Indiana toward Cincinnati on his famous raid. With this news came Governor Tod's proclamation calling out the militia, and on Monday morning, July 13, they gathered, about one thousand strong, at the county seat ready to be transported to camp. A few companies took cars at Reesville, Sabina and Sligo. One company, under the command of Capt. Eli Hadley, leaving Clarksville on an early morning train, was captured by Morgan before they reached camp and before they received arms. They were hastily paroled, the track torn up and the train thrown. The rebels pushed eastward through Williamsburg to Georgetown. The remaining companies did not reach Camp Dennison until Wednesday; but on Tuesday, while they were waiting transportation, a cavalry troop was hastily organized and sent off southwestwardly on a scouting expedition. But Morgan was soon afterward captured and thrown into prison.

A short time afterward four companies of volunteer militia were organized in the county, and formed by the adjutant-general of the state into a battalion called the Fifty-fifth. On the last day of August, 1863, H. Hankins, of Company A, was elected lieutenant-colonel of the battalion. The three militia regiments of the county elected their officers as follows: First regiment—H. S. Doan, colonel; H. B. Crumly, lieutenant-colonel; Alfred McKay, major. Second regiment—A. F. Denistou, colonel; David Mann, lieutenant-colonel; Owen West, major. Third regiment—E. A. Spencer, colonel; James Pidgeon, lieutenant-colonel; ——— Matthews, major.

By the 3rd of March, 1863, Clinton county had a total of one thousand one hundred and eight volunteers in actual service, which included one thousand and thirty in various infantry regiments, thirty-one in the cavalry, and forty-seven miscellaneous—gun-boat service, etc. The different townships of the county were represented in numbers as follows: Union, 186; Chester and Adams, 99; Liberty, 90; Vernon, Marion and Jefferson, 217; Clark and Washington, 171; Green and Wayne, 188; Richland and Wilson, 157; total, 1,108.

On the call of the President for three hundred thousand men in the fall of 1863, the quota of the sixth congressional district of Ohio was 1,624 men, of which Clinton county's share was 284, apportioned among the townships as follows: Union, 51; Chester, 20; Liberty, 18; Vernon, 18; Jefferson, 14; Clark, 27; Washington, 17; Green, 36; Adams, 14; Wayne, 18; Richland, 21; Wilson, 15. Each new recruit was offered a bounty of three hundred and two dollars and premium, while veterans were entitled to one hundred dollars more.

About sixty cords of wood were brought by the farmers of the township to Wilmington on Monday, January 11, 1864, and distributed among the families of soldiers living in the place. About forty citizens who had no wood to contribute, gave a dollar each and joined with the farmers in a bountiful feast at Clinton Hall.

In January, 1864, Capt. T. Q. Hildebrant, Capt. J. M. Underwood and Capt. Joshua Hussey were appointed recruiting officers for the county, and, about February 1, Lieut. Joseph J. Wakefield began recruiting a company in the county for the Twenty-seventh Regiment of United States Colored Troops. In its issue of March 18, 1864, the Clinton Republican says that Captain Williamson, of the Seventy-ninth, was in town recruiting sharpshooters for his company.

In the spring of 1864, under calls from the President, aggregating seven hundred thousand men, the total quota of Clinton county was four hundred and eighty-seven, and, after deducting the credits for veterans and new recruits up to April 2, there yet remained to be raised three hundred and sixty-three. Adams township was the first to fill her quota and was congratulated on the fact by the provost marshal. Governor Brough (who had been elected the previous fall) called into active service for one hundred days the militia of the state, which had been organized as the Ohio National Guard, under an act passed March 31, 1864. Four hundred and forty-three of the four hundred and eighty-six companies in the state responded to the call, including four from Clinton county constituting the Fifty-fifth Battalion. The Fifty-fifth Battalion was later consolidated with a battalion from Highland county and, together, they formed the Twenty-seventh Regiment of Ohio National Guards. The command left Camp Dennison, May 4, 1864, and proceeded to West Virginia. At Columbus, Ohio, soon afterward, the Clinton county battalion was consolidated with one from Ross county, the two together being known as the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, eight hundred and fifty strong, commanded by Col. A. E. Brown. They were sent Washington, saw severe service in Virginia, and returned home at the expiration of their term of enlistment.

THE THIRD DRAFT.

On May 18, 1864, a draft was made in Clinton county affecting all the townships except Chester, Adams and Liberty, which had furnished their respective quotas. The numbers from the other townships were: Union, 68; Vernon, 10; Marion, 3; Jefferson, 7; Clark, 25; Washington 23; Wilson, 26; Green, 4, and numbers from other townships not given in the report from which this is taken. A second draft took place June 14, to supply the places of those persons who had been excused from the previous draft because of disability, and at that time Union township furnished 13; Wilson, 6; Washington, 4; Clark, 2, and Vernon, 2.

The time of the Twelfth Ohio Volunteer Regiment was out in July, 1864, and those who did not re-enlist returned to Ohio and were mustered out. Many of the Clinton county members remained in the service.

A war meeting was held in Wilmington on July 16, 1864, to devise means of raising volunteers for the army in order that another draft, then impending, should not be necessary in the county. It was resolved that the trustees of the townships should be requested to borrow sufficient funds to enable them to pay each volunteer one hundred dollars and that a tax should be levied on the property on the townships to liquidate the debt. On the 18th of July, President Lincoln called for five hundred thousand men, who should be drafted to serve one year. Ohio's share under this call was twenty-five regiments, and of this, about four hundred and fifty men were to come from Clinton county. A draft took place on September 26 to fill the quota. Under another call from the President on December 19, 1864, for three hundred thousand men, the net quota of Clinton county was placed at two hundred and six.

But the great war was almost over now and the land rejoiced, though the rejoicing was dimmed by the news that the President was assassinated.

The first of the regiments to return was the Seventy-ninth, it arriving on the evening of June 17. The men of the regiment were met with a royal welcome and a great feast prepared by the ladies of Wilmington. The two banners which had been carried to the field by the regiment thirty-four months before were brought back, scarred and torn in battle, their colors dimmed—their sacred tatters standing in evidence of stormy and deadly strife. This regiment had gone into the field originally with nine hundred men, had received four hundred recruits, and returned at the close of the war with but few over four hundred men.

The Clinton county members of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth and the Seventy-fourth regiments returned in July.

Three general officers by brevet were furnished by Clinton county, namely, Azariah W. Doan, John C. Moon and George M. Zeigler. Azariah W. Doan volunteered in the spring of 1861, in the Twelfth Ohio (three months) Infantry and on June 12 of the same year was promoted to captain. He resigned October 18, 1861, and on August 19, 1862, he was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Seventy-ninth Ohio. He served with great credit to the close of the war, and was promoted to colonel July 8, 1865, but was mustered out as lieutenant-colonel. After the close of the war he was breveted brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865. John C. Moon, in June, 1862, raised Company F, of the Eighty-fifth Regiment, three-months men, that being the only company of that enlistment containing men from Clinton county. Captain Moon was commissioned captain in the Eighty-eighth Ohio on September 24, 1862, and most of the men of the old company re-enlisted under him. In the fall of 1863, he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Eighteenth United States Colored troops, and was subsequently promoted to colonel. He continued in the service until some time in 1866, and was breveted brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from November 21, 1865. He was the only one of the three to have the honor of brevet rank conferred upon them while still in the service. George M. Zeigler was commissioned second lieutenant in the Forty-seventh Ohio Infantry August 28, 1861; was promoted to first lieutenant December 6, 1861; to captain December 28, 1862, and to colonel of the Fifty-second Regiment United States Colored Troops, December 22, 1864. His brevet rank as brigadier-general dates from March 13, 1865.

ELEVENTH OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

The Eleventh Ohio Regiment was formed of men from Miami, Clinton, Hamilton, Montgomery and Columbiana counties. Company G of this regiment was raised in Clinton county. The regiment was mustered into the three-months service at Camp Dennison, in April, 1861. It was re-organized and mustered into the service for three years on June 20, and on the 7th of July was ordered to the Kanawha valley in Virginia. Arriving at Point Pleasant, July 11, it was attached to the Kanawha division under the command of Gen. J. D. Cox. Through the winter that followed the regiment was actively engaged only a portion of the time. In August, 1862, the regiment was ordered to Washington, thence to Manassas Junction to oppose a rebel force and for the next few days were sharply engaged. Whitelaw Reid, in his history of "Ohio in the War," tells the story of the next few days in this manner: "The rebels were posted on the banks of the Monocacy, holding the bridge across the stream. Three attacking columns were formed, with the Eleventh in the center of the advance, and advanced against the rebels. The center column gained the bridge and drove the enemy from it. A charge was ordered, but the line was thrown into some confusion, and the rebels rallied and captured two pieces of artillery. General Cox called to Colonel Coleman: 'Will the Eleventh recover those guns?' With a loud cheer, the regiment dashed at the rebels, drove them from the guns and still pressed on, cheering and charging, advancing into the city, and only halting when the enemy were completely routed. That night the Kanawha division bivouacked near the city, and by the evening of the next day advanced to Catoctin creek near Middletown, the Eleventh being posted near the bridge." The regiment took part in the battle at South Mountain, and at Antietam lost their gallant Colonel Coleman, who fell mortally wounded while leading his men against a strong rebel position, which they carried after his fall.

The command was transferred to Nashville, Tennessee, in January, 1862, and, after numerous minor expeditions, was, on June 27, assigned to General Reynolds' Third Division of Gen. George H. Thomas' Fourteenth Army Corps. It saw plenty of hard service henceforth, and, on the 18th and 19th of September, at Chickamauga, suffered severely. At Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge it distinguished itself greatly and during the charge on the ridge captured one battle-flag and a quantity of artillery and small arms. After pushing the enemy toward Ringgold, and engaging him at Ringgold, the regiment returned to Chattanooga. In a charge on Buzzard Roost, the regiment lost one-sixth of its men and was compelled to fall back. The surviving veterans, about two hundred in number, returned to Ohio March 26, 1864, for the purpose of recruiting. The regiment then engaged in doing garrison duty at Ringgold until June 10, when it proceeded by way of Cincinnati to Camp Dennison, and was mustered out at the latter place June 21, 1864.

The roster of Company G, which was raised in Clinton county, follows: Captain, Robert B. Harlan; first lieutenant, Asa Higgins (promoted to captain); second lieutenant, A. H. Chapmans (promoted to captain); first sergeant, P. A. Arthur (promoted to captain); sergeants, Henry B. Crumley, Phocion B. Way and Michael Long; corporals, Elsworth G. Rizer (promoted to sergeant), Charles F. Atkinson (promoted to first sergeant), William R. Gillespie, John R. Dixson (died in service), John B. Roberts (died in service), Philip R. Osborn, Ephraim S. Cline, and Austin Hildebrant (promoted to fifth sergeant); musician, Dallas L. L. Hust; privates, Joshua R. Arnold, Robert Alexander (promoted to first corporal), Thomas G. Allison, Andrew J. Branetrator, Parnell B. Brown, Stephen F. Bundy, Thomas Conway, Benjamin F. Clark (promoted corporal), James H. Channel, died in service, James V. R. Crosson, John Conner, Harry F. Conklin, John P. Collier, Samuel S. Dunham, Simon Driscoll, William B. Devore, James W. Eaton, Edward Foos, John J. Harris (promoted corporal), James A. Harrison (prisoner), Morris Harlan, John D. Hicks (missing), Thomas F. Hallam, Levi H. Huff (prisoner), John R. Harvey (killed in action), Daniel Jacks, William Jacks, Thomas E. Johnson, John A. Johnson, Joseph Juvenile, Henry G. Keenan (killed), James W. Kellis, Willis M. Killis, George Leverton, Henry Long, David Love, Morgan Lupton (promoted corporal), David Lyon, (promoted corporal), Manasa Martin (prisoner), Charles Martin, William H.

Martin, James M. McDaniel, William M. Moon, Richard S. Moore (promoted corporal), James K. Morris (prisoner), Samuel Marks, Sampson Orr, James A. Nunn, Amos Pennington, Samuel Phillips, Anthony Rapp, John L. Richards (promoted corporal), Andrew O. Rhonemus (promoted first sergeant), Samuel Richards, George H. Roberts, Elias Roberts, Andrew J. Remington, Michael Rone, Charles Richards, Joseph Smith, Samuel A. Savage, Amos T. Sewell, J. G. Smithson, Silas Spencer, Harvey H. Stivens, Francis M. Tillinghurst (wounded), Francis M. Underwood, Alfred J. Villars (prisoner), Isaiah Wilkerson (promoted sergeant), John Zettner; recruits, Solomon Hall (prisoner), Joseph W. Smith, Obed E. Waln, James Wallace, John Maln, William H. Wright.

TWELFTH OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

The Twelfth Ohio was organized at Camp Jackson, May 3, 1861, under President Lincoln's call for seventy-five thousand volunteers for three months. It moved to Camp Dennison, May 6, re-enlisted, and re-organized and was mustered into the United States service for three years on June 28 of the same year. The regiment left Camp Dennison on July 6, and, by way of Point Pleasant, arrived at the Poctaligo river on the 14th. On August 13, eight companies were assigned to General Benham's brigade, having marched to Clarksburg, West Virginia. Moving south the regiment was engaged with the enemy at Carnifax Ferry, in September, where it suffered the loss of its gallant commander, Col. John W. Lowe. On December 10, 1861, the regiment was transferred to General Cox's brigade and moved to Charleston, West Virginia, where it went into winter quarters. It left that place, May 3, 1862, and joined Scammon's brigade, at the mouth of East river. Until August 15 it was engaged in scouting, when it was ordered to the Army of the Potomac, and arrived at Alexandria on the 24th. At Bull Run, on the 27th, it lost nine killed, sixty-eight wounded (six mortally) and twelve missing. In September it joined the advance into Maryland, entered Frederick City, was present at South Mountain, where it captured three battle-flags, a large number of small arms and over two hundred prisoners, with a loss of sixteen killed, ninety-one wounded and eight missing. At Antietam, on the 17th, its losses were six killed and twenty-nine wounded. The regiment went into winter quarters at Fayette Court House, Virginia, and while there was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Eighth Army Corps. July 17, "the brigade was ordered to Ohio to assist in capturing John Morgan, and after proceeding up the Ohio as far as Blennerhassett's Island, and guarding fords for several days, it returned to Fayette Court House." During operations from that time until December, the regiment lost several men killed, wounded and missing, and again went into winter quarters at Fayette Court House. The regiment was present at Cloyd's Mountain, May 9, 1864, and was subsequently engaged in several rather important skirmishes. In a long march via Catawba valley, New Castle, Sweet Springs, White Sulphur, Lewisburg and Gauley to Camp Piatt, on the Kanawha, where it arrived on June 29, the regiment suffered severely from hunger and thirst. On July 2, it was ordered to Columbus, Ohio, where it was mustered out of the service July 11, 1864. "During the term of its service, the regiment moved on foot, by rail and by water, a distance of four thousand and forty-nine miles, and sustained a loss in killed, wounded and missing of four hundred and fifty-five men."

Company I of this regiment was composed mostly of Clinton county men whose names are given below. This company was organized by Capt. Ferdinand Gunckel, June 25, 1861, and was mustered into the service at Camp Dennison to serve three years. It was mustered out, July 11, 1864, by reason of expiration of term of service, and the veterans and recruits transferred to the Twenty-third Regiment Ohio Infantry. Privates, David F. Adams, John B. Abbott, Abner Briggs, Jacob Bryant, John Breekman, John Conard, Archibald Doan, Albert Harvey, John H. McMillan, Eli Maddern, J. W. Osborne, Orlando Smith, Franklin Simonton, wounded.

The following residents of Clinton county were also members of various companies in the Twelfth Ohio Regiment: Major, Jonathan D. Hines (promoted to colonel); lieutenant-colonel, Hiram M. Kay (killed); Jonathan McMillan (wounded and died), Thomas Dunken, Isaac Mathews, A. J. Abbott, Daniel Stevens, Henry Long, J. F. Bowers, W. B. Moore (died), Cary Johnson (killed), M. V. Moyres, J. R. Conard, Frank Lapert, Jonathan Howard, Aaron Howard, William Adams (wounded), J. R. Walker, B. A. Hines, Jesse V. Hines, A. J. Brown, William Duncan, Jonathan Cartwright, I. C. Moore, Buck Moore.

THE SEVENTEENTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Seventeenth Regiment operated first in Virginia as a three-months organization, having been formed in April, 1861. It was reorganized in the fall of that year and ordered to Kentucky, subsequently serving through campaigns in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi; re-enlisted as veterans early in 1864, and participated in General Sherman's subsequent movements, being mustered out at Louisville, Kentucky, in July, 1865. Company G of this regiment was composed of Clinton county men. It was retained in service until July 16, 1865, when it was mustered out by order of the war department.

Its officers were: First lieutenant, Franklin Spencer (promoted to lieutenant-colonel); second lieutenant, Thomas R. Thatcher (promoted to major and transferred); sergeants, Isaiah Whinery (promoted to first lieutenant), Oliver Kibbey (promoted to second lieutenant) and Edward Champlain; corporals, Thomas B. Clark, Isaac P. Jenks, George H. Smith and Adon Tomlin; privates, Joshua Albertson, Abraham H. Anson, George H. Anson, Jacob Andrew (promoted corporal), Richard Bolton, George H. Brown, Frank Briggs (died at Andersonville Prison, November 19, 1864), James Brewer, Hiram Bates, G. W. Brown, Addison Blizzard, Samuel Clark (died in service), Morris Conger, John M. Cottrell (killed), Peter Crewso, Noah Cotton, Burlington Carlisle (promoted sergeant), Samuel Falkner, H. Foster, Benjamin Foss, Leander Green, Parker Green, James M. Gallaher, Thomas J. Hurt, Nathan K. Jeffries, George W. Jeffries, John R. Kelly, William H. Kibby, William Livecy, Daniel Little, Timothy Murphy, John Miller, Joseph Moon, John Morey, T. C. McKibben, Thomas Nolan, Daniel Nolan, Charles S. Outcalt (prisoner in Andersonville, nineteen months and nine days), Daniel Ragan (died in service), Patrick Ragan, Isaac Rambough, George W. Smith, Joseph Smith (promoted sergeant), George Schoo, William M. Shewalter, Steven I. Whitaker, John O. Wolfer (promoted sergeant), Joseph R. Whitaker (wounded), David Walter, John Wesley, John Taylor, John Smith, John Kibbey, Seth Osborn, John Crouse, Clark Levecy, John Riley, C. B. Riley, James Shaw.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Twenty-fifth Regiment was organized at Camp Chase, June 28, 1861, and saw service first in Virginia, afterwards in the Gettysburg campaign and the movements of the Eleventh Corps. Its men re-enlisted as veterans in January, 1864, and moved from Alexandria, Virginia, to Hilton Head, south Carolina. Its subsequent operations were in that region. It was mustered out and discharged at Columbus, Ohio, on June 18, 1866, after five years of hard service.

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Twenty-seventh Regiment was organized at Camp Chase in August, 1861; left for St. Louis, Missouri, on the 20th of that month, and saw service with the Army of the West through all seven of the campaigns of the latter. It was discharged at Camp Dennison in July, 1865.

THE THIRTY-FIRST OHIO REGIMENT.

The Thirty-first Regiment was mustered into the service at Camp Chase, near Columbus, Ohio. On September 30, 1861, it left Cincinnati and went to Camp Dick Robinson, in Kentucky, where it was subjected to a thorough course of drill. Its campaigns were under Thomas, Buell and Sherman. The men of this regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and were mustered out at Louisville, Kentucky, July 20, 1865, transferred immediately to Camp Chase, Ohio, paid and discharged. Company I, of this regiment, was organized (as Company A) at Reesville, in this county, and was mustered into the service on September 19, 1861, to serve three years. It was finally mustered out on July 20, 1865, by order of the war department. Its officers were as follow: Captain, David H. Miller (resigned); sergeants, Elias Doan and Joseph Taylor; corporals, Salathiel H. Johnson, Thomas Sutton, George Irwin and W. H. McClaine; privates, Allen Barber (promoted to sergeant), Joseph Bragg, Francis J. Burns, Azel Cumely, Thomas Casey, John Bragg, John D. Cottrell, George W. Church, Levi Collins, Levi Fanon, Daniel Fink, William H. Grooves, Thomas Griffin, Matthew Hallam (promoted corporal), William H. Hunter, Marquis Hallam, Nathan Henry, David Irwin, Benjamin F. Jones, John W. Johnson, Samuel Leamon, Newton G. Moore, William Nunn, Daniel Parker, James O'Donnell, William J. Richards (promoted corporal), Joseph Robinet, Elisha Spencer, John T. Sutton, William Sutton, R. Stringfellow, Jonathan T. Tyrrill, James Underwood, William Underwood, Joseph R. Workman, O. E. Waln, Lanes Irwin and Washington Irwin.

THE THIRTY-NINTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Thirty-ninth Ohio Regiment of Infantry was organized in July, 1861, at Camp Colerain, ten miles north of Cincinnati, and joined Fremont in Missouri in August, being the first Ohio regiment to enter that state. In the early part of 1862 it was assigned to the army under Pope, and, after that officer's achievement on the Mississippi, joined the army under General Halleck, afterwards commanded by General Grant. Five hundred and thirty-four members of the regiment were mustered into the service as veteran recruits on December 27, 1863, and, after a furlough, the organization formed a part of the Fourth Division of the Sixteenth Corps. On July 22, 1864, it lost one-third of its members in killed and wounded in the terrific engagements of that day near Atlanta, Georgia. It accompanied Sherman on his famous marches and engagements, participating in the Grand Review at Washington on May 24, 1865, and, after being transported to Louisville, Kentucky, was mustered out of the service on July 9, 1865. It was then transferred to Camp Dennison and there paid and discharged. It furnished more veterans than any other Ohio regiment, and in all of its engagements had the good fortune to never turn its back upon the enemy. This regiment contained one company (H) from Clinton county, commanded by Capt. John V. Drake, who met his death on the field of battle.

The following is the roster of Company H: Captain, Adam Koogle (died in service) first sergeant, David Mann; sergeant, Daniel W. Chase and Declifford Kearns; corporals Peter A. Stamats (promoted first lieutenant), Silas Page, Franklin Dabb, Thomas P. Tyrrell (killed), David Sayers, Jervis Harlan, William Miller and Robert Babb (promoted first lieutenant); privates, James E. Brown (died in service), Joseph Butterfield, George M. Bell (promoted corporal), John M. Brewer, John R. Barret, William Burton, Marion Babb, Franklin Babb, Samuel Barrett, Francis M. Collins, Solon Carrell, John Cleaver, John M. Cree, Benjamin Cadwalder, Benjamin Daugherty (promoted corporal), John F. Deakin, James A. Drake, John V. Drake (promoted captain), Robert Dillon, George P. Dunham, William Dudley, William Elders, George Elders, G. H. Ellis, James Finley, Benjamin Goodrich, Milton Garner (promoted corporal), Matthias Gerlach, Absalom Gregory, Isaac H. Harlan, John Harvey, Samuel M. Harris, James Humphries, Amos Horseman, George W. THE FORTIETH OHIO REGIMENT.

The organization of the Fortieth Regiment was completed at Camp Chase, December 7, 1861, and four days later the troops left for Kentucky. It subsequently saw service in Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia. Company B, of this regiment, commanded by Capt. James M. Haworth, was raised in Clinton county. Captain Haworth resigned, February 7, 1863, and in October 7, 1864, his company, with Companies A, C and D, was mustered out. The remainder of the regiment shared the fortunes of the Fourth Corps in the maneuvers against the Confederate General Hood, and, in December, 1864, the regiment was consolidated with the Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, proceeded to New Orleans, and thence to Texas, and was finally mustered out December 3, 1865. Company B, of this regiment, was organized at Wilmington, from September to November, 1861. Its roster follows: Captain, James M. Haworth; first lieutenant, Charles J. Ent; second lieutenant, John J. Barlow; first sergeant, James R. Nickerson; sergeants, Ewing M. Wickersham, Thomas McVey, Jerome Smith and Lansing R. Moody; corporals, Daniel J. Collett, Jasse N. Oren, William M. Waln, Robert E. LaFetra, Porter Van Tress, Isaac Doan, Henry C. Cowgill and Jacob H. Allen; fifer, William H. Buntan; wagoner, Johnson Crawford; privates, Samuel J. Arnold, Joshua Beavins, Henry Boring, James M. Barton, Alpheus Babb, James E. Beckford, James A. Barnes, Joseph M. Carter, William R. Carver, David F. Conklin, David Conklin, Josiah Clark, William Campbell, George W. Daniels, Joseph B. Daniels, Joseph N. Dean, Archibald Edwards, Eli Ellis, Nathaniel Edward, Hale Elwood, John W. Ellis, Henry Gutterg, Maron Grillith, Jacob A. Hoover, Jacob H. Haines, George S. Hodgson, Silas Hart, Marshall Hyatt, Jacob C. Hendershot, William H. H. Hunnicutt, Charles Holliway, John M. Hallam, Seymour Reed, Paul C. Vandervort, Nathaniel Wooley, J. B. Waln, William I. Wilson, Calvin Woolery, J. A. Waln, Joshua Wood, Absalom Wall, Ferdinand Hang, Elias Harlan, Silas P. Hawk, David W. Hendershot, George Jenkins, Isaiah Kizer, Evans J. Leavis, Clarkson Lytle, Stephen Leake, Barney Lucky, Samuel J. Morrow, William H. Morris, Harrison W. McFadden, William H. Miller, William H. Middleton, William Z. McGrudin, John M. Mills, Francis Moony, Michael I. Mahan, John F. Mitchell, George W. D. Mills, Joseph M. Newman, John Owens, George M. O'Neal, James B. O'Neal, Edward N. Pugh, Joshua R. Peebles, Robert K. Robbinson, Joseph C. Railey, William Rix, Miles Reeder, Levi P. Sheppard, James L. Young, John C. Young, Joshua L. Yeo, W. H. Yeo, L. M. Thatcher, Alf. Vandervort, S. W. Vestal, W. M. Waln.

THE FORTY-THIRD OHIO REGIMENT.

This regiment was organized at various place in the state of Ohio at large from September to December, 1861, to serve three years. On the expiration of its term of service, the original members (except veterans) were mustered out and the organization, composed of veterans and recruits, was retained in service until July 13, 1865, when it was mustered out of the service by the order of the war department. The following privates were members of Company A of this regiment and their homes were in Clinton county: Henry Brown, missing; Benjamin F. Brooks, missing; John S. Clarke, missing; James Hobbs, missing; Charles A. Littleton, missing; John Madden.

THE FORTY-FOURTH, FORTY-SIXTH AND FORTY-SEVENTH OHIO REGIMENTS.

The Forty-fourth Regiment was organized near Springfield, Ohio, in the summer and fall of 1861; the Forty-sixth, recruited at Washington, Franklin county, in September, 1861; and the Forty-seventh, organized near Cincinnati in the summer of 1861, all had members from Clinton county. The latter regiment was that in which George M. Zeigler volunteered as a private, and in which he was successively promoted until he had reached the rank of captain, when he was promoted to colonel of the Fifty-second United States Colored Troops, as elsewhere mentioned in this chapter. These regiments all saw active service. There were men from this county also in the Forty-eighth, Fifty-first and Fifty-second, who found plenty to do during their terms of enlistments.

THE FIFTY-FOURTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Fifty-fourth Regiment was called the best drilled organization at Camp Dennison in January, 1862. The regiment was organized at that place in the fall of 1863. It saw hard service with the Army of the West. Lieut.-Col. James A. Farden of this regiment was from Clinton county. The following men in Company C were Clinton county men: First sergeant, Fergus Mitchels; corporals, John Reynolds, Robert Wells (promoted sergeant), and Thomas V. Cuddington; privates, Erastus Barkel, James M. Bougham, John Cropen, Jasper Constable, John Carnahan, John Caplin, John Conner, Isaac Miller, William Miller, Albert Moon, John Osborn, George W. Osborn, John A. Peacock and Oliver Van Plet.

Dr. M. H. Fisher, of New Vienna, was assistant surgeon of the Fifty-sixth Regiment, and died at Helena, Arkansas, in February, 1863. The Fifty-ninth Regiment had among its members several men from this county.

THE SIXTY-FIRST OHIO REGIMENT.

The Sixty-first Regiment was organized at Camp Chase on April 23, 1862, Company E being commanded by Capt. John N. Fallis, of Wilmington. The regiment was first sent to the Army of the Potomac, participating in the second battle of Bull Run, and other engagements, including Chancellorsville, in the early part of May, 1863, and Gettysburg, in July. In September it was transported to the Army of the Cumberland, along with the Twelfth Corps, and reached Bridgeport, Alabama, on October 1. It engaged in the operations around Chattanooga, and, in March, 1864, its men re-enlisted as veterans and were ordered to Ohio on a thirty days' veteran furlough. The regiment reached Chattanooga on its return on May 5, and joined the main forces at Rocky Face Ridge on the 7th, when the Atlanta campaign began. The regiment was assigned to the Third Brigade, First Division, Twentieth Army Corps, under Major-General Hooker. It took part in the various movements of the corps during the operations around Atlanta, and joined in the "march to the sea," afterward tramping through the Carolinas and Virginia. At Goldsboro, North Carolina, the regiment was consolidated with the Eighty-second Ohio, the latter number being retained by the combined organization. The new body was finally discharged about the first of September, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio, when but about sixty of the officers and men of the old Sixty-first Regiment remained to answer the final roll-call. The roster of Company E of the Sixty-first, which was organized by Capt. Charles A. Leiter, shows the men to be Clinton county residents: First lieutenant, John N. Fallis; sergeants, Richard P. Woodruff (promoted sergeant-major), Joseph K. Trindall and David H. Shutt; corporals, Mordecai Rabb (died in service), James A. Ralston, Samuel Grooms, Francis M. Styer, James Marshall (died in service), Lewis Tomlin and Nathaniel Tomlin; wagoner, Robert W. Jones; privates, John W. Albright (wounded), William Brewer, John Burton, Henry Collins, Bradley Conger, William E. Fox, Joel Frank, David Flower, Eli Gaskill, Thomas Hall, Jacob J. Johnson, Eli A. Jones, Wilson Jones, Archibald Job, John Lee, John B. Lindsay, William H. Morgan, Wesley Mart, Edwin D. Miles, John Myers, Lewis Miars, Joseph Mountijoy, Samuel Nicewander, Thomas Pennington, Chockley Reese, Elias Shriver (died in service), Daniel Seibert, Theodore W. Smith, Alexander Stevens, Jacob Thornsburry, John Tomlin, Alden Thomas (prisoner), Mulford Vandaran (promoted corporal), John G. Zearyel.

THE SEVENTY-FOURTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Seventy-fourth Regiment was organized with seven companies in October, 1861, at Xenia, Ohio. It proceeded to Camp Chase, near Columbus, where three full companies were added. On April 20, 1862, it was ordered to the field, reporting at Nashville on the 24th with nine hundred and seventy-eight men. In December, 1862, it was assigned to the Seventh Brigade, Eighth Division, Fourteenth Corps, Department of the Cumberland. It took part in the battle of Stone's River, where, out of three hundred and eighty men who went into the engagement, it lost one hundred and nine killed and wounded and forty-six prisoners. On the reorganization of the army at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, in February, 1863, the regiment was assigned to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, and assisted in doing guard duty on the fortifications during the stay at that place. It played a prominent part in the operations about Chattanooga. On January 1, 1864, most of the men re-enlisted as veterans, and, after the usual veteran furlough, returned to the front and participated in the Atlanta campaign, the march to the sea and the march through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington. The command was then sent with the western troops to Louisville, Kentucky, where, on July 10, the men were mustered out. The following men were members of Company K: Jasper Babb, James Berry, William Bowers, Robert Savage.

THE SEVENTY-NINTH OHIO REGIMENT.

The Seventy-ninth Regiment was organized under the call of July, 1862, in the military district composed of the counties of Warren, Clinton and Hamilton. It was mustered in at Camp Dennison by September 1, with nine companies, four of which came from Clinton county. The regiment was originally commanded by Col. Henry G. Kennett, who resigned on August 1, 1864, when the command devolved on Lieut.-Col. Azariah W. Doan. In September, 1862, the regiment proceeded to Cincinnati and from there to Louisville, Kentucky, where it was assigned to Gen. W. T. Ward's brigade. From Louisville, it went to Frankfort and from thence, in November, to Bowling Green, where it reported to General Rosecrans, at that time commanding General Buell's army. After a march of five hundred and fifty miles, it arrived at Gallatin, Tennessee, where the regiment was stationed from December 1, 1863. The following story of experiences of the Seventy-ninth is taken from Reid's history. It found station at Buck's Lodge, Lavergne, Edgefield and Nashville, "engaged in guarding railroads, supplies and breaking up bands of guerillas, on the Cumberland and Stone rivers. At Nashville, Company K (sharpshooters) joined the command, armed with Spencer rifles, and was a great acquisition to the regiment. On the 24th of February the Seventy-ninth, having been transferred from the Army of the Cumberland to the Eleventh Army Corps, then stationed in Lookout Valley, marched over the Cumberland mountains, in bad weather, over miserable roads, and reached the valley on the 19th day of March, having lost but one man. Active measures were at once inaugurated for the coming campaign, and all detailed men were ordered to rejoin the regiment. On the 2nd day of May, 1864, the regiment numbered six hundred effective men; but the strength was reduced by detailing Company I to division headquarters, where it remained on duty until the end of the war. In the reorganization of the army previous to the Atlanta campaign, the Seventy-ninth was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, Twentieth Army Corps, under General Hooker, an assignment that continued uninterrupted during the war.

"On the 2nd day of May, the armies in Lookout valley moved from their encampment on the enemy, concentrated in force at Dalton, Georgia. The Seventy-ninth was not engaged in the demonstration at Buzzard's Roost and Dug Gap, being in the reserve line; but after passing through Snake Creek Gap on the 13th and 14th, near Resaca, it skirmished the enemy, with considerable loss in killed and wounded. On the 18th of May, the Seventy-ninth was one of the five regiments that were ordered to assault a strong position held by the enemy on the road leading from Dalton to Resaca. The position was defended by artillery and infantry. The assaulting party was composed of about twenty-five hundred men under Gen. W. T. Ward. It approached within four hundred yards of the enemy's position under cover of a dense forest of pines. At a given signal, the troops rushed forward, amid a storm of grape, canister and musket balls, and, after hard fighting, carried the works, with the loss to the enemy of a number of prisoners, four pieces of artillery, and one thousand five hundred stands of small arms. This was the introduction of the regiment to a hand-to-hand fight with the foe, and the dead and wounded that lay thick before the face of the enemy's works, on the parapet and within, indicated as landmarks where the regiment had struggled for victory. The loss in this engagement was felt most severely on the enlisted men. There were no officers killed and but five wounded. The enemy retreated during the night, and was found next day at 'Gravelly Plateaux,' from which it was driven back early on Cassville. Here it made a more stubborn resistance, and again the Seventy-ninth was engaged, but with small loss. At Dallas, on the 25th day of May, the enemy was brought to bay, and the whole Twentieth Corps was hurled, again and again, against the lines, until one thousand six hundred men were lost by the corps. On the 27th of May, an advance was ordered, and the Seventy-ninth was one of the first to march. The movement was a success, but cost the regiment many lives. On the 28th, the enemy opened on the position of the regiment with artillery. On the same night, an attack was made along the whole line, but was repulsed. The Twentieth Army Corps was moved to the enemy's flank, and an attack was made on the 3rd day of June. This engagement was a severe test of firmness, as the regiment was exposed to the shell fire of the enemy in an open field without an opportunity of returning the fire. Another retreat by the enemy, and fighting was resumed at Pine Mountain. Skirmishing continued for some days, ascertaining the enemy's true position, and on the 15th an advance by the Twentieth Corps was ordered. On the evening of that day, the Seventy-ninth Ohio and the Seventieth Indiana were detached from the other troops, a swamp cutting off these two regiments from the main line. These regiments came upon the enemy, a desperate conflict ensued, and the enemy was driven at the point of bayonet within seventy yards of its main works. These two regiments attempted to carry the works of the enemy, but failed; yet they held, at heavy cost, the advantage they had gained, until night, when reinforcements came to the rescue. All night was occupied in an artillery duel and skirmishing. In the night the enemy retreated, and the following day was employed in skirmishing near Kenesaw."

Then followed the campaign about Atlanta. After this campaign the Seventy-ninth was a regiment in name, and not in numbers, having commenced the campaign with six hundred men, and numbering at the fall of Atlanta but one hundred and eighty-two. Its losses in one hundred days were four hundred and twenty-five men. It received sufficient recruits before the march to the sea began to swell its ranks to four hundred men. It suffered little loss on the march through South Carolina, but suffered severely before Averasboro and Bentonville in North Carolina. The men were mustered out, June 9, 1865, after the arrival of the victorious army in Washington, and on the 17th of the same month they were paid off and discharged at Camp Dennison.

The regimental officers were: Colonel, Azariah W. Doan, and adjutant, Rodney Foos.

Seaman, Ham. Shewalters, William A. Shepard, Allen Tremble, Lewis Ward.

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

Several men from this county enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Regiment, which was placed on duty guarding rebel prisoners at Johnson's Island, in Lake Erie.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT, OHIO NATIONAL GUARD.

The One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment of Ohio National Guard was organized and mustered into the service at Camp Dennison, May 8, 1864. It was composed of the Fifty-fifth Battalion, Ohio National Guards, of Clinton county, and the Twenty-seventh Regiment, Ohio National Guards, of Ross county. It was enlisted in the federal service for one hundred days and left Ohio for Baltimore, Maryland, May 11, 1864. It remained on duty at the various forts and stations about the city of Baltimore until May 29, when it was ordered to the eastern shore of Maryland and distributed at various points. From the history by Whitelaw Reid we find that "about the Fourth of July the regiment was ordered to Monocacy Junction, and on the evening of the 8th it took position on the extreme right of General Wallace's army, at the stone bridge, on the Baltimore and Frederick pike. Early in the forenoon of the 9th, the regiment's skirmish line was attacked, and the fight continued until late in the evening, when the regiment was compelled to fall back, though not until the left of the line had given way and the regiment was nearly surrounded. When a retreat was ordered, General Tyler, the brigade commander, directed the One Hundred and Forty-ninth to hold the bridge until the last extremity, in order to secure the safety of the army." In this engagement the regiment suffered the loss of about thirty killed and wounded and over one hundred prisoners. However, many of the latter were recaptured the next day by General Hunter's cavalry, at Frederick, and some made their escape; but when the regiment was mustered out, sixty-seven of its men were in rebel prisons, and some of them died there. After having seen more hard service than usually fell to the lot of hundred-day troops, the regiment returned to Ohio, August 20, 1864, and was mustered out. The roster follows: Captain, William C. Wilson; first lieutenant, James V. Rammels; second lieutenant, Newton Shoemaker; sergeants, Edwin Shockley, John M. Johnson, James J. Gregory, Edward P. Bond and George S. Haymee; corporals, George Lawhead, Henry Lieuellen, John Eachus, William T. Wheeler, Mahlon Russell, John Boring, John McWilliams, Robert R. Mitchell, Joseph Woodmancy and Daniel Penner; privates, Henry C. Aithy, George Brewer, Alfred Bloom, Griffin Baker, George Bloom, Joseph Boring, Henry Boring, John D. Clement, Nathan Cook, Martin Clevenger, George W. Canney, Franklin Craig (killed), James Curtis, Franklin Crick, James W. Campbell, Joseph Cottrell, James Dillon, Thomas Devers, Thomas Derby, Seneca Dennis, James Dabe, Squire Eachus, James V. Ellis, James H. THE ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment was organized and mustered into the service for one year at Camp Dennison, Ohio, October 11, 1864. It contained two companies from Clinton county, commanded by Capts. W. P. Wolf and A. F. Deniston.

This regiment was ordered to Columbia, Tennessee, where it performed post and garrison duty in the town, and was also engaged in guarding the Tennessee & Alabama railroad. In the advance of Hood, one of the regiment's outposts, south of Columbia, failing to receive orders, made a strong resistance, but was captured, while the remainder of the regiment fell back to Franklin. The One Hundred and Seventy-fifth was temporarily assigned to the Third Brigade, Third Division, Twenty-third Army Corps, and was placed on the left of the center in reserve. In one of the enemy's charges, a veteran regiment gave way in utter confusion, and, though the One Hundred and Seventy fifth had never been under fire, over an open field, it drove the rebels back, gained the works and held them, repelling charge after charge. In this engagement the regiment suffered heavily, losing one hundred and sixty-one officers and men killed, wounded and missing, among them Capt. W. B. Logan, a man universally esteemed as a Christian patriot. That night and the next day the regiment fell back to Nashville and took position in Ft. Negley, where it remained during the battle, and on the 25th of December was again ordered to Columbia, and engaged in the usual garrison duties and in guarding the railroad bridges. The regiment returned to Camp Dennison, Ohio, July 3, 1865, and was finally discharged and paid off July 13, 1865. When it entered the service it numbered nine hundred and forty-three men; upon its return its strength was five hundred and eighty-two men.

Company C—Sergeant, Hugh A. Gibson; Joseph T. Garner, John B. Lindsey, Dopey Lemen, Thomas Madden, John Madden.

Company G—Captain, William P. Wolf; first lieutenant, Isaac N. Bundy; first sergeant, John D. Deniston; sergeant, James M. Gustin; corporal, Ebenezer D. Leonard; musician, James Nicely; wagoner, Cortland C. Cusick; privates, James Boroughs, Thomas B. Baldwin, William H. Bryant, James M. Casto, Edward Crossen, Moris Greely, Lemuel Garrison, William W. Garrison, Henry Hudson, James Hudson, Nathan Lemons, Alvay Layman, Stacy Moris, Benjamin Monce, John Morris, Robert McKinney, William Morrow, William Oliver, William Rude, Isreal Sidles, John P. Stewart, Wilford Simpson, Phillip A. Shell, John G. Smith, Thomas Templin, Zachariah White.

MISCELLANEOUS REGIMENTS.

The One Hundred and Eightieth Regiment, recruited in the fall of 1864, for one year, also contained a number of men from Clinton county. Men from Clinton county were also found in the Fourteenth United States Colored Troops, the Fifteenth Regular Infantry, and the Third Missouri Regiment of United States Colored Troops, in which latter were Lieuts. J. B. Nickerson and Ewing Nickersham. In the cavalry, the Second and Eighth Ohio and Fourth United States had men in their ranks from this county, and others served in the Twenty-fourth Ohio Battery and the Second Heavy Artillery. A few were in the gunboat service on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

COMPANY A, SECOND VOLUNTEER HEAVY ARTLLERY.

Company A, of the Second Ohio Heavy Artillery, was mustered into the service, July 20, 1863, by Captain Proctor, to serve three years. By orders from the war department, it was mustered out August 23, 1865. Privates from Clinton county serving in this company were: George Brown, James Brown, Samuel W. Brown, Jonah Black, John Blair, William Bobbet, John Bernard, John W. Dewitt, J. D. Davis, Theodore Dumelin, A. W. Fletcher, Elisha Hilderbrant, John W. Hughes, Ephraim Hansel, David Hubbard, John W. Moon, W. F. McNeal, James H. Wickersham, Paul Williams, Hiram Villars.

Company D—Sergeants, Enoch Morris and Christian Cunny; Robert Barr, Addison Blizzard, Thomas Burns, Isaac Beckett, John Crawford, James Forendyce, Stephen J. McKinney, George Nolder.

Company H—Corporals, James W. Morris, Ezekiel East, Micajah Jones and John W. Vennard; John W. Dakin, John F. Dennis, Elwood Reese, Benjamin Roberts, George Shields, Amos Williams.

TWENTY-FOURTH OHIO INDEPENDENT BATTERY.

The Twenty-fourth Ohio Battery was organized at Camp Dennison, August 4, 1863, to serve three years. It was mustered out June 24, 1865. Enlistments from Clinton county were as follow: Joseph Campbell, Jackson Campbell, William F. Elliott, Wyatte Fenner, William Holladay, Henry C. Hunter (promoted corporal), Thomas F. Hudson, Lewis Hudson, Peter Kelso, William L. Pegan.

COLORED TROOPS FROM CLINTON COUNTY.

Robert Hart, James Hart, Peter Hart, John Hart, Henry Taylor, William Harrison, Wesley Hightower, James P. Hightower, William Dinimory, James Mayes, David Wood, Gaston Good, Nathan Stewart, A. G. Mallory, M. E. Mallory, William Mallory, John Paine, William Hargrave, James Bishop, James Chadwell, Vase Wilkins, John Hargrave, David Adams, Alfred Mayes, Charles Chapman, J. R. Robinson, Orlando Hightower.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Others from Clinton county who saw service in the various branches of the nation's fighting force were James Whitsel, Sylvester Clark, John Harris, Joseph Woodruff, D. R. Simpson, W. Conner, Jr., J. A. Covat, Joseph L. Garner, A. F. Deniston, W. M. Dugan, Joshua Fisher, W. B. Fisher, George Gurton, J. H. Holliday, Lewis A. Hamlin, J. D. Moore, W. H. Oliver, R. D. Shields, George Newton, James Spencer, Junius Carpenter, Hamilton Shewalter, Col. George Zeigler, Henry Long, David L. Way (captain Fifth United States Infantry), M. C. Robinson, David H. Wright.

CHAPTER VIII.

COURTS AND LAWYERS OF CLINTON COUNTY.

The first Constitution of the state of Ohio, which was adopted on November 29, 1802, provided that the judicial power of the state, both as to matters of law and equity, should be "vested in a supreme court, in a court of common pleas for each county, in justices of the peace, and in such other courts as the Legislature may from time to time establish. The supreme court consisted of three judges, any two constituting a quorum, and had originally an appellate jurisdiction, both in common law and chancery, in such cases as were directed by law. It was provided that the General Assembly might, if it chose, appoint another supreme judge after five years from the adoption of the Constitution, in which case the judges were to divide the state into two circuits, and any two of them were authorized, in such case, to hold court. The courts of common pleas consisted each of a president and not more than three nor less than two associate judges, all to reside in their respective districts (or counties) during their terms of office. Any three of the judges constituted a quorum. The court had common law and chancery jurisdiction in all cases such as were directed by law, the Legislature having power to increase the number of circuits and presidents after five years. Judges of supreme courts and courts of common pleas had complete criminal jurisdiction in such cases and in such manner as pointed out by law. Courts of common pleas in each county had jurisdiction of all probate and testamentary matters, granting administration, the appointment of guardians, etc. Judges of common pleas courts had, within their respective counties, the same powers as judges of the supreme courts to issue writs of certiorari to justices of the peace and cause their proceedings to be brought before them. Judges of the supreme court were conservators of the peace throughout the state. Presidents of courts of common pleas were conservators of the peace in their respective districts, and judges of the same held the same position in their respective counties. All judges were appointed by joint ballot of both houses of the General Assembly, to hold office seven years "if so long they behave well." They were to be reasonably paid, but could at the same time hold no other office of profit or trust under the authority of the state of Ohio or the United States. Each court had power to appoint its own clerk for the term of seven years, the judges to certify that they considered him well qualified for the position. The judges also had the power to remove their clerks for breach of good behavior.

The supreme court was to be held at least once a year in each county, and the common pleas court in their respective counties at such times and places as prescribed by law. A competent number of justices of the peace were elected by the qualified electors in each township of the several counties, to hold office three years, with powers and duties as prescribed by law.

An act, passed February 7, 1831, provided that the supreme court should consist of four judges, having precedence according to the dates of their commissions. The same act provided that the common pleas court should consist each of a president and three associate judges, with powers as defined in said act.

A new Constitution of Ohio, adopted June 17, 1851, vested the judicial power of the state in a supreme court, in district courts, courts of common pleas, courts of probate, justices of the peace, "and in such other courts, inferior to the supreme court, in one or more counties, as the General Assembly may from time to time establish." The supreme court consisted of five judges, of which a majority formed a quorum or had power to render a decision. This court had original jurisdiction in quo warranto, mandamus, habeas corpus and procedendo, and such appellate jurisdiction as was provided by law. The supreme judges were chosen by the electors of the state at large. The Constitution provided that it should hold at least one term each year at the seat of government, and such other terms there or elsewhere as provided by law. By the Constitution, the state was divided into nine common pleas districts. Each outside of Hamilton county, consisted of three or more counties, divided into three parts, bounded by county lines, and as nearly equal in population as practicable, each division having one judge of the common pleas court residing therein, chosen by the electors of said sub-division. Courts of common pleas were held in every county in the district as often as provided by law—more than one court, or sitting thereof, being allowed in each district at the same time. The jurisdiction of courts of common pleas and their judges was fixed by law. District courts were composed of the judges of the courts of common pleas in their respective districts, with one of the judges of the supreme court. Any three constitute a quorum, and such courts had to be held at least once a year in each county—or, as the Assembly might provide, at least three times at three separate places in each district, if not expedient to hold in each county. The original jurisdiction of the district court was the same as that of the supreme court, with such appellate jurisdiction as provided by law. The probate court was a court of record, "open at all times, and holden by one judge, elected by the voters of the county, who shall hold his office for the term of three years, and shall receive such compensation, payable out of the county treasury, or by fees, or both, as shall be provided by law." This court had jurisdiction in probate and testamentary matters the appointment of administrators and guardians, the settlement of accounts, of executors, administrators and guardians, and "such jurisdiction in habeas corpus, the issuing of marriage licenses, and for the sale of land by executors, administrators and guardians, and such other jurisdiction, in any county or counties, as may be provided by law." Justices of the peace were provided to be elected, to serve three years each. All judges, other than provided for by the Constitution, had to be elected by the electors of the judicial districts for which they might be created, to serve not longer than five years.

One supreme judge was elected each year, to serve five years. Common pleas judges had to reside in the respective districts from which they were chosen, and their term was five years. When vacancies occurred, they were filled by gubernatorial appointment until after the next regular election. The clerk of common pleas court in each county was ex officio clerk of all other courts of record held in the county.

Under the new Constitution of 1912, the judicial system of the state was materially changed. Subsequent statutory legislation has established the jurisdiction of the various inferior courts.

FIRST COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

By an act of the Legislature organizing courts, passed February 19, 1852, the nine common pleas districts were apportioned into five judicial circuits, Clinton county being in he first. From the minutes of the proceedings of the court of common pleas at some of its earlier sessions, we make copious extracts. The first meeting of this court was held in the barn of Jesse Hughes (though the records say at the house), who lived about two miles southeast of the spot where the court house now stands. The following is the record:

"At a special meeting of the Court of Common Pleas held at the house of Jesse Hughes, on the 28th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1810: Present, the Hon. Francis Dunlavy, Esq., presiding Judge; Jesse Hughes, Thomas Hinkson, Esq., associates. (Peter Burr, the third Associate Judge, was not present.) Appointed Warren Sabin, Clerk, pro tempore, to the aforesaid court. Robert Eachus was appointed Recorder of said county by the Associates present. The court adjourned (Sine die) without day."

The other officers of this court were Jonathan Harlan, sheriff, and David McMillan, coroner. It appears that Judge Dunlavy, who resided in Warren county, was present only to complete a quorum, as he did not assist in making the appointments mentioned. A special session was held at the same place, May 16, 1810, when there were present the three associate judges, Peter Burr, Jesse Hughes and Thomas Hinkson. It was agreed that, in the matter of commission of the judges, Peter Burr should stand first, Jesse Hughes, second, and Thomas Hinkson, last. James McManis was appointed director to take charge of the business concerning the county seat, with instructions. The court opened the report of the commissioners appointed to locate a seat of justice for Clinton county, and adjourned to the next day (May 17), when it was again convened; but the director could not make his reports, and court adjourned. The court next met in special session, May 25, 1810, when all the associates were present; but, as the directors failed to put in an appearance, the adjournment was had until the following day, at which time the report of the director was received, and the bonds of David Faulkner and Joseph Doan, donating lands for a site for a county seat, were examined.

FIRST GRAND JURY.

The first grand jury in the county was impaneled for the term of court held in June, 1810, and was composed of the following persons, as the record shows: John Mitchell, foreman, Thomas Jones, Jacob Hale, Isaac Harvey, Caleb Harvey, William Haynes, John Wilson, James Wilson, Jesse Dillon, Ezekiel Frazer, Timothy Bennet, Mahlon Haworth, William Townsend, William Walker and Nathan Linton. These men received seventy-five cents each for their services, and found only one indictment, which was against Cornelius Quick, for horse stealing. The indictment was returned June 19, 1810, and Quick was placed on trial the next day. Joshua Collett, afterward president judge, and still later a judge of the supreme court, conducted the prosecution for the state, while the counsel for the defense was Thomas Freeman, of Lebanon, a criminal lawyer of some note. The jury before which the case was tried was composed of Francis Hestor, Robert Athey, David Fairfield, Daniel Linton, Daniel Moon, James Crawford, Jonah Vandervort, William Ireland, Joseph Wilson, Jesse Greene, William Hoblitt and John Stout, who found the defendant guilty as indicted. The defense moved for a new trial, which was granted, and on the 17th of the ensuing October the case came up again, with the same counsel as before. The jury at this time was made up of David Wright, Daniel Hodgson, William Butler, Charles Mann, George Haworth, Joseph Haines, Simeon Ballard, John McKinzey, Thomas Gillam, Peter Dicks, Thomas McMillan and Daniel Dillon. The defendant was again found guilty, and the damages in favor of the prosecuting witness, James Doherty (or Daugherty) were assessed at two dollars and twenty-five cents, an order being issued against the defendant for the amount of his fine and costs of prosecution. A motion was made on behalf of the defendant to arrest judgment, but this was overruled, the court sentenced the thief to receive fifty stripes on his naked back, on Saturday, the 27th of June, 1810, at two o'clock in the afternoon, and to pay a fine of twenty dollars and costs; also to be imprisoned for ten days—Daugherty to recover of him the amount of the damage allowed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smart, widow of Judge Hugh Smart, of Greenfield, was a daughter of Judge Hughes, at whose house, or rather barn, Quick's trial was had. She had a clear and distinct remembrance of the affair. During the trial, the defendant was confined to an apple tree, which was near by, by a log chain. After the verdict was rendered, Quick requested the sheriff, Jonathan Harlan, to retire with him for a moment. This seemed reasonable and it obtained a ready consent. As they walked away, he manifested considerable more nimbleness than had been noticed before. He gained distance on the sheriff, little by little, until a step or two in advance was secured, when he bounded away like a deer and in a moment was beyond successful pursuit. This was the nearest approach to a public whipping for crime ever attained in this county. The actors in that scene have passed away from earth, and the story lives only in the record or the memory of those to whom it has been told. It is, therefore, fitting to give it a prominent place in this volume.

The same day Quick was first tried, June 20, 1810, the court appointed Nathan Linton county surveyor. The following day witnessed the appointment of Peter Burr to the position of county clerk, to fill a vacancy. On the same day Faulkner and Doan executed their deeds to the county for land on which to locate the county seat, and the director was ordered to lay out a town on said land, sell all the odd-numbered lots at a credit of one-third the purchase price in six months, one-third in twelve months, and one-third in eighteen months, the purchaser giving bond with approved security; sale to be advertised in the Chillicothe and Lebanon papers. On September 10, 1810, the session of the court of common pleas was held, according to the record, at the "temporary seat of justice for Clinton county." George McManis took the oath of office as associate judge, in place of Peter Burr, resigned. The court ordered the director, James McManis, to immediately advertise the remainder of the lots "yet unsold in the town of Armenia (formerly Clinton)," in the Western Star, Liberty Hall, and Scioto Gazette, and by written advertisements wherever he might think proper, and sell said lots at public auction, on the first Monday in the following November, 1810, continuing the sale from day to day until all were offered for sale, giving credit of six, twelve and eighteen months, on separate notes, for each of three equal payments, discounting eight per cent. for cash at time of purchase. The director was also authorized to postpone the sale of any lot or lots if he thought they were not bringing what they were worth. The court ordered that the new town be called Armenia, in place of Clinton, and appointed James Wilson to fill the office of county commissioner, caused by the resignation of George McManis. The director, for his services in connection with county seat matters up to date, was allowed the sum of one hundred and twenty-eight dollars and twenty-five cents.

On October 16, 1810, the last will and testament of John Jackson, deceased, was proved, and letters testamentary ordered to be issued. Absalom Reed, Joseph Grice and Thomas Draper were appointed to appraise the personal estate of the deceased. December 31, 1810, the court ordered that the name of the county seat be changed from Armenia to Mt. Pleasant, by request of donors. On February 19, 1811, James Birdsall and Walter Armstrong applied for and were granted tavern licenses. On February 20, 1811, it was ordered that the name of the county seat be changed to Wilmington, and that no further alteration should be made in the name without being authorized by an act of the Legislature. On June 4, 1811, Larkin Reynolds was granted license to keep a tavern in the town of Wilmington. At the June term of the court in this year, it "adjourned to meet in Wilmington" in the following October, and, on the 7th of that month, it met at the house of John McGregor, that being the first term held at the new county seat. On October 10, 1811, the following licenses were granted by the court: To Ferguson and Morris, to keep a store in the town of Wilmington; to Warren Sabin, to keep a tavern in Wilmington, and to Asa Holcomb, to "sell foreign merchandise in the town of Wilmington." On February 4, 1812, the last will and testament of John Sanders, deceased, was proved, and letters testamentary ordered to be issued. Same date, license was granted to James Birdsall to keep a tavern in the town of Oakland; to William Biggs, to keep a tavern on the state road leading from College township to Chillicothe. On October 5, 1812, letters testamentary granted in the estate of John Leonard, Sr., deceased. Same to the estate of James Wright, deceased. On February 2, 1813, licenses to keep a tavern were granted to James Birdsall and William Biggs. Asa Holcomb's store license was renewed on February 3, 1813.

The first session of the supreme court in Clinton county was "held at the house of Jesse Hughes," in said county, October 15, 1810, "before the Hon. Ethan Allen Brown, William W. Irvin, Esqs., Judges." Present, Jonathan Harlan, Esq., Sheriff. "The court, being opened, proceeded to appoint a clerk pro tem., whereupon, Allen Wright being appointed, gave bond, conditioned as the law directs, wherein James Birdsall and Jonathan Harlan were his sureties, and the court, being satisfied therewith, proceeded to administer the oath of office, which was taken according to law. The business transacted at this session was simply to receive and place on record several petitions for the division of certain lands. The next record is that of a term of the supreme court "held at the town of Wilmington, in and for the county of Clinton, on the 10th day of September, in the year of our Lord, 1812," when there were present the Hon. Thomas Scott and William W. Irvin, judges. The cases brought up at the first term were at this one, two years afterward, considered and decided. At the May term in 1813 (same judges present) several divorce suits were brought and continued. Matthias Corwin, Jr., and Samuel H. Hale were examined and admitted to practice at this term of court as attorneys and counselors-at-law in the state of Ohio. At the May term in 1814 the divorce cases of the foregoing term were dismissed with costs to petitioners—in each case the wife. At the same term, Daniel Radcliff was admitted to practice. On May 6, 1816, Isaiah Morris was appointed clerk of the supreme court, and Francis Dunlavy was authorized to practice law in the courts of Ohio.

STORY OF A MURDER.

The early records of this court contain numerous records and cases of assault and battery, divorce, trespass, etc., and one murder case, the history of which is here given as it is found in the Harlan manuscript, written many years ago:

"It is now more than sixty years ago [now about one hundred] since Peter Peyton and his wife, people of color, came out from Fluvanna county, Virginia, and, having crossed the Ohio, settled in the southwest corner of Clinton county, near the head of Stone Lick creek, in the said county and about a mile southeast of where Blanchester now stands, on John Peyton's survey No. 1174, of one thousand acres. Their motive for coming to this wilderness, so far removed from people of their color and condition, must have been strong, indeed, to have induced them to undertake the venture. So it was. It was to get beyond the rigorous slave laws of the state of Virginia, and to enter into possession of the survey of land above mentioned, to which they had been informed they had, with others of their master's slaves, a good and sufficient title, under the will of the original proprietor, John Peyton, their former master, who had served as captain three years in the American army during the Revolution, in the Virginia line of constitutional establishment. For these services he was entitled to a military warrant for four thousand acres of land, and this quantity of land had been entered and surveyed for him in four surveys of one thousand acres each. One of these surveys lay in Kentucky, in the tract of country lying on the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers; two on the waters of Paint creek, in what is now Jefferson township, Fayette county, Ohio, southwest of South Solon, Madison county. One of these two surveys was patented to Captain Peyton in his lifetime, and the other after his death was patented to John Duncan, Howell Lewis, Langham Duncan and Robert Peyton Duncan, as his devisees, as was also the survey on Stone Lick before mentioned.

"Captain Peyton was the owner of a number of slaves and a large landed estate. He was termed a bachelor, but there seems to have been for many years a morganatic marriage between himself and a Mrs. Duncan, his housekeeper, and he is said to have been the father of the Duncan family. In the latter part of his life he made a will, most in favor of these children and their mother; but he also emancipated Peter Peyton and his wife, and provided for a like boon for his other slaves as they should arrive at a certain age, probably forty years, respectively. He also set aside one of his Ohio surveys for his black people, without designating, however, the one intended for them, and directed that, as each should arrive at the age at which he was to be free, he should be entitled to a lot of this survey of a given number of acres, probably forty. Peter and his wife, under the provision of the will, secured their freedom, and aimed to secure their lands, with what success remains to be told. Captain Peyton's will was so drawn that, instead of securing freedom to each slave on arriving at a certain age, fixed by the will, they were sold into slavery at a distance, and the lands designated for their homes were parceled out among those for whom they were not intended. Soon after Captain Peyton's death, the younger slaves, who had not yet arrived at the age at which they were to be free, were sold without limitation as to the duration of the servitude. Seeing the drift of things, Peter Peyton and wife started on foot for Ohio. They arrived at Stone Lick creek, on the Peyton survey, in the year 1814, as is believed. Up to this time the whole survey was in a state of nature, heavily wooded, and, for months of each year, an unreclaimed swamp. Peyton immediately went about erecting a cabin, which was a small and rude structure, to live in, and preparing ground for a crop. The settlers were few, and were, in general, late arrivals, with wide reaches of swampy wood between their half-finished cabins.

"Early settlers are generally proverbial for kindness and reciprocation of rude but well-meant civilities. Peter Peyton thought his neighbors were of another kind. They did not like the color of Peter and his wife; they wanted white neighbors of none; they did not aid him in raising his house; they did not speak to him or of him civilly; they would not associate with 'niggers.' He claimed that they gave him personal abuse. On March 15, 1815, Peter, by Daniel F. Barney (a name unknown), his attorney, commenced suit against Samuel Batson (given Batson on the court record) and Isaac Daniels, laying his damages at one thousand dollars. On May 6, 1815, Mr. Barney unfolded the nature and magnitude of the case. His charge against them was that they assaulted, beat, wounded and illtreated him, so that his life was despaired of, and afflicted other injuries upon him to the damage of one thousand dollars. This, it was claimed, was done with staves, clubs, knives and dogs, and on the —— day of March, 1815. Process was served upon Batson May 16, 1815, and upon Batson and Daniels both May 16, 1815, by Joseph Roberds, sheriff of Clinton county. This suit abated in consequence of the death of Peyton.

"The grand jury at the February term, 1816, was composed as follows: Benjamin Farquhar, foreman, William Austin, Peter Lieurance, Jonathan Fallis, Thomas McMillan, William Stanton, George Richards, Abraham Hester, George Moon, Samuel Reed, David Evans, Owen West, John Wilson, James Haworth and Samuel Cox. They presented that, 'Robert Anderson, late of the township of Vernon, in the county aforesaid (Clinton), and John DeWitt, late of the same, not having the fear of God before their eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, on the 13th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1815, with force and arms, at the township aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, in and upon one Peter Peyton, a black man, in the presence of God and the state of Ohio, then and there being, feloniously, willfully, purposely, and of their deliberate and premeditated malice aforethought, did make an assault, and that the said Robert Anderson had a certain rifle gun, of the value of fifteen dollars, then and there loaded, and charged with gunpowder and one leaden bullet, which rifle gun, he, the said Robert Anderson, in his hands then and there had and held, to and against and upon the said Peter Peyton, a black man, then and there feloniously, willfully, purposely, and of his deliberate and premeditated malice aforethought, did shoot and discharge, and that the said Robert Anderson, with the leaden bullet aforesaid, out of the rifle gun aforesaid, then and there, by force of the gunpowder, shot and sent forth, as aforesaid, Peter Peyton, a black man, in and upon the back part of the head of him, the said Peter Peyton, a black man, then and there, with the leaden bullet aforesaid, out of the gun aforesaid, by the said Robert Anderson, so and aforesaid shot, discharged and sent forth, feloniously, and of his deliberate and premeditated malice aforethought, did strike, prostrate and wound, giving to the said Peter Peyton, a black man, then and there, with the leaden bullet aforesaid, so as aforesaid shot, discharged and sent forth out of the rifle gun aforesaid, by the said Robert Anderson, in and upon the back part of the head of him, the said Peter Peyton, a black man, one mortal wound of the depth of six inches, and of the breadth of half an inch, of which said mortal wound the aforesaid Peter Peyton, a black man, then and there instantly died; and that the aforesaid John DeWitt then and there feloniously, willfully, purposely, and of his deliberate and premeditated malice aforethought, was present, aiding, helping, assisting, abetting, comforting, counseling, procuring and maintaining the said Robert Anderson, the felony and murder aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, to do and commit; and so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say that the said Robert Anderson and John DeWitt, the said Peter Peyton, a black man, then and there, in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously, willfully, purposely, and of their deliberate and premeditated malice aforethought, did kill and murder contrary to the form of statute of the state of Ohio, in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state of Ohio.

"'J. COLLETT, P. C. C.'"

"At a court of common pleas holden at Wilmington, in the county of Clinton and the state of Ohio, on the 6th day of February, 1816, before the Hon. Francis Dunlavy, president, and Jesse Hughes, Thomas Hinkson and George McManis, his associate of the court of common pleas of the county aforesaid, the jury was impaneled. On the 6th day of May, 1816, before the Hon. Ethan A. Brown and Jessup N. Couch, Esqs., judges of the supreme court of the state of Ohio, assigned to keep the peace, etc., came as well as the said John DeWitt in his own proper person, as William R. Cole, Esq., who prosecutes for the state of Ohio in their behalf. Whereupon the said John DeWitt, by Thomas Freeman, Esq., his attorney, who moves the court here that he (DeWiitt) be discharged for the reasons following, towit:

"'Because, first, this court has no jurisdiction to try the defendant; second, the court of common pleas, at the term of February, 1816, had no power or authority to indict the defendant in manner as they have done, they having first, at a called court, in November, 1815, committed him to prison, to be tried in the supreme court; third, no legal jury can be made in this court to try him; fourth, the prosecutor has not summoned a grand or traverse jury to attend this court, either to indict or try the defendant on said charge. For these causes and others that may be urged, the defendant moves as above he has moved the court. Thomas Freeman, attorney for defendant, May 7, 1816.'

"'Whereupon, all and singular the premises being seen and by the said supreme court now here fully understood, it is considered and ordered by the court that the said John DeWitt do take nothing by his motion aforesaid, but that the said be overruled.'

"Afterward, in the same term of May, the defendant, DeWitt, by his attorney, moved the court to quash the indictment. After hearing the reasons and arguments of counsel: 'But because the court will advise themselves of and upon the premises before they give their judgment thereon, day is given as well to the said William R. Cole, Esq., who, etc., as to the said John DeWitt, here at Wilmington, until the 12th day of May next to hear their judgment thereon, because the court now here thereof not yet, etc.' The defendant (DeWitt) was therefore remanded to the jail of Clinton county. At the May term (May 12), 1817, of the supreme court of the state of Ohio, before the Hon. Ethan A. Brown and John McLean, Esqs., judges of the supreme court of the state of Ohio, the case was continued until May 9, 1818. At the May term, 1818, the prosecuting attorney, William R. Cole, entered a nolle prosequi in the case."

(See Supreme Court Record No. 2, Clinton County, for the foregoing facts, and for the proceedings on the trial of Samuel Batson on a similar charge, pages 6 to 11, inclusive.)

"Samuel Batson, on November 23, 1815, executed his sealed note to Thomas Freeman for two hundred dollars, payable in six months. (See Second Common Pleas Court Record, Clinton County, Ohio.)

"Peter Peyton was living in his house when killed. He was forcibly taken to the woods, not far from his house, and there shot from behind by DeWitt. He resisted capture to the last, but was overpowered and tied. The place of his death is still shown. His former residence was on a lot adjoining the farm of Peter Rude, on Stone Lick. Peyton's wife had no children. She was kidnaped by DeWitt, Batson and others, the murderers of her husband, and then offered for sale; but, being somewhat old, a purchaser could not be readily found. At length she was offered for sale to a man whose wife suspected that all was not right. She inquired as to the kinds of work the old colored woman could do, and refused to buy without having an exposition of her skill. This was consented to. In the kitchen the black woman was questioned closely, and thereupon told the story of the murder of her husband and the kidnaping of herself. DeWitt was arrested, but on his way to the jail, feigned to have a falling fit, and fell from his horse. This caused an abatement of vigilance on the part of his guard, so that he was able to escape, and he was never afterward arrested."

THE EARLY JUDGES.

The courts of the county have been traced from their establishment on through the successive changes, and now attention is turned from the offices to the officers who served these courts, and also the active lawyers who served in these courts.

A. H. Dunlevy, of Warren county, Ohio, in a letter written in 1875 upon "Wilmington Sixty Years Ago," published in the Wilmington Journal, speaks thus of matters pertaining to the early courts and bars:

"The scenes which I witnessed at Wilmington in the spring of 1815, the first time I visited it, are all passed away. The few inhabitants then dwelling there are probably all gone, and a new people occupy their places. Isaiah Morris, who then lived there, was clerk of the court, an office which he filled subsequently, for over twenty years. Francis Dunlavy was presiding judge; Peter Burr, Jesse Hughes and Thomas Hinkson, if my recollection is correct, were the associate judges, and William R. Cole, who settled here in 1812, was prosecuting attorney. He was the successor in that office of James Montgomery, who came to Wilmington in 1810, and removed to Fayette county in 1813. He was the first member of the bar in Wilmington, Mr. Hale the second member, and Mr. Cole the third member. Court was held in a log house near the site, or on the same spot, where the court house now stands. * * * Samuel H. Hale (who lived to be the oldest member of the Miami or Scioto bar) purchased the Western Star in 1809 from Nathaniel McLean and sold out two years afterward, removing to Wilmington. Benjamin Hinkson commenced practice in 1820. * * * Wilmington was almost the only place where the Miami and Scioto bars met at the courts, and it being then customary for lawyers to ride the circuit almost as regularly as the presiding judge, it was an occasion of great interest to see the members of both bars together, and frequently testing their legal knowledge and powers of advocacy before the same tribunal. The late William Creighton was one of the ablest of the Scioto bar, and Richard Douglas, or "Dick" Douglas as he was usually called, was more noted for his ready wit than for his legal talent, though I believe a good lawyer. Both were from Chillicothe, and frequently in attendance upon the Wilmington courts, and there they met John Alexander, of Xenia, and Thomas Corwin, Thomas Ross and others, of Lebanon, and, in early times, Thomas Morris and O. T. Fishback, of Williamsburg, then the county seat of Clermont. William R. Cole came to the Wilmington bar, as near as I can recollect, about 1812, and remained over twenty years."

Judge Francis Dunlavy (spelled by other members of the family Dunlevy), the first presiding judge of the district which included what is now Clinton county, resided in Warren county, near Lebanon. Judge Harlan said of him: "He was born near Winchester, Virginia, about 1761 or 1762. At the age of fourteen years he entered the army of the Revolution as a substitute for a man with a large family. He served in several campaigns, mostly against the Indians. In the summer of 1778 he assisted in building Ft. McIntosh, on the bank of the Ohio river, a few miles below Pittsburgh. This was the first American fort north of the Ohio river. In May, 1782, he was with the unfortunate expedition from the Ohio and Washington county, Pennsylvania, under command of Colonel Crawford, to destroy the Delaware and Wyandot towns on the Sandusky river. Mr. Dunlavy and two others escaped from the field of the defeat and made their way safely through the woods to Ft. Pitt. Without having studied law or having been called to the bar, he was elected by the General Assembly of Ohio, at its first session, in December, 1803, president judge of the first judicial circuit of Ohio; yet he held the office for fourteen years, or until 1817. He rose by the successive steps of schoolmaster, member of the Territorial Legislature, and member of the first constitutional convention of Ohio, to the important position. He was forty-one years of age when elected to the office of judge. Strictly honest, he had no motive to do wrong and every motive to do right. He had a quick perception, a clear and logical understanding. He must on the bench, at least first, have keenly felt his want of legal study and the technical knowledge of proceedings in a court of justice. With these he never became familiar, but must have overcome them to a certain extent. We have slender means of knowing how he performed his judicial duties, but we may infer from his great good sense and love of justice among men that he was able to arrive at the justice of the case brought before him. In qualifying himself for the discharge of his duties, he was aided by an excellent education. Immediately after his election, he began earnestly the study of law. Being of quick and solid parts, he soon acquired a fair amount of legal knowledge, which, turned to good account, enabling him to decide debated points with general accuracy and to detect the sophistry of attorneys who had given their days and nights to the study of Bacon, Blackstone and Coke. He was admitted to the practice of law at the May, 1816, term of the supreme court of Ohio."

Peter Burr, Jesse Hughes and Thomas Hinkson were the first associate judges, as has been previously mentioned.

Peter Burr immigrated to this country in 1798. Judge Burr was a justice of the peace in Warren county before the establishment of Clinton county. He was one of the two members of the House of Representatives from Warren county in the fourth and fifth sessions of the General Assembly, serving with Matthias Corwin on each occasion. After serving in the capacity of associate judge for about three months, a vacancy occurred in the office of clerk of the court of common pleas for the county and he was appointed to fill it, first by a pro tem. appointment, June 21, 1810, and afterward for the full term of seven years, June 4, 1811. In 1814 he was elected clerk of the supreme court. He died holding both of these offices. Judge Burr had not the qualification for the office of clerk. He wrote a poor hand, and was wholly unacquainted with the substance and forms of the simplest legal entry. He was a surveyor and was often appointed by the county commissioners to survey the proposed routes for new roads. Judge Burr died on August 8, 1816.

Jesse Hughes was born January 22, 1767, and came to this county, originally, from Berkeley county, Virginia. His early life was spent in Indian warfare and early pioneer life characteristic to the settlers of that date. He was re-elected to the office of associate judge three successive times, serving twenty-eight years in all. It is not supposed that Judge Hughes, owed his elevation to the bench to his knowledge of law, for he made no pretentions to legal learning. He owed far more to his high moral character, good sense and unimpeachable integrity.

Thomas Hinkson was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, in 1772. Mr. Hinkson also accompanied many expeditions against the Indians and gained some valuable experiences which enabled him to deal with his fellow men. He was elected to the office of justice of the peace of Highland county and served until 1810. He was a farmer and also store keeper by trade and had no actual knowledge of law when he took his office as associate judge. Mr. Hinkson removed to Indiana in 1821.

George McManis was successor to Judge Burr. He took his seat upon the bench, September 10, 1810. Before this he had served the county as commissioner, which office he was still holding at the time of his election to the judgeship. Judge McManis was born in Philadelphia, March 16, 1766. He came to this part of the state in the spring of 1808. He served the county two terms on the bench, from 1810 to 1824. Judge Hughes died March 16, 1826.

Aaron Sewell was elected, in 1817, by the General Assembly of Ohio one of the associate judges of Clinton county to fill the vacancy on the bench occasioned by the expiration of the term of Judge Thomas Hinkson. He was elected in 1824, and again in 1831; whole term, twenty-one years. Mr. Sewell was born in Loudon county, Virginia, August 27, 1774. In 1814 Judge Sewell was elected justice of the peace for Vernon township. The office was one of great dignity at that time and was generally bestowed upon the most substantial citizens. In conversation, Judge Sewell was not a many of many words, but he expressed his ideas clearly, sensibly and candidly. His integrity was beyond question and his moral character unblemished. He died January, 1842.

Benjamin Hinkson was born in Cynthiana, Kentucky. He immigrated to Clinton county with his father, Judge Thomas Hinkson. He became deputy clerk of the court for Fayette county. He was admitted to the bar and began the practice of law in Wilmington in 1820, which he continued until elected secretary of state for Ohio, in 1834. In 1836 he was elected president judge of the court of common pleas for the judicial district composed of the counties of Clinton, Warren, Butler and Greene. At the close of his term of seven years as judge, he resumed for a time the practice of law, but his interests returned to the farm and, in 1852, he retired from the law field and engaged in stock raising. Dr. A. Jones, who knew Judge Hinkson intimately, spoke of him in these terms: When he first appeared in court, at the age of twenty-one, he was modest, courteous and gentlemanly. We have met but few men, perhaps none, who possessed a higher sense of honor, a greater veneration for truth, than did Judge Hinkson. Untruth and insincerity had no abiding place in his mind or heart; benevolent, generous and kind, he was ever ready and willing to aid the needy. In March, 1877, Judge Hinkson died of paralysis, in the seventy-eighth year of his age.

The preceding were the early judges of the district, all prominent as pioneers and members of the judiciary. Our sturdy settlers seem to have been of the opinion that good character, sound sense and judgment, and unimpeachable integrity were qualifications quite sufficient to enable a judge to do justice between man and man in general, and if these were known to be possessed by the judge, no others were deemed necessary. How far in error were they? The schoolmaster, without a knowledge of technical law, generally found means to arrive at the justice of the case brought before him, and those without previous study of law were seldom at a loss to find law to support the right and were seldom able to see any to sustain wrong. They lived in times which many of this generation seem to regard as only once removed from barbarism. This is a great mistake. Where could be found men of better walk and conversation than Judge Hughes, Judge McManis and Judge Sewell? Or, ascending to a higher rank of judges, examine the moral standing of Judge Dunlavy, of Judge Collett and of Judge McLean—everyone a Christian gentleman.

EARLY MEMBERS OF THE BAR.

The first lawyer to settle in Clinton county was James Montgomery. He was first licensed to practice law at Lebanon in 1803, at the first term of the supreme court in Warren county. His name appears on the records of our courts for the first time at the fall term of the common pleas court, October 18, 1810. On that day the court appointed Mr. Montgomery to the office of prosecuting attorney for the county, at a salary of sixty dollars per year. During Mr. Montgomery's entire stay here he was without a rival, but he had by no means all of the business of the courts. Two reasons may be assigned for this. He may not have been a lawyer of great skill and talent, while several of the non-residents of the bar who practiced in this court were lawyers of great skill, legal talent, learning and ability. He probably left this county before 1813 as we find a record where he is called a citizen of Fayette county, in June, 1813.

The honor of being the second lawyer in this county is awarded by Judge Harlan, to W. R. Cole, while A. H. Dunlavy accords this honor to Samuel R. Hale. Both came to this county in the latter part of 1812.

William R. Cole was born in the city of New York, in 1780. He was reared and educated in Lexington, Kentucky. He was licensed to practice law by the supreme court at Cleveland, August 13, 1810. On the 5th day of October, 1812, Mr. Cole was elected by the court of common pleas to the office of prosecuting attorney. This position he held until the second Tuesday in October, 1834, when the office became elective by the people. Mr. Cole removed to Indiana in the month of April, 1837. He died April 10, 1847. A friend writing of him said, "He died in the ripeness of his intellect, and fullness of his Christian faith and hope."

Samuel R. Hale was born, February 14, 1787, in Randolph county, North Carolina. His father was a wagon-maker, in whose shop Samuel served until he had reached the age of twenty years. He had very little actual time for attending school, but he was a great reader, especially of historical and biographical facts. In 1810, he moved to Lebanon, made the acquaintance of Hon. John McLean, and commenced the study of law with him. The Western Star was published by this firm of McLean & Hale. Toward the close of 1812, Mr. Hale removed to Wilmington, bringing with him his young wife, whom he had married only a short time before, and started in the practice of law. Dr. Jones says: "The life of the advocate was too monotonous for his active temperament. Full of impulse and energy, he could not confine himself to the practice of law. He could not remain quiet and soon engaged in a multifarious trade. In the latter part of 1812 he opened a hotel in Wilmington and invested capital in a stock of goods and groceries. In 1813, he was elected to the General Assembly of Ohio, and in December of that year, when the Legislature met at Chillicothe, he took his seat as representative from Clinton county. He was very philanthropic, but was also very interested in the affairs of the town and county and contributed liberally to anything for the uplift of humanity—schools, churches and libraries. He again took his seat in the Legislature from 1822-25. He retired from public life after serving in the State Senate in 1828-29. After a long period of prosperity, he at last met reverses and lost his fortune."

Daniel Radcliff was born on the South branch of the Potomac river, in Maryland. He was admitted to the bar and licensed to practice law in Kentucky in 1812. Two years later he removed to Ohio and was licensed a second time. He followed his profession for several years. He served as county treasurer of Clinton county for eight years, and as justice of the peace for Union township from 1818 to 1829. He removed to Illinois in 1836.

David Linton was admitted to the bar in 1841. He afterward removed to the state of Kansas.

Franklin Corwin came to Wilmington in 1840. He was sent to the Ohio House of Representatives, and the district composed of Clinton, Greene and Fayette elected him to the Senate. He later removed to Illinois, where he took an active part in the politics of that state.

Samuel Buck was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, March 7, 1780. In 1799 he settled in Ohio, near Chillicothe, where he studied law. He was admitted to practice in Lancaster by Judges Irvin and Thomas Scott, in 1813. He came to Wilmington in 1827 from Hamilton, Butler county. He died in Greene county, October 27, 1862.

Carter B. Harlan was elected in 1834 to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Benjamin Hinkson as member of the Legislature of Ohio from Clinton county. Prior to this time he had been admitted to the bar. He was elected secretary of state of Ohio, and died during his term of office, while yet in his prime.

Griffith Foos resided in this county for twenty-three years. He was a printer and in 1829 was at the Wilmington bar. He served as prosecuting attorney from 1835-39. At one time Mr. Foos and R. B. Harlan, when in the midst of a trial of a case, found that the deposition of a person in Augusta, Kentucky, was necessary to its success. Mr. Foos agreed to hold the attention of the jury while Mr. Harlan went on horseback to Augusta, procured the deposition, and returned. This he did successfully until Mr. Harlan appeared inside the door of the court room on his return, when Mr. Foos said: "With these few remarks I close." Mr. Foos represented, in 1840-41, in the state Senate, the district composed of Clinton, Brown and Clermont counties. He died in Anamosa, Iowa, on September 12, 1857.

The following is a list of lawyers who practiced in the Clinton county court from 1810 to 1884. Those whose names are prefixed by a star are deceased:

1810, *James Montgomery; 1812, *William R. Cole; 1813, *Samuel H. Hale; 1814, *Daniel Radcliff; 1820, *Benjamin Hinkson; 1827, *Philip F. Crihfield, *Samuel Buck; 1828, *John Taaffe, *Thomas A. Armstrong; 1829, *Griffith Foos; 1832, *John Myer; 1834, *Carter B. Harlan; 1837, *Robert B. Harlan; 1838, *Michael H. Johnson; 1839, *Noah S. Haines, *William Fuller; 1840, *Franklin Corwin; 1841, *David Linton; 1843, *Frederick P. Lucas; 1844, *Ruel S. Beeson, James W. Denver; 1842, *William H. Baldwin; 1845, *Isaac S. Wright; 1846, *Grafton B. White; 1847, *David Harlan, *William B. Fisher; 1848, *Jehu Trimble; 1849, *Ethelbert C. Hibben, *Chilton A. White; 1850, *J. O. Felton; 1851, *Benajah W. Fuller, *William B. Telfair; 1853, *Azariah W. Doan; 1854, *William T. Pierce, *Alonzo C. Diball; 1855, *Joseph H. West, *Christopher C. Harris, *Daniel Collett, *Isaac B. Allen, *Henry S. Doan; 1856, *James I. Collett, *Charles W. Blair; 1857, Robert E. Doan, Angus McKay, *Joseph McCray; 1858, Jonathan D. Hines, *Leroy Pope, *John M. Kirk; 1860, *Thomas Thatcher, *Isaiah W. Quinby, *Samuel R. Nickerson; 1861, L. F. Austin, *Lewis C. Walker, *William P. Reid; 1862, Nathan M. Linton; 1865, *William H. West, *Thomas Q. Hildebrant, *Felix G. Sloane; 1866, *John S. Savage; 1867, *Lewis J. Walker; 1868, Levi Mills, *Madison Betts, A. H. McVey, Calvin B. Walker; 1869, Melville Hayes; 1870, *David T. White, *C. Perry Baldwin; 1871, Charles S. Jelly, *William W. Savage, B. D. Scott, James E. Fitzhugh; 1872, Charles B. Dwiggins; 1873, Edward J. West, *Lucius H. Baldwin; 1874, Charles W. Swaim, Simeon G. Smith; 1876, *Alpheus H. Jones; 1877, *Andrew J. Harlan; 1878, G. A. Haworth, *James V. Ellis, David B. Van Pelt; 1879, *Peter Clevenger, *Frank B. Mills, A. E. Clevenger, William B. Telfair, Jr.; 1880, C. A. Bosworth.

Since 1884 all lawyers have been admitted at Columbus and the following alphabetical list gives the most prominent of those who have practiced in Clinton county. The dates of their admission to the bar have not all been found. Many have moved away from the county and many others have died, so it has been found impossible to establish the exact date when they began to practice. The list follows: P. E. Aldridge, George C. Barns, 1897; C. C. Bowers, Joseph M. Brant, 1893; H. G. Cartwright, T. O. Dakin, 1904; W. H. Dakin, Joseph T. Doan, 1884; J. F. Fitzhugh, S. L. Gregory, 1884; Adolphus Harris, W. H. Hartman, 1885; Eldon Hayes, 1899; W. C. Hicks, Alonzo Hixon, D. K. Hempstead, 1898; S. W. Hulse, 1907; C. E. Jordan, I. Q. Jordan, 1894; M. E. Jordan, Harry D. Lindley, Fred Kelley, J. C. Linton, 1907; A. J. McNair, Frank M. Moore, 1892; J. C. Martin, 1886; J. M. Moore, J. M. Morton, Jesse N. Oren, A. J. Savage, 1906; Patrick Savage, W. I. Stewart, 1888; G. P. Thorpe, Chilton A. White, John D. White, D. B. Wilson.

Three of these lawyers have been in Congress: R. E. Doan, John S. Savage and Chilton A. White. White was a resident of Clermont county at the time he was elected to Congress. I. W. Quinby was at one time a judge in the appellate division of the bureau of pensions at Washington, D. C. The present officials of the local courts are Edward J. West, of the common pleas court, and Levi Mills, of the probate court.

PRESIDENT, ASSOCIATE AND COMMON PLEAS JUDGES.

Francis Dunlavy, president judge, 1810-17; Jesse Hughes, associate judge, 1810-38; Thomas Hinkson, associate judge, 1810-17; Peter Burr, associate judge, 1810; George McManus, associate judge, 1810-24; Aaron Sewell, associate judge, 1817-38; Joshua Collett, president judge, 1817-29; James Dakin, associate judge, 1824-38; George Smith, president judge, 1829; Morris R. Chew, associate judge, 1838-43; Abraham How, associate judge, 1838-43; Benjamin Hinkson, president judge, 1836; George McManis, Jr., associate judge, 1838-43; Elijah Vance, president judge, 1843; Jesse Hughes, Jr., associate judge, 1843, to February, 1851; David F. Walker, associate judge, 1843-51; Isaac Thornburg, associate judge, 1843-51; John Probascor, Jr., president judge, 1849-51; Stephen Evans, associate judge, February, 1851; Isaac Collett, associate judge, February, 1851; T. D. Austin, associate judge, February, 1851; Ralph S. Hart, district judge, 1852; W. A. Rogers, president judge, 1851; W. H. Baldwin, president judge, 1855; James Clark, 1856; Robert B. Harlan, president judge, 1855-57; William White, president judge, 1857; George J. Smith, 1859; W. J. Gilmore, 1859; George Johnson, 1860; J. J. Winans, W. J. Gilmore, 1867; LeRoy Pope, 1869-74; A. W. Doan, 1875-90; D. B. Van Pelt, 1890-1900; W. W. Savage, 1900-1902; Felix J. Sloan, 1902-1908; Edward J. West, September 4, 1908, to the present time.

PROBATE JUDGES.

Angus McKay, 1852-58; David S. King, 1858-61; Joseph H. West, 1861-67; John Mathews, 1867-85; N. N. Williams, 1885-1896; J. S. Kimbrough, 1896-1913; Levi Mills, 1913 to the present time.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

In June, 1810, Joshua Collett was appointed to represent the state of Ohio in the case of Ohio vs. Cornelius Quick. The first regular prosecuting attorney was James Montgomery, who filled the office from October, 1810, to 1812; William R. Cole, 1812-34; John Taaffe, 1834-35; Griffith Foos, 1835-39; Michael H. Johnson, Franklin Gorwin, 1843-45; David Linton, 1845-49; Grafton B. White, 1849-51; William B. Fisher, 1851-53; Benajah W. Fuller, 1853-55; Azariah W. Doan, 1855-59; A. C. Diboll, 1859-61; I. B. Allen, 1861-63; Lewis C. Walker, 1863-65; John M. Kirk, 1867-71; Melville Hayes, 1871-73; Levi Mills, 1873-75; John M. Kirk, 1875-77; E. J. West, 1877-88; W. W. Savage, 1888-94; W. H. Hartman, 1894-1900; W. H. Miller, 1900-04; Joseph T. Doan, 1904 to the present time.

CLERKS OF THE COURT.

Warren Sabin, clerk pro tem, March to October, 1810; Peter Burr, 1810-16; Isaiah Morris, 1817-37; Lawrence Fitzhugh, 1837-44; Thomas L. Carothers, 1844-50; Abraham E. Strickle, 1850-52; Charles N. Osborn, 1852-58; Rodney Foos, 1858-64; John A. Smith, 1864-70; Loammi D. Reed, 1870-76; Isaac N. Harlan, 1876-79; Marvin R. Higgens, 1879-85; Frank M. Dakin, 1885-91; C. Q. Hildebrant, 1891-1900; John E. Bond, 1900-02; R. C. Lawhead, 1902-08; Leo Weltz, 1908 to the present time.

CHAPTER IX.

EDUCATION.

The history of rural education in Ohio has never been written, but it did not differ materially in the first half century of the state's development from that of other states in the Middle West. Like her sister state to the west, Ohio was content with what was called the subscription school until after the adoption of the Constitution of 1852. The first schools in the state were found in the Connecticut Reserve along Lake Erie and were introduced by the thrifty Yankees from the Nutmeg state. Only the more densely populated and progressive communities were blessed with any kind of schools at all during the first quarter of the nineteenth century. The school houses were invariably rude log structures, devoid of any comforts, and the teacher was usually equipped as meagerly as the room in which he held forth. Teachers were very scarce and often the teacher was some farmer in the community who practically offered to "keep school" for two or three months during the winter season. That these early schools were appreciated is shown by the fact that there were often from sixty to a hundred pupils enrolled under one teacher. The man who could handle such a number of children and teach them anything at all must have been a person of unusual physical courage, if not of mental ability. With the aid supplied by the neighboring hickory groves, this pioneer teacher succeeded in keeping at least a semblance of discipline, and in some mysterious manner he handled his juvenile army and actually taught them the rudiments of "readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic."

Until 1852 only four branches were required to be taught in Ohio schools, reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling. Male teachers were required to take examination in reading, writing and arithmetic, but not in spelling; on the other hand, the female teachers, for some reason which the reader is left to imagine, were allowed to substitute spelling for arithmetic if they so desired. Evidence of proficiency in the above subjects was sufficient for applicants to secure certificates entitling them to teach from six to eighteen months. It is said that on more than one occasion the examiners were unable to read the papers of their applicants and granted them their certificates according to the amount of paper consumed in the examination. Be this as it may, there were many excellent teachers and the great majority of them were masters of the four subjects which they taught.

After the adoption of the Constitution of 1852 there was a decided improvement in the schools of the state. Grammar and geography were added to the curriculum and, as may be imagined, there were many protests against the innovation. A few years later some courageous men in the state succeeded in getting the study of history introduced into the course of study, but the bravest act was that of the men who introduced physiology into the public schools. This latter subject aroused violent opposition on the part of many people, an opposition which can be compared to that which the study of eugenics has stirred within the past few years. Additions to the curriculum have been made from time to time until now common school teachers are required to pass an examination in ten subjects. The latest subject to be added is that of agriculture, and could our good forefathers step into a modern school room in this county and see the boys and girls testing seed corn or determining the fertility of the soil, they would no doubt think that the teacher was a fit candidate for an insane asylum. What the pioneer of the twenties and thirties might think of teaching piano music in the public schools would be an interesting thing for a vivid imagination, but such instructon is actually given in the school rooms of Clinton county today.

Between 1870 and 1880 improvement in the rural schools was directed along five main lines: the building of more school houses, the addition of teaching aids in the school rooms (maps, books, etc.), raising the educational requirements of teachers, the payment of higher salaries to teachers and compulsory attendance on the part of the pupils. Between 1885 and 1890 the rural school reached its greatest efficiency and enjoyed its highest splendor of sentimental glory. No orator thought his speech complete without a reference to the little red school house, and there are not lacking today spell-binders who appeal for votes on the ground that they are still in favor of this same little red school house.

But the day of the rural school of a dozen or two pupils has gone from this state forever—the red school house of our forefathers has seen its day. By 1890 the exodus from the rural districts to the urban centers had begun to assume large proportions. Between 1890 and 1910 some rural districts in Ohio lost thirty-three per cent. of their population. Many a rural school in the state which boasted of an enrollment of fifty or sixty in the middle of the last century dwindled down to a paltry dozen or even less by 1900. Hundreds of rural schools have been abandoned within the past ten years and hundreds more are doomed. So it came to pass that the rural schools and the system of rural education generally became a burden to the people, not only from a financial standpoint, but also because of their inefficiency. Farmers are now demanding that their children have as good educational advantages as those provided for the children of the city. So insistent has become this demand that townships all over Ohio are abandoning their rural one-room buildings and erecting one large centralized building to accommodate all the children of the township.

Clinton county, within the past ten years, has taken the first steps toward consolidation and centralization and the success which has attended the efforts of the school officials thus far in their efforts points to a new era in rural education in the county. The present condition of the schools of the county is discussed in detail farther on in this chapter. In the history of the respective townships of the county mention is made of the first school in each, together with the early teachers. The future of rural education is brighter than ever before; never have the people been so wide awake to the value of good schools; never has there been as much interest in practical education as at the present time. The boy of the future will not only be able to manipulate the "three R's" with greater efficiency, but he will also leave the school room with a knowledge of many other things which will make of him a better and more useful citizen of the commonwealth. The girl of the future will know more about cooking, dressmaking and the domestic arts at the time she leaves the school room than her grandmother did when she died. The times have changed; the world is demanding things today that our forefathers never dreamed of, and it is the glory of the American people that they are adjusting themselves to these new conditions. In 2015 Clinton county will look back on 1915, even as we of today are harking back to 1815 and wondering that it took us so long to realize what kind of training we should give our children. May we as citizens of 1915 leave nothing undone to make our schools the agency whereby our children may have the best training which modern thought can evolve. If we do not, we are derelict in our duty; if we do, we can be assured that our children's children will arise and bless our names.

PRESENT SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The state Constitution of 1912 made some very radical changes in the Ohio school system, which, with subsequent statutory legislation, has practically revolutionized things in the educational affairs of the state. It is not possible in this article to do more than give a brief survey of the schools as they are now managed. The office of county superintendent was created and given certain well-defined powers and duties. Provision was made for district superintendents in each county, who were to relieve the county superintendent of the cares of supervising all the schools in the county. There can be no question that the present school code is a distinct step in advance and, with competent officials, the schools should become a more efficient factor in the life of the state.

The county superintendent is elected by the county board of education of five members, the members of the said board being selected by the presidents of the twenty-three school boards of the county. The county superintendent has supervision of all the schools in the county, except those of Wilmington, the Wilmington special school district being a unit of itself. J. L. Cadwallader, the present county superintendent, was the first man elected to the office and began his duties on August 1, 1914. He is a man of more than thirty years' experience in educational work, having taught in Clinton, Warren and Highland counties, most of his labors being in Clinton county. Being the first man to hold the office, he has, in a manner, had to blaze the trail. Clinton county has won special recognition from the state department for the way in which it has installed the new system and many encomiums have been passed upon the educational work which has been accomplished in the county within the past year.

It is interesting to note that the United States bureau of education sent J. L. McBrien, their special school extension agent, to Clinton county in June, 1915, to make an investigation of the consolidated school districts of New Vienna and Wayne township. This investigation was embodied in a report which will be issued in the next annual report of the bureau of education.

Under the original districting there were six district superintendents, but in June, 1915, the county board redistricted the county to meet the conditions of the Winans law, making three districts. In addition to these three school districts, there are two other groups of schools, one composed of five first-grade high schools and the other of three schools, employing a total of ten teachers under the general supervision of the county superintendent. In order to set forth the new system, the following tables have been prepared in the office of the county superintendent. The figures and facts for teachers and buildings are for 1915-16; the mill tax is the one levied for 1915.

District No. 1—A. D. Hannum, District Superintendent.

Units.	Teachers.	Buildings.	Mill Tax.
Wilson township	7	6	2.6
Richland township	3	3	2
Reesville special	6	3	7
New Antioch special	4	4	2.7
Sabina Village	12	1	7.6

Of these five units, Sabina has a first-grade and Reesville a third-grade high school. The other schools in the first district are all rural schools. The district superintendent has thirty-three teachers under his charge and devotes all of his time to supervision of their respective schools. He receives a yearly salary of eighteen hundred dollars.

District No. 2—H. W. Hodson, District Superintendent.

Units.	Teachers.	Buildings.	Mill Tax.
Liberty township	7	1	6.5
Union township	14	14	2.3
Adams township	5	1	4.1
Mt. Pleasant special	6	3	7.3

In this district there are two first-grade high schools, Liberty township and Mt. Pleasant special. Adams has a third-grade high school. The district superintendent receives eighteen hundred dollars for supervising the thirty-two teachers under his direction.

District No. 3—J. R. Burton, District Superintendent.

Units.	Teachers.	Buildings.	Mill Tax.
Vernon township	5	5	4.7
Marion township	4	4	4.3
Jefferson township	8	6	4.6
Clark township	7	7	4
Washington township	5	5	4.2
Midland Village	4	1	6

Midland and Jefferson townships each has a third-grade high school. The district superintendent receives sixteen hundred and fifty dollars yearly salary.

Group of First Grade High Schools.

Units.	Teachers.	Buildings.	Mill Tax.
Chester township	7	1	5
Blanchester Village	12	1	4.7
Martinsville Village	7	1	6.2
New Vienna Village	12½	2	4.3
Wayne township	10½	2	7.7

This group of five first-grade high schools is under the direction of County Superintendent Cadwallader, while the person in charge of each school is designated as a superintendent. None of these schools receives state aid for supervision purposes. The New Vienna and Wayne township schools are united for supervision purposes for the year 1915-16 under H. E. Cromer. New Vienna is a consolidated school, and Wayne township is known as a centralized school. The New Vienna village school district comprises New Vienna village, a large part of Green and a small part of Clark townships in Clinton county, as well as parts of Union, Penn and Fairfield townships in Highland county, which joins Clinton on the south and east.

Other School Districts.

Units.	Teachers.	Buildings.	Mill Tax.
Cuba special	4	1	6
Clarksville Village	5	1	3.7
Farmers Station	1	1	1.8

These three schools come under no special classification as a group. Farmers Station is the only so-called standardized school in the county. To be a standardized school requires a minimum library of fifty volumes, a minimum amount of agricultural apparatus to the value of fifteen dollars and a teacher with a three-years certificate. When these qualifications are complied with, the school receives an annual appropriation from the state of twenty-five dollars. The county superintendent has supervision of the ten teachers of these three schools. A. F. Roush and M. F. Andrew, principals of Cuba and Clarksville, respectively, receive seven hundred and twenty dollars for the school year and John H. Simkins, the teacher at Farmers Station, gets a salary of sixty-five dollars a month.

The county superintendent receives a salary of twenty-one hundred, with office expenses of three hundred dollars. The three district superintendents who must have at least thirty teachers under their supervision, receive salaries ranging from sixteen hundred and fifty to eighteen hundred dollars a year. High school teachers receive from seventy-five to one hundred dollars a month and the village superintendents range from six to twelve hundred per year. Teachers in the rural schools receive salaries varying from forty-five to sixty dollars a month. Each school district in the county receives state aid to the amount of thirty dollars. There are now (1915) one hundred and fifty-six teachers outside of the Wilmington schools, and twenty-seven in the latter, making a total for the county of one hundred and eighty-three. All of the schools in the county have at least an eight-months term and some of them have nine months. What is known as the Smith mill tax has tended to shorten the school term in the county.

NORMAL SCHOOL.

Recent legislation provided for at least one normal school in each of the eighty-eight counties of Ohio, and Clinton county established its first normal in the fall of 1914 at New Vienna. This school for the training of teachers is in charge of the county superintendent, who is obligated by law to teach not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred hours per year of nine months. During the first year Superintendent Cadwallader taught one hundred and twenty-five and a half hours. He is responsible for the teaching of school methods, management and law. The course covers only one year and those finishing this in a satisfactory manner are granted a year's certificate to teach in the county. The high school teacher at New Vienna teaches agriculture and the music teacher of the same school has charge of the music in the normal. The Clinton county normal has now been in operation but one year, yet it has already demonstrated its worth to the county.

The county teachers' association is recognized by the new school code but it is not mandatory that they be held in every county. In Clinton county it has been the custom to hold quarterly meetings of all the teachers under the direction of the county superintendent. During 1914-15 only two such meetings were held. Both of these were well attended and it was the consensus of opinion of the leading teachers that they had their place in the educational affairs of the county. The teachers of Wilmington are included in the association. The president during the past year was Frank P. Sayrs, and the secretary was Etta Weer. The forenoon of the meeting was devoted to round table discussions covering a wide variety of subjects of general interest to the teachers. The afternoon session was in charge of foreign speakers, who discussed some phase of teaching. The county superintendent, by virtue of his position, is the head of the association and directs the round-table discussion. The meetings in the past have been held at various places in the county, among them being Wilmington, Blanchester and Sabina.

The history of the Clinton county schools would not be complete without making mention of the Wayne township and the New Vienna centralized schools. J. J. Richeson, now dean of the normal school of Ohio University, organized and perfected the present school system of Wayne township. This school has attracted wide attention and has been visited by educators from all parts of Ohio as well as many other states.

John F. Fulton organized the New Vienna school. Among the noted educators of the county who have been the head of the New Vienna schools are E. P. West, superintendent for fourteen years, and J. L. Cadwallader, who was principal for six years and superintendent for a similar length of time. Mr. Cadwallader left the New Vienna schools to become county superintendent in the fall of 1914.

The success which attended the centralization of the Wayne township and New Vienna schools has induced other townships in the county to follow their example. Chester, Adams and the east half of Liberty townships have voted to consolidate the schools of their respective townships and the first two already have the system in successful operation.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE.

The history of Wilmington College dates from 1870, when the Friends secured control of Franklin College, which had been started in Wilmington five years previously. In order to trace the history of Wilmington College from its inception down to the present time it is necessary to tell something of its predecessor—Franklin College.

For some years prior to 1865 there had been an institution of learning located at Athens, Ohio, which was known as Franklin College, but, owing to the fact that the State University was in the same city, it was impossible for the institution to grow in a manner satisfactory to those interested in it. Accordingly, in the fall of 1865, three brothers—Thomas D., James H. and H. Carson Garvin—came to Wilmington with the idea of securing a location for the college in this city. They met with hearty encouragement from the citizens and had no difficulty in making arrangements for the use of the old county building at the southeast corner of Main and South streets. They assured the citizens of Wilmington that they would permanently locate Franklin College in the town if twenty thousand dollars could be raised to purchase suitable grounds and erect a building. So sanguine were the promoters of the project that it would carry that they proceeded to transfer the college from Athens to Wilmington, and in the fall of 1865 the first term of Franklin College was opened in the building above mentioned.

A committee of local citizens was appointed to solicit subscriptions and a campaign for money was inaugurated, which resulted in eighteen thousand dollars being raised by January 6, 1866. On that date a meeting was held in the court house, which was presided over by Thomas D. Garvin, the president of Franklin College. Upon his reporting that it was necessary to raise two thousand dollars more before the board of directors of the college could take any definite action, a committee was at once appointed to raise the needed amount. Twelve hundred dollars was subscribed at this meeting and six women of the Christian church agreed to guarantee an additional five hundred dollars if they could have the exclusive refreshment privileges at the coming fair. This was, of course, readily granted. This left only three hundred dollars to raise and twenty-five persons present at the meeting agreed to stand responsible for this sum. All subscriptions were conditional upon the full amount being raised.

Franklin College was now an assured thing for Wilmington. The trustees of the college and a committee of local citizens at once began to look for a suitable location and within a short time decided upon the site of the old fair grounds in the eastern part of the village. This tract of seventeen and a quarter acres was later increased by sixteen acres purchased from T. C. Morris. A few years later part of the campus was sold, so that at the present time it contains only fifteen acres.

An architect from Cincinnati was engaged to provide the plans for a building and the contract called for the completion of the lower story by Christmas, 1866. However, as it always happens, the contractor was unable to get even that much of the building ready for occupancy by the specified time. The corner stone was laid on July 4, 1866, but it was not until September 22, 1868, that the building was formally opened for the reception of students. On that occasion the dedicatory address was delivered by Rev. J. W. Hall, president of Miami University. While the building was under construction the classes were held in the county building for two years and in the Christian church for one year.

But Franklin College lived only a very short time. At the time the building was dedicated it was not much more than half completed. It was only inclosed, the floor laid and the ceilings and walls of the lower story rough-coated. There were no stairways to the second and third stories. It seems that many people had subscribed money when their enthusiasm exceeded their financial resources—at least, the trustees of the college were unable to collect the necessary funds for the completion of the building, with the result that on August 11, 1870, it was sold to satisfy a judgment in favor of the creditors. Thus Franklin College closed its history as an educational institution and Wilmington College opens its career.

The building and grounds were purchased by the Society of Friends for twenty thousand dollars and they had no difficulty in securing the necessary funds to complete it. They at once changed its name to Wilmington College and by the first of April, 1871, it was ready for the reception of students. On April 11, Barnabus C. Hobbs, a distinguished Friend and superintendent of public instruction of Indiana, delivered the dedicatory address. A careful canvass was made by the board of trustees for a suitable man to head the institution and the choice finally fell upon Louis A. Estes, of Westfield, Indiana.

President Estes graduated from Bowdoin College and then went west and became identified with Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana. While teaching in Earlham College he met and married Huldah C. Hoag, one of his fellow teachers in the same school. When President Estes and his wife came to Wilmington in 1871 they were both advanced in years. They brought with them their two sons, Ludovic and Rowland, both of whom taught in the college. Two nieces of Mrs. Estes, Emma Clark and Anna Hoag, the former a teacher, were with the Esteses during most of their short time in Wilmington. The Estes did good, substantial work and laid a solid foundation for the future. But within three years President Estes became convinced that the burden was more than a man of his years could successfully handle and he resigned and returned to his home in Westfield, Indiana.

In the summer of 1875 the board of trustees selected Benjamin Trueblood, who had just graduated from Earlham College, as president. While in Earlham he had met and wooed a Clinton county girl, Sarah Terrell, and the attachment thus formed brought him to Wilmington during summer vacations. Shortly after the young couple were married, in 1874, the trustees formally offered him the presidency of Wilmington College and he and his young wife entered into their duties with the spirit of self-sacrifice which was needed at the time. For five years they gave their strength, labor and means to the upbuilding of the college and tided it over one of the greatest crises which it has ever had to face. So successful was President Trueblood in his administration that he was called to the head of the more rapidly-growing college of Penn in Oskaloosa, Iowa. For twenty-five years he served as president of the American Peace Society.

In 1879 Wilmington College was forced for the third time to seek a president. After a careful examination of various candidates, the trustees finally decided to call David W. Dennis, a graduate of and a teacher in Earlham College. The wife of President Dennis, Mattie C., was a gifted teacher, and to their new work they brought a boundless amount of vim and energy, as well as fine teaching ability. But the college was able to retain them only two years. President Dennis and his wife felt that they were not through with their preparation for their life work and resigned to continue their studies. A few years later Mr. Dennis was permanently located at Earlham as a valued member of its faculty.

The fourth president of the college was James B. Unthank, who had come to Wilmington College as an instructor in 1874, when Benjamin Trueblood assumed the presidency. President Unthank was a graduate of Earlham College and at the time of his elevation to the head of the college, in 1881, he had been a successful teacher in the institution for seven years. He understood its needs better than any of his predecessors and was therefore able to administer its affairs in an efficient manner. For twenty-two years President Unthank remained at the head of the college and during this long period the institution enjoyed a steady growth. A high grade of instruction was maintained and the hundreds of students who came under his supervision have cause to feel grateful for his kindly manner and wise instruction. In 1903 it became apparent that a younger man was essential to the future welfare of the college and no one realized this more than President Unthank. He fully realized that the college had reached another crisis and that another leader should take charge of affairs. He resigned with "a heart throbbing with love for the sacred associations" of the college he had learned to love so well and moved back to the home of his boyhood at Webster, Indiana.

It was indeed true that the college had reached a crisis in 1903 and the trustees deliberated long and carefully before they finally chose the next president, Albert J. Brown, who, at the time, was pastor of the First Friends church of Indianapolis, Indiana. Born in Union county, Indiana, a student for three years in Indiana University and a graduate of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, President Brown came to Wilmington College in the summer of 1903 with a better training than any of his predecessors. As he took a prospective view of the situation, his broad outlook took in the possibilities which only bold strokes from a new hand could hope to reach. He knew how to appeal anew to those who felt that they had already done their best, and, so in union of forces, he carried out in a large measure the vision which appeared to him when he first came to the college.

The ten years (1903-13) of President Brown's administration were productive of great things for Wilmington College. It was apparent from the beginning that the larger task of this administration was to be a financial one. College Hall, the main building, was soon reroofed and redecorated. The gymnasium was enlarged and equipped with modern toilets and baths and a new heating system; seven thousand square feet of cement walks were laid, the athletic field was graded and put in shape for foot-ball, baseball and tennis, a substantial grandstand was added; Twin Ash hall was purchased, and, finally, a fine science building was erected, at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars.

In 1904 the board of trustees was urged to enter the field for a twenty-five thousand dollar endowment fund, but the raising of this modest sum was considered too great an undertaking. Instead, the board authorized a campaign for the raising of ten thousand dollars, but before the subscriptions were closed twenty-five thousand dollars had actually been raised. Six years later, in 1910, the greatest effort in the history of the college was undertaken. In just one hundred days the sum of forty-eight thousand five hundred dollars was subscribed. It should be mentioned that of the total of five hundred and ten donors to this fund many were not members of the Friends church.

At this point it seems pertinent to tabulate the endowment funds of Wilmington College. The following report is taken from the last minutes of the Wilmington yearly meeting:

Endowment fund of 1884—
Mortgage notes	$22,431.73
Promissory notes	2,698.27
		$25,130.00

In January, 1913, President Brown notified the board of trustees that they should look for a new president. Already an investor and an executive officer in the Farquhar Furnace Company, he retired after the commencement, in June, to become actively identified with this company.

Late in the summer of 1913, Samuel H. Hodgin was chosen president for a period of three years. He was born near Greensboro, Guilford county, North Carolina, and educated at Guilford College and Harvard University. President Hodgin gave Wilmington College an excellent scholastic and business administration. During his short administration of three years (1912-15), two very important objectives, long in view, were accomplished. One was the admission of the graduates of the college to the graduate school of Ohio State University without condition; the other was the transfer of the management of the institution from Fairfield, Center and Miami quarterly meetings to Wilmington yearly meeting. The old charter granted by Clinton county under a statute of 1854 was replaced in 1914 by a state charter giving the college all collegiate privileges. This old charter provided for a board of eighteen managers and a board of nine trustees. The trustees held the title to the property and provided for the upkeep of the buildings. The managers transacted all other business of the college. Under the new charter of 1914 there is one board of nine trustees.

Still another distinct feature of the administration of President Hodgin was the establishment of the departments of education and domestic science. Under a recent law, the state helps to maintain these two departments.

At the close of the school year of 1915 President Hodgin resigned and returned to his native state to enter the business field. In June, 1915, J. Edwin Jay, of Virginia, was employed as acting president until president-elect Edgar Lewellen could take charge. Mr. Lewellen has been superintendent of the North Vernon, Indiana, schools for a number of years and could not secure his release from his contract then to enter upon the duties of president in 1915. He will take charge of the college in 1916. Acting-president Jay is a graduate of Earlham College and Yale University and is in every way well equipped for the duties of the office which he has been selected to fill for the year 1915-16.

BUILDINGS.

The main college building on the campus is the one erected in 1866-71 and which, with various improvements, is still in use. Besides class rooms, it contains the library, museum, book store and a large auditorium on the third floor. The next building erected on the campus was the observatory, which was made possible through the personal efforts of Alfred Brown, who raised the funds for its erection. It was completed in 1885 and equipped with a thirteen-inch telescope which was built by Prof. Levi T. Edwards and Reynold Janny and Milton Farquhar, two of his students. The third building was South Hall, a dormitory for boys, which was built during President Trueblood's administration with money raised by donations. The gymnasium, erected in 1895, was the next building on the campus. It was built in 1895 with funds raised largely by the students of the college. Bailey Hall, the last building added, was erected in 1906 at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars. It contains the administrative offices and the class rooms and laboratories for chemistry, physics and biology. It was named in honor of A. I. Bailey, the donor and one of the most loyal supporters of the college. Twin Ash Hall, the dormitory for girls, was not the property of the college until the fall of 1904, when it was purchased with funds raised by subscription. However, this same building had been used as a dormitory since 1875, being rented from private owners up to the time of its purchase in 1904. There is one other building on the campus, but it is not strictly one of the college buildings. It is a large auditorium erected by the Wilmington yearly meeting and which was completed in 1896 at a cost of thirty-five hundred dollars. This excellent summer auditorium will seat two thousand and is used not only for the yearly meeting, but also for the commencements, and the chautauqua which has been held in the city for the past six years.

THE LIBRARY.

The library of the college, comfortably housed on the second floor of the main building, contains more than five thousand volumes. Among them are many valuable works of reference, such as dictionaries, encyclopedias, Greek, Latin, French and German lexicons, together with many of the current standard periodicals of the day in social, political and economic science. Students desiring to do work in Quaker history find especial advantages by reason of the many excellent volumes on that subject. Through the kindness of friends of the institution many additional volumes are added each year. Miss Ellen Wright is the librarian.

MUSEUM.

The museum is on the second floor and occupies a large, well-lighted room. It contains several thousand classified fossils of the silurian, devonian, carboniferous and tertiary eras; a complete stratigraphical collection of rock; a large number of typical mineral specimens; specimens of volcanic origin; a number of species of shells, principally marine; many species of coral; more than a thousand archeological specimens; a human skeleton; a mounted skeleton of a horse and skeletons of several small animals; a number of birds, and a great variety of miscellaneous specimens. In the spring of 1902 the size and educational value of the cabinet was greatly increased by the addition of the extensive and valuable collection of fossils, minerals and archeological specimens made by Dr. Charles Welch. Many of the specimens thus acquired are of great interest and value, being rare and typical. For this addition to its educational facilities, the college is indebted to the generosity of Mrs. Olive L. Welch.

In 1903 J. Lindley Spicer, of Cincinnati, donated a large collection of specimens of great educational value. These include relics from Palestine, minerals, bone implements, bones from prehistoric mounds and a large number of arrow heads, spear heads, axes and hammers taken from Indian graves. Much use is made of the museum in the teaching of geology, mineralogy and zoology, and the student finds therein ample materials for practical study and illustration.

THE SCHOOLS OF WILMINGTON.

By Supt. Edwin P. West.

The schools of Wilmington throughout its early history were such as characterized other pioneer settlements of Ohio. They came through the initiative of individuals with some education and a bent for teaching.

Isaac Garretson who is credited with being the first teacher in the community, taught a subscription school about 1810 or 1812, in a log school house built by Joseph Doan at the corner of Sugartree and Spring streets. Between this date and 1840 similar schools were taught by Arnold Truesdall, William Milliken, A. T. Sewell, William Crumley, Beebe Treusdall, J. N. Reynolds and others. Early in this period a small building was erected for school purposes in the northeast part of town, and about 1839 or 1840 a more pretentious structure, referred to in future minutes as the Seminary, was built on the southeast corner of Locust and Mulberry streets, the present site of the Friends church. The building constructed for school purposes prior to 1840 stood at the southwest corner of Main and Spring streets, and is used at present as a residence.

On April 1, 1853, the schools were organized as district No. 1, Union township, with Beebe Treusdall, R. B. Harlan and D. C. Hinman as directors and George E. Hibben as clerk. From this time on the progress of education in the village was more rapid. Many leading citizens served as directors. Roger B. Mory, George E. Hibben, Amos Hockett and A. C. Diboll served as clerks down to 1870. Among the names of teachers we find Joseph O. Felton, Jesse Everett, Louisa and Rachel McGregor, Elizabeth Quinn, J. B. Dunn, Elizabeth Wickersham, Virginia Hogan, Clarissa Pidgeon, Lizzie Frazer, Helen Van Doren, M. J. Vangegrift, James Cleaver, J. Carter Moon, Sarah J. Porter, Abby and Joshua Nickerson, the Whitcombs, B. F. Raleigh, N. W. and Rachel Vandervort and Calvin W. Pritchard. In the autumn of 1853 Oliver W. and William Penn Nixon, the latter afterward editor and owner of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, taught a subscription school in the two upper rooms of the seminary, which they rented for three dollars a month. During this period teachers' wages ran from twenty-five to forty dollars a month and the usual term of employment was three months. Text books were few and crude, and the school report of 1854 shows one book in the library in good condition, but the number was increased to one hundred and thirty-seven in 1857.

The growth of educational sentiment is clearly shown by the movement in 1868 and 1869 that resulted in the construction of the Union school building on a beautiful five-acre plot in the northwestern part of the town. The board of education at the time consisted of Jacob Beard, Charles N. Osborn and A. C. Diboll, and the building planned by William Cleveland as architect, was one of which any community at that time would justly have felt proud. It contained ten large school rooms and an assembly hall above a four-room basement and cost thirty-five thousand dollars. It was dedicated on January 18, 1870. John Hancock, a name illustrious in Ohio education and at that time superintendent of the Cincinnati schools, gave the address of the occasion and Calvin W. Pritchard was superintendent during the first term in the new building.

Immediately following, the schools were organized under the "Akron law," with C. M. Bosworth, William Greer, W. B. Telfair, L. D. Reed, Madison Bells and W. P. Wolf constituting the board of directors. This board was fortunate in securing as superintendent, Prof. W. H. Cole, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, and a man of character, culture and great executive ability, who was elected for three months and began his work on April 5, 1870. He organized and administered the schools most successfully and his four years of service brought a new epoch in education, not only in Wilmington, but throughout the county as well. His work was continued and amplified by Superintendent John H. Grove, who served for four years with decided success. Professor Grove was succeeded for two years by H. C. Garvin, a man of distinguished scholarship. Superintendent Edward Merrick, whose long term of seventeen years speaks unmistakably of his merit and success, followed Mr. Garvin. Prof. W. C. Sayrs, principal of the high school, was promoted to the superintendency in 1897. He was a gentleman of excellent scholarship and high ideals and served acceptably for seven years. He was succeeded in 1904 by Superintendent E. P. West, who has served for eleven years and has been reappointed for another term of three years.

The following persons have filled the position of principal of the high school since its formal organization in 1870: John H. Grove, J. W. Sleppy, S. H. Fisk, Edward Merrick, O. W. Martin, Reynold Janney, J. W. Simon, E. B. Stiles, N. E. Chatterton, W. C. Sayrs, J. H. Painter, J. H. Haworth, J. B. Wright, F. D. Blair and Charles C. Martin.

Among those who have served as members of the board of education, the following deserve mention for their long service: William Greer, twelve years; W. B. Telfair, thirteen years; W. P. Wolf, fourteen years; S. M. Babb, fourteen years; A. J. Martin, fifteen years; F. M. Moore, nine years; S. G. Smith, nine years; C. C. Nichols, twelve years; George W. Brown, twelve years; D. A. Lamb, sixteen years; R. C. Lawhead, fourteen years; A. A. Linton, ten years; H. G. Cartwright, fifteen years. The board at present consists of R. C. Lawhead, president; Mrs. R. C. Ballard, vice-president; H. G. Cartwright, clerk, and F. L. Gallup.

The past dozen years or more have been years of unusual activity and growth in the educational affairs of Wilmington. Probably no other town in the state, of its population, has more ample material accommodations. Its four buildings are in excellent condition. The Union, or main, building has been modernized in all its appointments. The Midland building, built in 1884 for colored pupils, has been provided with water, electricity and modern heating apparatus. The Smith Place building, built in 1893 and enlarged to twice its original size in 1906, is a fine example of an up-to-date school plant. The growth of the high school to more than two hundred made a separate building necessary for its accommodation, which was provided in 1911, at a cost of about eight thousand dollars for building and grounds. In addition to recitation rooms, study rooms and laboratory, it contains an auditorium, with stage and dressing rooms; a gymnasium, with dressing rooms and shower baths; a library and rooms for manual training and domestic science, and the grounds are ample for an athletic field. It is enough to say that, for capacity, comfort, safety and sanitation, the school buildings of Wilmington meet every requirement of Ohio's stringent code.

The following items are interesting as illustrating the growth of the schools: The first corps of teachers named by Superintendent Cole in 1871 consisted of the following: J. H. Grove, E. Jennie Ginn, Jennie Cornell, Lizzie M. Early, Marvin C. Hadley and Anna Cropsey, with a Mr. Pratt in charge of the colored schools. The corps of teachers for 1914-15 consisted of the following: High school, C. C. Martin, J. Oscar Villars, O. J. Peeling, Clara Peelle, Ruby R. Fisher and Caroline Farquhar. Grades: Frank P. Sage, principal of the Main building; Charles A. Ward, principal of the Smith Place building; Squire Buster, principal of the Midland building (colored); Anna Hinshaw, Dora G. Smith, Hanna Haley, Laura Sutherland, May Williams, Luie Clevenger, Mary B. Madden, Jennie Ethel Brown, Claire Hague, Marietta Weer, Willamette Carroll, Carrie Ent, Florence Austin, Lola M. Street, Ivy Edwards and Glenna Emmons, with Hazel West as supervisor of music and drawing. The monthly school reports for May, 1870, and May, 1915, contain, among others, the following items:

Total enrollment	213	902
Number enrolled	182	774
Daily attendance	159	738
Per cent. attendance	87	95
Cases tardiness	57	25

Mr. Pritchard's report for February of the same year shows 247 cases of tardiness; February, 1915, 27 cases.

The first colored teacher in Wilmington, as far as any record shows, was Charles Hurd, who was employed in 1853 to teach the colored youth of the town and township at one dollar per day for sixty-five days. Mr. Hurd seems to have been very successful, as he taught for many years at increasing wages, his last term being in 1867. Other men who have done excellent service as principals of the colored schools are G. W. Mitchell, G. W. Guy, Solomon Day, A. R. Guy, C. A. Napper, J. W. Stewart and the present principal, Squire Buster, who has been re-elected for his thirteenth year of service. It is interesting to note that the enrollment in the colored schools in 1870 was seventy-three, the same as in 1915, although in the latter year there were about twenty colored pupils in the white schools.

The first graduating class of the Wilmington high school was that of 1873, consisting of ten members, as follow: C. A. Bosworth, Ella Moore, Olive Linton, Eva M. Wolf, O. S. Martin, Augusta Levy, A. E. Clevenger, Eppie McMillan, W. F. Grantham and D. C. Osborn. The largest class to graduate was that of 1914, containing forty-six members. The total number of graduates is six hundred thirteen, two hundred sixty-eight boys and three hundred forty-five girls, many of whom have achieved distinction in scholarship, business and professions.

The schools, and especially the high school, have been largely patronized by non-resident pupils, the tuition of which, in the school year of 1914-15, amounted to one thousand seven hundred fifty-five dollars.

To go into the detail of the inside workings of the schools, its policies, courses of study and activities in general, is precluded by the space available for this article and by consideration of the interest and patience of the reader. Suffice it to say, that there exist no illusions among teachers or pupils as to the methods or conditions by which are grown the "fruits of the mind." There is no "tempering of the wind to the shorn lamb" to such an extent that the lamb may only frisk and frolic and grow no wool. Teachers and pupils live a life together which is expected to reveal and give to the pupil a true sense of that larger life that awaits him and some measure of knowledge and will and power for the solution of its problems.

The high school has held the rank of "first grade" since 1903; it was "recognized" by the Ohio State University in 1906, and fully accredited in 1908. It was put on the accredited list of the North Central College Association of the United States in 1913 and on the list accredited by Pennsylvania University in 1915. These facts are probably the most satisfactory evidence of the quality and character of the Wilmington public schools and the attitude of the people, the devotion of its teachers and the merit of its management.

CHAPTER X.

CHURCHES OF CLINTON COUNTY.

WILMINGTON FRIENDS CHURCH.

The history of the Friends church of Wilmington up to its establishment as a yearly meeting in 1868, is more or less obscure. Records are not available to trace in detail the history of the church from its inception up to 1868 and the present article necessarily depends upon previous written accounts, supplemented by the memory of the older members of the church. In 1909, R. C. Greene, clerk of the monthly meeting at the time and still holding this office, compiled a history of the church from the records and such other sources as were at his command.

From the best authority obtainable, it appears that in January, 1825, the Friends of Wilmington requested of Center monthly meeting the privilege of an indulged meeting. This request was granted in March, and in April of the same year the first indulged meeting was opened in Wilmington. Joel Thornburg, Solomon Starbuck, Joseph Doan, Jr., Benjamin Farquhar, Azariah Wall, Daniel Birdsall and James Stanhope had charge of the installation of the meeting. There is every reason to believe that a small, one-story, brick meeting house was erected in the same year on West Main street. The meeting thus established was only fairly started when a division appeared in its ranks.

Elias Hicks paid a visit to Clinton county in the fall of 1828 and, according to his autobiography, he was in the county from September 19 to 23, and spoke in the court house in Wilmington on Sunday, September 21. He spoke at four other places in the county, but makes specific mention only of the meeting at Center. He preached so effectively in Wilmington that he gained a considerable following, but just how many accepted his teaching will probably never be known, since there are no official records extant of the separate meeting which his followers set up shortly after he left town. The records of the Center meeting show that many of that congregation accepted his doctrine and that they were visited by other members of the church who sought to bring them back into the fold.

In 1828, the Hicksites, as his followers were called, had possession of the church building and of such records as had been kept. By 1839, however, the Orthodox Friends had so recovered their strength in Wilmington that, on December 12th of that year, they requested the indulgence of a meeting for divine worship. Accordingly, the second indulged meeting was held in Wilmington on January 24, 1839. They purchased a round-topped, octagonal-shaped brick building, which stood on the southeast corner of Columbus and Lincoln streets and which had formerly been used as a school building. The prominent members at this time were Walter and Sarah Carpenter, John Mabee, Asa Hoge, the Downs and the Haworths. This building remained their home until some time early in the sixties, when they sold it and again took possession of the church building erected in 1825. The Hicksites had apparently grown so weak that they were unable to maintain an organization and they offered no opposition to the Orthodox Friends when the latter took possession of the building which they (the Hicksites) had been using since the schism of 1828.

ADA CHAPEL, WILMINGTON.

WILMINGTON COUNTRY CLUB.

FRIENDS AUDITORIUM, WILMINGTON.

The next important step taken by the Orthodox Friends of Wilmington occurred in 1868. In January of that year they requested Center quarterly meeting to establish a preparative and monthly meeting in Wilmington. John Carter, David Curl, Jonathan Bailey, Abel Beven, Mark Peelle, Charles T. Morman, Asa Walker and Peter Osborn were appointed to take the matter under consideration and at the next quarterly meeting, upon the favorable report of this committee, the request was granted. The Center quarterly meeting appointed John M. Pidgeon, Wiliam P. Harvey, Eber Haines, Thomas Walthol, David Curl, Mary T. Bailey, Amy Starbuck, Rachel M. Hadley and Eliza Osborn to attend the first monthly meeting at Wilmington, which was set for May 12, 1868. Hiram Coate and Abigail J. Hadley were clerks of the Center quarterly meeting at this time. The Wilmington monthly meeting was established with one hundred seventy-eight members, representing three monthly meetings, as follows: Center, one hundred nineteen; Springfield, thirty-seven; Dover, twenty-two.

The first minister obtaining a minute for religious service was David Hadley. The first minister visiting the monthly meeting with a minute was David Hunt from Honey Creek (Iowa) monthly meeting. The second minister obtaining a minute for service was Mary N. Hadley. The second minister visiting the monthly meeting with a minute was Hazael D. Greene, from Fairfield (Ohio) monthly meeting, accompanied by Gershem Perdue as traveling companion. The first Friends recorded as ministers were Levi Mills and Henry Merrill (November, 1874). Since that date three others have been recorded as ministers—Jonathan B. Wright, May, 1883; Louis T. Jones, February, 1909, and Alexander C. Purdy, August, 1912.

From the establishment of the monthly meeting in 1868, until 1901, the church was in charge of ministers who served without salary. During this period of thirty-three years some noted men preached at various times. In the seventies John Henry and Robert Walter Douglass, brothers, often preached at Wilmington. The former is probably the most noted evangelist the Friends church ever had in the United States and Wilmington was glad to claim him as a resident for nearly a decade. He, as well as his brother, preached not only in various parts of the United States, but also in England as well. Both of the brothers are still living. But the one man who did more for the church during this period (1868-1901) than any other person was Levi Mills, the present probate judge of Clinton county. Becoming a minister in 1874, he preached in the Wilmington meeting for more than twenty years, and during much of this time preached regularly. Before 1901 many of the professors in Wilmington College filled the pulpit at intervals, the most prominent being Benjamin Trueblood.

The first regular pastor with a salary was engaged in 1901. Since that date the following pastors have served the church: Robert E. Pretlow, 1901-06; Prof. Edgar H. Stranahan, 1906-07; Richard Newby, 1907-10; Ellison R. Purdy, 1910 to the present time.

Wilmington monthly meeting has established two churches in the county. A preparative meeting was established at Sabina in March, 1877, and this was changed to a monthly meeting in September, 1892. The Cuba preparative meeting was set up in August, 1896, and the church at that place still remains under the jurisdiction of the Wilmington monthly meeting. The East Wilmington mission was opened in November, 1888, and, in March, 1889, a committee was appointed to have charge of the work. A full discussion of this mission is given later on in this article.

The following persons have served as clerks of the monthly meeting: Benjamin Farquahar, one year; Amos Hockett, two years; John C. Cook, ten years; James B. Unthank, one year; John C. Cook, one year; James B. Unthank, one year; Isaiah Peelle, eleven years; James B. Unthank, two years; R. C. Greene, three years; Franklin S. Lamar, one year; R. C. Greene, eight years. Mr. Greene is the present clerk. There were separate business meetings for the men and women from 1868 to 1886, the two being consolidated in March, 1886. The clerks of the women's meeting were as follow: Caroline E. Harlin, two years; Rhoda Worthington, eleven years; Carrie Hadley, three years; Eunice Lewis, one year.

The present pastor of the church is Ellison R. Purdy; the resident ministers are John M. Watson, Sarah Caroline Hadley, Levi Mills, Albert J. Brown and Waldo Woody. Alexander C. Purdy is a non-resident minister. The other officers of the church are Richard C. Greene, clerk; Ethel S. McCoy, recorder and assistant clerk; Charles Farquhar, treasurer; C. Grant Fairley, Bible school superintendent; Ruth Farquhar, superintendent of the Friends mission of Ada chapel; A. I. Bailey, J. W. Sparks and Elijah Peelle, trustees. The elders of the church are Ellen C. Wright, Hugh McCoy, Margaret McCoy, Austin Jones, Ruth Farquhar, Mary A. Mather, Francis Farquhar, Alonzo A. Linton, C. Grant Fairley, Esther Peelle, James F. Smith, Emmet W. Hale, Ann C. Brackney, Ada Jenkins, Richard C. Greene, Margaretta Peelle, Harriet W. Purdy, Charles Farquhar, Milton J. Farquhar, Laurenna Farquhar and Lura Hunnicutt. The church overseers are Josiah W. Sparks, Laura B. Sparks, Wilson Hunnicutt, Sarah Peelle, Ellen C. Hadley and Mary E. Bailey. The pastoral committee is composed of the ministers, the elders and the overseers. The work of the church is under the direction of the following committees: Home missions, foreign missions, peace, temperance, finance, social, music, Bible school, funeral and sick. The auxiliary organizations are the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, the Ladies' Aid Society, Ladies' Social Circle, Christian Endeavor, Intermediate Christian Endeavor and Junior Christian Endeavor.

As has been stated, the Friends, in the early sixties, took possession of the building which had been erected in 1825. This was sold in 1870 and a brick school building, which stood on the site of the present church, was purchased. This was used as a house of worship until 1895, when it was torn down to make way for the beautiful stone structure which now occupies the same site. The new church was dedicated on July 19, 1896.

Wilmington yearly meeting of Friends, with headquarters at Wilmington, was incorporated under the laws of Ohio and set off by the Indiana yearly meeting in 1892. It comprises the three quarterly meetings of Fairfield, Center and Miami, in Ohio, and Friendsville quarterly meeting, in eastern Tennessee. The yearly meeting had a membership of six thousand five hundred and seventy-two according to the report of 1915, the larger portion of whom reside in Clinton county. Upon the establishment of the yearly meeting in 1892, James B. Unthank was elected clerk, or presiding officer, and continued in the same honorary office until 1903, when he retired from Wilmington College and moved to Indiana. Jonathan Wright succeeded him and acted as clerk until 1907, when he was compelled to retire because of ill health. Albert J. Brown has held the office since 1908.

It is a matter of pride to the local church that it is the second largest in the world, being surpassed only by the Whittier meeting in California. It is also noteworthy that Clinton county has more Friends within its boundaries than any other county in the United States in proportion to its size.

ADA CHAPEL.

The history of Ada chapel, or East Wilmington mission, dates back to 1888, when Lizzie R. Marvey took the first step toward the establishment of the mission. Mrs. Harvey, who died on March 23, 1890, was a teacher in the primary department of the Wilmington schools for six years. Among the children under her care she found many cases of absence caused by poverty. In visiting the homes of some of the children, she became convinced that the church could be an influential factor in bettering conditions in many of them.

Accordingly, she obtained permission from the Friends church to hold a gospel meeting in one of the rude homes. In the afternoon of November 5, 1888, in company with her husband and seven friends, Mrs. Harvey met at this place to hold a religious meeting. Besides the women of the household, there were present a few school children. These meetings in private homs in East Wilmington were continued under the guidance of Mrs. Harvey alone until March, 1889. At that time she requested the monthly meeting to help her in some way. Her request was granted and a committee was appointed to relieve her of her work and continue it along the same general plan which she had worked out. This committee was composed of Lizzie R. Harvey, Caroline E. Nordyke, Alzina W. Barlow, Susannah Gallup, Rebecca Haworth, Azariah W. Doan and Asa Nordyke, to which committee were later added James Fisher and Dinah Unthank.

Finally, a small room, twelve by fourteen feet, situated opposite the colored Baptist church, was rented for two dollars per month. This was paid by a collection from the members each week. However, the attendance increased until this room proved inadequate. Through the efforts of the Christian Endeavor Society, the matter of building a more suitable place for holding the meetings was brought before the monthly business meetings of the Friends, which, after some deliberation, instructed the Christian Endeavor to go on with the work, and consented that the trustees should have charge of the property, which was purchased in October, 1892.

Caroline Nordyke, who, with others, had labored faithfully since the beginning of the work, secured subscriptions of several dollars which had not been collected. Clara Todhunter was given charge of this list, and received one hundred ninety-six dollars, including forty-two dollars from the Christian Endeavor; also donations from Friends, citizens, and the members of the mission themselves, totaling about two hundred and seventy-five dollars. The little chapel was inclosed in August, 1893, and was in constant use until 1911.

Mrs. Harvey did not live to see the complete realization of her plans, dying within less than a year after the monthly meeting had taken charge of her work in 1889. Many times her heart was burdened and she said, "If the work were mine, I should feel discouraged; but, since it is the Lord's, I will trust Him to care for it. Praise His name. He is able." In the little account which she kept of these meetings, is found the following prayer: "February 10, 1889—God save Wilmington, and raise up a little mission chapel in Clarktown." This prayer was answered in a most striking manner when, on November 5, 1911, a beautiful brick edifice was dedicated which had been erected through the generosity of Mrs. Ada H. Jenkins. In honor of Mrs. Jenkins, the building was called the Ada chapel.

During the past four years the work of the mission has been steadily enlarged and its influence for good in the community which it serves cannot be overestimated. Classes in sewing, cooking and domestic science and arts have been established; religious and educational work is maintained and every effort made to appeal to the young people of the community in a way to direct them toward a higher plane of living.

To its able and enthusiastic workers too much credit cannot be given. Mrs. Jenkins is not content to bestow "the gift without the giver," but is a tireless and efficient worker, always at her post of duty. Miss Ruth Farquhar has been superintendent of the mission for many years. From the beginning it has received the best efforts of Miss Farquhar and in her management of its many and varied interests she has displayed administrative and executive ability of a high order.

FAIRVIEW FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Fairview Friends church is located in Green township about four miles north of New Vienna, on the Wilmington-Highland pike. The church was organized in 1809 and at once erected a house of worship. The leader in the organization of the new church was John Henry Douglas, who held a very remarkable series of revival meetings in the neighborhood in 1868-69. Before the pastoral system was adopted, Israel Terrell and John Fisher for many years "sat at the head of the meeting." Among the ministers who have served this church may be mentioned Allen Terrell, Lizzie Marshall, Emma Townshend, Robert Luttrell, Elizabeth Larkins, J. Waldo Woody, Levi Mills, Josephus Hoskins and Frank Barrett. The present membership is one hundred and seventy-five. In 1911 a new church was erected at a cost of about nine thousand dollars.

DOVER FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Dover meeting began as an indulged meeting sometime after Center was granted the same privilege in 1805. There were not sufficient members at first to warrant the erection of a building, so they worshipped at the home of Ezekiel Frazier for some time. As the Friends became more numerous, they wished to have a preparatory meeting established, and, upon requesting Center monthly meeting for this privilege, it was granted without delay. The Dover monthly meeting dates from September, 1824.

The first house of worship was a rude log structure which stood several rods northeast of the present building. The present brick building was erected in 1844 on ground deeded (January 13, 1824) by Amos Hodgson to Daniel Bailey and Gayer Starbuck, trustees of Dover meeting, in consideration of three dollars. The one and one-half acres donated lie in survey No. 1,236.

The recorded ministers of Dover monthly meeting since 1824 have been as follows: John Parson, 1845; Wilson Carter, 1850; John Henry Douglass, 1858; Cyrus R. Carter, 1859; John M. Pidgeon and Louis Hunt, 1866; William P. Gallimore, 1869; Isaac Peelle, 1871; Micajah F. Moorman, 1872; Josephus Hoskins, 1874. Mr. Hoskins became the principal minister about 1880 and served the meeting most acceptably until about 1905. Since that year I. Lindley Jones, Prof. Samuel H. Haworth, Prof. Waldo Woody and Prof. Albert J. Brown have served the church. The present membership is one hundred and sixty. A Sunday school, with an average attendance of eighty, is maintained throughout the year.

NEW BURLINGTON FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Friends church at New Burlington dates back to 1871, in which year the meeting was set up by Caesar's Creek monthly meeting. Among the charter members were Joseph Painter and family, Amos Hawkins and family, Phares Compton and family, Eli Compton and wife, Amos and Ann Mendenhall Compton and children, Dr. Benjamin Farquhar and family, John and Sarah Grant, Peter DeHaven and family. In 1870 the meeting bought the abandoned building of the Wesleyan Methodists in New Burlington and continued to use it until the present brick building was erected in 1894. It cost forty-five hundred dollars and was dedicated in January, 1895. Among the ministers of the meeting have been James Hawkins, Benjamin Walton, Edward R. Walton and Fesse Hawkins, the present pastor. The membership in 1915 is one hundred and sixty-three. The following auxiliaries are represented in the church: Sabbath school, Christian Endeavor and Women's Foreign Missionary Society.

CUBA FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Cuba Friends' church dates from the organization of a preparative meeting at Cuba some twenty-five years ago. The early history of the congregation cannot be accurately ascertained because the first record books were destroyed when the neighborhood was visited with diphtheria some years later. The inspired spirit of the organization was Eliza Bates, who lived in the country near Cuba. She started a campaign for subscriptions for the purchase of a lot, which she bought of Peter Clevenger. She then appeared before the Martinsville monthly meeting and asked their aid in the purchase of a necessary house for church purposes. The sum needed was one hundred and twenty-five dollars. They appointed a committee to visit Cuba and decided that the undertaking was an impossible one. Mrs. Bates then carried the matter before the Wilmington monthly meeting, which also sent out a committee to look over the situation. They likewise thought that the building selected was not satisfacory, but encouraged her in her efforts and promised their aid and support. Meanwhile a tent had been purchased and a few meetings held on the lot. Mrs. Bates, with renewed courage, decided that a building could be built. She went to Alfred Villars, who gave all the rough timber necessary. A quarry north of Wilmington donated the stone for the foundation and Brown & Clark did the sawing. The men of the neighborhood came in with their teams, did the grading, dug the foundations and did the hauling and were rewarded for their services by a feast prepared by the women. The carpenters of the neighborhood donated their time and labor. Part of the lumber was carried on their backs from the saw-mill near the railroad. The building was soon finished and became known as Quaker Hill Chapel. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. Benjamin Morris. A Sabbath school was soon organized. The little band struggled on, fighting hard for existence, recruiting its members slowly. An organ was obtained a few months after the founding. Among the early ministers of the church may be mentioned the names of John Cook, who drove from Beech Grove; John Hawkins, James Craig, Albert Jones, Eldon Ross. A great and noble part in the early organization of the church was taken by Mrs. C. C. Clark, who was the superintendent of the first Sunday school, and the constant aid of Eliza Bates.

In 1896, Robert H. Luttrell, then minister, asked the monthly meeting to establish a preparative meeting for Cuba, which was done in August of that year, with Grace Biggs, as clerk, and Clyde Beard, treasurer. Seventeen conversions were made the following winter and new interest was revived in the community. A committee was appointed in September to solicit funds to built a parsonage. It was during this winter that diphtheria visited the village of Cuba and brought sorrow to so many homes. This delayed the work on the parsonage, but it was finished before spring.

Since that time the fortune of the church has fluctuated, but a steady progress has been maintained. The following have served as ministers: John Mercer, A. M. Gibson, Samuel H. Hamilton, Mrs. Ada Lee, Homer Biddlecum and Josephus Hoskins. Mrs. Ida Allen is the present (1915) minister.

THE HICKSITE FRIENDS OF CLINTON COUNTY.

The Hicksite branch of the Friends has no meeting in Clinton county at the present time, and, according to the testimony of R. L. Gréene, the Hicksites have never had but two meetings in the county. In 1828 Elias Hicks paid a visit to Wilmington and as a result of his preaching he brought about a division in the Friends meeting in the town. Just when the division took place and who the leaders of the seceding branch were, is not known, since the early records are lost. In 1828 the division seems to have been established, the followers of Hicks being called Hicksites and those rejecting his teaching, the Orthodox Friends. Jacob Jackson was the first Hicksite minister in Jackson township, and probably in the county.

The Hicksites in Wilmington outnumbered the Orthodox branch when the division was effected in 1828, and consequently they gained possession of the building. The Orthodox branch refused to worship with their radical brothers and for the following eleven years attended meeting at Dover or Center. It was not until 1854 that the Orthodox Friends got control of the building in Wilmington again, although they had purchased an old school building in the town in 1839 in which they had been holding services for fifteen years. By 1854 the Hicksites had become so weak in numbers that they offered no opposition to their former brothers in Christ when the latter took possession of the old church building. The Hicksites never again effected an organization in Wilmington.

The other Hicksite meeting in Clinton county was located at Martinsville and, according to R. L. Greene, flourished between about 1844 and 1852. The Martinsville building was a frame structure, about twenty by thirty feet in size, and was in the midst of a dense woods which closely surrounded the building on three sides, an open space being cleared on the east as the door opened on that side. Christopher Hiatt was the head of the meeting and, according to the best authority obtainable, the meeting "was laid down at his death."

For sixty years the Hicksites have not held regular meetings in the county, those still of this persuasion attending at Waynesville in Warren county occasionally. Waynesville has the only Hicksite meeting in this section of the state.

SABINA FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Friends church at Sabina was organized during the winter of 1878-79 as a result of the evangelistic efforts of Nathan and Esther Frame, of Jamestown, Ohio. The preparative meeting was set up by the Wilmington monthly meeting and for the first two years services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church in Sabina through the courtesy of that denomination. In 1880 a lot was purchased on Elm street of Mrs. E. A. Newman for the sum of four hundred dollars. On this lot a one-story brick building was erected, at a cost of thirty-five hundred dollars. This building, with many improvements, is still in use.

Among the charter members of the church may be mentioned Ellis A. and Emma Lewis, David and Mattie Edwards, Dr. A. J. and Celia Gaskins, Dr. S. B. and Adna H. Lightner, William and Mary Pavey, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Wright and Isaac and Margaret Roberts. In 1915 the church enrolled about two hundred members. The following ministers have served the church: Levi Mills, Robert Douglas, Alfred Brown, Alpheus Trueblood, Mary Moon Meredith, Benjamin Morris, Morton C. Pearson, Edgar H. Stranahan, Alfred J. Copeland, Thomas L. Scott, Lindley Jones, John F. Nelson and Eliza H. Thorne, the latter two being the present ministers. Mrs. Thorne has been the resident pastor for many years.

The church owns a parsonage near the meeting house. A Sunday school is maintained under the superintendency of James F. Gaskins. Anna S. Lewis is president of the Ladies' Aid Society. The clerk of the church is Louisa P. Moon.

CHESTER FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Friends church at Chester began to hold indulged meetings in that neighborhood early in the history of the county. The first services were held in a school house on the farm of Thomas McMillan, Sr., but in 1828 a lot was donated, a log church erected and since that time regular services have been held. The log building gave way to a brick structure in 1844 and this second building was in use for a period of seventy years. In 1914 a ten-thousand-dollar house of worship was erected on the old site. Anna C. Wall, the oldest living member of the congregation, remembers the days of the old log church and the dedication of the first brick building in 1844. The church maintains a Sunday school and a Christian Endeavor society. The Sunday school has been going for more than thirty years and the Christian Endeavor for half that length of time. The congregation now numbers two hundred and eighty-six members. The present resident ministers are Eber Haines, John E. Hawkins and Jennie Carey. The church is in Chester township, on the Wilmington and New Burlington pike, about a mile and a half west of Gurneyville.

CENTER FRIENDS CHURCH.

The history of the Center meeting dates back more than a hundred and ten years, and the church building which they erected in 1805 has the honor of being the first house of worship erected within the limits of Clinton county. As a matter of fact, this church was flourishing several years before Clinton county was even organized. The lapse of so many years makes it practically impossible to get exact data, but, from the best evidence obtainable, it seems that the first meeting in the Center community was held at the home of Robert Eachus some time between 1800 and 1803. A deed, dated December 19, 1803; shows that James Murray conveyed fifteen acres of ground in the northwestern part of what is now Union township, to Nathan Linton, James Moon and Isaac Perkins, "Trustees of the Society of Friends on Todd's Fork." This tract was for the purpose of providing a site for a meeting house and cemetery. Just when the first church was erected is not known, neither is there any extant record showing when permission was granted to hold an indulged or preparative meeting.

The late Judge Harlan, in his sketch of Robert Eachus, says: "In May, 1805, Miami quarterly allowed the holding of the proposed meeting, soon after which a house, made of hewn logs, without door or floor, was built, and meetings were held twice a week therein. This house is believed to be the first house of worship erected in what is now Clinton county." (Clinton county was organized in 1810.)

A monthly meeting was granted and established at Center on February 7, 1807. With the influx of settlers of this denomination the little log church was soon too small to accommodate the growing congregation, and another log building, much larger, having two rooms, was built eight or ten rods southeast of the present site, the old building serving as a woodshed. The first quarterly meeting at Center was held March 13, 1826. The records disclose the fact that as early as 1824 the church had asked for such a meeting, but there is nothing to indicate that there was such a meeting prior to 1826. The present brick building was erected in 1828. The building is fifty by eighty feet, and, as were all the early churches of the Friends, was divided into two apartments.

During all these years this church has been an active factor in the life of the people of the surrounding community. Thousands have gathered within the quiet walls of this quaint old church and there received that divine inspiration which has enabled them to become better and more useful citizens. The church now has a membership of one hundred and five. The present pastor is Nancy A. C. Leonard.

SPRINGFIELD FRIENDS CHURCH

The history of the Friends church, known as Springfield, dates back more than a century. It is not only one of the oldest churches of this denomination in Ohio, but also one of the earliest west of the Alleghanies. Most of the early settlers of the Springfield neighborhod came from North Carolina, being driven from that state on account of their intense hatred of the institution of slavery. In the fall of 1806 four brothers—Eli, Isaac, Caleb and Joshua Harvey—came from that state and settled in Chester township, or rather in what was later organized as that township. The county of Clinton was not organized until four years later. These brothers built a small school house on the northwest corner of the farm now owned by Jesse H. Harvey and in this they held indulged meetings regularly until 1812. In that year the meeting was formally organized and a house of worship erected on the site of the present church structure.

The first volume of church records has been lost and consequently the early history of the church is difficult to trace. It is known that there have been three buildings erected on the same site and that the last one was built in 1891, at a cost of twenty-six hundred dollars. A large cemetery joins the church, in which may be found graves dating back more than a century. The first person buried in this cemetery was Lydia, the wife of Isaac Harvey, who died on January 2, 1813.

The loss of the early records makes it impossible to give a complete list of the ministers and pastors who have ministered to this congregation. Among the ministers may be mentioned Charles Osborn, Enos G Pray, Eli Newlin, Jacob Hadley, Mary N.

Hadley, John H. Douglas, and Jonathan Wright. Among the pastors have been John Kittrel, Levi Mills and Jesse H. Harvey.

The church now has a membership of two hundred and it is safe to say that hundreds of others have been communicants during its long carer of more than a hundred years. A Sabbath school and Christian Endeavor society are maintained throughout the year and both organizations are doing good work in the cause of the Master. This meeting is one of the oldest in the Mississippi valley and the thousands who have come under its influence have had cause to be thankful for its guidance. The present pastor is Jesse H. Harvey.

OGDEN FRIENDS CHURCH.

The Ogden Friends church dates back to 1817, although it was not located at the village until 1869. The present organization at Ogden was first established at what was known as Lytle's creek, where a house of worship was erected by the congregation in 1817 on three acres of land donated for church and cemetery purposes by Richard Fallis. The congregation continued to meet here until 1869, when they bought the Methodist Protestant church at Ogden. The old church at Lytle's Creek was sold in the latter part of the seventies to Elmer McMillan. Among the ministers who have served this church may be mentioned Elizabeth Haney, John C. Crites, John Kittrel, Lewis Moon and Bertha E. Day, the present pastor. The membership of the church now numbers one hundred. A Sabbath school, Ladies' Aid Society and Junior Band are maintained by the church.

GRASSY RUN MEETING.

Within a few years after the organization of Clinton county, in 1810, John Pearson, John Peelle, William Gallemore and others, either members of or who had been brought up in the faith and practices of the religious Society of Friends, had settled in the northern part of the county, in the part that later was organized into Wilson township. In accord with that most excellent custom of the pioneers of our country they soon began holding religious meetings, using each others' homes, in turn, for that purpose.

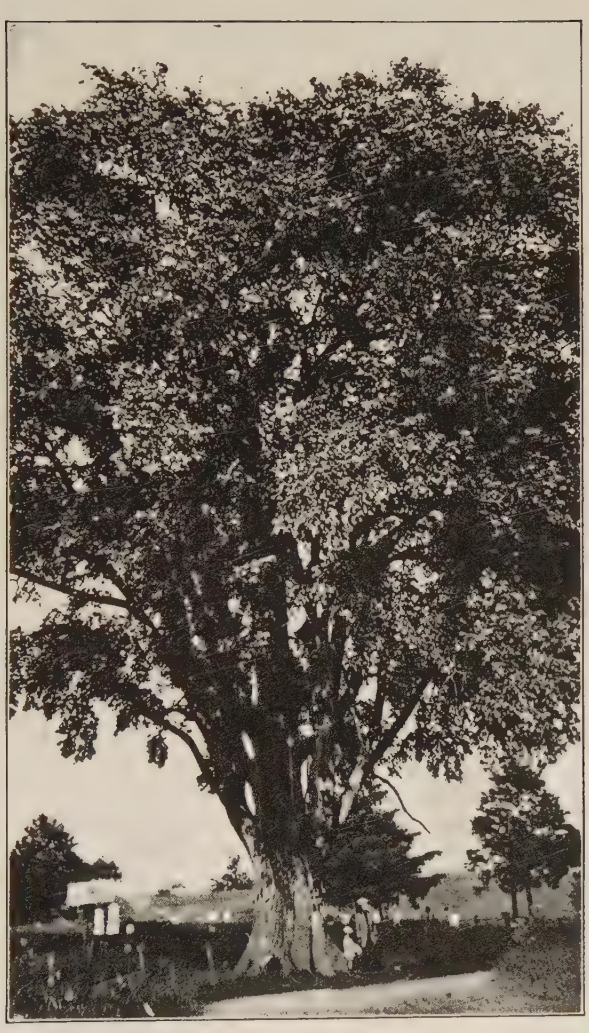
As early as 1820 these worthy pioneers were gathered into an "indulged meeting."—i. e., a meeting under the care of the committee set apart for the duty by a superior body. This organization was Center Monthly Meeting of Friends. When Dover Monthly Meeting was "set up" in 1824, the indulged meeting here was given into its charge as being in its limits.

The first official mention is the following minute on the records of Dover Monthly Meeting, 6th of 11th month, 1824:

"The subject of the indulged meeting on Grassy Run coming before this body, resulted in the appointment of John Oren, Daniel Bailey, Jonah Frazer, Moses Frazer, Thomas P. Moorman, Gayer Starbuck and Charles Atkinson to sit with them from time to time, render them such advice as they may be enabled, and report to a future meeting; also to report a Friend for overseer of that meeting, to next meeting."

The month following the date of the above extract, John Pearson's name was proposed as overseer and the meeting united in his appointment to that office. Annually, for the five years following, a committee was appointed by Dover Monthly Meeting with powers similar to the above.

The year following the "Hicksite Separation," this minute was placed on record under date of the 16th of the 4th month, 1829: "The committee appointed to visit the indulged meeting on Grassy Run made the following report: We of the committee attended to that appointment, had a conference with the members of that meeting and are united in judgment that the indulgence thereof has continued as long as is profitable." (Signed) David McMillan, Nathaniel Carter, Mahlon Haworth, Charles T. Moorman, Moses Frazer, William Shields, Daniel Bailey, Phoebe Haworth and Lydia Oren, "which this meeting unites with, and discontinues the indulgence of Grassy Run Meeting."



OLD ELM TREE AT CENTER MEETING HOUSE.

17 Feet in Circumference, 5 Feet Above Ground. Greatest Spread of Branches, 99 Feet.

"Alexander Oren, David Bailey, Jonah Frazer and James Bryan were appointed to attend that meeting, inform them of the above proceedings and report to next meeting."

The next month this entry was made: "The Friends appointed to attend the laying down of Grassy Run Indulged Meeting—report it is complied with."

Three months later the following petition was signed and forwarded:

"To Dover Monthly Meeting of Friends, to be held the 16th of 7th month, 1829.

"Dear Friends: The Friends of Grassy Run, having conferred together, are united in requesting for an established meeting for worship, to be held on first and fourth days in each week. Also a preparative meeting to be held on the fourth day preceding monthly meeting week."

(Signed) John Peelle, William Gallemore, George Stout, Joel Hunt, Jesse Hiatt, John Patterson, William Gallemore, Jr., Cephas Atkinson, Jesse Carter, John Pearson, Lydia Peelle, Mary Hunt, Mary Gallemore, Phebe Stout, Levicy Hiatt, Dinah Wyles, Rebecca Patterson and Hannah Pearson.

"Which claiming the attention of this meeting, we appoint David Bailey, Charles T. Moorman, Daniel Bailey, Joseph Doan, Jr., and George Carter to visit them in conjunction with a committee of women Friends, endeavor to judge the propriety of granting their request and report to the next meeting."

The committee reporting was continued from month to month.

Under the date 19th of the 11th month, 1829, we find: "The committee continued on the request of Friends living on Grassy Run for an established meeting, report they have attended to the appointment, and are free to grant their request, which report is united with by this and the women's meeting, and directs the request forwarded to quarterly meeting."

Center Quarterly Meeting appointed a committee to consider the propriety of confirming the request, which reported that, "they had visited Friends of Grassy Run, had a solid opportunity with them; and after mature deliberation, feel their request for a meeting of worship be granted to be held on the first and fourth days except fourth day in quarterly and monthly meeting weeks, but granted not the preparative, which was united with and the meeting established 5th month 19th, 1830."

Some time later the preparative was granted, being one of the preparatives forming Dover Monthly Meeting. This alliance continued until the action of the "Five Year Meeting," a few years since, in a measure abolished the preparative. Since them Grassy Run has exercised the rights and privileges of a Monthly Meeting.

The name of the meeting was taken from a stream flowing near the first meeting house ground. The first house of worship was a hewed-log structure situated on land now owned by heirs of William P. Gallemore. This was in use until 1848, when a substantial frame edifice, twenty-four by forty feet, of the universal type of Quaker meeting houses of that date, was built on land donated by John Peelle, about one mile southeast of the old location. This served its day and generation well. In 1882 the brick edifice now in use was constructed.

SCHOOLS.

Grassy Run has had a very gratifying record for school and college attendance. In the "forties" the meeting house was used as a monthly meeting school room and Friends were active and earnest in the cause of education. In addition to paying school tax levied by the state they cheerfully and voluntarily contributed of their means to support a system of monthly meeting schools. In 1850 the Grassy Run meeting built a school house on the meeting-house lot. In this building a very successful school was conducted until the close of the Civil War. Changes in population and improvement in the public-school system has been the cause of closing the Friends monthly meeting schools, and since then many of the young people have attended the College of Friends at Wilmington.

MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL.

With little exception Grassy Run has always been favored with a resident "recorded minister." John Pearson, Cornelius Douglas, with his nephews, John Henry and Robert Walter, George Carter and his sons, Wilson and Cyrus E., Eunice Winslow, Lewis Hunt, John M. Pidgeon, Isaiah Peelle, William P. Gallemore and Joseph Whinery, with his wife Edna, at different times, through a period of more than three-quarters of a century, have been zealous exponents of the Gospel.

At the "head of this meeting," for forty-five years, sat John Peelle, one of the pioneers, and rarely was his place vacant—a length of time seldom equaled, even among as long-lived a people as the Quakers.

WILMINGTON METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal church was the earliest religious organization in Wilmington. In 1813 a class was organized which met weekly in the homes of the seven members who composed it. The seven members to serve in this spiritual kingdom were James and Lydia Birdsall, Levi and Sarah Sheppard, Israel and Kate Johns and Mrs. D. McVeigh Jones. Over this little flock of worshippers, Rev. William Austin, the father-in-law of Mrs. Lois Austin, presided. This little band of Christian workers held nightly meetings at the home of the members and at other places where they were invited. They sang, prayed and exhorted among their friends and neighbors and many souls were won to Christ through the simple, but no less effective, work of these humble workers in the Saviour's vineyard. Their fervor was rewarded for it was not long until others joined the devout little band, among the number being Thomas Gaskill and family, A. T. Sewell and family, Joel Woodruff and wife, Charles Russell and family, Daniel Jones and wife and others whose names have, unfortunately, not come down to us. It is of interest to know that Charles Russell was the father of Dr. A. P. Russell and that Amos T. Sewell was the father of Mrs. Sarah Hale, who resides on West Main street, next door to her son, Dr. W. R. Hale, and whose vigorous memory treasures a rich store of anecdotes and reminiscences of pioneer days. Mr. Sewell often talked to his daughter of the joys and sorrows of the early settlers. He, with several other Methodist families, lived about two miles out the Prairie road, which at that time was a trail through a swamp. Every prayer meeting evening they would all come to the village to church, stopping on the way by a log to have a little neighborhood prayer meeting so as to get their spiritual armor polished up, as it were, for the encounter with his satanic majesty later in the evening.

AN INCIDENT.

Another story serves as an illustration of how far the children have departed from the theological trails blazed by their fathers. The only grist-mill in the country was at Waynesville. All the grinding was done in the dry season, for when the rain came the roads were impassable. One of Mr. Sewell's neighbors had been out of meal and for several days had eked out sufficient for his family by grating the corn on a piece of tin filled with nail holes. He appointed a morning to go to mill, but when the day came the rain was pouring. The farmer hurriedly prepared for the trip, hoping to go and return before the road became a slough. But the wife viewed the preparations with astonishment. "Why, father," she said, "are you going without the family prayers?" He pleaded haste and left without the customary devotions. All kinds of accidents befell him and he knew it was because of his neglected duty. In the night the settlers heard him coming home, shouting and praying. They all joined him on the way and, collecting in the home of one of their number, began a revival that was talked of for many days.

BUILDINGS.

The rapidly-increasing membership made a church building a necessity. In 1818 James Birdsall sold to the trustees of the Methodist church the old frame house where milling had been done by horse power. The house stood on the site of the present Methodist church. The old mill was repaired and made comfortable for church services. Levi Sheppard did the brickwork and plastering and Israel Johns, Joel Woodruff and Daniel Jones did the woodwork. The building was remodeled and ready for occupancy by the little congregation in 1819. It was in this old, overhauled mill that such strong preachers as Collins, Christie, Bigelow, Bascom, James Quinn, James Finley and others preached Christ and Him crucified.

The first class had been organized into a congregation in 1814 and assigned to the White Oak circuit, Miami district, over which Rev. Samuel Parker was the presiding elder at that time. The first preacher appointed to the Wilmington church was William Burke. He and his successors held forth in the mill-church until 1833, when it was replaced by a brick edifice which was at that day one of the best in the state. Charles Russell and Levi Sheppard constituted the building committee. In 1865, Bishop Wiley laid the corner stone of the present church and it was dedicated July 29, 1866, by Bishop Davis W. Clark. The building committee was composed of J. P. Brindle, Joshua James and Thomas Wraith. The late B. F. Jones hauled the first load of brick that went in its construction. The Rev. A. Meharry was pastor at the time it was being erected. Those were busy days for the Aid Society for they raised one thousand one hundred seventy-seven dollars and ninety-eight cents, a large sum for the period just at the close of the Civil War. The auditorium was at this time left unfinished, and in 1871, during the pastorate of the Rev. A. U. Beall, the work was completed, and the room was dedicated by Dr. I. W. Wiley, then editor of the Ladies' Repository and the next year elected bishop.

Bishops Walden, Moore and Cranston have frequently visited Wilmington and preached from its pulpit. Three bishops, H. B. Bascom, T. A. Morris and S. M. Merrill, have served this church either as pastor or presiding elder. Mrs. Elizabeth Quinn Taylor, now a member of the church, is the daughter of the Rev. James Quinn, who was pastor here eighty-three years ago. Wilmington has twice entertained the Cincinnati conference, in 1874, when Rev. William Runyan was pastor, and Bishop R. S. Foster, of Boston, was the president, and again in 1894, during the pastorate of the Rev. E. T. Lane, and at this session Bishop D. A. Goodsell, of New York, presided.

In 1840, the church was divided on the slavery question, a number forming themselves into an independent congregation, thus anticipating by a few years the rending of the church in the United States into the church North and church South.

IMPROVEMENTS.

In 1902 the church was greatly improved by putting steel walls and ceiling on the auditorium and making a general change in the whole church plan. In 1913, the year the church celebrated its centennial, the building was redecorated within and repainted without; other interior improvements were made at the time, but the greatest addition was the pipe organ, which was installed that year with appropriate ceremonies. The parsonage, on East Columbus street, was built about twelve years ago during the pastorate of Rev. J. S. Pumphrey.

The present membership of the church reaches nearly four hundred; the Sunday school enrolls about three hundred and the Epworth League about fifty. Of the present official board, C. C. Nichols, D. M. Rudduck, A. H. Hains, C. R. Fisher, Amy F. Hale and Emma S. Jones have each served twenty-five years or more, while J. S. Kimbrough, S. D. Chancellor, William Mann, G. M. Colvin, George Buckley and L. G. Bangham, in other churches before coming to Wilmington, have, with their terms here, filled the places of stewards or trustees for an equal period. For twenty-seven years C. R. Fisher has been in charge of the music in the church, and his father was chorister for nearly as long a period before him. Mrs. C. R. Fisher has been organist for nineteen years. It is interesting to note that Mrs. Sarah Hale and Mrs. Mary Hale Brindle were both members of the church for more than three-quarters of a century.

The family of the first class-leader, Levi Sheppard, had been for one hundred years continuously on the church roll till the death of his grandson, Frank S. Broomhall, in October, 1913. Among the early families of this congregation who are yet represented in our membership we note the names of the following: Austin, Sewell, Hale, Rudduck, Sayres, Fisher, Fuller, Russell, Hinman, Brindle, Lacy, Shewalter, Frazer, Darbyshire, James, O'Neal and Quinn.

There have gone from this church into the ministry, A. D. Raleigh, G. M. Edgar, A. B. Austin and the present district superintendent, C. M. Van Pelt, who was born and reared in the bounds of this parish. And as minister's wives, Mrs. Raleigh, Mrs. Edgar and Mrs. Stephen Holland may be mentioned.

Among those holding places in Methodist and other colleges and academies may be noted C. B. Austin, Frank Austin, H. M. Buckley, A. C. Conger, Eva Wolf and Ollie Austin. Deaconesses Sarah Ireland and Rhua Deakin were members of this congregation. And hundreds have gone to other communities to bless the world, and enrich the life of the church and kingdom wherever their lot has been cast. In these hundred years not less than two thousand five hundred people have been affiliated with this church, and the work it has done for them, and through them for the Kingdom of God, only eternity will reveal. Every form of Christian activity, evangelistic, educational, social and benevolent, has been fostered and forwarded by Wilmington Methodism.

CENTENNIAL SERVICES.

By action of the official board, Sundays, December 7 and 14, 1913, were named as the dates for the centennial celebration. On the first date the pastor presented the salient facts of the church's history, and on December 14, the Rev. George H. Dart, D. D., who was pastor of the church at the semi-centennial in 1863, was present and preached to the delight and profit of all.

The pastor, with C. C. Nichols and D. M. Rudduck, was appointed a committee to prepare for publication a short history of the century of the church's life, and a roster of its present members.

The different church organizations are all doing effective and acceptable work. The Sunday school is prosperous and successful. The Epworth League is accomplishing helpful results in the life of our young people. The Ladies' Aid Society is alert, efficient and loyal, a mighty force and factor in the material, social and religious life of the church, and through it, of our community. Both of the woman's missionary societies, foreign and home, are rendering splendid service in cultivating a broad and comprehensive grasp of the church's work in the whole world and giving largely in both fields of toil, for the speedy accomplishment of that great purpose. There is no great Christian enterprise on earth, to which Wilmington Methodism does not contribute its prayers and means.

THE PASTORATE.

Wilmington was on a circuit from the beginning of the organization of the church until 1849 and since then has been an independent charge. The list of ministers, with the dates of their service, is here given as published in the last church directory: William Austin, 1813; William Burke, 1814; R. W. Finley and J. Oglesby, 1815; R. Bigelow and J. Waterman, 1816; Samuel Brown and Francis Landrum, 1817-18; B. Westlake and H. Brown, 1819-20; J. C. Brooke and T. S. Helt, 1821; B. Lawrence and W. Walker, 1822-23; (in 1824 Wilmington became the head of the circuit) N. B. Griffith, 1824; John Sale, 1825; Andrew F. Baxter, 1826; John S. Taylor, 1827; Richard Brandriff, 1828; G. W. Maley, 1829-30; James Quinn and J. M. Goshorn, 1831; W. D. Barrett and C. W. Swain, 1832-33; J. W. Clark and R. Chaney, 1834; F. Butler and Z. Wharton, 1835; J. Laws, S. H. Holland and Werter Davis, 1836-37; W. D. Barret, 1838; James Quinn, 1839; J. W. Howland and James Quinn, 1840; E. B. Chase and Z. Connell, 1841-42; L. P. Miller and I. N. Mark, 1843; W. Parish and D. C. Johnson, 1844; J. J. Hill and O. P. Williams, 1845; J. W. Keeley and C. J. Meredith, 1846; J. F. Chalfant and S. M. Merrill, 1847; A. W. Tibbetts, W. B. Jackson, 1848.

In 1849, Wilmington became a station and since then the pastors have been: J. W. Fowble, 1849; J. F. Conrey, 1850-51; W. S. Morrow, 1852; C. H. Lawton, 1853-54; T. Collett, 1855-56; H. Baker, 1857; J. W. Cassatt, 1858; T. S. Dunn, 1859; S. A. Brewster, 1860; G. H. Dart, 1861-62; A. Meharry, 1863-65; S. D. Clayton, 1866-67; S. Weeks, 1868; H. M. Keck, 1869; A. U. Beall, 1870; William Runyan, 1871-73; L. F. Van Cleve, 1874-75; J. P. Porter, 1876-78; C. Ferguson, 1879-1880; J. H. Lease, 1881-83; James Stephenson, 1884-86; G. W. Kelley, 1887-88; H. D. Ketcham, 1889-91; E. T. Lane, 1892-94; A. N. Spahr, 1895-97; John Pearson, D. W. Clark, 1898; C. F. Enyart, 1899; E. T. Wells, 1900-01; J. S. Pumphrey, 1902-06; C. L. Conger, 1907-14; J. J. Richards, 1914.

BLANCHESTER METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The adherents of the Methodist Episcopal faith had made several attempts to establish a church in Blanchester prior to 1878, but failed. In the fall of that year the Cincinnati conference determined to take the work up and establish a church here. The population of the town was nine hundred, but there were only seven members of this faith to be found in the village. The cabinet appointed Rev. A. Hamilton to the Butlerville charge, with the understanding that Blanchester should be a part of the work, Rev. J. F. Bail being the presiding elder.

Arrangements were made for preaching in the Free-Will Baptist church for a stipulated rent. Reverend Hamilton organized the first permanent Methodist Episcopal church society in Blanchester, December 23, 1878, with the following charter members: John Johnson, Emily Johnson, Viola Johnson, Philip A. Snyder, Barbara Snyder, Margaret A. Arnold, Catherine Crosson.

In the following year they determined to build a church home. It was a heroic undertaking, considering their number and financial ability. The summer was spent in securing subscriptions and in planning, in the fall of 1879 the foundation was laid, and in the spring of 1880 the church building was commenced and completed in the summer of the same year. It was in semi-Gothic style, with a seating capacity of two hundred and sixty, and built at a cost of four thousand dollars. It was dedicated on August 22, 1880, by Bishop Peck, of Syracuse, New York, who returned the pastor for the third year, at the end of which time he left but two hundred dollars on subscriptions to collect and one hundred and seventeen members.

The trustees at this time who assisted in putting through the erection of the new building were: D. H. Moon, P. A. Snyder, J. Chivington, Isaac Starkey, Owen West, Charles Lee, Wilson Gaskill, E. M. Mulford and John Johnson.

For fifteen years this church society was served by faithful pastors with varied success. In the fall of 1895 Reverend Hamilton was appointed to the church for the second time, with the understanding that the church society proceed to remodel and enlarge the first structure. "Man proposes, God disposes." On October 18, 1895, the great fire, which swept Blanchester, consumed the first Methodist Episcopal church, leveling the brick walls that had stood the wear of years without even a crack.

After a struggle, the church and Sunday school found a home in the Primitive Baptist church at a fair rental. But they were compelled to build, with but one thousand dollars insurance and a debt of nine hundred dollars on the parsonage to offset that. At the first meeting of the trustees, formal action was taken authorizing the pastor to secure plans for acceptance. D. H. Moon, H. G. Gates and Frank Losh were appointed as a building committee, with the pastor as superintendent. The work was slow, owing to the large number of buildings being erected at this time.

The style of the church is pure Gothic, with cathedral windows in handsome design. It has a seating capacity of six hundred. Its furniture is of the latest pattern and design. It is frescoed in an artistic manner, with electric fixtures of brass, with English gilt finish in beautiful design. The foundation stone is from Greenfield and the white sandstone and coping from Cleveland, while the pressed brick for the walls is of a dark red color. It was built at an outlay of from nine thousand to ten thousand dollars. The dedication services were held on April 4, 1897, Dr. Charles H. Payne, D. D., LL. D., of New York, officiating, assisted by Dr. T. H. Pearne, presiding elder, Dr. Louis Curtis, of Cincinnati, and others, with suitable services during the week, closing Sunday, April 11, by sermon from Doctors Gullette and Spahr.

The membership at present numbers over four hundred, the Sunday school, three hundred; with two ladies' societies and a promising Epworth League, with senior, intermediate and junior chapters in good working order. The church and its workings are harmonious in every respect. The ministers who have served this society from the beginning to the present time are: Alexander Hamilton, 1878-80; J. F. McColm, 1881-83; H. D. Ketcham, 1884; H. D. Ketcham and A. T. Cowgill, 1885; F. M. Kirgan and Rev. Thompson, 1886; Rev. Crawford and Ira E. Trice, 1887; Charles J. Hartley, 1888; Reuben McColm, 1889; C. L. Winget, 1890-91; James H. McNary, 1892-94; Alexander Hamilton, 1895-97; Charles H. Haines, 1898-90; George W. Vorhis, 1901-05; A. T. Cowgill, 1906-07; Rev. Bailey, 1908-9; Walter Nash, 1909-11; Walter Gray, 1911-13; and the present incumbent, Rev. C. B. Stevens, who came to this charge in September, 1914.

NEW VIENNA METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal church at New Vienna traces its history back to about 1842, when the first class was formed under the evangelistic efforts of Rev. C. B. Warrington, an itinerant preacher. He succeeded in organizing a small congregation, so small, however, that they were not able to build a church. They rented the Baptist church for a year and then fitted up a private dwelling, then standing on a lot occupied in later years by Mrs. Eliza Dennis. They continued to hold services in this building until 1850, when they erected a building near the site of the present church.

Mrs. Mary Bowers was the first member of the church and the only Methodist in the town when the Rev. Warrington began his first revival. Among the charter members were Thomas Hale and wife, Jonathan Wright and wife, Eliza Matthews, William and Ann Noble, Thomas Williams and Julia Moyer, later the wife of Rev. C. H. Savage. It has not been possible to obtain a complete list of the ministers who have served the church. The list which follows gives their names in approximately the order in which they served: C. B. Warrington, Francis A. Timmons, James Webb, Jeremiah Ellsworth, Levi Cunningham, T. M. Gossard, Anthony Musgrove (a blind man), Joseph Gatch, John S. Jackson, Allen Thompson, D. Calahan, A. N. Spahr, S. A. Brewster, H. Stokes, T. A. G. Phillips, M. P. Zink, E. H. Field, John Shinn, James Porter, Wesley Webster, J. H. Middleton, S. W. Edminston, J. R. Hunter, J. McShultz, Lafayette Young, R. E. Smith, G. M. Edgar, J. G. Black and Gilbert P. Austin, the present pastor.

In 1876 the church started to erect a new building, but it was not completed until 1884. The building is a two-story brick structure and cost about ten thousand dollars. The lower story was completed several years before the upper, and services were held on the ground floor until money was raised to finish the upper story.

The auxiliaries of the church include a flourishing Sunday school of two hundred members, under the superintendency of B. T. Penn, and the Epworth League, under the presidency of Kathleen Haines. The church membership now numbers one hundred and fifty.

SABINA METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal church at Sabina was organized by Rev. William Smith in 1850, with about thirty members. The same minister had held services for the five years previous in a school house, but no organization had been effected. George Brown, J. H. Middleton and D. H. Sargent were prominent pastors during the infancy of the church. In 1860 the congregation bought a lot formerly occupied by a distillery for two hundred and seventy-five dollars. In 1862 they built a frame structure, at a cost of three thousand dollars.

The list of pastors, as taken from the records of the church, is as follows: J. H. Middleton, 1860; J. Botkin and J. F. Hull, 1861; D. H. Sargent, 1862; Elisha Parke, 1862; M. N. Maxey (served only three months on account of his health), 1863; W. G. Smith, 1863; Nimrod McDonald, 1864; Samuel Brown, 1865; Samuel Brown and Reverend Lloyd, a local preacher, 1866; A. D. Raleigh, 1867-68 (during 1868 the circuit was changed so as to throw Sabina and Reesville together); H. Wren (of Wren, the record says, "Nothing to say—only Sabina couldn't go him nor he them, so they left each other alone in their separate glory"); O. N. Marsh, 1870 (in this year the record states that there were eighty-two full members, ninety-six probationers and that seventy-one had been baptized); J. I. Taggart, 1872-73; E. M. Cole, 1874; D. Lee Aultman, 1875 (Aultman was sick with the typhoid fever and D. S. Ferguson was secured to finish out the year); D. Lee Aultman, 1876-77; at this point there is a gap in the church records until 1886; J. W. K. Shultz, 1886 (in this year services at Reesville, which had been attached to Sabina, were discontinued); L. M. Davis, 1889-94; J. R. Colley, 1894-96 (in September, 1894, Sabina became an independent charge; a church was erected at Sabina, at a cost of $11,000, and a parsonage built, at a cost of two thousand dollars); Gilbert P. Austin, 1896-1901; R. K. Deem, 1901-04; William M. Coffman, 1904-07; J. S. Pumphrey, 1907-13; J. E. Thomas, 1913-14; D. M. Stafford, since 1914.

AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The African Methodist Episcopal church of Wilmington dates back to 1833, when Wiley Runnella, of Cincinnati, came to the town and held the first meeting at the home of William Brown on the corner of South and Sugartree streets. At this time the church was formally organized with the following charter members: James Wheeler, James Ward, James Kimble, William Stewart, Anna Rutledge, Minnie Kimble, Mary Prior, James Lucas, Winnie Goode and Sarah Payne. The meetings were held at private homes until 1838 when a rude log church was erected on Lincoln street. This building was in use until 1852 when the present brick building was erected, at a cost of eight hundred dollars. In 1879-80 nearly a thousand dollars was expended in remodeling the building and in May, 1880, it was rededicated by Rev. E. Cumberland, of Greenfield, Ohio, and Reverend Mortimer, of Cincinnati. A collection of one hundred and fifty dollars was taken up in the afternoon to apply on the church debt. The congregation has long since paid all of its obligations and is now on a sound basis and doing good work among the colored people of Wilmington.

Early records of the church are missing and it has been impossible to secure a complete list of the ministers, with the dates of their service. As near as can be ascertained, the following list is the order in which the ministers have served the church: Revs. Lee Watkins, T. Hogan, Edward White, A. March, Charles Bundy, Charles Green, K. W. Toney, W. J. Johnston, M. R. Wilson, J. T. Byrd, J. S. Ferguson, J. W. Barber, R. A. Adams, H. N. Smith, A. Knox, Jesse Smith, J. H. Meredith, Charles Dorsey, Charles Newsome, John Coleman, George Williams, C. D. White, T. W. Woodson, F. D. Day, C. E. Williams, W. T. Beck, and Charles H. Sheene, the present pastor. The church now enrolls one hundred and twenty-nine members. A Sabbath school and Ladies' Aid Society are maintained and are accomplishing good work in their respective spheres. This church has been a potent force for good during its whole career of more than eighty years and, under the ministrations of the present pastor, is increasing its usefulness year by year.

SABINA AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The African Methodist Episcopal church at Sabina, locally known as Allen chapel, was organized by Rev. Charles Bundy on January 1, 1879, in a brick school house on North Hulse street. The charter members were Rev. John D. White, Edward Rolins, Martha Patterson, Catherine Logan, Patience Morrell, Eliza J. Lytle, Emma Lytle, Emma Wadkins, Mary Fields, Dorias Mitchell, Leo Morrell, Margaret Jones, John Fields and Simpson Mitchell. The congregation worshipped in the colored school building until about 1883 when they bought a lot and erected a building at a cost of a thousand dollars. On March 22, 1885, the church was completely destroyed by fire, but within a year a new building was erected under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Moses R. Wilson, and dedicated by Bishop Campbell. The second building cost six hundred ninety-eight dollars and twenty-five cents.

The pastors of the church from the beginning are as follow: Charles Bundy, Moses R. Wilson, R. M. Turner, John W. Steward, J. W. Young, Charles Gray, W. J. Johnson, W. L. Tolliver, M. M. Smith, D. D. Lewis, Thomas E. Knox, F. D. Taylor, S. W. White, H. E. Newsome, A. E. Simmons, H. A. Grant, R. P. Clark, T. W. Johnson, H. H. Edwards and J. P. Maxwell, the present pastor. There are sixty-five members at the present time.

SABINA METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

As early as 1830 the Methodist Protestants had commenced to hold services in Richland township, at the home of John Harper, in the Posey survey. Two years later the little congregation began holding meetings at the home of E. Roberts and continued to meet there regularly until 1841. In that year they built a church on the Roberts farm, which became known as the Bethel church. This church was burned a few years later and was at once rebuilt on the old site. The congregation remained here until 1860, when they decided to build a church in the town of Sabina at a cost of three thousand dollars. This was a one-story frame structure, with a seating capacity of about three hundred and fifty. Upon the completion of the church in Sabina the congregation at the Bethel church removed in a body to Sabina and discontinued the old church. The frame building in Sabina stood for many years and was eventually replaced by the present ten-thousand-dollar brick edifice. The church also has a membership of two hundred and ninety. It maintains a Sunday school, but has no other auxiliary organizations The present pastor of the church is Rev. A. L. Reynolds.

Among the ministers of the church may be mentioned the following: Jonathan Flood, Alzed McGuire, Benjamin Ryan, Joel Dalbey, A. H. Trumbo, William Evans, A. H. Bassett, R. Rose, R. T. Boyd, J. M. Young, J. H. Webster, R. Dobbins, A. Channell, J. J. White, S. H. Ebans, E. P. Winans, G. W. Fowler, J. R. Thompson, A. V. Shepherd, C. C. Caddy, W. E. Stubbs, J. M. Littler, M. V. B. Evans, G. W. Leadom, T. D. Howe, W. B. Warrington, Z. D. Hickman, P. F. Johnson, P. B. Chaney, O. P. Stevens, W. Ravencraft, J. Hastings, A. N. Barlow, J. W. Spring, A. B. Kingsley, J. Shepherd and Dr. A. L. Reynolds, the present pastor.

PORT WILLIAM METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

The Methodist Protestants of Liberty township built their first house of worship in 1832 under the leadership of Samuel Haynes and William Ireland. Haynes donated the ground on which the church was erected, became one of the first trustees, was a deacon for many years and during his whole life was a zealous worker in his denomination. Other prominent members in the early history of the church were Obed Waln, Andrew Strickle and James Antram. The first building was a log structure and was replaced by a frame building in 1844. After the death of Haynes, on February 17, 1864, the interest began to wane and in a few years meetings were discontinued altogether. This first Methodist Protestant church was locally known as Mt. Pleasant. Several years later there was a revival of interest in the church in Liberty township which resulted in the organization of a congregation at Port William and the erection of a substantial brick building at that place. This church has been maintained regularly since its re-establishment in the village and is now in charge of Rev. Charles Cultzbach. The last report to the conference credits this church with two hundred and forty-three members and a Sunday school enrollment of two hundred and seventy-seven.

CHAPEL BUILT BY JAMES VILLARS, AT A COST OF $14,000, AND BY HIM PRESENTED TO THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCHES OF MELVIN AND REESVILLE.

There have been Methodist Protestant churches at Melvin and Reesville for many years, but neither congregation is very strong at the present time. Both churches have buildings and have maintained more or less regular services. In 1915 Rev. John Mercer, a minister of the United Brethren church, was the pastor of both churches.

VILLARS CHAPEL AND CLARKSVILLE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCHES.

The Methodist Protestant churches at Villars Chapel and Clarksville owe their existence to the zeal of one man, the late James Villars. He erected the church known as Villars chapel in 1868, the inscription plate in the front of the building reading: "James Villars Chapel, 1868, Free for all Christian Denominations." This is a large, two-story building and is one of the largest houses of worship in the county. During the summer of 1915 it was completely overhauled and now presents a very attractive appearance on the interior. At the present time the pastor is Rev. Hamilton. The church at Clarksville was also the gift of Mr. Villars, but it long ago ceased to hold services. About 1904 the building was sold to Frank Hoggett, who converted it into a stable. He also bought the parsonage and it is now used as a private residence.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF WILMINGTON.

The First Baptist church of Wilmington was organized on August 6, 1853. At the meeting at which it was organized delegates from the churches at Caesar's creek, Jonah's run, Port William, Spring Valley, Washington, Cedarville, Centerville and Cowan's creek were present. The original membership was composed of the following: James S. Hoblett, Dr. Joseph K. Sparks, Robert and Mary Wood, William Williams, James Phillips, J. C. C Dowden, Sterling Bartlett, Rhoda Morris, Mary Hoblett, Elizabeth Darbyshire, Olive Bartlett and Hannah Griffith. The first board of trustees consisted of James S. Hoblett, J. K. Sparks, Robert Wood and William Williams. Elder S. Marshall was the first pastor. The board of trustees agreed, on September 13, 1853, to build a church building, at a cost of about ten thousand dollars, and a neat one-story brick structure, size about sixty-six by forty-four feet, was constructed. The edifice was dedicated on the last Sunday of July, 1854. In 1865, a square tower was added to the front of the church, at a cost of about fifteen hundred dollars. In 1871, about four thousand dollars was spent in the remodeling of the church, a gallery was constructed across the rear of the room, new pews put in, the walls frescoed and new stained glass windows added. The re-opening of the church took place on Sunday, June 4, 1871, with a sermon by Doctor Jeffrey, of Cincinnati, who preached from the following words, "Who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people zealous for good works."

In 1914 this church built a new edifice of stone, hard brick and tile. The interior is finished in beautiful dark oak. The auditorium has a seating capacity of about seven hundred persons. A new pipe organ is to be installed by September 1, of this year (1915). The new church cost twenty-seven thousand dollars.

The membership in 1915 included two hundred and one persons, with a total membership from the beginning of about seven hundred. Its auxiliary works are the Sabbath school, the Young People's Society, the Ladies' Aid Society, the Women's Missionary Society and the Young Ladies' Missionary Society.

The ministers who have served the church as pastors are: Rev. Elder S. Marshall, August 6, 1853, to February 11, 1854; Rev. J. N. Chapman, April 8, 1854, to May 12, 1855; Rev B. B. Bedell, October 8, 1856, to December 9, 1866; Rev. B. G. Siegfried, December 9, 1866, to May 31, 1868; Rev. A. E. Anderson, February 13, 1869, to some time later in the same year; Rev. W. Kidder, July 9, 1870, to February 26, 1871; Rev. B. G. Siegfried, June 4, 1871, to June 23, 1872; Rev. B. H. Gardner, January 10, 1873, to June 7, 1873; Rev. W. E Prichard, October 1, 1874, to May 10, 1876; Rev. B. G. Siegfried, May 8, 1878, to 1881; Rev. A. K. Sargent, September, 1881, to 1887; Rev. N. E Behnett, two pastorages, covering eleven years; Rev. J. L. Gough, one year and five months; Rev. Mason, one year; Rev. Robert Golder, three and one-half years; Rev. Henry Brandt, April 1, 1907, to the present time (1915).

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, BLANCHESTER.

The First Baptist church at Blanchester was known as a Free-Will Baptist church upon its organization in 1852, later as the Free Baptists, and since 1913 as the First Baptist church. The early history of the church is more or less obscure, but it appears that meetings were held in private homes as early as 1845. It is certain that the first building was erected and dedicated in 1852, the lot on which the church stood being purchased of Christopher Lazenby. The first trustees of the church were Levi Sever, Bonham Fox and Edward Crossen. The charter members were Doctor Wilford and Jane Cusick, Jonathan and Joanna Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Day, Mrs. Rebecca Baldwin, Hitty Whitney and Mrs. Robert Stephenson. There may have been others, but, owing to the loss of the first record book, the list of charter members has been necessarily gleaned from the memories of some of the oldest living members at the present time.

The pastors from 1852 to 1879, supplied from inquiry, served in the following order, the dates of their several years of service being unobtainable: Cyrus Dudley, O. E. Baker, P. W. Perry, Thomas Poston, I. D. Reed, Lash, Tribbetta and A. M. Simonton. The church record is complete since 1879 and the pastors since that year are as follows: W. C. Hulse, 1879-81; C. A. Gleason, 1881-83; R. M. Cloud, 1884-89; M. S. Waller, 1889-91; B. F. Zell, 1891; Nathan B. Crabtree (and father) 1891-93; Samuel E. Kelley, 1894-97; A. R. Toothacre, 1898-1901 (two years and nine months); W. W. Deckard, 1901, November 1, 1903 (resigned); Charles P. Collett, January 1, 1904-06; A. J. Osborne, 1906-09; Thomas Lasley, 1909-12; J. H. Hollingsworth, 1912-14; Andrew Turkington, January, 1914-June 1, 1915.

The present brick building was erected in 1881 and has been extensively improved from time to time, until now it is one of the most attractive churches in the town. A frame parsonage was built by the ladies of the church in 1890. There is probably not another parsonage in the state which has been erected under similar conditions. In 1875 there had been organized a Ladies Sewing Circle and for many years Mrs. Sarah Smith was the untiring president of the organization. For at least ten years prior to 1890 this organization was engaged in raising money for a parsonage and, as one of the members of the club told the historian, they had quilts and other products of their handiwork in every state in the union. They finally raised enough money to erect a two-thousand-dollar parsonage without calling on the men of the church for a single cent. This circle has also assumed the responsibility of keeping the parsonage in repair since it was built.

Another unique organization in the church is a band of young ladies known as the Silent Toilers. They were organized in 1891 under the presidency of Mrs. Minnie Rice and within five years they raised by their own united efforts five hundred dollars to clear the church of debt. Since that time they have raised money for carpeting the church, as well as making other valuable improvements. This same group of girls organized a mandolin club in 1895 and gave frequent concerts in the church and elsewhere. They played for entertainments, receptions, commencements and on various other occasions, and in this way raised enough money to buy a five-hundred-and-fifty-dollar vocalion.

The history of the church would not be complete without making mention of the bell. It was bought in Cincinnati in the fall of 1855 and was the first church bell hung in Blanchester. The following eight persons donated the one hundred and fifty dollars necessary to make the purchase: Dr. Wilford Cusick, $30; Bonham Fox, $30; Joseph D. Smith, $15; Jonathan Fox, $15; Hetty Whitney, $10; Rebecca Baldwin, $10; Edward Day, $10; Robert Stephenson, $10. This bell still calls the members to worship.

An interesting incident in the church occurred on May 30, 1915. On that day the report of the Sunday school of sixty-three years previous (May 30, 1852) was read in the Sunday school. A striking coincidence of the report was that there were ninety-one pupils present in 1852, the same number in attendance in 1915. An old record gives the following teachers of the Sunday school in 1858: Thomas Ball, H. Halford, William Pierson, Moses Pierson, R. S. Eastham, Nancy Pierson, Delia Cusick, Martha Titus, Rebecca Baldwin and Esther Gustin. The report of September 19, 1858, the date these teachers were elected, closes by saying that "I think by God's help this will be a good school. May the God of Jacob bless us and may much good be done. William P. Wolf, secretary."

The Sunday school in 1915 had two hundred and twenty-five enrolled. William C. Arbogast is the superintendent. There are forty children on the cradle roll and a goodly number are enlisted in the home department. On each Easter Sunday flower seeds are given to all the children and the flowers later find their way into the homes of the sick and afflicted.

As has been previously stated, the church was known as a Free-Will Baptist church at the beginning, but it is not generally known outside of the church that several years later the church dropped the word "Will" and simply called themselves Free Baptists. In 1913 the church voted to become a Regular Baptist church under the local name of the First Baptist church of Blanchester. This did not imply any change in church polity or discipline and was only a formality which was deemed best for the church. Some time before this permission had been given by the general conference to call all Free Baptist merely Baptists and it was in accordance with this ruling that the Blanchester church changed its name.

The church now has a membership of two hundred and is in a very flourishing condition. The pastor's salary is raised by the duplex envelope system and is paid him in weekly installments.

COWAN'S CREEK BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Baptists of Washington township effected the first religious organization in the township about the year 1818-19 The charter members, nine in number, were Peter Lieurance, Sr., Peter Lieurance, Jr., Lucy Lieurance, Hannah Lieurance, William Mount, Hannah Phillips, Amy Phillips, Susan Conner and Polly Michael. Early records are not available, but it seems certain that in 1818 or 1819 the elder Peter Lieurance donated a tract of land for a church and cemetery, and that a rude log church was at once erected. This first church was not near the present building, which was erected some years later in the eastern part of the township. The present building is a frame structure and cost eighteen hundred dollars at the time it was erected.

Rev. Hiram Burnett helped to organize the church in 1818 and remained its pastor for many years afterward. He was followed by Jacob Layman and James How. About 1835 Elliott Raynes, an eloquent preacher from Kentucky, came into the neighborhood and preached the doctrines of Alexander Campbell so effectively that he practically split the Baptist church in twain. In fact the Christian church thus organized soon became the leading church of the township and has so remained to this day. James How, John Rodger, together with Rev. Raynes, were the leaders in the new church. The list of ministers, as furnished by the church, is not complete, and the dates given supposedly indicate when each pastorate began Whether the minister served until his successor was appointed is not known. The list as furnished follows: Rev. Layman, 1838-39; David Pond, 1840; Wedge, 1845; Waters, 1848; E. Tilton, 1850; J. B. Sutton, 1851; H. H. Brown, 1856; G. Taylor, 1858; J. Sargent, 1860; John Dunkleman, 1861; R. Cunningham, 1870; J. R. Powell, 1871; D. D Johnson, 1875-89; John Barrett, 1894; Jacob Baker, 1895; C. E. Griffin, 1897; J. H. Cosby, 1898-1900; J. L. Maddox, 1903; C. W. Shinn, 1905; G. C. Crippen, 1906; M. F. Bagby, 1907; N H. Long, 1910-15.

The church has an active Sunday school and a Junior Missionary Society. The present church building was erected in 1897 and dedicated on August 15 of that year.

BLANCHESTER PRIMITIVE BAPTISTS.

The Blanchester Primitive Baptist church is the only one in Clinton county and dates from 1885. For some time prior to that year services had been held in private homes, but in that year the present house of worship was erected. Among the early prominent members were Corwin Reed and wife, J. C. Keaton and wife, H. C. Baker and wife and Mrs. Benjamin Wilson. Most of these are still living. The few pastors of the church include Walter Yeoman, Corwin Reed, George Waddell and C. P. Ballard, the present incumbent. Reverend Ballard became connected with the church as pastor in March, 1912, and has settled in Blanchester to spend the remainder of his days. He will no doubt remain in charge of the church as long as he lives. He also preaches at Waynesville, Laurelville and Cumberland, none of these churches, however, being in Clinton county. The Blanchester congregation numbers seventeen persons. They have no church auxiliaries of any kind, their belief being that they are unnecessary. The Primitive Baptists call themselves Regular Baptists, and they are also known as "Hard-Shell" Baptists.

As far as has been ascertained, the only other Primitive Baptist churches in the county were in Vernon township. The Clarksville church was established as early as 1823, but it did not seem to have maintained an organization only for a short time. Another church of this denomination is reported as having been built on the college township road, a mile and a quarter north of Clarksville. This church early disappeared and nothing definite concerning it has been found. According to the most reliable accounts, the Primitive Baptists were unable to attract the younger generation and that, with the death of the first members, the church ceased to exist. Whatever the cause may be, it is certain that as a distinct denomination it will soon have disappeared altogether in Clinton county.

WILMINGTON COLORED BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Colored Baptists of Wilmington and vicinity effected a formal organization in 1870 with the following charter members: A. G. Mallory, Daniel Jackson, Fannie Lewis, Benjamin Morris, Phoebe Morris, Jacob Emmons, Katherine Mallory and Asa Pratt. For the first two years the members met at their homes, but in 1872 they erected a substantial little brick church. The first pastor was Asa Pratt, who was assisted by, and later succeeded by, Jacob Emmons. Owing to various causes the church was unable to maintain an effective organization and a few years ago meetings were discontinued altogether.

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Central Christian church of Wilmington is an offshoot of the regular Baptist church, which in the early years of the nineteenth century worshipped on the south side of Columbus street, between Walnut and Lincoln. The separation occurred in 1828 or 1829, and almost the entire membership of the Baptist church went with the Christian church. Services were continued for a time in the old church and the Baptist church remained only in name. But, inasmuch as the ground on which the house stood was donated for purposes of the Baptist church, otherwise to revert to the donor, they removed the material to a lot on Walnut street, between Columbus and Locust streets, and there built a one story brick church, which building they occupied until the erection of the present beautiful church edifice. The church building on Walnut street was erected about the year 1833 or 1834. The early records of the church are very incomplete, and the pioneer ministers and charter members are not named. The first pastor of the church of whom there is any record is Rev. Thomas J. Melish, who assumed the pastorate in 1851. The membership at that time was one hundred and five.

From reliable sources the information is gathered that, preceding 1851, and, in fact, about the time of the church organization, much credit should be given the memory of Rev. George McManis. It is to him that the church is indebted for the spirit of truth and righteousness in this locality. Among those who have labored for the church may be mentioned Revs. Aylett Rains, William Pinkerton, E. H. Hawley and those grand old pioneers of the reformation, Walter Scott and D. S. Burnett. Later pastors have been S. H. Bingman, 1874-75; W. S. Tingley, 1876; A. A. Knight, 1877-79; Carroll Ghent, 1880-81; C. J. Bartholomew, 1882-83; W. D. Moore, 1883-86; George Anderson, 1886; J. B. Knowles, 1886-87; Gay Waters, 1889-91; Enos Campbell, 1891-92; F. M. Green, 1892-96; W. A. Roush, 1896-98; A. B. Griffith, 1898-99; E. J. Meachem, 1900-08; J. M. Gordon, 1908-10; E. S. DeMiller, 1910—.

The church edifice now occupied by this congregation is located on the corner of South and Columbus streets. It is an imposing structure, one-story high, with free-stone trimmings. The basement is of brick and was completed in the spring of 1874, being first occupied in the spring of that year. The main auditorium remained in an unfinished state for more than five years. It was completed and was formally dedicated on Sunday, April 16, 1882, by Rev. Isaac Errett, D. D., of Cincinnati. It was finished at a cost of ten thousand dollars. On the northwest corner of the front of the building is a large tower, surmounted by a tall spire. The bell of the old church was suspended in this tower, but inattention to the iron fastenings left it insecure, and, on a Sunday in January, 1875, while the sexton was ringing it for Sunday school, the bell broke loose and fell to the pavement, breaking it into pieces. The following June, a new bell was secured and suspended. Its weight is seven hundred and fourteen pounds; with hanging attachment, about one thousand pounds.

NEW ANTIOCH CHURCH.

By J. W. Robinson.

The society which subsequently became the New Antioch Christian church was organized by Elder Samuel Rogers in 1816 and was known at the time of its organization as the "Newlight" church. The New Antioch church is located on the Wilmington and Lexington pike, near the village of New Antioch and five miles southeast of Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county.

The change of name from "Newlight" to "Christian" was gradual, lasting for a year or more. The first radical change was noted when George McManus, a sinner, demanded baptism at the hands of Elder Samuel Rogers. It took much reasoning to convince Elder Rogers that a penitent believer should be baptized "for the remission of sins." This occurred in January, 1827, and after that date this idea of the meaning of baptism was taught. About one year later the Lord's Supper was made a weekly observance, and it has so continued to the present time. About the same time the views of the Campbells began to be agitated, and they were embraced by this congregation as far as they accorded with the views of the New Testament. Thus the "Newlight" church was merged into the Christian, or Church of Christ, about the year 1827.

A few of the persons that labored in this church in its infancy, besides Elder Samuel Rogers, were Aylette Rains, William Irvin, J. Lucas, B. U. Watkins, Walter Scott, David Thompson, Joshua Swallow, Jonas Hartzel, D. S. Burnett, George McManus, James Vandervort, L. H. Jameison, H. K. Hoshour and B. F. Pirkey. A few of the charter members were Jonah Vandervort, the Bashores, Roberts, Huls and McKenzies.

When the congregation was first organized the people met at the homes of the members, or in their barns, or held open-air meetings, and when a building became necessary a small brick church was built. This was erected in the year 1822 near the site of the present church. This small building was used until a more commodious structure was built in 1857. The first house was built with a large open fireplace in each end. The pulpit was on one side and the entrance on the other. It was lighted with tallow candles in tin hangers on the walls, with two or three on the pulpit.

The church was named "Antioch" by Elder Rogers. Later the village near by took the same name, and still later the "New" was prefixed when a postoffice was established there.

On account of incomplete records, nothing is known as to the cost of the first church building. Suffice it to say that the labor in erecting it was donated by only a very few of the members. The records of the present building show that it cost about two thousand seven hundred dollars in money, besides much donated labor by members of the congregation. According to the specifications, the house was to be a neat, substantial brick structure, with stone foundation, the size to be thirty-five by forty-five feet. Barnett Bashore, William Walker and P. H. Vandervort, as trustees of the church, let the contract of the building to William McMillen, of Wilmington, received the subscriptions and paid for the building when completed.

Some indications of the progress of the times are noted when we take into consideration that a beginning was made with fireplace and tallow candles, thence to wood stoves and kerosene lights, thence to coal stoves and gasoline lamps, thence to a furnace and gasoline lighting plant.

The congregation purchased a parsonage in the village in 1908 for one thousand five hundred dollars. This dwelling proved unsatisfactory and in 1913 it was sold and a new parsonage erected near the village at a cost of one thousand eight hundred dollars. A minister is now employed all his time, instead of half of his time, as was the practice for many years.

Many ministers have preached for this congregation since its organization, some of whom were John Boggs, W. J. Irvin, John Taft, John I. Rogers, E. I. Vandervort, Samuel Matthews, A. D. Fillmore, A. Gardner, R. L. Howe, J. H. Dodd, E. H. Hawley, W. C. Rogers, Thomas D. Garvin, J. H. Jones, A. A. Knight, F. M. Green, J. C. Irvin, J. M. Pyle, Josephus Blair, S. H. Bingman, J. S. Hughes, W. J. Howe, Samuel Traum, John Truax, W. D. Moore, E. D. Murch, J. Irvin West, E. P. Couch, T. S. Buckingham, H. M. Garn, R. H. Dodson, G. W. Hall, and the present minister, H. S. Snyder.

Seevral persons who have been members, and some of whom began the Christian life with this congregation, have gone forth as ministers of the gospel, namely: James Vandervort, E. I. Vandervort, George McManus, Samuel, William and David Matthews, L. E. Brown, J. S. Hughes, W. J. and R. L. Howe, J. M. Pyle, F. P. Sayers, Nathan Sims, W. J. and W. S. Utter, and Arthur W. Vandervort.

At present the congregation numbers about one hundred and sixty members. They have maintained a Lord's Day school for many years, meeting every Sunday and teaching the Scripture lesson as given in the International Sunday School Lesson Helps. The Ladies' Aid Society has been a live auxiliary to the church for several years, and much work in a material way has been accomplished by them that otherwise might have remained undone.

MARTINSVILLE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Christian church at Martinsville was organized. February 17, 1886, by Rev. J. T. Crawford, with the following charter members: Lewis Achor, John Crawford, Joseph F. Hunter, Lydia C. Hunter, Odessa Hunter, Iona Hunter, Maggie Hunter, Isaac Flora, John Carman, Margaret Carman, John F. Wells, Anna Wells, Emma J. Peake, Florence West, Letitia Batts, John W. Green, Kate B. Dimmit, Jane Bilderbank, Alexander Bilderbank, Lydia Achor, George H. Smith, Ruth Crawford, Dora Harris, J. W. Vance, Sarah A. Vance, Adaline Thornhill, Cora Crawford, Maria A. Smith, Sallie R. Moon, L. A. Davis, E. J. Hogan, Lucretia Hunter, M. J. Flora, Q. R. Sever, Martha Stratton, Alice Davis, Emily Peale, John McColister, Nancy Gibson, Mary Brown, Mary Hendee, Elizabeth Turner, William Peale, Barney A. Thornhill, Emma McCann, Eva Trenary, Emma Trenary, Jacob Hoggett, William Flora, Wesley Reese, Callie Reese, Clara West, Josiah West, Olie Flora, Cary Hamilton, Elinie Hamilton, Tobias Hamilton, Elizabeth Hamilton, Rebecca Hamilton, J. T. Crawford, Elvira Crawford, Ella J. Crawford and Emma Hamilton, a total of sixty-five charter members.

George H. Smith was the first elder and Joseph Hunter one of the first deacons. Among the pastors who have served the church may be mentioned J. T. Crawford, Washington Ruble, W. L. Neal, Q. A. Randall, W. D. Moore, H. C. Garn, C. C. Smith, E. J. Meacham, Hubert Snyder, Kelly O'Neal, Ira Allemong and C. C. Wilson, who has been the pastor since 1913. Reverend Wilson also serves the church at Macedonia, two and a half miles west of Martinsville.

The church now has a membership of one hundred and fifteen. Mrs. W. H. Cline has been the clerk of the congregation for the past fifteen years and has kindly furnished all of the data for this volume. The auxiliaries include the Bible school, Ladies' Aid Society and the Christian Women's Board of Missions. The present building was erected in 1886, at a cost of nineteen hundred dollars. Many improvements have been made in the building since that time.

MACEDONIA CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The beginning of the Macedonia Christian church, located in Washington township, about two and a half miles west of Martinsville, is more or less obscure, due to the fact that the early records of the church are gone. It appears that it was organized as the result of a split of the Baptists of that community about 1835. In that year Elliott Raynes, a Christian minister from Kentucky, came to Washington township and succeeded in creating a schism in the Baptist church of the township. His followers organized a church, which became known as the Macedonia church. The only charter member whose name has been preserved is Micajah Moore. The present frame building was erected in 1867, at a cost of twelve hundred dollars. The present site is about two miles southeast of the place where the first log church stood. Later, a log church was built on the present site. Elisha John was the first elder; George Henry Smith became an elder in 1872.

Among the pastors have been Charles Araline, David Thompson, William Thompson, Asbury Gardner, Josephus Blair, J. F. Rowe, Peter W. Shick, W. D. Moore (1882-83), Q. A. Randall (1892-1902), E. T. Hayes (1902-05), Charles Smith (1906-08), Hubert Snyder (1908-11), Earl Barr (April-June, 1914) and C. C. Wilson, the present incumbent. The membership is one hundred and thirty.

WILMINGTON WALNUT STREET CHURCH OF CHRIST.

The Wilmington Walnut Street Church of Christ was organized March 15, 1908, with the following charter members: W. C. Applegate, John Doyle, David H. Sherman, J. L. Rannells, J. D. White, Joseph R. Booher, W. G. Talmage, Mary J. McKenzie, J. F. Bennett, Alice M. S. Davis, Lillie M. Applegate, Nora Sherman, Alice L. Sherman, Ida Bennett, Arzona McKay, Ella N. Doyle, Laura B. White, Ivy R. Booher, Margaret C. Blair, Mrs. A. J. Wilson, Charles A. Hatfield, Ula A. Bentley, J. M. Wisecup, Rhoda E. Wisecup, Sara E. Wisecup, Jessie F. Wisecup, Mrs. Sarah Doyle, Mrs. Mary Wilson, Mrs. Cora Wilson West, Mrs. Effie Bennett Thatcher, Roy P. Bennett, Mrs. Elma Bennett, Earl T. Bennett, Robert W. White, Mrs. Ella White, Mrs. Martha E. Doan, Amanda Wilson, Eliza Wilson, Herbert Porter, Bertha Porter, Mamie B. Pigeon, A. J. Wilson, Nellie Moore, Mrs. Ella Thompson, Arlando Thompson, C. A. Rannells, Clora K. Rannells, Sara W. Rannells, Edith K. Rannells, J. M. McKay, Thomas D. Moore, C. H. Hart, N. H. Moore, Martha Moore, T. Errett Rannells, Sattie Hartman, William B. Rannells, Levi Bennett, L. A. VanDevort, Alice C. VanDevort, Gusta VanDevort, John W. Jacks, Minnie A. Jacks, Sarah Bennett, Mary E. Rannells, Leah L. Rannells, L. Etta Rannells, Lula B. Rannells, Lester Thatcher, Salathial Harris, Mrs. Salathial Harris, Rush Harris and Mrs. Rush Harris; elders, J. F. Bennett, F. D. Blair, J. M. McKay, J. M. Wisecup; deacons, L. A. VanDervort, J. L. Rannells, J. D. White, Orlando Thompson, W. C. Applegate, C. A. Rannells, John Doyle; trustees, A. J. Wilson, N. H. Moore, C. A. Rannells, J. D. White, L. A. VanDervort.

The Walnut Street Church of Christ was dedicated on October 3, 1909, by Walter Scott Priest, of Columbus, Ohio. The church and lot represent an outlay of thirty-four thousand dollars. The church has had three pastors: W. S. Houchins, September, 1909-October, 1911; E. B. Buffington, October, 1911-October, 1914; R. J. Bennett, October, 1914, to the present time. The church maintains a Bible school, Christian Endeavor and Christian Women's Board of Missions. The present membership is one hundred and thirty-two.

NEW VIENNA CHURCH OF CHRIST.

The New Vienna Church of Christ was organized in 1861 with thirty-six charter members, among whom were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Zephaniah Spear, Mr. and Mrs. Washington Spear, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rulon, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. David Clark and Mr. and Mrs. McClain Johnston. The beginning of the church in New Vienna was due to the efforts of Rev. W. D. Moore, who was the pastor of the churches at Mt. Olivet, Bethel and New Antioch at the time He began preaching at New Vienna in the fall of 1859 and two years later had the satisfaction of organizing a church at the place. In the fall of 1860 Rev. Moore and others succeeded in raising between a thousand and fifteen hundred dollars for the erection of a building in New Vienna, the intention being to start the building in the spring of the following year. But, with the coming of spring the Civil War opened and all efforts to start the building of the church had to be laid aside. It was not until 1866 that efforts were renewed to erect the building and in the same year it was completed and dedicated. The first overseers of the church were Zephaniah Spear and Clark Dixon. The following pastors have served the congregation: T. D. Garvin, W. D. Moore, J. W. Ruble, J. I. West, E. P. Couch, Q. A. Randall, E. D. Murch, E. K. Van Winkle, O. A. Blackwell, Wynn Stout, R. G. Shepherd, E. B Buffington, C. D. Poston and N. Conger, the present pastor.

The membership is now one hundred and thirty-five. A flourishing Sunday school of one hundred and thirty members is maintained. A Ladies' Aid Society is the only other auxiliary of the church at the present time.

WILMINGTON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

By Mrs. Edward J. West.

The first person associated with Presbyterianism in what is now Clinton county was James Douglas, who was born in York county, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1769, and settled in what is now Wilson township a short time prior to 1816. About the same time, and shortly afterwards, a sufficient number of Presbyterians settled in that immediate vicinity to warrant the establishment of a small mission. The members of the embryo church met at the home of Douglas and held regular services there for some years.

William and James Dickey, ministers stationed at Bloomingsburg, preached to the little congregation from time to time; other early ministers to the faithful little band of worshippers were Samuel Carothers, of Greenfield, James Gilliland and Dyer Burgess.

The first account of a Presbyterian meeting in Wilmington dates back to 1823, when a small group of members of the church, including William and Parmelia Walter, Isaac Collett, Samuel Miller, William Bloom, John Lawhead, Thomas Hibben, Charles P. Gallaher and Caleb Smith, met for purposes of worship at their several homes. For some time they continued to meet in private homes. Later they secured the Baptist church in Wilmington for regular services and continued to meet there until they erected their first building.

At a meeting of the presbytery at West Union on September 30, 1823, a petition was received from sundry persons in and around Wilmington, praying to be under the care of this presbytery as a congregation, to be known as Sharon. They were granted the authority to proceed to an independent organization, under the name of Sharon, and David Montfort organized the congregation and served as pastor for the first year.

At the presbytery held at Hillsboro, January 5-7, 1830, Rev. Montfort requested aid for the Sharon church at Wilmington, to enable them to erect a house of worship. The request for aid was granted by the presbytery and the members were directed to ask contributions for this purpose from their several congregations. Rev. Montfort was dismissed at the Hillsboro presbytery, which was held October 5-6, 1830, to the presbytery at Crawfordsville, Indiana. He was succeeded by William B. Worrell, a native of Pennsylvania and a graduate of Princeton University.

On July 19, 1830, the congregation purchased, for one hundred dollars, the lot on which the present church stands. The deed for the lot was made by "William Walters and his wife Parmelia to Isaac Collett, Samuel Miller, William Bloom, John Lawhead, Thomas Hibben, Charles P. Gallaher and Caleb Smith, trustees of the Sharon congregation, and to their successors in office, for the sole and only purpose of a site for a meeting house or place of public worship for the said congregation of Sharon of the Presbyterian church and for no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever."

Soon after the purchase of the lot, the first building was erected. It was a low, oblong, one-story brick structure, with small windows of many panes of glass. The entrance to the building was on Locust street. The pulpit was a high wooden affair and the whole of the interior was severely plain and strictly in keeping with the simple and unostentatious people who built it.

At a meeting of the presbytery at Georgetown, on April 7-9, 1835, a request on the part of the Sharon congregation for a change of name to that of Wilmington Presbyterian church was presented and granted. Joseph T. Irvin was invited to become the pastor of the church at a meeting of the presbytery at Salem, September 29 to October 1, 1835, and accepted the call for one-half of his time. He was installed as pastor of the church on December 16, 1835, and continued to serve the congregation until the presbytery at Ripley, September 11-14, 1838, when his connection with the congregation was dissolved on account of the state of his health. The church, with great reluctance, allowed Rev. Irvin to resign, and for several years the congregation was without the services of a regular pastor.

The next record of a minister was the installation of C. A. Hoyt on June 16, 1843, his connection with the church continuing until October, 1845. Again there was a period when the church had no regular pastor. In 1847 Samuel Miller asked permission to serve as a supply in the Wilmington church and, his request being granted, he remained with the congregation until he removed to Washington Court House in 1850. He was succeeded by S. P. Dunham, who acted as stated supply until 1856. R. W. Wilson was engaged as pastor on June 3, 1856, and served the congregation until he was succeeded by Alexander Leadbetter in 1859. Reverend Leadbetter came from the presbytery of Connecticut and remained at Wilmington until 1865. He was followed by Elijah Kuhns, who, in turn was succeeded by Samuel J. Miller, a former pastor. The latter remained only a short time, resigning to enter the evangelistic field.

Following the departure of Reverend Miller, the pulpit was vacant from 1870 to July, 1876, when Samuel W. Elliott became the pastor. During his three years' pastorate the church was remodeled. The entrance was changed from Locust to Mulberry street; a low platform was raised at the east end, surmounted by a neat pulpit; the small panes of plain glass were replaced by large panes of ground glass; the walls were frescoed a soft gray; the benches were stained walnut—and thus the church remained until it was torn down to make way for the present edifice. It was at this time that a carpet of rich red was purchased with the proceeds of a lecture given by Mrs. Alden, better known as "Pansy."

The church was without a pastor from 1879 to 1881, when the Rev. Julius Strauss accepted a call, his pastoral relations continuing until November 16, 1886. During his ministrations, the church took on new life. New members were added, aid and missionary societies were organized and every department of church work was quickened.

It is well to state that the church was never without a pastor save for the lack of funds. After having several supplies, the Rev. J. O. Pierce, of Greenfield, was called in 1889, and from the very beginning of his ministry he urged the necessity of a new building. He preached it in the pulpit on the Sabbath day and talked it in the homes of his parishioners through the week until the congregation caught his enthusiasm. The result was, that on January 8, 1890, at a meeting of the officers of the church it was "Resolved, that we make an effort to secure the money for the erection of a new church on the lot where the old church stands; furthermore, that we adopt the following plans for soliciting the membership and the public for subscriptions:

"It being proposed to build a Presbyterian church at Wilmington, Ohio, on the lot where the old church now stands, at a cost of six thousand two hundred and forty dollars, on a subscription of shares ten dollars and forty cents, each aggregating that amount, now, we whose names are attached do, in consideration of the premises hereby, subscribe and agree to pay the number of shares attached to our respective names for the purpose aforesaid, no subscription to be binding or payable until the said sum of six thousand two hundred and forty dollars is so subscribed. When the full amount is subscribed as aforesaid, then we agree to pay to the trustees of said church, or the person or persons appointed by them, the sum represented by the number of shares set opposite our respective names, either in full when called on for the same or in weekly or monthly installments of twenty cents weekly until all is paid."

The session at this time consisted of D. A. Lamb, John W. Moore and Jacob B. Tener. The trustees were George W. Brown, J. Alfred Crary and D. F. Small. The subscription list was several yards long, due to the valiant efforts of Messrs Pierce and Crary, who rode hundreds of miles to secure signers. The arrangement for obtaining the necessary funds was so successful that on Thursday, October 2, 1890, the cornerstone was laid with an impressive service. It was a notable day in Wilmington, not only among Presbyterians, but other denominations as well. It was a sad day and a glad day, for many tears were shed—some for the loss of the old landmark, dear to their hearts as the result of so many years of precious association together in the old building. Yet there was another side to their emotions on this eventful day; tears of joy were also theirs because they saw on this day the realization of their labors and sacrifices.

The exercises on this day were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Pierce, assisted by Dr. Alexander Campbell, of the Christian church, N. E. Bennett, of the Baptist church, Rev. H. D. Ketchum, of the Methodist church, and Jonathan Wright, of the Friends.

Reverend Crothers, of Greenfield, preached the sermon. In the course of his remarks he stated that thirty years before he had considered a call to the church, but, after careful consideration, felt that his duty lay in another direction. Among the many things placed in the corner stone were copies of the Clinton Republican, Wilmington Journal, Clinton County Democrat, Buckeye Volunteer, Ohio Messenger and New York Observer. Other articles consisted of some old coins, including a Roman coin dated A. D. 68, bearing the head of Caesar, and a United States coin, bearing the date of 1823, the same date as the organization of the church. A photograph of the old church was also given a place. By great energy and perseverance, the church was ready for dedication on June 28, 1891.

The following, taken from one of the county papers, is a better account of the dedication than any that could be given at the present day. It will awaken pleasant memories in the minds of those who were then present and be of interest to those who have since become connected with the church.

"Sunday, June 28, 1891, was made memorable to the Presbyterians of Wilmington and interesting to the large number of friends who met with them on that day in the beautiful new church on the corner of Mulberry and Locust streets. This building represents, as it stands in its elegance and sacredness, prayer and generous giving, which only those who have been especially interested in its erection can tell. The plain old brick house which was torn down to make room for the new one was erected in 1830, the church having been organized in 1823. The ground for the new building was broken on August 18, 1890. Much of the brick of the old structure was placed in the walls of the new, and for nearly another hundred years will, we hope, hold their places in the sacred structure.

"The pastor, Rev. J. O. Pierce, to whom much of the credit of the enterprise must be given, conceived the plan of raising the money on the share plan, each one contributing the sum of $10.40, and in this unique way over $6,600 was raised. The building as it stands now, not counting the windows, which were all gifts, or the furnishings, has cost a little over $7,000.

"The windows, which without exception are very handsome, are of stained glass, and are from the Wells Company, of Chicago. The large south window is the gift of D. A. Lamb and at once attracts attention by its exquisite design and coloring. The center figure shows an anchor and crown in heavy beveled glass. The jeweled glass with which it is studded gives the window a very rich effect.

"The window in the west wall, corresponding in size to the one just described, is the gift of Mrs. Henry P. Stoddard, and is in honor of her beloved son, Charles N. Prentice, whose untimely death saddened the hearts of all less than five years ago. The design is that of the Good Shepherd, a strong and tender figure of the Christ occupying the center, holding in his arms a young lamb. The picture seems particularly appropriate to the subject—the only son of his mother, taken, as was this boy, from this weary world to the ineffable security and happiness of a Saviour's arms Charley Prentice, boy as he was, made a distinct impression in Wilmington, and the many who loved him, as they look at this window will 'think of him and wing the thought.' The upper part of the window shows a descending dove, and is inscribed to Lucy B. Parkman, an aunt of Mrs. Stoddard, whose life was consecrated to good works, and whose hand was ever outstretched to give and to help. This aunt and Mrs. Stoddard's mother were cousins of Francis Parkman, the famous American historian.

"The window south of the chancel shows a beautiful design of an open Bible and sword of the law, the lower section being a design of the rose of Sharon. The lower section is the wift of Mrs. Oliver C. Crary.

"The corresponding window to the north is the gift of Mrs. Alfred J. Crary, in memory of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs C. E. Leonard, of Griswold, Connecticut. In the upper section appears the monogram 'I. H. S.' (Jesus, Saviour of Men) and in the lower part, the initial "L." In both these windows the coloring design and execution are lovely.

"The windows in the choir arch are gifts of Mrs. Samuel Johns to the memory of her twin sisters, Mary Caroline and Jane Campbell Denver, both of whom exhibited rare poetical gifts. Their beautiful young lives and early deaths are fittingly remembered by this act of sisterly love, none the less tender that a lifetime separates them.

"The large bay window in the church parlor is inscribed to the memory of Miss Emily L. Grand Girard, and is presented by her many nephews and nieces. Miss Grand Girard was for many years at the head of the Highland Institution at Hillsboro, Ohio, and one hundred and sixty graduates of the school, not to speak of many others who attended, rise up to call her name blessed. She was a French woman by birth, coming to this country when she was eight years old.

"The window in the vestibule opening into the lecture room was presented by Mrs. George W. Brown to the sweet memory of her young sister, Elsie, who died a few years ago.

"The north windows in the lecture room were purchased by the birthday fund of the Sunday school, while those on the east side were the gift of the Ladies' Aid Society. The transom windows in the main vestibule are the gift of the Busy Bees, a society of little people, who do not belie their name, and who have been directed in their industry by Mrs. Stoddard. Over the west door there appears in yellow ground glass a hive of bees, a pleasantly suggestive emblem of the little ones. These young girls raised over one hundred dollars to be applied to the building.

"The members of the Ladies' Aid Society, by their good works, raised sufficient funds to purchase the carpet, a beautiful one, with Brussels effect, costing about three hundred dollars. They also raised the money for the oak pews, costing four hundred dollars, the choir chairs, vestibule furnishings, reflector, gas brackets, and the brass rod and plush curtain for the chancel.

"The lantern in the main vestibule is the gift of Rev. Ezra Withy, of Connecticut, a Methodist minister and a cousin of Mrs Olive Crary. The beautiful and elegant silver communion service is the gift of Samuel Cromwell, of New York city. It is in memory of his father, grandfather., grandmother and aunt. It is inscribed, 'In Memoriam. Cromwell.' It consists of two cups, two plates and a pitcher. The pulpit Bible was presented in memory of James Brown, of Hillsboro, father of George W. Brown, by his grandchildren. The pulpit, of elegantly carved oak, with arched supports, was given in memory of Rev. Emil Grand Girard by his wife and children. This good man, a brother of Miss E. L. Grand Girard, was a minister of the Presbyterian church throughout his whole life, dying but a few years ago, full of honor and peace. His large family are, without exception, we believe, earnest workers in the church of their good father. The two handsome pulpit chairs and divans, upholstered in dark green plush, were also gifts of the Busy Bees

"The communion table, the baptismal font, the altar chair, and the pulpit hymnal were presented by thirty-four friends of Mrs. Alfred J. Crary as memorials to those who slept in quiet graves in New England and Wilmington. Twenty-eight of these friends were in New England and the rest in Wilmington. The idea is a beautiful one and to the strangers in fact, but friends in fancy in the far East, the thanks of the people of Wilmington are wafted. The communion table is of carved oak and inscribed with the words of the Saviour, 'In Remembrance of Me.' In the pulpit Bible are recorded the names of the donors and of those in whose memories the gifts are made, together with their places of burial.

"So on Sunday morning, everything being in readiness, the doors of the sacred edifice were thrown open to the public. Before the time for the service to begin the church was crowded, chairs being so judiciously placed in the unseated parts of the building that over six hundred persons were accommodated. The sermon, a strong and eloquent one, was preached by Rev. John McKee, of Center College, Danville, Kentucky. He took his text from Titus ii, 10-12. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. S W. Elliott and prayer was offered by the pastor, Rev. Pierce. The music was in charge of a large choir under the direction of Walter G. Fisher. Mrs. W. S. Creighton sang 'Abide with Me.' At the close of the service, Rev. Pierce made a statement of the financial condition of the church as reported to him by the building committee and asked the people to open their hearts to lift the debt which still remained. So generous was the response that within a very short time over nine hundred dollars was subscribed, which, allowing a liberal discount for non-collectable subscriptions, will place the building, as it now stands, entirely out of debt Not counted in this nine hundred dollars was a draft from Mr. and Mrs. George Stimson, of California, for three hundred dollars, which was due 'the morning after the day the first sermon was preached in the church.' As these generous people had already given one hundred dollars, it makes their subscription the largest single subscription received.

"In the afternoon a congratulatory service was held, in which all the ministers of Wilmington took part. Rev Elliott presided and addresses were made by Revs. Gough, Ketchum, Mills, Wright, McKee and Pierce. The service was marked by a beautiful spirit of friendliness and encouragement. Later, a meeting of the Christian Endeavor was held. This society, which has rather languished during the past few months, will at once be respiritualized. In the evening Doctor McKee preached again, taking his text from I Corinthians i, 21-24, and at the close of his sermon solemnly dedicated in prayer the beatiful sacred edifice to the eternal use and glory of God. The church was crowded at the evening service, as it was in the morning.

"When the entire floor is thrown together, parlor, lecture room and large vestibules, all of which are in sight and hearing of the chancel, the seating capacity of the new church is the largest in the town, although to see the auditorium, seated with its handsome circular pews, one would not imagine this to be the case. To the general public, for generous support and encouragement during the year just past, the officials and congregation of the Presbyterian church desire to extend their heartfelt thanks."

Rev. Pierce continued as pastor of the church until 1893 and was followed by Walter G. Mitchell, a retired minister, then residing in Wilmington, who acted as supply until William J. Mills was called in 1896. After remaining here a year, Rev. Mills was succeeded by Mr. Mitchell, who again acted until J. L. McWilliams was called and installed in 1898. He remained until 1903, when he severed his connection and removed to western Pennsylvania. In the autumn of 1903 W. C. Kendall, of Bloomingsburg, accepted a call, but he was succeeded a few months later, December, 1903, by William A. Ferguson, of Manchester, Ohio. Rev. Ferguson was with the church four years and was followed by Rev. N. E. Bennett, a retired Baptist minister, and other supplies, until July 4, 1909, when W. F. McCauley was installed. He served until 1911, when the present pastor, A. J. Marbet, was installed.

As already stated, there was a Presbyterian mission started in Wilson township, which, in time, became a small church called Union. Among its members were the Telfairs, Richies, Spencers, Bevans and Frittoes. For many years this church was served by the pastor of the Wilmington church, though a separate congregation. On June 4, 1890, this church became a part of the Wilmington church and three of the six trustees who were elected were former members of the Union church, to wit: M. W. Richie, M. M. Spencer and George M. Telfair. Since the union of these two churches the Wilmington church has the distinction of being the only Presbyterian church in the county.

CUBA UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

The Universalist church at Cuba was organized on Sunday evening, November 29, 1868, by Rev. William I. Bacon. The charter members were T. J. Richardson, William R.

Moon, Martin H. Moon, William Bates, Emily H. Moon, Sallie Moon, Margaret Mann, Sarah Mann and Jane Mitchell. On the night following the organization a business meeting was held and on this same evening Mrs. Mary Clevenger was admitted to membership.

Services were held in the Cuba school house until a church building was erected in the fall of 1870. The first church was dedicated on August 14, 1870, by Rev. S. P. Carlton; the present building was dedicated on September 26, 1909, by Rev. F. W. Evans, the corner stone of the building having been laid on July 30, 1908. In 1897 a parsonage was erected at a cost of four thousand dollars.

The list of pastors as taken from the church records is not complete. Some of the minutes are not dated and in some instances it was impossible to tell when a minister began and when he closed his service. The list follows: W. S. Bacon, Saxton, William Tucker, Mrs. M. V. Andrews, October, 1889-93; John Richardson, 1893-97; O. G. Colegrove, 1897-98; R. N. John, 1898-03; John Richardson, 1903-04; George Lewis, 1905-08; F. W. Evans, 1908-10; R. S. Kellerman, 1910-12; Sara L. Stoner, May, 1913-14; Henrietta Moore, 1914 (resigned in fall of same year); since Rev. Moore resigned the church has been without the services of a regular pastor. The last report gives the church a membership of seventy-two, distributed among fifteen families. Mrs. Jennie Uible is the superintendent of the Sunday school, which has a membership of thirty.

WILMINGTON EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Episcopal church (so-called in the United States) is that branch of the Christian church which, according to tradition, was started by St. Paul in Britain about the year 60 A. D. Through varying fortunes it has continued from that day to this. Its chief officers are bishops, priests and deacons—called apostles, presbyters and deacons in the early church. It is peculiarly the church of the English-speaking peoples, numbering twenty-nine millions of members among those who speak the English language—a third more than any other branch of Protestantism. When the United States was a colonial possession of England, the English church was naturally the first church in the colonies, being organized at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607. It was not until after the Revolutionary War that the English church in the United States changed its name to Episcopal, the change being made on account of the dislike in those days of all things savoring of the English. At the present time the Episcopal church in the United States consists of over a million members and is steadily growing from year to year.

The Wilmington Episcopal church is the only one of this denomination in Clinton county. It was organized in the fall of 1901 by Archdeacon George H. Edwards, of Cincinnati, under the direction of Bishop Boyd Vincent. The first meeting was held in the hall of the Grand Army of the Republic on Sunday, September 29, 1901, Bishop Vincent making his first visitation on December 1 of that year. The charter members were Allen E. Browning, Mrs. Mabel Cowen Browning, Emma Hill, Mrs. Grace B. Ballard, Mrs. Lucie E. Hinman, Mrs. Hannah C. Owens, Lida Cherrington and Bertha Collett.

Under Archdeacon Edwards as minister, the church continued for ten years (except for the winter of 1905-06, at which time Dr. T. W. C. Cheeseman, of Circleville, Ohio, was the minister), meeting regularly each month in the G. A. R. hall. Bishop Vincent continued his visitations about once every two years for special services, at which children received confirmation in the church. On July 8, 1907, the Brown property, at the corner of Walnut and Locust streets, was purchased with the purpose of ultimately using it for a house of worship. During the ministry of Doctor Edwards the following members were added to the church: Mrs. Maude James Frisbee, Robert L. Owens, Mrs. Minnie W. Wegman, Mrs. Jessie F. Orebaugh, Fred M. Wegman, Edith Hildebrant, Isaac Turner Cartwright and George U. Lewis. During this time the church lost by death Allen E. Browning, George N. Lewis, Isaac T. Cartwright, Mrs. Lucy E. Hinman and Mrs. Maude J. Frisbee.

On January 1, 1911, Archdeacon Edwards resigned and Bishop Vincent appointed Rev. Thomas W. Cooke, of Dayton, archdeacon, who sent his assistant, Edward Phares the first of each month to conduct the services of the church in Wilmington, and various lay readers the third Sunday in each month. In February of that year it was determined to turn the house standing upon the Brown property into a small church building, and on July 3 the first service was held in the remodeled building, Archdeacon Cooke officiating. On July 13 of the same year Mrs. Hinman died, leaving her property, valued at three thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, toward the building of a new church. On July 7, 1912, Mr. Phares became a resident minister, and services held every Sunday morning. About this time the church was declared out of debt through the gift of five hundred dollars from the Women's Auxiliary of the diocese. On August 4 of that year the Sunday school was started. The following members were added to the church during the ministry of Reverend Mr. Phares: Mr. and Mrs. Fred O. Tyrell, Mr. and Mrs. L. Phillip Kleitz and Leroy Brewington.

In January, 1914, Rev. J. H. Dodshon, of Zanesville, having been appointed archdeacon in place of Mr. Cooke, succeeded Mr. Phares in the ministry of the Wilmington church. On October 1 he secured the services of Rev. Eugene C. Prosser, of Washington Court House, to act as the resident minister, the services to be held every Sunday evening. Bishop Reese, of Columbus, the recently consecrated assistant bishop, made his first visitation to the little church on November 8, confirming three persons. On July 5, 1915, the first marriage was solemnized there by Bishop Reese, the marriage of Rev. E. C. Prosser to Miss Edith Hildebrand. The growth of the Episcopal church is a slow but steady one. The members are at present looking forward to the building of a new church in the near future.

BLANCHESTER MENNONITE CHURCH.

In the latter part of the nineties the Mennonites began holding services in Blanchester in a large tent. Rev. John Hall was the leader of the band of worshippers and by 1898 had built up a congregation which felt able to erect a building. This frame building is still standing on Wright street and has been closed for some time. The church flourished for a number of years and then gradually grew weaker until there were not enough members to justify the employment of a pastor. The church is now classed with the large number of Clinton county churches which have closed their doors.

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CHURCH.

The Seventh-Day Adventist denomination was the outgrowth of what is known as the Millerite movement, which began in the United States at Lou Hampton, Washington county, New York. This movement had as its basis the proclamation that the second coming of Christ to this earth was to take place in a few years, and those adhering to this faith were known as Millerites. They proclaimed the coming of Christ to take place on the 22nd day of October, 1844. The followers of this movement consisted of devout believers from every Protestant denomination of that time and they were joined by many ministers of different denominations in the United States, who united in the proclamation of Christ's return to this earth and its destruction on the aforesaid date. After this date was passed and Christ did not return, many of the ministers of that time and many adherents of the former movement were turned out of the Millerite organization. They banded themselves into a permanent organization and denomination, which took the name of Seventh-Day Adventists.

Among the most prominent members to further the organization of this denomination and make it a lasting body were Joseph Bates, J. N. Loughborough, James White and Ellen G. White. This body has for its purpose the preaching of the messages of the three angels in Revelations 14. This organization has gone forth with its work until at present they have a large following in seven different countries of the world. Churches and conferences have been organized in every state in the Union, and the present strength of this church is one hundred thousand members. The organization consists of a general conference, two division conferences, and many local conferences where they are strong enough to organize.

Many sanitariums, colleges and schools in different parts of the world are maintained by the followers of this faith. Many printing houses in different lands are devoted entirely to their publications. The work of this denomination consists in preaching and publishing their sermons. These publications are sold and last year the sale of these publications amounted to over two million dollars. This is the only denomination in the world that sends out its books by the carload, their demand being so great that this is necessary.

The first Seventh-Day Adventist church to be organized in Clinton county was located at New Antioch. This was organized in July, 1877, with thirty-two charter members, as follow: Richard Vandervort, Catherine Vandervort, Naman Naftsger, Mary Naftsger, William Bloom, Miranda J. Bloom, John A. Haughey, Ann B. Haughey, Charlotte Haynie, John W. Durham, Mary E. Naftsger, Mary Sprigg, James Hogan, Mary Bernard, Sarah Bloom, Martha Pond, Jennie Bloom, Butler Naftsger, Melissa Bloom, Emily Bloom, Emily Naftsger and Anna Naftsger. The first church building was erected and dedicated in January, 1883.

The second church society of this faith was organized at Bloomington, Ohio, in May, 1887, with a membership of thirty-six. The charter members were Jessie and Hattie Pope, E. B. Haughey, Emma Haughey, Stephen Haughey, Nancy Young, Jonah Wical, Pamelia Wical, Caleb and Mary Cline, Jane and Arvil Barlette, Rebecca Bowmaster, Marcissa Compton, Eva, Frank, Daisy and Mollie Huffaker, A. G. Haughey, J. B. and Ella Wical, Louisa Johnson and Warren Huffaker.

The third church to be established in Clinton county was organized at Wilmington in August, 1887, with the following charter members: J. M. Rannells, Susan B. Rannells, Mrs. M. M. Palmer, Mrs. Lydia Babb, Alberta Starbuck, Georgia Palmer, Bell Palmer and Hattie Palmer. The first permanent organization was the outgrowth of a six-weeks' meeting held in a tent in Wilmington. This meeting was well attended and much enthusiasm shown for a permanent organization. This was brought about through the combined efforts of Revs. H. M. Cotrell and L. B. Haughey. There are at present thirty-five members in this congregation. An active Sabbath school and a missionary society are also maintained by the church.

Many of the different members of the societies at New Antioch and Bloomington have gone to distant parts as missionaries, others have passed over the great divide until the congregation of these two places were thinned to such an extent that it was decided to abandon them and concentrate their efforts on the Wilmington church. The place of meeting in Wilmington is a rented hall over the First National Bank. Regular meetings are held and, although small, the church is on a strong financial basis.

ST. COLUMBKILLE CATHOLIC CHURCH, WILMINGTON.

The families of James Trimble, John Burk and Edward Powers were the first Catholics to settle in what is now Clinton county. They were natives of Ireland and left their native land on account of the persecution to which they were subjected in the community in which they lived. On coming to this county, in 1807, they located near the present village of Cuba and in their humble log cabins they held the first Catholic services in the county. These families were worthy citizens any many of their names may be found in the lists of the citizens who assembled at the monthly musters until the close of the War of 1812. It is not known how long these families remained in the county, neither is it known where they located on leaving it, but it is certain that they all left at an early date. James Trimble was a man of education, a school teacher, in fact, while the heads of the other families were farmers.

As far as known, the next Catholics to settle in the county were Thomas and Arthur McCann, also natives of Ireland, who located in Wilmington in the summer of 1811. They opened a pottery on South street and continued to follow this line of activity for many years. During the War of 1812 they took a prominent part in upholding the cause of the United States against the mother country. It appears that the McCann brothers left the town of Wilmington about 1818, but where they went or what eventually became of them is not known.

Just who were the next Catholics to settle in the county is a matter of conjecture, but there is no authentic record of any coming to the county from 1818 until the arrival of Patrick Denver, Patrick Dolan, William Rankin and Hubert Clement and his brother-in-law, John P. Bigville. The latter two were natives of Belgium, in the province of Superior. The three former came to the county direct from Ireland. These men came to the county in the early thirties and many of their descendants are still living in or near Wilmington. The Denvers and Rombachs eventually became among the most prominent and influential men of the county and some of the members of both families became national figures.

Although there had been Catholics in Clinton county from the time it was organized, it was not until August, 1852, that mass was said for the first time in the county. At that time Rev. Thomas Blake celebrated the first mass in the home of Jerry Coakley on Sugartree street. Father Blake was brought overland from Corwin, Ohio, by Michael Devanney, Patrick Creedon and Timothy Coakley. At that time he was stationed at Xenia, having come to this country from Ireland in 1850. There were ten persons present at this first mass in Wilmington: Michael Devanney, wife and daughter, Timothy Coakley, Patrick Creedon, Jeremiah Coakley and wife, Catherine Knaughton and two young men whose names have not been preserved. When mass was said in the same house a month later, there were eleven persons present and for the succeeding two years mass was said regularly once a month at the homes of Devanney and Coakley. In 1854 the Catholics had increased in numbers until Father Blake found it necessary to provide larger quarters. Clinton hall was first secured and, some time later, the little congregation located in Preston hall.

Father Blake remained in charge, with occasional visits by Rev. Cornelius Daly and Rev. Philip Foley, until October, 1862, when he was succeeded by Rev. John B. O'Donohue. Father O'Donohue was also a native of Ireland and, after receiving a good education in his native land, came to Cincinnati in 1848, where he was ordained to the priesthood in 1853. When he took charge of the mission at Wilmington, in the fall of 1862, he also had charge of the churches at Milford, Loveland, Morrow, Lebanon and Washington Court House. Father O'Donohue was an indefatigable worker and during his long service in this section of Ohio he built or acquired churches at Greenfield, Loveland, Milford, Morrow, Wilmington and Washington Court House, besides the pastoral residence at Millsboro.

The first step toward the acquisition of property in Wilmington was taken by Father O'Donohue in the spring of 1863, when he made a tentative contract for the old nursery lot in the southwest part of the town. However, the congregation was not satisfied with the site and the present lot was finally secured, at a cost of thirteen hundred dollars. On June 6, 1866, ground was broken for the first Catholic church in Wilmington, and eighteen days later the corner stone was laid by the Right Rev. Sylvester H. Rosecrans, bishop of Columbus. Four years were to elapse before the building was ready for dedication, although services had been regularly held in it for some time previously. The dedicatory services, on October 5, 1870, were in charge of the Most Rev. John B. Purcell, archbishop of Cincinnati, at which time the church received the name of St. Columbkille.

The church building is a brick structure, thirty-five by sixty feet, with a striking spire, surmounted by a large gilt cross. On the tower, at the base of the spire, are four similar symbols of Catholicism, the whole giving to the front a handsome appearance. The church has undergone many improvements since it was first erected and, being no longer of sufficient capacity to meet the demands of the congregation, at this writing, there is being planned and about to be erected a better and handsomer St. Columbkille's on the same site as the first structure.

Father O'Donohue was the faithful leader of the congregation from 1862 to November, 1882, when he was succeeded by Rev. Michael O'Donohue, who remained with the church as its beloved pastor until 1907. He was followed by Rev. A. Higgins. The present membership now numbers a hundred and ten families.

The church has had a resident priest since 1882, Father M. O'Donohue being the first to devote all of his time to the church.

ST. MICHAEL'S CATHOLIC CHURCH, NEW VIENNA.

The first Catholic services at New Vienna were held in 1854 by Rev. John B. O'Donohue in a private home. Irregular services were held from that time in the homes of members of the church for several years. In 1875 a small brick church was erected by Rev. Michael O'Donohue and dedicated on September 29 of that year. But owing to the small number of Catholics, regular services have not been maintained.

MOST HOLY NAME OF JESUS CATHOLIC CHURCH, BLANCHESTER.

The Most Holy Name of Jesus church at Blanchester was erected in 1873 by Rev. Michael O'Donohue. The building cost about fifteen hundred dollars. The congregation has always been small and it has not been possible to maintain regular services at all times. At the present time the church is a mission of St. Martin's church in Brown county and attended by Father Connell from that church once a month.

CHAPTER XI.

CLINTON COUNTY NEWSPAPERS.

It has been just one hundred years since Clinton county had its first newspaper and during this century at least fifty-two papers have appeared on the journalistic horizon of the county. No less than thirty-four of these have been published in Wilmington; Blanchester and New Vienna have furnished six each; Sabina five and Clarksville one. This list would probably be increased if it were possible to get the exact facts, but the names of only fifty-two papers have been found. In the appended list may be found a schedule of these papers arranged by towns and, as near as possible, in the order of their appearance.

WILMINGTON.

True American, 1814 or 1815; Galaxy, 1821 to 1823; Spectator, 1823 to 1824; Western Argus, 1824 to 1829; Clintonian, 1829 to 1830; Clintonian and Farmers Repository, 1830 to 1831; Clintonian and Farmers and Mechanic Journal, 1831; Constitutional Republican, 1831; Democrat and Railroad Advocate, 1832 to 1833; Democrat and Herald, 1832 to 1841; Farmers' Herald, 1832 (three months); Western Whig, 1838 to 1839; Clinton Republican, 1839 to 1913; Franklin College Monthly, 1864 to 1868; Journal of Education, 1868; Journal, 1868 to 1913; Democrat Star, 1844; People's Press, 1847; Banner, 1848 to 1849; Reveille; Empyrean, 1850 to 1851; Herald of Freedom, 1851 to 1855; Independent, 1855; Democratic Advocate, 1852; Independent Citizen, 1855 (December 14, one issue); Watchman, 1856 to 1863; Clinton Democrat, 1864; Aid to Progress, 1868 to 1873; Tanner and Typo, 1868; Weekly Gazette, 1870 to 1871; Clinton County Democrat, May 14, 1880, to present time; Journal-Republican, January, 1913, to present time; Clinton Review, 1914 to 1915; Daily Herald, 1915.

NEW VIENNA.

Christian Worker, 1870 to ——; Oliver Leaf, 1870 to ——; Bible Lesson Leaf, 1870 to ——; Messenger of Peace, 1870 to ——; Register, 1878 or 1879; Record, 1870; Reporter.

The Herald has been for a time published at Clarksville.

Newspaper men have frequently tried to sum up, in a pithy paragraph, the function of the newspaper and thousands of articles have been written on its influence on modern life. Perhaps no more apt summary of the place of the newspaper in our civilization of today has ever been written than that of Joseph H. Finn, a newspaper man of Chicago, and delivered by him as part of an address before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in the spring of 1915. His apostrophe follows:

"I AM THE NEWSPAPER."

"Born of the deep, daily need of a nation—I am the Voice of Now—the incarnate spirit of the Times—Monarch of Things that Are.

"My 'cold type' burns with the fireblood of human action. I am fed by arteries of wire that girdle the earth. I drink from the cup of every living joy and sorrow. I know not day nor night nor season. I know not death, yet I am born again with every morn—with every moon—with every twilight. I leap into fresh being with every new world's event.

"Those who created me cease to be. The brains and heart's blood that nourish me go the way of human dissolution. Yet I live on—and on.

"I am majestic in my strength—sublime in my power—terrible in my potentialities—yet as democratic as the ragged boy who sells me for a penny.

"I am the consort of kings—the partner of capital—the brother of toil. The inspiration of the hopeless—the right arm of the needy—the champion of the oppressed—the conscience of the criminal. I am the epitome of the world's Comedy and Tragedy.

"My responsibility is infinite. I speak, and the world stops to listen. I say the word, and battle flames the horizon. I counsel peace, and the war lords obey. I am greater than any individual—more powerful than any group. I am the dynamic force of Public Opinion. Rightly directed, I am the creator of confidence; a builder of happiness in living. I am the teacher of patriotism.

"I am the hands of the clock of time—the clarion voice of civilization. I am the newspaper."

TRUE AMERICAN.

Clinton was barely four years old when the first paper was started, sometime during the winter of 1814-15. This paper bore the patriotic title of True American and was established by Rice Gaddis and Israel Abrams in the village of Wilmington. No copies of the paper have been preserved and its history is therefore necessarily obscure. How long it was issued is unknown, but it was only a few years. Abrams severed his connection with it in 1816. According to the account given in the former history of Clinton county, a stray copy of the paper, dated August 15, 1816, was No. 66 and this would place the initial issue on May 20, 1815, providing the paper was issued regularly every week. Tradition says that after the paper was discontinued, Gaddis took the press to his home on Todd's fork, where he did job work for awhile.

THE GALAXY.

The second paper to make its appearance in Wilmington was given the name of Galaxy by its founder, George Denny. The first issue of this paper was on October 29, 1821, and seems to have been anti-slavery in sentiment. It led a more or less checkered career for about two years, passing away sometime during 1823. It was a weekly, with a subscription price of two dollars per year.

THE WILMINGTON SPECTATOR.

In December, 1823, and probably immediately after the Galaxy suspended publication, Jeremiah Reynolds commenced the Wilmington Spectator but it died of inanition in the eleventh month of its existence. This paper was probably a supporter of Henry Clay for President. Why the paper was discontinued will always remain more or less of a conjecture, but it is a fair presumption that lack of patronage fully accounts for its brief career.

THE WESTERN ARGUS.

The first issue of the Western Argus made its appearance on November 11, 1824, under the management and editorial supervision of B. Hinkson and J. McManis. This firm retained its connection with the paper until November 17, 1825, when they sold it to John B. Seamans. The new editor evidently thought he could better the paper by changing its name, since sometime during 1828 it appears as the Wilmington Argus. The paper struggled along until June 26, 1829, when it made its last appearance.

THE CLINTONIAN.

After the discontinuance of the Argus in the latter part of June, 1829, there was no paper in the county until sometime in November of the same year. At that time W. H. P. Denny started the Clintonian and on April 4, 1830, rechristened it the Clintonian and Farmers' Repository. The new name evidently did not bring the editor the desired results, for in the following year he burdened it with the new title of the Clintonian and Farmers' and Mechanics Journal. This new name was more than the sheet could stand. In a short time the editor was advertising it for sale, "as he wished to go into other business," and sometime in 1831 the paper breathed its last. Whether he sold it or gave it away, or quietly let it rest, the historian has been unable to ascertain. It is more than probable that the press and equipment were used by the next courageous editor who started a paper in Wilmington.

A QUARTET OF SHEETS.

The Constitutional Republican was established in May, 1831, by John Crihfield, and continued six months.

Samuel Pike and Thomas B. Palmer began, in July, 1832, the publication of the Democrat and Railroad Advocate, but it lasted only about a year.

About this time, July, 1832, The Democrat and Herald also made its initial appearance. There seems to be no positive evidence as to who founded this paper, but the earliest known copy in existence, bearing the date of April 19, 1833, shows that it was printed by Pike & Camron. On May 10, of the same year, Pike & McKibbin were the publishers, but by June 7, 1834, Camron had become the editor and publisher. It remained in Camron's charge until January 2, 1835, when it came under the control of J. & T. McKibbin. The last issue of this paper was dated January 8, 1841.

The first number of a paper called the Farmers' Herald was issued by Truesdell & McKibben in December, 1832, but it seems that only three numbers were ever taken from the press.

THE WESTERN WHIG.

The first issue of the Western Whig appeared in October, 1838, but who its founders were is a disputed question. Some claim that it was started by John O. Truesdell and Stephen P. Drake, and that Robert Barclay Harlan later took an interest and became the editor of the paper, which was continued under that name for only a year. Others claim that it was started by Harlan himself. However, it is certainly known that R. R. Lindsey soon became proprietor and from the time of his ownership there is no doubt as to its successive owners. Lindsey took charge of the paper between September 18 and December 13, 1839, and changed its name to the Clinton Republican. It was a stanch Whig sheet and supported "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" with all the enthusiasm at its command. In 1846 Lindsey sold the paper to David Fisher, and from that time down to the present—a period of nearly seventy years—some member of the Fisher family has been connected with the paper or its successors.

The father of David Fisher, Adams Fisher, came from Pennsylvania to what is now Clermont county, Ohio, in 1799. The elder Fisher had taken a prominent part in the Revolutionary War and had seen hard service in many of the bloodiest battles of the struggle for independence. His son David had all the energy and ability which characterized his worthy father and it was not many years after the family located in Ohio that young David became known as an eloquent speaker in political campaigns in the Whig cause. He was elected to the General Assembly from Clermont county in 1842 and after serving for a couple of terms removed to Clinton county and purchased the Clinton Republican as above mentioned. He was a success as a newspaper man from the start and in the fall of the same year he located in Wilmington he was chosen to represent this congressional district in the congress of the United States as a Whig.

Upon taking his seat in Congress, David Fisher called on his son, William Byrne, to take charge of the paper in his absence. The son had just fairly gotten started as a lawyer at Batavia, Ohio, but, at the request of his father, he forsook his practice and came to Wilmington to assume the management of the paper. William B. Fisher had intended to remain in the newspaper business only until his father was again able to take up the work, but he took a strong liking to the business and in 1850 bought the paper from his father. David Fisher then moved to Cincinnati, where he died a third of a century later at the advanced age of ninety-three years.

William B. Fisher was connected with the paper as proprietor and editor for twenty years. From 1850 to 1852 he had Franklin Corwin as a partner; in the latter year Dr. A. P. Russell, recently deceased, purchased Corwin's half interest, and remained a partner of Mr. Fisher until 1860. In that year he sold his interest to Fisher and went to Columbus to assume the duties of the office of secretary of state, to which he had been elected. Mr. Fisher then conducted the business alone until 1866, when he sold a half interest to Capt. D. L. Way, now residing at Jacksonville, Florida. In 1870 the health of Mr. Fisher failed and on November 10, of that year, he disposed of his interest to Frank Browning, the firm becoming Browning & Way. On November 18, 1875, the Browning Brothers became the proprietors of the paper, the new firm being also interested in the publishing business at Batavia, Ohio. Frank Browning died suddenly in August, 1878, and his brother, C. N. Browning, at that time a clerk in the employ of the United States government at Washington, D. C., at once returned to Wilmington to assume charge of the paper. The Clinton Republican continued in the hands of the Browning family, with C. N. Browning as editor, until January 1, 1909. The members of the Browning family connected with the Clinton Republican for thirty-five years were Carrie, sister of the Browning brothers, Emma M. and Allen E., daughter and son of the late Frank Browning, and Grace Browning Ballard and Kent Browning, daughter and son of C. N. Browning. C. N. Browning is living in Wilmington and is hale and hearty despite his eighty-four years. He was the editor of the Clinton Republican for thirty-five years, a longer period in the editorial chair than any other man in the county. In 1909 Dr. O. J. Thatcher bought the Republican and continued as sole owner and editor until the fall of 1910, when he organized a stock company, incorporated as the Clinton Republican Company. Doctor Thatcher became president and treasurer of the new company and continued as editor. On September 1, 1911, Doctor Thatcher sold his interest in the company to Thurman Miller and others, Mr. Miller becoming managing editor. This arrangement continued until January 1, 1913, when the Wilmington Journal and Clinton Republican were consolidated under the name of the Wilmington Journal-Republican.

At this point it is necessary to tell of the founding of the paper which was to be the forerunner of the Wilmington Journal. About 1864 the Garvin Brothers began the issuance of a paper called the Franklin College Monthly, a paper devoted to the interests of Christianity and education. The history of this paper is very obscure and it has been impossible to trace its career with any degree of certainty. How long it lasted or what became of it is one of the unsolved mysteries. However, it is known that in February, 1868, the Garvin Brothers appeared on the scene of action with another monthly sheet bearing the illuminating title of Journal of Information. This paper was the direct progenitor of the Wilmington Journal, which appeared for the first time under this title in the latter part of 1868 with the Garvin Brothers as editors and proprietors. On May 5, 1869, Garvin & Lowery appeared as its owners, and on May 11, 1870, the firm name of A. H. McVey & Company appeared at its head. W. H. P. Denny assumed charge of the paper on October 20, 1871, and continued as proprietor and editor until April 12, 1877, when John Tudor became proprietor and James M. Vernon, editor. Early in 1880 Vernon bought a half interest and before the end of the same year became the sole proprietor. In 1884 William B. Fisher's sons, William G. and Charles R., bought the paper. At the time the former was with the Cincinnati Commercial and the latter was finishing the last of a six years' term as deputy clerk of the courts of Clinton county. Under the firm name of W. G. & C. R. Fisher, the brothers assumed charge of the Journal in April, 1884, and continued it under this title until January 1, 1913.

On this date the Wilmington Journal and the Clinton Republican were consolidated under the name of the Wilmington Journal-Republican, a company being organized to take over the two properties. Charles R. Fisher became manager of the company and his brother, William G., became one of the directors, the brothers being the former publishers of the Journal. Thurman Miller, the former editor of the Clinton Republican, became the editor of the consolidated paper and also secretary-treasurer of the new company. The new paper is published in the office of the former Journal at the corner of Main and Mulberry streets. The Journal-Republican has a circulation of over four thousand, a circulation which exceeds that of all the other papers of the county put together. An unusual feature of this large circulation lies in the fact that it is composed of subscribers who have paid in advance. The paper is Republican in politics, but handles all political questions in a calm and dignified manner which insures political opponents courteous treatment. The paper, which is issued each week on Wednesday, contains from ten to sixteen pages to the issue. The paper is ranked among the best weekly newspapers in the state; its columns are well edited, free from all slang, devoid of sensationalism and dignified in all that it has to say. It makes no pretense to take the place of the city daily, preferring rather to devote its columns to local news.

SHORT-LIVED VENTURES.

In 1844, J. & T. McKibbin established in Wilmington a campaign sheet, known as the Democratic Star, advocating the election of James K. Polk. It was discontinued at the end of the year.

R. R. Lindsey, formerly of the Clinton Republican, began in May, 1847, to issue the People's Press; it was independent in religion and politics, but soon died.

The Wilmington Banner was started in August, 1848, by John W. Kees, with W. Fuller and J. W. Kees as editors. Information concerning it is extremely meager, but it seems that, on March 1, 1849, W. Fuller and W. Tillinghast were the editors. It ran for only about a year and supported the candidacy of Lewis Cass for President in 1848.

Previous to this, perhaps several years before, Tillinghast had published a paper called the Reveille (or Revillee), but little is known of it. On January 2, 1850, he began the publication of a radically Democratic, but anti-slavery, paper, the Empyrean. It was discontinued on September 13, 1851.

The Herald of Freedom made its appearance on October 31, 1851, from the press of J. W. Chaffin. J. Gibson and J. B. Dunn became its editors on August 5, 1853. On February 24, 1854, Gibson sold out his interest to Dunn, who ran it alone until January 26, 1855, when it stopped publication only to appear on February 9, as the Wilmington Independent with J. W. Chaffin as publisher. Its existence stopped on November 16, 1855.

John Torry, for a short time in 1852, published the Democratic Advocate.

Considerable flurry was caused by the appearance of the Independent Citizen on December 14, 1855, with J. D. Thurston as publisher. It is thought that the first number was all that was ever issued.

The publication of the Wilmington Watchman was begun January 26, 1856, by Bayham & Brodness. This paper saw a rather checkered career in its brief life. On February 20, 1857, it was in the hands of Isaac S. Wright; June 5, 1857, it belonged to Tillinghast; October 16, 1857, to R. E. & A. W. Doan; March 12, 1858, to J. D. Hines and A. W. Doan; May 7, 1858, to H. S. Doan and I. S. Whinery; August 27, 1858, to H. S. Doan;

April 23, 1859, it was in the hands of W. H. Foos; January 5, 1860, of C. B. Lindsey; October 14, 1860, of H. S. Doan; January 2, 1862, of W. P. Reid, and on May 1, 1862, it passed to James D. Thurston, who published it until the last issue appeared, September 24, 1863.

Twenty-four numbers of the Clinton Democrat were issued, the last under the date of April 1, 1864, by B. F. Raleigh.

A Republican paper, Aid to Progress, was started in 1868, by A. D. Rhonemus, and continued for about three years. Another Republican paper was started about the same time, the Tanner and Typo, and issued for a short time by Melville Hayes.

On October 6, 1870, A. E. Routh issued the first number of the Wilmington Weekly Gazette. This paper, on May 25, 1871, passed to William C. and James T. Gould. It was discontinued about a year later because of lack of support.

CLINTON COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

The Clinton County Democrat first appeared in Wilmington on May 14, 1880, with Thomas M. Procter as publisher and editor. Mr. Procter continued the paper until September 6, 1881, when his wife, Mrs. Mary V. Procter, became its editor and publisher. James K. Newcomer became the owner and editor on January 1, 1883, and J. S. Hummel, the present editor and publisher, bought the paper of Mr. Newcomer on January 1, 1884.

Thirty-one years of continuous operation under one management bespeaks the success which has been made in the publication of this Democratic organ in Clinton county, where the preponderance of the Republican vote has always before made the life of a Democratic paper very uncertain.

This paper has always upheld the principles of Democracy and has been a stanch believer in and supporter of the Democratic party, aggressively sustaining the party's cause at all times and under all circumstances. In all matters of local concern the Democrat has taken the same active interest and it has ever been a leader in the promotion of progress and good government in Clinton county. The constancy and vigor with which the Democrat has served its party and its community have been rewarded by a liberal support and a substantial growth.

The Democrat is a weekly paper and is issued every Thursday. A job printing department is also conducted in connection with the paper.

CLINTON REVIEW.

The Clinton Review, a pretentious magazine, the first issue of which contained one hundred and ten pages, appeared in December, 1914. According to the title page, it was to be published monthly by the Clinton Printing Company, with Robert R. Doan as editor. The magazine contained a certain amount of local features, a review of the world's events and a carefully selected fiction department. Unfortunately, the magazine was not able to finance itself and but six issues came off the press. It was then discontinued and the plant later became the home of the first daily newspaper in Clinton county.

THE WILMINGTON DAILY HERALD.

The Wilmington Daily Herald, the first daily paper in Clinton county, issued its first number on Thursday, July 29, 1915. The newspaper plant is owned by the Clinton Publishing Company, capitalized at ten thousand dollars. Robert R. Doan is the managing editor. The paper has correspondents and agents in all the towns of the county.

Two issues appear daily—a morning edition, for delivery on the nine rural routes radiating from Wilmington, and an evening edition, which is delivered by carriers in Wilmington and other towns in the county. The paper is Republican in politics.

The Herald has excellent service and is thereby able to keep its readers in touch with the world's events from day to day. The paper is a seven-column double folio in size. The plant is well equipped for the publication of such a paper and, in addition, can do all kinds of job printing on short notice. A linotype machine was installed when the paper was started and since that time many other improvements have been added. It is delivered by carriers at ten cents a week; three dollars per year is charged for mailed copies.

BLANCHESTER STAR-REPUBLICAN.

The Blanchester Star-Republican is a remote descendant of the Blanchester Herald, a paper which made its first appearance on March 24, 1870, under the management of S. R. Nickerson. For a year and a half Nickerson struggled with the sheet and then disposed of it to James S. Turk, who, thinking to better its fortunes, shortly after changed its name to the Marion Independent. The change of name did not seem to have the desired result, since the wavering sheet passed into oblivion about the first of October, 1872.

When the next newspaper appeared in Blanchester is not known, but it must have been many years afterwards. The fire of October 18, 1895, destroyed all evidence which might help to establish the newspaper history of the town up to that time. The data above given is recorded in the county history published in 1882. The present editor (S. C. Eldridge) of the Star-Republican says, in speaking of his paper, "S. H. Pye was my predecessor and published the paper for the four years prior to May 1, 1913, since which time I have been publisher, owner and proprietor." The hyphenated name of the paper would seem to indicate that there were once two papers here, the Star and Republican, respectively, but of their origin, history or the time of their consolidation, there is no information. The present paper is Republican in politics, is issued weekly and has a circulation of sventeen hundred. It is a six-column double folio, twenty-two by thirty inches in size. The equipment of the paper includes a two-revolution press, two jobbers, electric stapler and perforater—a new five-thousand-dollar equipment.

BLANCHESTER NEWS.

The Blanchester News issued its first number on July 22, 1915, with C. M. Dionne, publisher, and Dr. I. O. Bennett as editor. It was a five-column folio, independent in politics, and was to appear weekly. The editor was a former minister of the Blanchester Christian church, and, later, a chiropractor. On July 31, 1915, the Blanchester News was sold by its owner, C. M. Dionne, to the Clinton Publishing Company of Wilmington for five hundred dollars and thus ended the career of a paper which had been established the previous week.

SABINA NEWS-RECORD.

The Sabina News-Record dates from the consolidation of the Sabina News and the Sabina Record in July, 1893. The Sabina News was the successor of the Sabina Telegram, started November 6, 1874, by S. R. Nickerson. On April 8, 1876, Nickerson sold the Telegram to E. L. Mann and on March 29, 1877, its successor was established by Ely & Sanders; the Sabina Record was started in January, 1890, by James F. Gaskins. The News was later edited by W. H. Sanders, and still later by Z. R. Sanders and John Manlove. In May, 1885, the News passed into the hands of Griffith & Gaskins. Gaskins withdrew from the firm to start the Record and, as above stated, consolidated the two papers three years later. Mr. Gaskins became identified with the News on April 15, 1885, and has therefore been in the newspaper business in Sabina for thirty years. The News-Record is independent in politics. It is a six-column double folio in size and is issued every Thursday morning. The circulation is one thousand and fifty. The equipment includes a pony cylinder, ten by fifteen-inch Gordon jobber, junior linotype, folding machine, gasoline engine and full assortment of modern type and material. The paper has been in a brick building of its own since January, 1898.

SABINA TRIBUNE.

The Sabina Tribune issued its first number on April 11, 1894. It was established by M. D., J. H., Howard and George C. Barns—four brothers—with J. H. Barns as editor. The latter died in October, 1896, and two of the other brothers later sold out to Howard, who has been sole editor and proprietor since 1904. The paper is independent in politics. It is a six-column double folio, with a weekly circulation of six hundred and fifty. It is issued on Tuesday of each week. The plant is equipped with a Campbell cylinder press and all the necessary type and material for doing all kinds of first-class job printing.

CLARKSVILLE HERALD.

The Clarksville Herald has been published in the town of that name for several years under various names and by diverse owners. It is a single sheet, weekly, and is devoted solely to local news and advertising. It has been impossible to get a history of this paper and the copy which was sent the historian had neither volume nor number indicated, so that it was impossible to tell the age of the present sheet. It is published by the Herald Printing Company.

NEW VIENNA REPORTER.

The first newspaper was established in New Vienna about 1870 by James D. McClintock and was known as the Weekly Register. This paper was sold in 1878 to J. M. Hussey and Daniel Hill and the name changed to the New Vienna Record. J. M. Hussey later became the sole owner and publisher. He afterward sold to a man by the name of Williams, who, after publishing the paper here for some time, removed the plant to some point in Illinois.

The New Vienna Reporter was established about 1880 by H. M. McIntire, who moved his plant here from Albany, Ohio. The plant has since been owned successively by J. J. Pittser, Edward Priest, D. W. Callahan, I. A. Shanton and Eugene C. Lewis, the present owner.

The paper is now a seven-column, twelve-page paper, which circulates in both Clinton and Highland counties. It has one of the most up-to-date plants in southern Ohio and one of the two linotype machines in this section of the country. Eugene C. Lewis is owner and publisher and Austin W. Boden has been editor and in charge of the advertising since May 1, 1915.

The paper has in connection a first-class job office. Austin B. Greene is the foreman of the composing room and in charge of job office.

CHAPTER XII.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Diseases were more prevalent in early times than they are at the present day owing to the swamps and lowlands which had not been drained; and also because the conditions, as far as living is concerned, were not as sanitary. Such diseases as were caused by malarial poison—fevers, ague, etc., were very common. The early physicians did not prosper as in the present day. Their duties were laborious and they were exposed to all kinds of hardships and privations in making their calls. The home remedies were more often used than those of the local physician and every household had its stock of roots and herbs, which were supposed to cure every ache and pain.

The honor which is due the first physician to locate in Clinton county can justly be awarded to Loammi Rigdon. Doctor Ridgon, a native of the state of Pennsylvania, where his elementary and medical education had been received, located and began the practice of medicine in the fall of 1812. He came to Wilmington and stayed at the hotel of Warren Sabin. The ensuing summer, taking as his guide that passage from the Bible which says, "It is not good for man to live alone," he was united in marriage with Miss Dunlevy, of Lebanon, and erected his log cabin on South street. He was a noble specimen of man, being moral, upright, industrious, and courteous to all. He was a worthy and earnest member of the Baptist church, and possessed the good will and friendship of all who knew him. He was engaged for many years in a most laborious practice in the county, and received a very poor compensation for his services rendered. Doctor Rigdon, in the science of medicine and the art of surgery, equalled, if not surpassed, any of that profession who have since been local practitioners in the county. After following his profession in Wilmington for thirteen years, without realizing a fair compensation for his labor, Doctor Rigdon moved to the town of Hamilton, and there began the practice of medicine, and, from a large and voluntary patronage, he amassed quite a fortune. He followed his chosen profession for a number of years in this locality and died at a ripe age, happy in the conviction that he had done all in his power to relieve suffering humanity.

Two years after Doctor Rigdon came here (1814) another, and, probably, the second physician in the county, located in Wilmington and began the practice of medicine. James McGee, on his arrival in the village, made his home and had his office in Sabin's hotel. The following year he was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Judge George McManis, Sr. To this union was born one child. Doctor McGee built his residence or cabin on South street, adjoining the residence of Doctor Rigdon. He was a well-educated and thoroughly competent physician, but he had no love nor admiration for his profession and did not engage in general practice. Shortly after his marriage he was appointed to fill the office of postmaster in the village, and also to the county recorder's office. He performed the duties of these offices for only a short time, ill health causing him to retire from all active duties. In a few years after his marriage, and while yet in early manhood, he was called to his final rest. He was a modest and unassuming man, with a kind word for everyone. He had no enemies and lived at peace with his neighbors.

Dr. Uriah Farquhar, son of Benjamin Farquhar, who was one of the earliest settlers on Todd's fork, then in Warren county, was educated for the medical profession and placed in the office of Doctor Lathrop, of Waynesville, with whom he remained until the close of the War of 1812-15, when he had completed his studies. A short time after this, probably about 1816, he located in Wilmington and took up the practice of medicine. In improving the rich and fertile soil of Clinton county and in draining the swamps, the atmosphere was filled with malaria poison, and diseases in this locality in the fall and summer seasons were very prevalent, in consequence of which the early physician had much to do. Doctor Farquhar devoted himself with unabated energy to relieving the people from their malarial complaints. He was possessed of a strong, nervous and sanguine temperament, was very credulous and easily imposed upon. He labored for twenty years or more in Clinton county and then removed to Logansport, Indiana, where he remained, still pursuing his chosen profession, until he had completed his four score years. The fullness of time had then arrived when he had to part with his much-beloved work and his many friends and admirers and go to that final resting place beyond. He was ever ready to give his services to all who needed it regardless of the financial conditions. He was for many years a member of the Christian church. With a kind heart and a generous nature, it was hard to amass wealth, and equally hard to retain it; hence, when he left Wilmington he had only the bare necessities of life and was not overburdened with property.

The next to settle in Wilmington and take up the practice of medicine was Doctor Grier, who came to this county in 1817. Although Doctor Grier may have been a man of great ability, yet his chief friend and companion was John Barleycorn and his love for stimulants proved his downfall in this county. After struggling for two or three years against the tide of opposition, he left for another locality.

Dr. Turner Welch, a native of the state of North Carolina, came to Wilmington and commenced the practice of medicine in Wilmington in 1818. He occupied as an office a room in a building that stood on the northeast corner of Main and Mulberry streets. Following the example of three of his predecessors, he was united in marriage soon after his removal to this locality, Hester, the daughter of John Fallis, becoming his wife. He was induced by his father and father-in-law to remove from Wilmington to a farm near Oakland. In 1825, Doctor Rigdon moved to Hamilton, and Doctor Welch at once occupied the opening caused by the removal. Here he continued to practice until 1836, when he removed to Wea Plains, Indiana. After remaining in Indiana for several years, he became dissatisfied and returned to Ohio; but, still discontented, he removed again to the Hoosier state. During his residence in Wilmington, in 1826-27, he attended lectures in the Medical College of Ohio, from which he graduated in medicine and surgery. In the war with England, 1812-15, Doctor Welch served as assistant surgeon, and here he received most of his training. After the close of the war he returned to North Carolina and remained with his preceptor until the time when he emigrated to Ohio. Toward the close of his life he drew a pension from the government for services rendered, which acknowledgment gave him more pleasure than all the money and property he possessed. After attaining the advanced age of eighty-four years, more than sixty of which had been spent in active practice, he laid down his scalpel and medicine case and joined his friends who had previously crossed the great divide. In his profession he sustained a good reputation and was courteous and kind to his fellow practitioners. This closes the list of physicians who settled in this county from 1810-20.

In 1825, Dr. S. Judkins located in Wilmington and engaged in the professional duties in this county; but, not meeting with the greatest success, he removed to Highland county. He settled in Leesburg, from which town he had emigrated to Wilmington. Here he regained his former patronage and met with great success.

Dr. Amos Tiffin Davis came to this county in the year 1829 and began the practice of medicine in Clarksville. With the exception of eight or ten years, when he practiced in Cincinnati and other points, he spent his entire medical career in this county. Doctor

Davis was the son of Isaac and Mary (Tiffin) Davis, his mother being a sister of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Ireland. His father settled in Ross county, Ohio, in the year 1800, following the farming profession. Doctor Davis was born, January 9, 1803, and reared amid agricultural pursuits. He assisted his father on the farm until attaining the age of twenty-one years, when he went to Chillicothe and placed himself under the tuition of Doctor Pinkerton, with whom he remained two years. He then entered the medical department of the Transylvania University, at Lexington, Kentucky. He remained there several months and then entered upon the practice of his profession. April 20, 1826, he was united in marriage with Priscilla, the daughter of James Birdsall, an early pioneer of Clinton county, where the daughter was born. To this union one child was born, Mary D., the wife of Rev. G. R. McMillan. In early life, Doctor Davis united with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was an earnest and faithful member until his death, and after removing to Wilmington, in 1829, soon after his location in Clarksville, he connected himself with that congregation here. He twice served the people of the county in the General Assembly, to which he was elected in 1836 and 1839. In politics he was identified with the Republican party after its organization, having been formerly an old-line Whig.

Dr. Aquila Jones, one of the pioneer physicians of this county, was born at Bean Station, Granger county, eastern Tennessee, April 10, 1807. His parents were William and Deborah (McVeigh) Jones, who settled in what is now Union township, Clinton county, in the spring of 1810. In 1823 Doctor Jones entered the office of Dr. Loammi Rigdon and commenced the study of medicine. On the removal of Doctor Rigdon, two years later, from Wilmington, Doctor Jones further prosecuted his studies under the instruction of Dr. Turner Welch, whom he assisted in practice in 1827, 1828, 1829. During the year 1829 this county was visited with an epidemic of malaria or typhoid fever, which prevailed all over this section of the country. Doctor Jones was actively engaged in the duties of his profession in the eastern part of the county, where, for a time, he opened an office at Parris's hotel, from which point he made his way over logs and through mud and mire to the log cabins where many of the pioneers were prostrate with fever.

There was then no poetic fervor or amusement in the daily pursuit of such a profession, and we might question whether some of our modern physicians would enter into this task with much zeal. How arduous were the duties of the physicians of that day. They were few in number, and all located at the county seat. Patients were in all parts of the county and the only means of reaching them was on horseback, requiring journeys of from ten to fifteen miles, and in the sickly season of the year their daily rides were often from forty to fifty miles; but, endowed with stout hearts and strong, hardy constitutions, they adapted themselves to the times and surrounding circumstances, and overcame the difficulties, however great. At intervals in 1829-30, Doctor Jones attended lectures in the Ohio Medical College, at Cincinnati, graduating in the early spring of the last mentioned year. He then located at Washington Court House, Fayette county, and remained one year. The following year he removed to Bainbridge, Ross county, Ohio, and was there engaged in the pursuit of his profession until the winter of 1834-35, where he permanently located at Wilmington. While practicing at Washington Court House, Doctor Jones was united in marriage to Carolina A. Dawson, a native of Virginia. In 1822 he was the assistant of a Mr. Treusdall, who was the principal of the schools at Wilmington, and three years later became, by appointment, the auditor of the county, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of John McManis. In 1839, in connection with R. R. Lindsay, his brother-in-law, he published the Clinton County Republican. In 1836, Doctor Jones commenced keeping a meteorological journal, in which a daily account of the weather was recorded.

Dr. William W. Woodruff, a native of Warren county and a son of Israel Woodruff, who kept a tavern which stood on the north side of Main street, near South street, read medicine in 1827-28 in the office of Doctors Welch and Jones. On finishing the prescribed course of reading, he commenced practicing in Wilmington, in which he continued until 1834. While yet in the zenith of his prosperity and usefulness, with every evidence of success in his chosen profession, he fell a victim to consumption.

Dr. Joseph K. Sparks, a native of South Carolina, settled in Wilmington in the winter of 1830-31 as a practitioner. He was a graduate of Transylvania University, of Lexington, Kentucky, and came to this county from Cincinnati, where he had been actively engaged in the practice of medicine. He later left Wilmington and moved onto a farm in the vicinity, where he died from old age and dropsy. He was a member of the Baptist church and a devout Christian, sincere in his work and honest with his fellowmen.

Dr. Rockefeller Dakin, a native of this county, was a graduate of Transylvania University. After Dakin had graduated, he located in the state of New Jersey, but later returned to his native county and commenced the practice of medicine in Wilmington in 1835. Doctor Dakin also became interested in the culture of the silk worm. In 1839, he made a tour through Texas and the Southern states and there contracted malaria fever, of which he died while en route home.

Dr. William Fielding moved to Clinton county in the year 1836. He located in the village of Wilmington and began the practice of medicine. He resided here three years, when, apparently becoming displeased with the locality as a point for practice, he returned to his former home in Shelby county. He was later elected to the state Legislature from that county. In after years he did not give much attention to his profession, but was actively engaged in the political field.

Dr. Hugh White Baugh was the son of George and Nancy (White) Baugh. His father was a native of South Carolina and his mother was a Virginian. He read medicine with Dr. W. Baugh, of New Market, and Dr. C. C. Samms, of Hillsboro. Later he graduated from the Ohio Medical College, of Cincinnati, in the class of 1842. He first located in the town of New Burlington after receiving his degree, but later removed to Hartford City, Indiana. He returned to Clinton county and settled at Clarksville in 1850.

Dr. Henry Smith, a native of the state of Ohio, was born January 9, 1829. He was the son of Joseph and Hannah (Hair) Smith. He began reading medicine in 1841 at Perrintown, Clermont county, with Dr. Columbus Spence. Three years later he attended the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, and, in 1845, located at Cuba, where he remained until 1856. In that year he removed to Blanchester and engaged in his chosen profession. He served the people of that section until his death.

Dr. Thomas McArthur, a native of Fayette county, located in Wilmington about the year 1845. He continued in active practice at this point until 1862, when he was appointed assistant surgeon of one of the Ohio regiments, and served until the close of the war.

Dr. A. Brooke was born in Ohio, attended lectures and graduated from the Medical College at Baltimore. He settled at Oakland in 1845 and remained a practitioner for about ten years.

Dr. J. M. Rannells was born near Uniontown, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, January 12, 1820. In 1828 he came to Clinton county with his parents, Harvey and Elizabeth (Fleaming) Rannells, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Pennsylvania. He was reared on a farm near New Antioch, and read medicine with Dr. John Vandervort, of that village. In 1846 he graduated at the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati. He came at once to the village of New Antioch and remained nearly a third of a century. He was out of the county probably four years, two of which were spent in Illinois and two in the city of Dayton. In 1865, Doctor Rannells adopted homeopathy. He located in Wilmington in 1881.

Dr. I. C. Williams, although a native of Virginia, was reared in this county. He read medicine with Doctor Jones, subsequently attending lectures and graduating at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati. He located in Bloomington about the year 1846 and continued in practice in the county for some twenty years. He then removed to the state of Illinois, where he died.

Dr. W. W. Sheppard was born in Wilmington on March 20, 1821. His parents were Levi and Sarah Sheppard, by birth Virginians. Doctor Sheppard read medicine with Doctor Jones, beginning in 1845. He attended lectures at the Ohio Medical College in 1846-47, and received from the censors of that college a certificate in the fall of 1847. The following year he located at Sligo, where he afterward practiced, with the exception of eighteen months passed in Mercer county, Illinois.

Dr. Daniel B. Mory, the son of George W. Mory, a farmer of Schenectady county, New York, was born September 9, 1822. At the age of seventeen he came to Wilmington, and, through his own efforts, furthered his own education. He read medicine in the office of Doctor Davis and, in the fall of 1845, entered the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati, from which institution he graduated. He located in Centerville in the spring of 1847 and there first began the practice of medicine. In August, 1878, having ministered to the sick of that locality for thirty-one years, he removed to Wilmington, where he lived until his death.

Dr. Thomas S. Garland, of Clarksville, read medicine with Doctor Davis in the village of Wilmington. He later attended lectures at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati, from which institution he received a diploma. About 1842 he "hung out his shingle" in Clarksville, where he remained for a short time. He then moved to Wilmington, but returned to Clarksville in 1848 and practiced in that place until his death.

CLINTON COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY.

The first medical society (proper) in Clinton county was organized in the fall of 1851. At a meeting of Clinton county physicians held November 1, 1851, A. T. Davis was appointed president pro tem., and G. W. Owens, secretary. Drs. A. Brooke, I. C. Williams, T. W. McArthur and A. Jones were appointed a committee to draft a constitution, which was presented, adopted and signed by the following named persons: A. Jones, A. Brooke, I. C. Williams, William G. Owens, A. T. Davis, T. W. McArthur, R. T. Short, G. F. Birdsall, I. C. Walker, W. W. Sheppard, L. A. Fairchild, J. K. Sparks, L. B. Welch (dentist), D. B. Morey, S. S. Bentley, H. B. Stevens and A. J. Martin. Officers as follows were then chosen for the ensuing year: President, Aquila Jones; vice-president, A. Brooks; secretary, I. C. Williams; treasurer, I. W. McArthur.

VETERINARY SURGEONS.

Within the past few years the treatment of animal diseases has reached a point where it may be regarded a science. Veterinary colleges are springing up all over the country, and in the best of them courses are given which demand as careful preparation for graduation as any medical college. Our state universities are putting in courses in veterinary science and the veterinarian of the future will have as broad a training as his brother practitioner who treats human ills.

The first organization of the Clinton county veterinarians was made on July 16,

1915, when twelve of the leading veterinarians of the county met at Wilmington and effected a permanent organization. They adopted the following resolution: "That it is the sense of this meeting that the organization of a society for the promotion of good-fellowship among its members; to elevate the standard of veterinary science; to protect the fraternal interests of the profession and the public at large, should be organized in Clinton county."

The meeting opened with Dr. E. C. Langdon as chairman and Dr. H. K. Bailey, as secretary. A committee was appointed to draft by-laws and to report same at the next meeting.

The name of the new society is Clinton County Veterinary Medical Association, and composed of the following members: Drs. S. D. Meyer, Wilmington; E. C. Langdon, Sabina; E. J. Starbuck, Port William; S. J. Sigman, Clarksville; W. J. Jones, Lynchburg; B. K. Jones, Blanchester; C. H. Thompson, New Vienna; H. T. Armstrong, Sabina; B. W. Gray, Clarksville; W. L. Christ, Martinsville; J. F. Derivan, New Vienna; and H. K. Baily, Wilmington.

CHAPTER XIII.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS.

The Lebanon Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, in 1817, recommended to the grand lodge of the state that a dispensation be granted to Wilmington to open a Masonic lodge. This dispensation was granted and the lodge numbered 52, with the following appointed as officers by the charter: Arnold Treusdell, master; Reuben Adams, senior warden; John Baptist Demond, junior warden, and Nathaniel Harris, secretary. This lodge held regular meetings for about three years and its membership gradually increased to sixteen members: Stephen Bosworth, William R. Cole, James How, Charles Paist, William Brooks, Thomas Bellows, James Williams, Henry Vandeburg, Samuel Cox, J. N. Reynolds, Doctor Magee, James Birdsall, Robert Way and the four officers named above. The lodge was held in an upper room of Samuel H. Hale's hotel, on the north side of Main street near the court house. In 1820, Treusdell left Wilmington to become a student in Ohio University at Athens, Ohio, and John Baptist Demond returned to New York, and the lodge sessions were discontinued, it adjourning sine die and giving up its dispensation charter.

In 1842 another dispensation was received from the grand lodge and No. 52 was reorganized. The charter states that permission to hold lodge meetings "is granted to Bebee Treusdell, Benjamin Hinkson, Levi Gustin, George E. Hibben, J. S. Wright, Jabez Harlan and others who have heretofore assembled under a dispensation from the grand master," and, that the "lodge shall be known as No. 52, and its rank and precedence shall date from the 18th of October, 1842." The officers appointed were Levi Gustin, master; J. S. Wright, senior warden, and Jabez Harlan, junior warden. The reorganized lodge first met in a room on the second floor of the building at the southwest corner of Main and South streets, from which they moved to a room on the second floor of a building on the west side of South street, on the south corner of the alley north of Main street. The next move was to a room on the third floor of the Clinton Hall building, corner of South and Locust streets, where they remained until 1880, when they took possession of quarters in the Carothers building. The lodge at this time numbered about seventy-five members. In 1913 the lodge occupied the new Masonic temple. At this time (1915) the membership includes one hundred and forty-two, with the following officers: Thomas M. Bales, master; Harold C. Hiatt, senior warden; Martin J. Spinks, junior warden; C. A. Rannells, secretary; W. H. Rannells, treasurer; R. L. Compton, senior deacon; Chester D. Swaim, junior deacon, and William McNemar, tyler.

ROYAL ARCH MASONS.

Wilmington Chapter No. 63, Royal Arch Masons, was organized on October 22, 1855, in accordance with a dispensation which had been presented to the proper authorities on the first of the preceding January. The charter members were: J. C. Ellis, J. Harlan, J. D. Haines, William Smith, William J. Morgan, B. Hinkson, Levi Gustin and D. Medsker. The officers appointed by the charter were: Levi Gustin, high priest; Benjamin Hinkson, king; J. C. Ellis, scribe; A. Hockett, captain of the host; W. H. Harrison, principal sojourner; J. Harlan, royal arch captain; W. M. Hale, grand master of the third veil; J. B. McWhorter, grand master of the second veil; J. W. Farren, grand master of the first veil.

In 1912-13 the Masons of Wilmington built a beautiful temple, at a cost of fifty thousand dollars. This is one of the finest Masonic buildings in the state for a city the size of Wilmington. The lower floors are rented for commercial purposes, the upper floors being devoted to the use of the fraternity in its various degrees. This building stands on Main street across from the court house.

The officers of the chapter in 1915 are as follow: C. W. Swaim, high priest; Granville Wallace, king; S. D. Chancellor, scribe; O. J. Peeling, captain of the host; M. J. Spinks, principal sojourner; Daily Smith, grand master of the third veil; Harry A. Metzger, grand master of the second veil; C. W. Stoltz, grand master of the first veil; C. A. Rannells, secretary; W. H. Rannells, treasurer.

MASONS AT SABINA.

The Free and Accepted Masons of Sabina were organized as Lodge No. 324 in October, 1860, with the following charter members: Jacob Theobald, S. A. Christy, John Jackson, R. C. Luttrell, Cyrus Elwood, James D. Achor, Reuben Newman, David Chance, Joseph Rapp, Benjamin Doggett, James Plymire and David Giffin. The first officers included Reuben Newman, worshipful master; David Giffin, senior warden; James D. Achor, junior warden. The lodge has assets of sixteen hundred dollars, with no liabilities. The lodge first met in the second story of the Rapp tavern, an ancient landmark of the town, which is still standing. Later it moved to the building of Richard Curtis, at the corner of Washington and Howard streets. In 1877 the lodge built the third story on the Ely building, now known as the Curren block. This was occupied until 1904, when they sold this room and moved to the Showalter block, their present location, at the corner of Elm and Howard streets. The lodge now has a thriving membership of one hundred and six and is officered as follows: P. H. Sparks, worshipful master; Robert S. Dun, senior warden; R. A. Lewis, junior warden; T. L. Kelso, treasurer; George C. Barns, secretary; E. R. Mills, senior deacon; Roy L. Curtis, junior deacon; T. J. Rankin, tyler; W. H. Cole, chaplain; Leo Plymire, master of ceremonies. The trustees are A. L. Cole, A. N. Dowden and Lewis Wilson; the stewards are R. L. Harris and Howard Barns. The prudential committee is composed of T. W. Ausbaugh, T. O. Dakin and W. A. Linkhart. The deceased past masters of the Sabina lodge are Reuben Newman, Jacob Theobald, David Giffin, S. B. Lightner, Z. R. Sanders and D. Edwards.

Loyal Chapter No. 144, Order of the Eastern Star, was installed at Sabina on October 9, 1902, with the following charter members: Anna Ansbaugh, Thomas W. Ansbaugh, Effie Plymire, Luna Barns, Marie Barns, Laura Rapp, Zella Wilson, Autha Rapp, Anna Woodmansee, Anna Moore, S. B. Lightner, Anna Dumond, George C. Barns, Mary A. Morey, Adna H. Lightner and W. B. Woodmansee. The first officers of the lodge included: Anna Ansbaugh, worthy matron; T. W. Ansbaugh, worthy patron; Effie Plymire, associate matron. The present officers are as follow: Clare Harris, worthy matron; R. L. Harris, worthy patron; Ona Dun, associate matron; Jennie Bangham, treasurer; Anna Ausbaugh, secretary; Maude Plymire, conductress; Luna Barns, associate conductress. The membership is now seventy-two.

CHAPTER XIV.

BANKS AND BANKING.

The first bank in Ohio was established at Cincinnati on January 28, 1817, by the United States Bank. In October of the same year another branch of the United States Bank was opened at Chillicothe, and both institutions were soon doing an extensive business. In fact, so prosperous did they become that in 1819 the state resolved to list them for taxation and scheduled them for fifty thousand dollars each. As might be expected, the banks registered a vigorous protest and the next few months saw the case carried from the circuit court of Ohio to the supreme court of the United States. The final upshot of the matter was that the banks did not have to pay the tax and the state, on its side, debarred the two banks from the state, allowing them no aid in the collection of their debts.

Since the first banking experience, the banks have always been amenable to state supervision and little trouble has been experienced in keeping them under restraint. Constitutional and statutory provisions have been thrown around banks in such a way as to protect the depositors and few, if any, states in the Union have a better banking code at the present time than Ohio.

The banks in existence in Clinton county prior to the establishment of the national banking act of 1863 were mostly banks of issue. The first banks were in the county seat and, according to the best accounts, the first institution which merited the name of bank did not make its appearance until early in the year 1853.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF WILMINGTON.

The First National Bank of Wilmington is the successor of a private bank, established on February 22, 1853, by W. C. Fife and T. L. Carothers in a building on the east side of South street. It was known as the Clinton County Bank and continued under this name until it was merged into a national bank in 1864. In 1855 Carothers retired from the bank and Fife took in Albert Hockett as a partner. C. M. Bosworth was taken into the firm in 1862 and, with the death of Fife, in December, 1863, the firm was left as Bosworth & Hockett.

On February 22, 1864, the owners of the bank made application to the comptroller of the currency for a charter for the First National Bank of Wilmington. The application was signed by James Fife, John Hendee, Enos L. Lacy, Charles M. Bosworth, David Sanders, Albert Hockett, Abel Walker, Thomas W. McMillan and Elizabeth J. H. Fife. All of these persons are now deceased, but their's were familiar, as well as substantial, names in the early days of the life of the city. The application was approved by the treasury department at Washington, D. C., on April 5, 1864, and the new bank given its serial number of 365. It being necessary to publish the comptroller's certificate for two months prior to beginning business, the bank did not open until June 1, 1864. It started with a capital stock of $50,000, which was increased to $100,000 on September 8, 1871. The following stockholders were the first directors: James Fife, E. L. Lacy, David Sanders, C. M. Bosworth, and Albert Hockett. Bosworth became the first president and Hockett, the cashier.

C. M. Bosworth served as president until his death, October 11, 1888, and was succeeded by his son, Charles A., who held the position until his resignation, on January 8, 1895. Since that time A. J. Wilson has filled the office of president. Mr. Wilson has served as director, vice-president or president since 1878. The bank has had only four cashiers during its whole career, namely: Albert Hockett, June 1, 1864, to September 1, 1865; W. B. Lang, elected cashier on October 23, 1865, died a few weeks later; C. C. Nichols, January 13, 1866, to January 12, 1910; H. E. Hoskins, January 12, 1910, to the present time. Mr. Nichols had the unique honor of serving forty-four years as cashier, and at the time of his voluntary retirement from the bank was the oldest cashier in the state in point of service. C. A. Bosworth, the second president of the bank, resigned to become assistant United States treasurer at Cincinnati and later became president of the Second National Bank of that city, a position he still holds. There have been three assistant cashiers: B. B. Lang and T. Q. March, both deceased, and C. M. Hinman, the present manager of the Columbus clearing house. The present officers of the bank are as follow: A. J. Wilson, president; Simeon G. Smith, vice-president; H. E. Hoskins, cashier; P. H. Vandervort, teller; Daily Smith, bookkeeper; Thomas Murphy, bookkeeper. The directors of the bank are: A. J. Wilson, Charles A. Bosworth, Simeon G. Smith, Clinton C. Nichols, N. Houston Moore, E. Everett Terrell, Alfred L. Cole and Jervis S. Kimbrough.

The first National Bank does a general banking business and also has a savings department, which was established a few years ago. It also has what is called a Christmas savings club, which has proved a very popular feature. The last public statement of the bank shows that it has deposits of $672,168.00, with a surplus of $45,000.00. This bank, as well as the other two Wilmington banks, honored all checks during the panic of 1907-08. During its whole career of more than half a century the bank has never had to turn down a check for payment or refuse to loan money to responsible persons. Its policy, according to the president, has been to serve the people, and its growth may be attributed to this fact. It has always exhibited those qualities which justly beget public confidence, and because the bank's history of fifty years has been one of conservative, useful work, with an endeavor to conduct business to the satisfaction and convenience of its customers, it merits the high standing which it holds in the county.

The building now occupied by the bank is located on the southeast corner of South and Main streets. It was erected in 1872, at a cost of thirty thousand dollars, by C. M. Bosworth, the president of the bank, and James Fife, one of the largest stockholders. Its banking rooms are equipped with every modern appliance for insuring prompt and accurate banking service.

CLINTON COUNTY NATIONAL BANK.

The Clinton County National Bank is the outgrowth of a private bank established in the fall of 1859 by the following stockholders: Thomas W. McMillan, Abel Walker, Isaac C. McMillan, R. E. Doan, Jediah McMillan and William Harlan. The bank started out with a capital of fifty thousand dollars and was operated under the title of the Clinton County Bank until it was merged into the Clinton County National Bank, on June 11, 1872. The first cashier of the bank, upon its organization in 1859, was Jediah McMillan.

The Clinton County National Bank was started with a capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars, and this remains the capital stock to the present time. The original stockholders were thirty in number, as follow: Thomas W. McMillan, J. W. Haws, Matthew Rombach, J. W. Denver, Arthur S. Denver, William F. Harlan, Mrs. Tamson Kibbey, S. Robinson, Amelia Evans, Seth Linton, Cornelius Douglas, A. H. Miars, Mary Thorn, Henry Stix, Haines Moore, Hannah Chadwick, Sarah A. Linton, Joseph R. Moon, Milton L. Hunt, Rhoda C. Morris, D. J. Foland, Abel Walker, Eliza J. McMillan, Lewis Behymer, Harland F. Walker, Mary McMillan, William Cleveland, Jacob Burst, R. E. Doan and Madison Betts. Of these thirty stockholders, only two are now living, D. J. Foland and R. E. Doan.

The bank opened for business in the rooms of its predecessor, on the southeast corner of South and Locust streets. In the spring of 1873 the bank moved to its present location, on the east side of South street, between Main and Locust streets. In 1915 the bank erected one of the finest and most complete bank buildings in the state; in fact, no expense was spared in an effort to make it the equal of the best in the country. The building was erected by the Western Building Company of Buffalo, under the architectural supervision of the Emmett E. Bailey Company, Oil City, Pennsylvania. The building has a frontage on South street of twenty-seven feet and a depth of one hundred and fifteen feet. Massive granite monolith columns in front give the building a massive appearance and a dignity thoroughly in keeping with the stability of the institution itself.

This bank prides itself on the fact that during the panic of 1907-08 it never refused to honor a single check presented for collection. It rejoices in knowing that in 1911 it appeared in the Roll of Honor of the national banks in the United States. It was accorded first rank in the county and seventh in the state of Ohio. This standing was based upon the amount of security for depositors provided by the surplus fund.

During the forty-three years which have elapsed since this bank was established it has had only four presidents: R. E. Doan, June 11, 1872, to August 2, 1873; F. M. Moore, August 2, 1873, to February 20, 1889; Matthew Rombach, July 2, 1889, to January 13, 1903; Matthew R. Denver, January 13, 1903, to the present time. There have also been but four cashiers namely: Jediah H. McMillan, May 10, 1872, to May 22, 1873; Madison Betts, May 22, 1873, to July 18, 1888; Col. J. W. Denver, Jr., January 8, 1889, to the time of his death, November 26, 1898; Edwin J. Hiatt, January 10, 1899, to the present time. The present cashier, Mr. Hiatt, has been with the bank since January 2, 1890, and is now the oldest stockholder and director in point of service connected with the bank. The following directors have served the bank: Matthew Rombach, Thomas H. McMillan, Abel Walker, Robert E. Doan, Jediah H. McMillan, Amos Huffman, Frank M. Moore, William Cleveland, Madison Betts, Gen. J. W. Denver, S. G. Smith, Jacob Burst, Enos L. Lacy, D. B. Van Pelt, Milton L. Hunt, Albert I. Bailey, Matthew R. Denver, Edwin J. Hiatt, Horace G. McMillan and Dr. G. W. Wire.

A comparative statement of the deposits of the bank by five-year periods indicates in a striking manner its growth. The statement follows: October 3, 1872, $32,284.67; April 14, 1877, $123,110.34; July 1, 1882, $209,921.22; May 13, 1887, $176,855.11; May 17, 1892, $202,845.29; May 14, 1897, $167,306.41; April 30, 1902, $394,977.48; May 20, 1907, $527,958.95; May 10, 1912, $552,893.09; May 1, 1915, $649,907.58.

The present officers of the bank are as follow: Matthew R. Denver, president; Albert I. Bailey, vice-president; Edwin J. Hiatt, cashier; Robert C. Lawhead, teller; Orville W. Hale, general bookkeeper; Harold C. Hiatt, individual bookkeeper. The directors are: Matthew R. Denver, Albert I. Bailey, Edwin J. Hiatt, Horace G. McMillan and George W. Wire.

CITIZENS NATIONAL BANK OF WILMINGTON.

The Citizens National Bank, the youngest financial institution of the county, received its charter from the comptroller of the currency on June 25, 1906, and on the 4th of the following August opened for business. The bank started with a capital stock of $60,000, which was later increased to its present capital of $100,000.00. The thousand one-hundred-dollar shares into which the capital stock was divided were taken by one hundred and fifty-seven stockholders. It is a noteworthy fact that all but three are residents of Clinton county.

The stockholders of the bank are as follow: Ab. Boring, John B. Peelle, D. M. Fife, Charles W. Sewell, Matthew Irwin, J. P. Osborn, William Baty, Sara Kirk, Hugh McCoy, W. B. and Ethel Kirk, William J. Snowden, Seneca Murphy, S. D. Murphy, Horace Vantress, Alfred Vantress, Mrs. George H. Statler, Frank W. Haworth, S. L. Peelle, Austin Jones, C. B. Leonard, Ina H. Corkerill, A. J. Whiteside, John W. Durham, S. H.

Skimming, I. N. Lair, T. H. Bryan, E. J. West, Charles Farquhar, F. M. Hughes, L. A. Wysong, Josephine E. Fife, David H. Fife, William Fife, J. W. Sparks, Caroline Farquhar, Weldon McKay, James McCarren, Mrs. James Hadley, J. G. Hunt, J. S. Eachus, Mrs. G. D. Haworth, R. C. Green, O. O. Outcalt, Asa Starbuck, B. Y. Collett, Wilfred H. Miars, E. M. Renner, William Drake, S. P. Curle, John Gillam, P. M. Champlin, Frank T. Hazard, John Delehanty, E. W. Harvey, Thomas A. Drake, C. G. Fairley, Mrs. J. D. Vandervort, Mrs. Sarah E. Hawes, Thomas E. Brann, Ethel F. Brann, Fred D. Mitchell, E. M. Haworth, P. D. Leaming, Mrs. Frances Fisher, Mary E. Sewell, J. Harter Shidaker, Bertha A. Deakin, Frank Lieurance, Lester Oglesbee, W. T. Lewis, I. M. Haworth, Joseph C. Doak, Florence Fenner, Mrs. H. A. Coate, J. W. B. Crouse, Wilson Hunnicutt, N. R. Vandervort, John W. Frazer, J. B. McKay, Camilla M. Farquhar, Priscilla A. McKay, William A. Pendry, Kate V. Wright, Howard Frazer, Charles Hunnicutt, J. W. Crouse, E. C. Fisher, James Williams, Mrs. Emma King, Milo Hale, A. R. Shidaker, J. A. Bailey, A. C. Briggs, E. Briggs, U. G. Murrell, L. G. Bangham, J. H. Hartman, Nellie C. Madden, J. W. Fife, A. B. Ward, Hiram Curl, H. S. Smith, L. W. Lacy, C. W. and Vinnie Sewell, W. G. Austin, Minerva J. Arnold, Maude S. Smith, Lulu S. Villars, Ruth A. Oren, Anna E. Oren, Clyde Bangham, C. L. Haworth, Ethel S. McCoy, Mrs. Anna Wysong, Ada Gordon, Charles S. Fisher, Jennie McKay, Charles Babb, Frank W. Antram, Mrs. Belle Antram, Mrs. Mary E. Champlin, Albert Bernard, Val Kaufman, Samuel Doak, William Hale, M. Elsie McCoy, J. C. Reardon, Lena Austin, Sarah A. Doak, Mrs. Corwin Haines, J. F. Marlow, H. B. Haynes, O. J. Moon, Sarah Ireland, George G. Drake, E. F. Stackhouse, A. T. Stackhouse, J. A. Graham, Mrs. Belle Baughham, A. C. Whinery, Frank Oren, Lawrence Egan, W. A. Starbuck, Edith Haines, Mrs. Belle Farden, O. R. McCoy, F. M. Harlan, Mrs. Sarah Moon, J. Walter Bogan, Ellery D. Brown, Roy Babb, Frank Haynes, W. K. and F. L. Brindle, Bessie B. Bogan, John A. Bogan and C. E. Fife.

The first officers of the bank were as follow: J. W. Sparks, president; C. A. Rannells, vice-president; I. N. Lair, cashier. These three officials, with William Fife, Hugh McCoy and T. H. Bryan, constituted the first board of directors. There have been few changes either among the officials or directors since the bank was organized, nine years ago. In July 1912, William Fife succeeded C. A. Rannells as vice-president, and at the same time E. Briggs was elected on the directorate in place of Mr. Rannells. With these exceptions the officers and directors remain the same as they were upon the organization of the bank. The increasing business of the bank has made it necessary to add to the executive force, from time to time. F. M. Harlan was elected bookkeeper in March, 1909, and on July 1, 1911, was promoted to the position of teller. Since that time H. S. Smith and Della Hadley have been added as bookkeepers.

At the time the bank was organized it purchased and remodeled the building at the southeast corner of South and Locust streets. The banking rooms are on the lower floor, facing South street, the remainder of the building being rented for offices and mercantile establishments. The banking fixtures are complete in every detail and especial attention is given to women patrons. A rest room is provided for them in the rear.

The bank has enjoyed a steady growth from the beginning and, although less than ten years old, its resources amount to $750,000. The bank also has a surplus of $45,000. At the close of its first month of business its resources amounted to $106,625.27, and this is all the more remarkable when it is taken into consideration that a little less than half the capital stock of $60,000 had been paid in. That the bank had prospered in a gratifying way to its stockholders is shown by the increase of its deposits from year to year. The following statements, taken in even thousands, shows the deposits and resources of the bank on August 6 of each year since it was organized:

	Deposits.	Resources.
1906	$ 36,000	$ 88,000
1907	113,000	216,000
1908	130,000	287,000
1909	165,000	336,000
1910	213.000	386,000
1911	295,000	480,000
1912	237,000	457,000
1913	380,000	596,000
1914	450,000	689,000
1915	465,000	730,000

These deposits represent more than two thousand depositors, this large number being a striking proof of the confidence which the people of the county have in the management of the bank. During the panic of 1907-08 the bank did not refuse to honor a single check presented for collection, neither of its own bank nor a check from any other bank. And the bank was less than two years old at the time and had over $200,000 on deposit. Three per cent. interest is paid on savings accounts, and this department is increasing in importance each year. Since 1907 the bank has kept open until eight o'clock on Saturday evening for the accommodation of its patrons and friends.

THE PEOPLES BANKING COMPANY OF WILMINGTON.

The Peoples Banking Company of Wilmington was organized in July, 1889, by F. M. Moore, D. J. Foland, J. C. Martin, O. F. Peddicord, S. J. Jones, L. J. Walker, W. F. Harlan, Frank Lieurance and W. M. Moore. The bank was capitalized for fifty thousand dollars under the banking laws of Ohio as a state bank. The first officers were as follow: F. M. Moore, president; D. J. Foland, vice-president; J. C. Martin, secretary; W. M. Moore, cashier.

The bank continued operations until May, 1893, when it went into voluntary liquidation. Before suspending business it paid all depositors in full, and if any money was lost, it was on the part of the stockholders. The bank was located on the east side of South street in the room now occupied by C. S. Thomas as an insurance agency.

FARMERS BANK, WILMINGTON.

In 1859 a bank was organized in Wilmington by Blaser & Masters under the name of the Farmers Bank. They opened for business in a room on South street, one door north of the court house. This bank led a more or less precarious existence until a short time after the Civil War and then quietly disappeared from view. None of the older bankers of the city were able, in 1915, to tell what became of it.

MERCHANTS AND FARMERS BANK, BLANCHESTER.

The Merchants and Farmers Bank of Blanchester was organized in 1890 as a private bank by the following stockholders: Alexander Crosson, John Ferris, Lafayette Baldwin, Miner Swan, James Bindley, M. A. Hahn, J. N. Stevens, W. C. Gregory, H. C. Watkins, H. Rice, R. J. Rice and Chrales F. Rice. The bank is an unincorporated institution and the liabilities of the bank are secured by the combined wealth of all the stockholders. The first officers were as follow: H. C. Watkins, president; Charles F. Rice, vice-president; W. C. Gregory, cashier. The present officers include Alexander Crosson, president; Josiah Bindley, vice-president; H. G. Hudson, cashier; G. R. Crosson, assistant cashier. The last report of the bank shows deposits of $125.000, and resources and liabilities of $150.000.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK, BLANCHESTER.

The First National Bank at Blanchester was organized on February 19, 1907, with the following stockholders: R. J. Rice, J. D. Dewey, H. C. Watkins, I. M. Statler and

J. H. Norman. The stockholders now number sixty-four. The first officers are still serving the bank: I. M. Statler, president; J. H. Norman, vice-president; A. M. McVey, cashier. S. A. Spencer has since been added to the executive force as assistant cashier. The bank has its own building, which, with the fixtures, is valued at $20,000. The resources and liabilities of the bank are $263,663.64, with deposits of $154,557.

SABINA BANK.

The Sabina Bank was organized on February 12, 1875, and opened for business five days later. It started with a capital of $50,000 and the following officers: E. A. Lewis, president; D. Edwards, cashier; E. A. Lewis and William T. Haydock, directors and stockholders. In September, 1877, Isaac Lewis, father of E. A. Lewis, became a partner and was elected president, and E. A. Lewis, cashier, D. Edwards retiring at that time. In 1893 William Pavey became a stockholder and was elected vice-president. In 1896 Isaac Lewis resigned as president and E. A. Lewis was elected to the position, W. B. Gallagher becoming cashier. These officials are still in charge of the bank. G. A. Pavey bought his father's interest in January, 1910, and was elected vice-president at the same time.

W. B. Gallagher came into the bank as bookkeeper on December 9, 1880, was later promoted to the position of assistant cashier and became cashier in January, 1896. G. T. Cline began as bookkeeper and was elected assistant cashier on January 9, 1900. Herman S. Gallagher came in as a bookkeeper and was later elected assistant cashier. Hadley Lewis became a bookkeeper in 1908 and resigned in 1910. Ralph A. Lewis came in as bookkeeper in November, 1910, and was elected assistant cashier in January, 1913. Raymond Cline has been bookkeeper since November 1, 1914.

The bank built its own building in 1880, a handsome structure of brick trimmed with stone. The bank has been a prosperous institution from the beginning and has so conducted its business as to merit the confidence of the community which it seeks to serve. According to its last report, the resources and liabilities amount to $300,000, with deposits of $225,000.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF SABINA.

The First National Bank of Sabina was organized on November 1, 1906, with the following officers: C. R. Ellis, president; O. J. Waddell, vice-president; L. E. Whinery, cashier. The original capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars was increased to fifty thousand in May, 1911. During the nine years which have elapsed since the bank started business it has enjoyed a steady growth and its liabilities of three hundred thousand dollars and deposits of one hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars bear testimony to its stability as a financial institution. The bank now occupies its own quarters at the corner of Howard and Elm streets. The quarters are in the Odd Fellows building, which was erected at a cost of twelve thousand dollars, the rooms of the bank occupying the corner of the building. The first officers are still at the head of the bank.

THE PORT WILLIAM BANKING COMPANY.

The Port William Banking Company was organized in February, 1907, by six men from Cleveland, Ohio, namely: E. W. Christy, F. J. Southard, H. G. Johnson, A. M. Irwin, R. J. Andrews and Edward Hunnewell. The first officers were as follow: F. J. Southard, president; H. J. Andrews, vice-president; Orville H. Stephens, cashier; directors, H. J. Andrews, F. J. Southard, H. G. Johnson, A. M. Irwin and Edward Hunnewell. The bank still carries its original amount of capital stock. Its resources and liabilities will average $90,000 and its deposits $70,000. The present officers are as follow: O. W. Linkhart, president; H. A. Rowand, vice-president; D. E. Beal, cashier; R. S. Powers, assistant cashier. The directors are: O. W. Linkhart, H. A. Rowand, S. L. Beal, O. A. Bingaman, Simon Devoe and G. M. Oglesbee.

FARMERS BANK OF MARTINSVILLE.

The Farmers Bank of Martinsville was organized in 1863 by F. M. Moore and Nathaniel Hunter. On August 1, 1873, they were succeeded by Cleland & Hunt. M. L. Hunt succeeded Cleland & Hunt in 1883 and D. B. Hunt became sole owner in 1896 and continues until the present time. A brick bank building was erected in 1875.

FARMERS NATIONAL BANK OF CLARKSVILLE.

The Farmers National Bank of Clarksville was organized on September 6, 1904, with the following stockholders: L. A. Bowman, Thomas Sherod, N. A. Gilbert, John C. Baugh, E. H. Urton, I. N. Lair, I. N. Statler, W. T. Mounts, A. S. Rice, Clarence Le Bus, J. G. Montgomery, O. M. Bake and W. G. Thompson. The first officers were as follow: L. A. Bowman, president; W. T. Mounts, vice-president; I. N. Lair, cashier. Mr. Lair was cashier of the bank until 1906, when he resigned to become the cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Wilmington. When Mr. Lair severed his connection with the bank, Clinton Madden became the cashier and has since filled that position. Eleanor Miller became assistant cashier at the same time and is still with the bank in the same capacity. The present officers of the bank include: L. A. Bowman, president; Thomas Sherod, vice-president; Clinton Madden, cashier. The directors are: N. A. Gilbert, N. R. Tucker, George L. Sever, D. A. Humphreys and Frank Bevin.

The bank still does business on its original capital of twenty-five thousand dollars. Its deposits at the present time average about seventy thousand dollars, with resources of one hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars. The last report to the comptroller of the currency listed four hundred and twenty-five depositors. In 1905 the bank bought the two-story building in which its rooms are located and is now renting the upper story to the Knights of Pythias for lodge purposes.

KELLEY BANK OF CLARKSVILLE.

One of the few banks of Clinton county which has been forced to suspend operations with a loss to the depositors was the Kelley private bank of Clarksville. Kelley was a merchant of the town and operated the bank in his store as a sort of a side issue. He did a large business for many years, but in the spring of 1904 he was forced to close it and the depositors had to be content with about thirty cents on the dollar. The Farmers National Bank was started in the fall of the same year and, as might be expected, the new bank had considerable trouble in getting a start. However, the organizer of the bank, I. N. Lair, the present cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Wilmington, soon had the new bank in good condition and when he left there, at the end of twenty-two months, it was a flourishing institution and had completely won the confidence of the community.

NEW VIENNA BANK.

The New Vienna Bank was organized in 1871 by parties from Hillsboro, Ohio, but in 1875 it was bought by local men and reorganized with E. M. Woodbury, as president, and Edwin Arthur, cashier. The present officers are as follow: William A. Polk, president; Frank W. Hoadley, vice-president; B. T. Penn, cashier; J. W. Penn, assistant cashier. The bank has had only two cashiers in all of its forty-four years of history: Edwin Arthur, 1871-90; B. T. Penn, 1890 to the present time.

The bank owns its own building, a brick structure, with modern fixtures, burglar-proof vault, screw-door safe, deposit boxes and every convenience demanded by modern banking. The average deposits of the bank amount to $200,000. The bank is now known as a "Roll of Honor Bank," for the reason that its capital of $25,000 is equalled by its surplus, a condition which speaks well for the management of the bank.

CLINTON MUTUAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

The Clinton Mutual Insurance Association was organized on March 12, 1906, with the following incorporators: R. J. Lacy, E. L. Carey, Joshua Linton, Jacob B. Burst, L. W. Lacy, W. T. McMillan, Valentine Hirt, H. H. Pidgeon, J. M. Jeffries, W. B. Steele, D. M. Fife, Fred Stoltz, Jefferson Hildebrant, John L. Rannells, Hugh McCoy, F. D. Mitchell, W. A. Starbuck, Frank M. Moore, J. T. Hempstead, A. C. Hildebrant, Darius J. Miller, John H. Hirt, J. T. Henry, W. B. Wood and T. H. McMillan.

The company, as the name indicates, is purely an assessment company and all losses are met by an assessment of the policyholders. That it has been well managed and is filling an important place in the life of the county is shown by the fact that it now has sixteen hundred and ninety-two policyholders, with total policies aggregating over two million dollars. The present officers are as follow: R. J. Lacy, president; J. C. Linton, secretary; F. D. Mitchell, treasurer.

CHAPTER XV.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND FRATERNITIES.

THE SIX-AND-TWENTY CLUB.

A number of Wilmington ladies met at the home of Mrs. George W. Wire on October 11, 1898, called together at the suggestion of the hostess and Mrs. R. C. Stumm, that a club should be organized for general literary study and the circulation of books among the members. At this meeting Mrs. Stumm was elected president; Minnie Farren, secretary; Mrs. J. M. Moore, first vice-president; Grace D. Browning, second vice-president; Mrs. G. W. Wire, treasurer. The plan of work adopted at that time has been changed but little during the seventeen pleasant years the club has worked together, and it is a remarkable fact that more than half the present members were present at its birth.

The first regular meeting was held on October 28, 1898, at the Browning home two weeks after the organization. Ellen H. Smith was a guest of the hostess, and, after a somewhat heated discussion as to a suitable name for the club, Miss Smith suggested "The Six-and-Twenty," that number having been decided as the limit of membership. The name was instantly adopted and Miss Smith made an honorary member. The following is the roll for the first year: Marshie Austin, Grace D. Browning (Mrs. R. T. Ballard), Mrs. F. D. Blair, Mrs. T. M. Burnett, Mrs. Bishop Dickinson, Minnie Farren, Henrietta Gardner, Mrs. H. H. Hague, Mrs. W. F. Hains, Mrs. C. Q. Hildebrant, Mrs. F. S. LaMar, Mrs. R. J. Lacy, Mrs. L. W. Lacy, Mrs. Susie R. Mory, Mrs. J. M. Moore, Mrs. F. S. Mills, Jessie Owens (Mrs. J. E. Orebaugh), Mrs. R. C. Stumm, Mrs. W. W. Savage, Mrs. C. W. Swaim, Emma M. Browning, Tacy Walker (Mrs. Austin Robinson), Wilmina Walker (Mrs. J. S. Kimbrough), Mrs. Charles Welch, Mrs. George W. Wire, Mrs. J. W. Sparks and Ellen H. Smith.

The Six-and-Twenty, while organized as a means of literary culture, has emphasized the social side of life. After the program is completed an hour is spent in conversation during the informal teas that it is the custom of the members to serve as they become hostesses in succession. The program consists of the usual business—calling of the roll, reading of minutes, report of committees, etc., which usually is followed by a paper on the author and book assigned by lot to members at the annual business meeting. This is followed by a general discussion of the book by the club, and, while the utmost freedom of individual opinion is maintained, the esprit de corps of the club is one of its most delightful features. A leader of current events calls the attention of the members to the important questions of the day, and the members are again permitted a free discussion of subjects. At roll call it is expected that quotations will be given. The program is simetimes slightly changed, leaders preparing papers on other subjects when the author has previously been before the club. Each member pays yearly dues, which cover the cost of books and running expenses. At the Clinton county centennial home-coming in August, 1910, the Six-and-Twenty Club was awarded the first prize of seventy-five dollars for the most beautiful float in the civic parade, and this sum is a nest egg for the future good of the community.

The members of the club for 1915 are as follow, sixteen of the names appearing in the original list: Mrs. Susie R. Mory, Marshie Austin, Mrs. W. W. Savage, Mrs. A. E. Browning, Mrs. R. J. Lacy, Mrs. R. B. Peelle, Mrs. R. C. Stumm, Mrs. Katherine D. Williams, Mrs. W. R. Hale, Mrs. C. Q. Hildebrant, Mrs. C. W. Swaim, Minnie Farren, Mrs. T. M. Burnett, Mrs. J. M. Kimbrough, Ellen H. Smith, Mrs. R. T. Ballard, Mrs. C. C. Nichols, Dr. Elizabeth Schrieves, Mrs. W. F. Hains, Mrs. F. L. Miller, Mrs. J. M. Moore, Mrs. C. R. Burns, Mrs. L. W. Lacy, Mrs. J. E. Orebaugh, Mrs. Walter G. Fisher, Mrs. M. J. Farquhar.

The officers for 1915 are: Mrs. M. J. Farquhar, president; Mrs. J. E. Orebaugh and Mrs. W. G. Fisher, vice-presidents; Mrs. C. C. Nichols, secretary; Mrs. C. R. Burns, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. W. Swaim, treasurer.

In all the years of its existence the club has lost but two members by death—Olive Linton Welch (1912) and Mary Lacy Wire (1914), and they are held in loving memory. To the Six-and-Twenty the members bring their best intellectual gifts and their warmest fealty, feeling that it is good to be there at every meeting. Incidentally, they feel that the club has meant a good deal to the community in the five hundred (approximately) carefully selected books that they have presented through the years to the Wilmington library.

THE WILMINGTON WOMAN'S CIVIC LEAGUE.

The Civic League, a group of women imbued with the thought of the betterment of municipal conditions in Wilmington, has been the outgrowth of an idea first suggested by Mrs. Katherine Denver Williams, who has been president since the organization of the league. On March 17, 1911, a joint meeting of representatives of the three literary clubs—the Six-and-Twenty, the Conversation and the Progress—was held at the home of Mrs. E. J. Hiatt and the following committees were appointed: Executive—Mesdames R. J. Lacy, C. W. Swaim, F. D. Blair, of the Six-and-Twenty Club; Mesdames C. R. Van Tress, N. E. Bennett and H. B. Farquhar, of the Progress Club, and Mesdames F. L. McDonald, J. L. McWilliams and Carrie Ent, of the Conversation Club. Ways and Means—From the Progress Club, Mesdames I. N. Lair, C. W. Austin and Virginia Martin; from the Conversation Club, J. T. Doan, F. G. Williams and Effie Allen, and Mesdames K. D. Williams, G. W. Wire and Ellen H. Smith, from the Six-and-Twenty. Constitution—Mesdames Marshie Austin, C. L. Hildebrant and R. T. Ballard, from the Six-and-Twenty Club; Mesdames J. W. Frazer, D. K. Hempstead and Lida Moon of the Progress Club, and Mesdames E. J. Hiatt, Auber Peebles and G. M. Austin, of the Conversation Club. The following ladies signed the roll at the initial meeting: Katherine Denver Williams, Marshie Austin, Mabel C. Browning, Fanny D. McDonald, Ellen H. Smith, Virginia R. Peelle, Isabel Y. Peebles, Emma L. Blair, Harriet M. Hiatt, Grace D. B. Ballard, Estella W. Hempstead, Mary L. Wire, Bertha H. Doan and Effie Allen.

The form of the constitution was suggested by Marshie Austin and provided for an executive council, to consist of nine members, from which the usual officers would be chosen and which would act for the league between the quarterly meetings of the entire body. The members of the first council were Virginia Martin and Mesdames R. T. Ballard, H. L. Campbell, E. J. Hiatt, W. F. McCoy, Auber Peebles, K. D. Williams and G. W. Wire. Mrs. Williams was elected president; Mrs. E. J. Hiatt, secretary, and Mrs. H. L. Campbell, treasurer. Mesdames Hiatt and Ballard have remained with Mrs. Williams on each succeeding council.

At the first meeting, garden contests, clean streets, the work of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, a stricter observance of the ordinance against spitting on the side-walls, etc., were discussed and the work of the league has been along these lines, with many amplifications, ever since.

No membership dues have ever been charged, and the treasury has been kept up in various ways, rubber, rummage and provision sales providing the first money to be spent "for Wilmington," the watchword of the league.

On February 6, 1912, the league had the pleasure and honor of presenting to a Wilmington audience Madame Jane Osborn-Hanna, the distinguished opera and oratorio singer, who had gained an international reputation since leaving the town of her birth, where she is still lovingly remembered as Jenny Osborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker B. Osborn. The opera house was crowded and a royal reception was given this beautiful and talented woman. She was accompanied by Madame Katherine Lively, a Chicago pianist. Following the concert, a reception was held in Madame Hanna's honor in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows lodge room, graciously offered for the occasion, and hundreds of old friends greeted the prima donna. The jewels she wore were not brighter than the happy tears that made only more lovely her great brown eyes as she recalled names and faces familiar to her in her childhood. The receipts from this concert were five hundred fifteen dollars and eighty cents, Madame Hanna returning into the treasury her share of the proceeds. She is a life member of the league. The following year Madame Hanna's engagement permitted her to give another concert in Wilmington, and the triumphs of the first one were repeated. At this time a beautiful reception was given in her honor at the new Masonic temple, permitting the people of Wilmington an opportunity to see the handsome lodge rooms before they were dedicated to the uses of the fraternity.

An important part of the work of the league has been the bringing to Wilmington of the highest class of musical and literary talent. Madame Lively gave a concert in 1912, a brilliant Russian violinist appearing with her. Marion Craig Wentworth, author of "War Brides," and a highly accomplished reader, presented Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird." Through the Edward's bureau, of Cincinnati, Wilmington audiences have enjoyed concerts by Bernard, violinist, and Julius Sturm, 'cellist, who rarely play out of their own city, and never before in so small a town. Walter Vaughan, the tenor singer, has appeared here twice under the auspices of the league, in 1915 in concert with Gretchen Morris, the young dramatic soprano, who was made doubly welcome from the fact that she is a grand-daughter of the late Isaac Morris, of Chester township, and a niece of the late R. C. Stumm.

At the first fall festival in 1914, the league was invited by the Commercial Club to have charge of the home arts department. Two booths were provided, the entire frontage of the then postoffice building and the other across the street in front of the Egan building. These were crowded to their utmost capacity by the displays in cake, bread, butter, fancy work, canned fruits and jellies. An unprecedented fall of rain during the entire festival did not dampen the enthusiasm of either the Commercial Club or the Civic League in their highly successful show.

The league has been instrumental in bringing from the state board at Columbus men and women to talk on subjects of importance along lines of civic beauty and betterment, public health, etc. For two summers the league employed a man to keep the streets in the business part of town clean, and had its abundant reward in the neat appearance of the town and the prestige Wilmington gained, pleasant mention of the town being made in far distant places.

The limit of this article permits touching on only a part of the league's activities, all of which have been fostered by the interest and indefatigable work of the president, Mrs. Katherine Denver Williams. Associated with her as the council for 1915 are the Mesdames E. J. Hiatt, secretary; Eva M. Holland, treasurer; R. T. Ballard, J. R. Clevenger, E. S. Collett, G. P. Thorpe, F. C. Whinery and Kelley Hale. The league roll embraces the names of one hundred of the progressive women of Wilmington, about seventy-five of whom are actively interested in the work of the league.

THE PROGRESS CLUB.

With the slogan, "We must sail, not drift, nor lie at anchor," the Progress Club was formed in Wilmington in January, 1909, for the purpose of literary, social and moral advancement. It has always endeavored to live up to its name and has done some really serious work, as is shown by its programs. The first year of its existence its program was of a miscellaneous character and made up of book reviews and discussions of current topics. In 1910 a study of the western hemisphere was undertaken. This study was wide in its range, covering the flowers, birds and animals as well as the literature and history. In 1911, the club took an imaginary trip from New York and, by way of Liverpool, visited England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, Italy, Greece, Switzerland, Spain, Russia, Sweden and Norway. In 1912 the Progress Club visited Africa, making a general study of the countries, peoples, cities, lakes, fauna and flora of that continent. The next year, 1913, the club remained at home, studying the national parks, waterways, holidays, coal fields, schools and colleges and the Panama canal. In a similar manner it studied Switzerland in 1914. The program for the present year is one of a miscellaneous character, but most of the topics assigned have a pertinent connection with the present European situation.

The club was formed by the following twenty ladies: Mesdames N. E. Bennett, D. C. Austin, L. G. Bangham, T. J. Moon, H. B. Miars, Henry Farquhar, Fred Stoltz, Frank Marble, C. E. Zahn, W. T. McCoy, J. W. Frazer, F. M. Clevenger, A. C. Stone, A. E. Caudle, C. W. Austin, Charles Farquhar, G. W. Huls, I. N. Lair, D. K. Hempstead and D. F. McCoy. The first officers were: Mrs. W. T. McCoy, president; Mrs. L. G. Bangham, vice-president; Mrs. F. M. Clevenger, secretary; Mrs. H. B. Miars, treasurer. The present roll includes the names of Mesdames C. W. Austin, D. C. Austin, L. G. Bangham, N. E. Bennett, F. M. Clevenger, Charles Farquhar, H. B. Farquhar, J. W. Frazer, D. K. Hempstead, I. N. Lair, E. L. Lacy, Frank Marble, W. F. McCoy, H. B. Miars, Lida Moon, J. J. Richards, Fred Stoltz, A. C. Stone, C. R. Van Tress and Miss Virginia Martin. The present officers are: Virginia Martin, president; Mrs. D. C. Austin, vice-president; Mrs. H. B. Miars, secretary; Mrs. I. N. Lair, treasurer; Mrs. Lida Moon, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. E. L. Lacy, critic. Mrs. E. A. Caudle and Mrs. H. L. Campbell are honorary members.

THE YANI CLUB.

This club was organized with the original idea of making a special study of literature, although their constitution did not limit them to this line. During the past two years they have studied standard plays and famous men and women. For the last meeting, in the spring of 1915, a paper was prepared by Georgia Ireland and Anna Hummel, which was read and discussed by the other members. The Yani Club was organized May 3, 1913, with twelve charter members. The original officers were: Anna Hummel, president; Esther Doan, secretary-treasurer. The present officers are: Louise Probasco, president; Nell DeVanney, secretary-treasurer. The membership is limited to twenty-five active and honorary members.

WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the outgrowth of the temperance crusade of 1873-74. The Wilmington Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized in 1876, with Rachel McGreggor, president, and Alzina Barlow, secretary. Among the charter members were Mary B. Farquhar, Hannah Farquhar, Louisa McGregor, Martha Doan, Maria Doan, Amanda Marble, Martha Morgan, Lucinda Gustin, Mary N. Hadley, Rhoda Worthington, Caroline E. Harlin, Tamson Kibby and Betty Kelley.

The purpose of the organization is to educate public sentiment up to the standard of total abstinence, to train the young to save the inebriate and to secure the legal prohibition and complete banishment of the liquor traffic. It has for its members persons of all ages, beginning with the babies in the cradle roll, with the mother pledged to teach her child the principles of total abstinence and purity; the Loyal Temperance Legion, with the children from six to fourteen years, who are taught the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system; the Young People's Branch, whose object is to unite the young people of a community for the promotion of total abstinence, purity and the prohibition of the liquor traffic, with their triple pledge against drinking, tobacco and profanity; and, finally the Woman's Christian Temperance Union proper, with its forty different departments of work.

With efficient superintendents at the head of each department the Wilmington Woman's Christian Temperance Union has carried the following departments, viz.: Anti-narcotics, purity, scientific temperance instruction, Sabbath school work, flower mission, jail work, juvenile court, mercy, parliamentary usage, mother's meetings, parlor meetings, contest work, evangelistic work, franchise, literature and infirmary.

The present membership of the local Woman's Christian Temperance Union is one hundred and thirty-one active and eight honorary members. The present officers are as follow: Mrs. Orpah Morgan, president; Mrs. Laurenna Farquhar, vice-president; Mrs. Carrie Wright, secretary; Mrs. Mercie Brann, treasurer; Mrs. T. J. Moon, corresponding secretary.

June 24, 1915, was observed as flower mission day. The appended program was prepared by the superintendent of parlor meetings, Mrs. Bertha C. Peelle, and her assistant, Mrs. Harry McKay. Mrs. C. G. Fairley, superintendent of flower mission, both local and county, added much interest to the occasion by giving excellent reports of work done through her department in the way of sending bouquets and potted plants to the sick and shut-ins, visits to the sick, delicacies taken to them, outings given, clothing and food given to the needy ones, and many other charities.

After an interesting musical and literary program, refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The names of Mrs. Ada Jenkins and Mrs. Sarah Thornburg were presented for membership. Flowers, which had been brought in quantities, were made up into thirty-two bouquets, which were tied with white ribbon with scripture text cards attached, and sent to sick and shut-ins, list of such persons having been presented to the meeting.

At the present time a committee of four members, Mrs. Emma Hale, Mrs. Orpah Morgan, Mrs. T. J. Moon and Mrs. Blanche McCoy, stand ready to work in conjunction with the men's committee to push forward the work of the campaign for "Dry Ohio in 1915."

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

The Woman's Relief Corps of Wilmington, auxiliary to Morris McMillan Post, Grand Army of the Republic, was instituted on October 6, 1886, three years after the organization of the national body at Denver, Colorado. The local corps, named Morris McMillan Relief Corps No. 154, began work with thirty-one members. Department Senior Vice-President Mary E. Bancroft, of Columbus, Ohio, afterward department president, served as instituting and installing officer.

Of the original thirty-one members, thirteen, including the first president, Mrs. Sylvia A. Matthews, have been called to their home beyond. At the present time the local corps has one hundred and twenty-seven members, with the following officers: Fannie Shelton, president; Jennie Baker, senior vice-president; Ellen Hazard, junior vice-president; Anna Irene McCoy, secretary; Emma Barrere, treasurer; Sarah Riley, chaplain; Martha South, conductor; Flora Shidaker, assistant conductor; Mary Rockhill, guard; Ella Baker, assistant guard; Lulu F. Huffman, patriotic instructor; Mattie E. Doan, press correspondent; Bettie Moon, color bearer No. 1; Emma Henry, color bearer No. 2; Susie Holaday, color bearer No. 3; Rose Crumley, color bearer No. 4; Nellie Bonecutter, musician.

Primarily, the sole object of the Woman's Relief Corps was the caring for the Union soldier and his dependent ones, but as the years have come and gone, the work of patriotic teaching has claimed much of their attention. The Wilmington corps has placed large silk flags in each room of the city schools, in Wilmington College, the children's home, the infirmary, public library, the Sunday school room of each city church, besides a number which have been given to schools and churches in adjoining towns and districts. The last flag presented now floats over the new high school building of Wilmington.

The policy of this body of patriotic women, representing the largest organized body of women in the world, has always been to keep unpublished their charitable deeds, but many, not members of a soldier's family, have been made happier and more comfortable through their efforts. The local corps is considered among the best of the two hundred and twenty corps of Ohio, with a total membership of twelve thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven. It has always responded to calls for the Madison Home fund, where the soldier's widow is cared for, and the Sandusky Home, where many dependent soldiers are comfortably housed, as well as the Christmas fund of the Xenia Soldiers' Orphans' Home. The orphans' home is taking care of about seven hundred children at the present time—more than half being descendants of Civil War veterans, the others belonging to Spanish War veterans—but its labor of love at Christmas time knows no difference. At graduation time, in June of each year, the Woman's Relief Corps of Ohio distributes prizes amounting to one hundred dollars to the children having the best grades. The Wilmington Relief Corps has recently given twenty-five dollars towards the higher education of one of the young girls graduating from the home at Xenia last June. Anna I. McCoy, secretary and past president of the local corps, served as chairman of the Xenia Christmas committee in 1914 and personally superintended the buying for the seven hundred children, the amount expended, as furnished by the various corps of Ohio, being six hundred and sixteen dollars and ninety-eight cents.

At the present time the state organization is especially interested in the erection of a peace monument at Columbus, Ohio. Lulu F. Huffman, of Wilmington, is a member of the peace monument committee. Five thousand dollars has already been raised and it is hoped to have the full amount required in a short time.

Morris McMillan Woman's Relief Corps No. 154 has been signally honored in having the department secretary and treasurer twice chosen from its ranks. In June, 1910, the department convention assembled at Xenia and the following members of the Wilmington corps were chosen as officers: Lulu F. Huffman, department president; Anna I. McCoy, department secretary; Lydia E. Barrett, department treasurer. Wilmington was the home of the department of the Ohio Woman's Relief Corps until June, 1911. Again, after a lapse of only four years, this honor was conferred on the local corps at the convention held at Mansfield, Ohio, June 21-24, 1915, when the following three ladies of the local corps were chosen as officers: Anna I. McCoy, department president; Lulu F. Huffman, department secretary; Emma Barrere, department treasurer. These three officers will attend, officially, the national convention in Washington, D. C., the week beginning September 27, 1915. In June, 1916, Mrs. McCoy will preside over the convention of the department of Ohio at Marion, Ohio, this marking the close of the present administration. The only other corps in Clinton county is the Jonathan Casto Corps No. 37, at Blanchester.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

George Clinton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was named in honor of Gen. George Clinton, for whom Clinton county was named. Clinton was a brigadier-general in the Revolutionary army in 1777, the first governor of the state of New York, and at the time of his death was vice-president of the United States. The chapter was organized on January 30, 1896. Mrs. C. C. Nichols had been appointed chapter regent for Wilmington in May, 1895, by Mrs. Elroy M. Avery, of Cleveland, state regent. This appointment had been confirmed by the officers of the national organization and Mrs.

Nichols was authorized by that body to organize a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Wilmington. Mrs. Elroy M. Avery was present when the local organization was effected, with the following charter members: Mrs. C. C. Nichols, Mary C. Nichols, Jessie T. Owens, Mrs. Margaret A. I. Owens, Mrs. Katherine J. S. Foos, Rebekah H. Strickle, Maria E. S. Bickham, Lavina V. Telfair, Maria T. Telfair, Martha A. Telfair, Mrs. S. G. Smith, Mrs. R. C. Stumm, Mrs. W. R. Hale, Mrs. C. J. Lamb, Mrs. R. J. Lacy, Mrs. Nancy P. Bosworth Fife, Mrs. A. T. Quinn, Mrs. F. M. Wegman, Mrs. C. W. Swaim, Mrs. J. W. Wire, Cleopatra Rudduck, Ida W. Hale and Emma Hill. The first officers were, Mrs. C. C. Nichols, regent; Mrs. S. G. Smith, vice-regent; Mrs. A. T. Quinn, secretary; Mrs. R. J. Lacy, treasurer; Jessie T. Owens, registrar; Lavinia V. Telfair, historian; Mrs. N. E. Bennett, Mrs. F. M. Wegman and Mrs. C. W. Swaim, committee of safety.

The qualifications for membership are two, eligibility and respectability. The first means that all members must be lineal descendants of ancestors who aided in establishing American independence, descent to be confirmed by documentary proof from official records. The object of the organization is to foster patriotism and love of country, to encourage historical research and the protection of historic sites, and the preservation of Revolutionary documents and relics, to maintain and defend the institutions of American freedom, and to promote institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge.

The work of the local chapter has been along patriotic and educational lines. The greatest effort and the greatest achievement of the George Clinton Chapter has been the establishing, maintaining and the management of the Wilmington library and museum, a public institution for the benefit of the people, with funds necessary for the erection of the building furnished by Andrew Carnegie. The city council of Wilmington now makes an annual appropriation towards the library. The laying of the corner stone of the library was attended by appropriate ceremonies and the building was completed and occupied in June, 1904.

The chapter has planted buckeye trees on the public school grounds of the city. The picture of George Washington and a copy of the Declaration of Independence have been placed in all the city schools. The graves of Revolutionary soldiers in Clinton county have had markers placed over them and are decorated with flags and flowers each year. All patriotic days are observed with suitable ceremonies. During the Spanish-American War in 1898 several boxes of supplies were sent to hospitals. Books and magazines have been contributed to the Ohio alcove of the public library at Manila, Philippine Islands. Contributions have also been made to the Wilmington library, to Continental hall, which was erected for use of the national society in Washington, D. C., and to the Martha Berry school and other schools in the South.

Delegates are annually sent to the national Daughters of American congress at Washington, D. C., as well as to the Ohio conference. Monthly meetings are held, with programs on patriotic and historic subjects. January 30, 1916, will mark the twentieth anniversary of the organization of George Clinton Chapter and plans are being made to celebrate the occasion with a birthday party on the following day. The members in 1915 are as follow: Effie Allen, Mrs. Bessie M. Hattersby Austin, Mrs. Cora Adams Burnett, Mrs. Clara Russell Burns, Mrs. Anna Gallup Carwright, Mrs. Grace Peterson Colvin, Mrs. Alice M. Starbuck Davis, Mrs. Elizabeth A. S. Deuel, Minnie Fonen, Zenetta R. Gaddis, Mrs. Amy Fuller Hale, Mrs. Anna M. C. Hardesty, Mrs. Martha Benard Hildebrant, Emma Hill, Mrs. Louisa Fuller Huffman, Mrs. Lucille Curry Jeannot, Mrs. Mary W. Jordon, Mrs. Alice M. Peterson McMillan, Mrs. Sarah H. Walker Miller, Mrs. Elouisa Fitch King Nichols, Mrs. Clara A. Starbuck Padgett, Mrs. Mary Fisher Quinn, Mrs. Sarah Luella Rannells, Mrs. Clara Coleman Richards, Dr. Elizabeth Shrieves, Mrs. Martha McKay Skimming, Mrs. Althea Moore Smith, Nella Marguerite Smith, Mrs.

Henrietta Moore Stumm, Mrs. Sarah McKay Smith, Mrs. Susanna McKay Terrell, Mrs. Mary Patterson Walker, Louise Denver Walker and Mrs. Mary Bell Hudson Wood. The non-resident members follow: Mrs. Lutie Harris Barnes, Mrs. Maria E. Strickle Bickham, Mrs. Susan P. Telfair Daugherty, Mrs. Katherine Strickle Foos, Mrs. Charlotte Washburn French, Mrs. Edith K. Rannells Lewis, Mrs. Anna Sollers Moore, Mrs. Tacy P. Walker Robinson, Mrs. Agnes Rowe Scott, Mrs. Ida Hale Strickle, Mrs. Jessie Hunter Sterling, Mrs. Mary C. Nichols Walker and Mrs. Dora Fonen West.

The present officers of the George Clinton Chapter are: Regent, Mrs. Mary Bell Hudson Wood; vice-regent, Mrs. Susanna McKay Terrell; secretary, Mrs. Sarah H. Walker Miller; treasurer, Mrs. Martha Bernard Hildebrant; historian, Mrs. Amy Fuller Hale; registrar, Mrs. Alice Starbuck Davis. The committees are as follow: Year Book, Mrs. Louisa Fuller Huffman, Mrs. Elouisa F. King Nichols and Mrs. Lucile Amy Jeannot; patriotic education, Mrs. Louisa Fuller Huffman; historic sites and Revolutionary soldiers' graves, Mrs. Amy Fuller Hale; Daughters of American Revolution Magazine, Minnie Fonen.

THE CONVERSATION CLUB.

There is a tradition that, perhaps, the oldest of the living literary clubs of Wilmington owes its origin to the "Mystic Three." Whatever of truth or error this tradition may contain, the fact remains that on one Saturday afternoon late in the autumn of 1897 ten young women, drawn together by mutual tastes, met at the home of Mrs. Frank L. McDonald and declared themselves to be a literary club without organization. It was decided that the meetings of the club should be held every Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, and that each member, in turn, should conduct the meeting and present a subject of her own selection, every third meeting to be a book review.

The purpose of the club was to gain a larger and more intimate knowledge of the various subjects which such an arrangement would insure and to develop the art of conversation by adhering strictly to the conversational method. The use of notes was distinctly discouraged and the meetings were characterized by the most informal simplicity.

For several years the club continued as it had been founded, calling itself the Saturday Afternoon Club. Later, upon the removal of some of the charter members, it was deemed expedient to open its doors to new members and to effect an organization, at which time the name was changed to the Conversation Club, and the meetings held bi-weekly. From time to time the ranks have been refilled and social features added. Despite the changes in form, the club has never deviated from its fundamental ideas, and for this reason its regular meetings still retain that charm of directness and simplicity with which they were marked in the beginning.

The fact that, with one exception, all of the resident charter members are among the most active of the present membership, proves the value of its educational and social advantages.

In its social life, the club has been as novel as in its literary life. The entertainments which its friends have enjoyed from time to time have been most unique and delightful. The mid-summer picnics and the autumn camp-fires have been occasions which have strengthened the ties of friendship among the members and testified to their culinary as well as their literary accomplishments.

In the winter of 1907 the club celebrated its tenth anniversary with a banquet, an event which is remembered as especially enjoyable.

The present membership consists of twenty-seven resident and six non-resident members. Four times in its eighteen years of existence, dark shadows have fallen and Mrs. Mary Carroll, Mrs. Gertrude Stiles Cheney, Miss Oma Hadley and Mrs. Adilla Hadley Lowes have departed this life. The charter members of the club were: Miss Marshie Austin, Mrs. Fannie McDonald, Mrs. Alice Green, Mrs. Lucy Whinery, Mrs. Harriet Hiatt, Mrs. Eva Holland, Mrs. Jessie Orebaugh, Mrs. Myrtle McWilliams, of Wilmington; Mrs. Jessie Carroll Smith, of Whittier, California, and Mrs. Harriet Holaday, of Manchester, England.

The present resident members are: Miss Effie Allen, Mrs. Elma Austin, Miss Florence Austin, Miss Marshie Austin, Mrs. Ada Brown, Miss Estelle Cleveland, Mrs. Bertha Doan, Miss Margaret Ent, Miss Carrie Ent, Mrs. Callie Fairley, Miss Carolyn Farquhar, Mrs. Harriet Hiatt, Mrs. Eva Holland, Mrs. Alice Green, Miss Mary Mills, Mrs. Ella Mitchell, Mrs. Fannie McDonald, Mrs. Myrtle McWilliams, Mrs. Anna McCoy, Mrs. Jessie Orebaugh, Mrs. Isabel Peebles, Mrs. Virginia Peelle, Mrs. Harriet Purdy, Mrs. Eleanor Smith, Miss Lola Street, Miss Laura Sutherland, Mrs. Genia Williams, Mrs. Eugenia Walker, and non-resident, Miss Olive Austin, Mrs. Ella Barrett, Miss Ina Cockerill, Mrs. Harriet Holaday, Miss Almeda Smith, Mrs. Jessie Smith and Mrs. Grace Colvin.

The Conversation Club looks forward to many years of interest and activity, believing that it has contributed something to the intellectual and social development of Wilmington and that its members have been broadened and uplifted by its agency.

CHAPTER XVI.

FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS.

CLINTON COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Ohio state Legislature, through the efforts of Eli Gaskill, representative from Clinton county, passed an act on February 25, 1833, authorizing and encouraging the establishment of agricultural societies in the various counties of the state. Those interested in such matters speedily took advantage and on June 14, 1833, a notice was published in the Democrat and Herald, a Wilmington newspaper, that a meeting of interested citizens would be held the last Friday in that month for the purpose of organizing an agricultural society. The plans were successfully carried out and Azel Walker was chosen president, and A. E. Strickle, recording secretary, of the organization. A meeting of the board of directors was held on July 28, 1833, at which it was voted that each member should pay the treasurer on or before the first Saturday of the ensuing October the sum of fifty cents. It was voted to hold the first fair on the last Saturday in October, 1833. It was resolved to award premiums on horses, cattle, sheep and hogs, owned by members of the society, also on articles of all descriptions manufactured by said members. The fair was held on the premises owned by Richard Pierce in Wilmington.

The following officers were elected by the society on June 27, 1834: Eli Gaskill, president; Isaiah Morris, vice-president; Lawrence Fitzhugh, treasurer; C. B. Harlan, recording secretary; R. B. Harlan, corresponding secretary; Samuel Wilson, Thomas How, Jr., Abraham Nordyke, Isaac Strickle, John B. Posey, Aaron Jenkins, Isaac Collett, William Hadley, Jacob Haines, Azel Walker, directors. In that year the fair was held in Wilmington on the Pierce lot on October 31. In 1835, Eli Gaskill was president, and L. Wright, secretary. The fair was held on the usual last Friday in October. About 1834, George D. Haworth introduced into Clinton county a new breed of cattle known as "short horns," and it is probable that he exhibited them at the fair of 1835. The fourth fair was held in 1836, with the following officers: Eli Gaskill, president; Isaiah Morris, vice-president; A. T. Sewell, treasurer; A. E. Strickle, secretary; Thomas How, Jr., Jesse Hughes, Jr., Gayer Starbuck, Isaac Strickle, George McManis, Jacob Haines, John B. Posey, James McFadden, Benjamin Nordyke and Cyrus Reed, directors. The fair of 1837 was held on October 28, at the house of Richard Pierce; admission fifty cents, dinner extra. The year had witnessed the production of excellent crops of fruit and grain and the amount and quality of stock was exceedingly creditable for that day. Eli Gaskill was president, and A. E. Strickle, recording secretary. The judges of horses were Jacob Haines, Curtis Jackson, Benajah Nordyke, James McFadden, Simon Hadley; judges of cattle, John Hadley, George D. Haworth, Cyrus Reed, Eli Gaskill, Abraham Nordyke; judges of sheep, swine, etc., Nathan Linton, Charles Russell, William Hadley, Gayer Starbuck, Thomas How, Jr.; judges of domestic manufactured articles, John B. Posey, Isaac Strickle, William Hibben, C. D. Hughes, Thomas B. Carroll.

After 1837 there is nothing to show that a fair was held until 1849. The report of the state board of agriculture for the latter year shows that a new society had been organized the year previous and that its first fair was held at Wilmington on October 17 and 18, 1849. The officers of the new society were: Eli Gaskill, president; Josiah (so printed in the report—should be Isaiah) Morris, vice-president; Isaac B. Thomas, treasurer; Grafton B. White, secretary; Paul H. Vandervort, William Hibben, Isaac Haslett, Curtis Jackson, Milton McMillan, managers. The fair was held this year on the north side of the Washington pike, east of town. The receipts were one hundred fifty-seven dollars and fifty-nine cents, of which amount the county furnished seventy-eight dollars and fifty-nine cents. Fairs followed annually after this year. In 1851, the court house was used as a building in which to exhibit farm products.

The officers in 1851 were: Eli Gaskill, president; Isaiah Morris, vice-president, and G. B. White, secretary.

1852—Isaac Haslett was president; E. L. Lacy, vice-president; Joseph Wood, secretary.

1853—Isaac Haslett was president; D. Persenger, vice-president; and Joseph Wood, secretary. This year the fair was held on new grounds now occupied by the nursery in the western suburb of Wilmington.

1854—Eli Gaskill, president; Thomas L. Carothers, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1855—Paul H. Vandervort, president; William Crumly, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1856—Thomas D. Austin, president; J. G. Starbuck, vice-president; William Crumly, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1857—A. E. Strickle, president; J. G. Starbuck, vice-president; A. W. Doan, secretary. This year the fair was held east of Wilmington on the land now occupied by the Wilmington College campus. This land was leased by Isaiah Morris and fairs were held here for nine years.

1858—A. E. Strickle, president; Jesse G. Starbuck, vice-president; William Crumley, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1859—A. E. Strickle, president; Samuel Knowlton, vice-president; William Crumley, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1860—P. H. Vandervort, president; A. W. Doan, secretary.

1861—J. D. Hines, president; J. M. Haworth, vice-president, and subsequently president, Hines not serving; A. W. Doan, elected secretary, but in his absence L. C. Walker was appointed secretary pro tem., and discharged the duties of the office.

1862—B. W. Fuller, president; L. C. Walker, secretary.

1863—Cyrus Linton, president; L. C. Walker, secretary.

1864—Cyrus Linton, president; L. C. Walker, secretary.

1865—J. D. Hines, president; L. C. Walker, secretary; William Crumley, treasurer. Mr. Crumley died in office and Charles N. Osborn was appointed on September 21, 1865, to fill vacancy.

1866—Paul Vandervort, president; L. D. Reed, treasurer; S. M. Babb, secretary. In this year the present fair grounds west of Wilmington were purchased and the property of the society removed from the old grounds.

1867—A. W. Doan, president; L. C. Walker, secretary.

1868—James S. Hoblet, president; Levi Mills, secretary.

1869—J. S. Hoblet, president; Levi Mills, secretary.

1870—C. M. Walker, president; Levi Mills, secretary.

1871—C. M. Walker, president; Levi Mills, secretary.

1872—C. M. Walker, president; D. T. White, secretary.

1873-75—C. Rhonemus, president; D. T. White, secretary.

1876—C. Rhonemus, president; W. H. Rannells, secretary.

1877—C. Rhonemus, president; N. M. Linton, secretary.

1878—Cyrus Linton, president; S. G. Smith, secretary.

1879-80—E. H. Matthews, president; N. M. Linton, secretary.

1881—Leo Weltz, president; N. M. Linton, secretary. The fair this year was held in August.

1882—David Peebles, president; N. M. Linton, secretary.

1883—David Peebles, president; N. M. Linton, secretary. Fair held on August 14-18; two hundred show horses on the grounds.

1884—Leo Weltz, president; Joshua Lacy, vice-president; N. M. Linton, secretary, and C. W. Swaim, treasurer. The heads of the departments were: Executive, Leo Weltz, Joshua Lacy and M. J. Grady; horses, mules and jacks, L. D. Reed and J. H. Terrell. Fair held August 12-15.

1885—Leo Weltz, president; N. M. Linton, secretary. Fair held August 11-14.

1886—Joshua Lacy, president; N. M. Linton, secretary; dates, September 7-10.

1887—O. F. Peddicord, president; Leo Weltz, vice-president; N. M. Linton, secretary, and J. W. Denver, Jr., treasurer.

1888—O. F. Peddicord, president; N. M. Linton, secretary; directors, H. H. Hadley, H. P. Malone, John Clevenger, Edgar Hadley, J. W. Richardson, Charles Vanniman, Leo Weltz, H. C. Denver, W. H. Probasco, J. W. Denver, Jr., J. M. Miller and Joshua Linton. Fair held from July 31 to August 3. A new grand stand was built this year.

1889—Fair held on September 10-13.

1890—H. P. Malone, president; John Clevenger, vice-president; G. P. Thorpe, secretary; J. W. Denver, Jr., treasurer. Fair dates were September 9-12.

1891—G. H. Thorpe, secretary. The payment of premiums were guaranteed a subscribed fund raised in the county. The dates were September 1-4.

1892—J. M. Miller, president; John Clevenger, vice-president; J. W. Denver, treasurer, and G. P. Thorpe, secretary. The receipts of the fair this year—September 6-9—were thirty-five hundred dollars, and the expenditures were three thousand dollars.

1893—J. M. Miller, president; Edgar Hadley, vice-president; J. W. Denver, Jr., treasurer, and G. P. Thorpe, secretary.

1894—The Agricultural Society decided that it would not give a fair this year, and the grounds were leased to the Wilmington Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, who held a fair, September 25-28. The committee appointed by the lodge to manage the fair were Col. J. W. Denver, G. P. Thorpe, secretary, and J. M. Miller, president. The name was changed from the Clinton County Fair to that of the Wilmington Fair.

1895—The Knights of Pythias again gave the fair. It was managed by Fred Weltz, president; Kent P. Browning, secretary; J. W. Denver, treasurer; Stanley Outcalt and Tim Payne. The fair was held on September 4-6.

1896—There was no fair held this year and the grounds were rented by the county commissioners to J. R. Sloan for one year for the sum of sixty dollars.

1897—This year a new company was formed to give a Wilmington fair on September 23-24, with Miletus Garner as secretary.

From 1897 to 1904 there was apparently no fair given. The grounds were sold to U. N. Morgan.

1904—In this year the fair grounds were leased from U. N. Morgan by G. R. Kennedy, of Sardinia, Brown county, Ohio. He organized the Wilmington Fair and Amusement Company, with the following officers: G. R. Kennedy, president; B. E. Purdy, treasurer; A. W. Doan, secretary; and G. L. Kinkaid, assistant secretary. They spent some money remodeling the old grounds and held a fair on September 13-16. This was the first of the "Farmer Kennedy Fairs." This same company gave fairs on the following dates: August 22-25, 1905; August 28-31, 1906; September 10-13, 1907; September 8-11, 1908, and September 14-17, 1909.

In 1910 a new company, with Samuel Johns as president; Claude Miller, vice-president; O. J. Thatcher, secretary, and J. M. Lewis, treasurer, gave a fair on September 27-30. In 1911 there was no fair given.

In 1912, the Ohio Horse Sales Company, of which Al W. Doan was secretary and W. J. Galvin the general manager, held a fair on September 18-20. They held their second fair, September 17-19, 1912, but the heavy rains caused their failure.

In 1914, the Wilmington Fair Association was organized with W. J. Galvin as the general manager, and A. W. Doan, secretary. They held their first fair on September 2-4 of that year. Their second fair and first annual horse show was held August 11-12, 1915. The officers of the association are: W. J. Galvin, general manager; Al W. Doan, secretary; O. F. Peddicord, superintendent horse department; H. C. Fenker, superintendent art hall exhibits; Al W. Conrey, superintendent of grounds.

THE SABINA FAIR.

A general meeting of the citizens of Clinton and surrounding counties was called, to be held at Sabina in 1874, to consider the advisability and, if thought advisable, the means best adapted to the formation of an agricultural or fair association. At this meeting it was undertaken to start the formation of such a society, and committees were accordingly appointed to solicit subscriptions in furtherance of the project. After these committees had obtained five thousand dollars in subscription to the stock, another meeting was held, at which the following board of officers were elected: E. B. Martin, president; J. R. Amos, vice-president; D. C. Harrison, secretary; H. H. Thorp, treasurer, and S. B. Lightner, B. J. Darbyshire, John Kirk, John Borum, E. M. Morgan, H. B. Reed, C. M. Luttrell and J. W. Carter, directors. The organization was given the name of the Sabina Union Agricultural Society. Thirty-five acres of ground on the Washington pike, and adjoining Sabina on the east, were then rented from A. C. Mills, a lease of ten years being taken by the society. Work was at once commenced on the grounds and, during the first year, seven thousand dollars were expended on improvements to the grounds. The first fair, held August 18-21, 1874, was a great success, financially and otherwise, and after that the society continued to reap their annual reward for their labor until their disbandment. In 1881 the grounds were enlarged to forty acres. A half-mile track, sixty feet wide, was made and shed room for fully two hundred horses erected. In addition to this were built commodious cattle pens, a floral hall, agricultural hall, dining hall, music stand, band stands, judges' stands, etc. Seating room for fully five thousand people was found in the amphitheater formed around one side of the speed ring. The officers of the society in 1882 were: A. Sellars, president; H. A. Haynes, vice-president; R. Curtis, treasurer; I. Roberds, secretary, and S. B. Lightner, C. B. Vaniman, A. J. Gaskins, H. B. Reed, A. J. Wilson, C. E. Custis, E. J. Darbyshire and C. Rhonemus, directors.

On May 27, 1885, the old society was reorganized under the same name, with C. Rhonemus, president; Martin Kennedy, treasurer; I. Roberds, secretary, and C. E. Custis, H. B. Reed, S. B. Lightner, C. B. Vaniman and A. J. Wilson, directors. A fair was held on August 24-28, at which three thousand dollars were put up as race premiums.

In 1888, the old society had again died, and on June 4 the Sabina Fair Company was incorporated, with a capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars and twenty-five members. The officers were: Alex Sellars, president; M. M. Dakin, vice-president; H. H. Thorpe, treasurer; Isaac Roberds, secretary. This company gave the remainder of the fairs that were given at Sabina. Meanwhile, on the expiration of the old ten-year lease from A. C. Mills, the association had bought the fair grounds.

In 1889 the officers of the company were: Alex Sellars, president; M. M. Dakin, vice-president; Isaac Roberds, secretary; H. H. Thorpe, treasurer, and Dr. A. J. Slaight, W. J. Sewell, S. M. Thorne, C. Rhonemus, G. W. Yeazel, William Custis, Foster Geffs and J. T. Sylvester, as directors. Probably the greatest and most successful fair ever given at Sabina was the one given on August 19-23, of that year. The crowds in attendance were large and the racing good. Governor Foraker paid it the honor of a visit.

In 1891, the fair was held on July 27-31. The secretary that year was C. Burnett.

The last fair held was from August 30 to September 2, 1892, with the following officers: C. Rhonemus, president; M. M. Dakin, vice-president; Martin Kennedy, secretary; William Custis, treasurer; and S. M. Thorne, J. J. Cumer, G. A. Pavey, Charles Burnett, Alex Sellars, C. F. Allen and Albert Mills, directors.

As nearly as can be learned, there was no fair held in 1893. In December, 1893, negotiations were begun by the Methodist Protestant conference camp meeting for the purchase of the fair grounds. The deal was closed and the transfer dated February 1, 1894, the fair company releasing all but two acres of the grounds for the consideration of fifteen thousand dollars.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

During the administration of President Johnson, in 1866, the agricultural affairs in the South were in such a deplorable state that it was decided to study the conditions among the farmers and ascertain if something could not be done for their betterment. The President decided to place this work under the jurisdiction of the department of agriculture, and Isaac Newton, who was then commissioner of agriculture, was placed in charge of the work. O. H. Kelley, of Minnesota, who was then a clerk in the agricultural department, was sent south to study the conditions among the farmers. On his return he made a report which disclosed such a frightful state of affairs that the idea of organizing the farmers into a society was determined. This society was known as the Patrons of Husbandry, or Grangers, and the national Grange was organized at Washington, D. C., December 4, 1867. The first national officers were: William Sanders, District of Columbia, master; J. R. Thompson, Vermont, lecturer; Anson Bartlett, Ohio, overseer; A. S. Moss, New York, assistant overseer; William Muri, Pennsylvania, steward; A. B. Grosh, Pennsylvania, chaplain; William Ireland, Pennsylvania, treasurer; O. H. Kelley, secretary; and E. P. Farris, Illinois gatekeeper.

Dispensations were granted by the national Grange to the following cities: Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, first; Fredonia, New York, second; Columbus, Ohio, third. The agricultural bulletin of October 4, 1873, showed granges to the number of six thousand nine hundred and fourteen in the United States. Ohio had at that time one hundred and forty-seven. The master of the state of Ohio was S. H. Ellis, Springboro; the secretary of the state Grange was D. M. Stewart, Xenia. Simeon Moon, of Farmer's Station, was the first deputy in Clinton county.

In March, 1873, S. H. Ellis, of Springboro, Warren county, came to this county and organized the first grange in the county. It was known as Clinton Grange No. 122. On September 9, 1873, Wilmington Grange No. 123 was organized. Judge J. H. West was the first master, and Judge E. J. West was the first deputy. Other granges were organized in the county soon afterward.

On August 8, 1874, a county grange meeting was held at the fair grounds of Clinton county and all of the granges of the county were present. It was estimated that there were ten thousand people at this meeting. There were thirty-one granges in the county at this time and they were all well represented. This was a great gala day for the people of this section. There were speeches by the leading officers of the day and a parade through Wilmington and different amusements for the diversion of old and young. It seems that the granges were at the height of their existence at this time.

The prosperity of the granges received its first setback with the coming into existence of the organization known as the Farmers Alliance. The Grange was a non-political and non-sectarian organization. But the Farmers Alliance, which originated in the West, was a partisan society and intended to make their reforms through gaining political power. From this time on the granges began to decrease. One by one, they would surrender their charters and the members were dimited to other places. The last grange in this county to pass out under the old regime was Oak Grove Grange No. 23. In the Blanchester fire of October 18, 1895, the paraphernalia, records, etc., of this lodge was destroyed and on June 15, 1896, the last meeting was held and the members given their cards of dimit.

Union Grange No. 77 was the first grange organized in this county since the awakening of interest in this movement.

BEECH GROVE GRANGE.

Beech Grove Grange No. 1902 was organized on December 5, 1913, with the following charter members: C. J. Luse, Mina Luse, W. S. Wallace, Alice Wallace, C. J. Hempstead, Bertha Hempstead, Walter Garman, Leah Garman, John Ridgeway, Emma Ridgeway, H. R. Clark, John Whitlow, Frank Hook, J. E. Hook, Oscar Whitlow, James Whitlow, William Fender, Hazel Garman, Jacob Garman, Ida Garrison, Orville Bevan, Nina Bevan, Mollie Crites, Ray Rodgers, John Finney, Harrold Hook, Floyd Hook, Mrs. E. J. St. John, Mary Fender, Amos Carey, Anna Carey, Elba Andrew, Frank Carey and Earl Carey. On July 1, 1915, the grange reported eighty-seven members in good standing.

The grange meets at the Beech Grove church on the first and third Wednesday nights of each month in the year. The first officers were as follow: Master, C. J. Luse; overseer, Harry R. Clark; lecturer, Ray Rogers; steward, Walter Garman; assistant steward, Oscar Whitlow; lady assistant, Hazel Garman; chaplain, Bertha Hempstead; Garman; pomona, Nina Bevan; flora, Emma Ridgeway; trustees, Clyde J. Hempstead, John Finney and Orville Bevan.

The officers for 1915 are as follow: Master, C. J. Luse; overseer, Harry R. Clark; lecturer, George B. Jenks; steward, Harold Hook; assistant steward, Oscar Whitlow; lady assistant, Hazel Garman; chaplain, Sadie M. Davis; treasurer, Frank Hook; secretary, Frank Carey; gatekeeper, J. E. Hook; ceres, Mary Davis; pomona, Mary Fender; flora, Georgia Crites; trustees. Clyde J. Hempstead, John Finney and Orville Bevans.

This is one of the most active granges in the county and, although it is less than two years old, it has already done some excellent work for its members. It has done co-operative buying of fertilizer and binder twine, to the amount of thirty-five hundred dollars, at a great saving to the members. In other ways its usefulness has been demonstrated and it is safe to say that it will become a factor of increasing importance. Under the energetic leadership of its master, C. J. Luse, Beech Grove Grange is taking its place as a factor, not only in the economic life of the community which it serves, but in the educational, religious and social life as well.

BLANCHESTER GRANGE.

Blanchester Grange No. 1767 was organized on January 28, 1911, with seventy-one members, and the present membership remains the same. The first officers were as follow: Salathiel Jackson, master; William Kulp, overseer; Thomas Sharp, chaplain; Roy J. Ross, treasurer; Sanford Brown, steward; William Reed, assistant steward; William Reynolds, secretary; Wilford Ross, gatekeeper; Mrs. Albert Foote, pomona; Marley Clevenger, flora; Mrs. Chloe Starkey, ceres; Mrs. Harry Adams, lady assistant.

The officers for 1915 are as follow: L. O. West, master; William Kulp, overseer; Mrs. Nell Whitenack, lecturer; Ottis Watkins, steward; William Starkey, assistant steward; Harley Carnahan, chaplain; Roy J. Ross, treasurer; Mrs. Lucy D. Peters, secretary; Frank Tullis, gatekeeper; Eda Watkins, pomona; Mrs. Chloe Starkey, flora; Mrs. Elizabeth Kulp, ceres; Mrs. Rena Sears, lady assistant. The grange meets on the first and third Saturday nights of each month in the Knights of Pythias hall in Blanchester. The programs are of a general nature and deal with all phases of agricultural life. Although the grange has been organized but a comparatively short time, it has already accomplished much good for its members.

NEW VIENNA, WESTBORO AND CLARKSVILLE GRANGES.

Union Grange No. 77, at New Vienna, has one hundred and ninety-six members, with the following officers: C. G. Blackbun, master; E. H. Edwards, lecturer; Grace Bernard, secretary; A. H. Terrell, legislative agent. Westboro Grange No. 1779 has fifty-six members, with the following officers: Milton Holaday, master; Charles Thompson, lecturer; F. R. Christ, secretary. Clarksville Grange No. 1695 has seventy-four members, with the following officers: George W. Orr, master; Mrs. Anna Wellar, lecturer; Oscar Wellar, secretary; H. R. Harris, legislative agent.

CHAPTER XVII.

ADAMS TOWNSHIP.

Adams township is bounded on the west by Warren county, on the north by Chester township, on the east by Union township and on the south by Vernon township. Adams township is the smallest township in the county, having an area of fourteen thousand and two hundred acres, or a fraction over twenty-two square miles. It was the twelfth township formed in the county and was named after John Quincy Adams.

The water courses of the township are bordered by great stretches of rich and fertile bottom lands, which are, in turn, flanked by a line of low hills that lead to the higher table lands above. From Todd's fork, which divides the township in almost half, to the north and west there is a rolling tableland of prolific soil, that is black and loamy. To the east and south of this stream the uplands are best adapted to the growth of wheat and grasses.

STREAMS.

Adams township contains only two streams of any size, Todd's fork, which, as has been said, practically divides the township in half, a tributary of the Little Miami, and Lytle's creek, which empties into the first about one mile southwest of the town of Sligo. It is thought that Todd's fork was named after Col. John Todd, a noted pioneer and Indian fighter, who was killed in the bloody battle of Blue Licks, August 19, 1782. This creek enters the township a short distance to the west of the northeast corner and flows to the southwest.

Lytle's creek enters the township at about the center of the eastern boundary and flows to the west until it empties into Todd's fork. This stream was named after Gen. William Lytle, of Cincinnati, a pioneer surveyor of Hamilton county. To the east of Ogden, about a half mile, there is a small tributary of Lytle's creek, flowing from the south, known as Indian branch. It received its name from a band of Indians who made their home on its banks before the white man came. About a third of a mile from the mouth of Indian branch there is another stream, known as Jess's run, that puts into it from an easterly direction.

From the northeast, the township line crossing it not far from its mouth, Dutch creek empties into Todd's fork. From a southerly direction, through the northeastern portion of the township, comes Little creek, which empties into Todd's fork about a mile above the mouth of Lytle's creek. There is still another small stream which finds its source near the southern line of the township and flows to the northwest, emptying into Lytle's creek, perhaps a mile below Ogden.

TIMBER.

At the time of the first settlements, the whole of Adams township was covered with unbroken, virgin forest. Sprinkled among the stately white poplars on the hillsides and the black walnuts of the rich alluvial bottoms, were found the white oaks and the wide-spreading elms. These monarchs of the forest were often five or six feet in diameter and devoid of limb or branch to the height of sixty feet. But they were forced to bow before the axe of the ever-advancing pioneer, and their places were taken by homes and farms. In making the clearings the trees were usually girdled with the axe and left to "deaden," as it was called. When their trunks had decayed to a slight degree, they were felled, rolled into great heaps and burned, the best being preserved to be split into rails, with which to fence in the rudely cultivated plats.

The following is a list of the indigenous trees of the locality, both the common and the scientific name being given: Red, or slippery, elm (Ulmus fulva), white elm (Ulmus Americana), hackberry (Celtis occidentalis), dogwood (Cornus florida), black gum (Nyssa multiflora), mulberry (Morus Rubra), sassafras (S. officinale), linden or basswood (Tilia Americanus), burr oak (Quercus macrocarpa), white oak (Quercus alba), horn-beam or iron wood (Carpinus), red oak (Quercus rubra), sugar maple (Acer saccharinum), swamp maple (Acer rubrum), sycamore or buttom wood (Plantarus occidentalis), locust (Robina pseudacacia), honey locust (S. officinale), white walnut or butternut (Juglans cinerea), black walnut (Juglans nigra), shellbark hickory (Carya sulcata), brown or pignut hickory (Carya parcina), buckeye or horse-chestnut (Aesculus), common willow (Salix cordata), black willow (Salix nigra), yellow poplar (Populus grandidenta), American aspen (P. tremuloides), beech (Fagus ferruginea), white ash (Fraxinus Americana), blue ash (Fraxinus quadrangulata), wild cherry (Prunus serotina).

FORMATION OF THE TOWNSHIP.

Chester and Vernon townships originally included the territory now embraced by Adams township. The first official act of the first board of county commissioners was the division of the county of Clinton into the three townships of Chester, Vernon and Richland. The line between Chester and Vernon townships was Lytle's creek, beginning where the creek crossed the former line between Highland and Warren counties, and continuing to the point where it joined Todd's fork and from thence due west to the new Warren county line. This order was made on April 6, 1810, by George McManis, Hames Birdsell and Henry Babb. This line remained until August 21, 1813, when, at a special session of the commissioners' court, it was moved farther north, to the state road running from Wilmington to Lebanon. Union township was formed at this time, including within its limits parts of both townships. This order was reiterated in the following entry:

"June Session, A. D. 1830.

"Chester and Vernon townships, Alteration.

"At the present session of the commissioners of Clinton county, towit; the stated session of June, 1830, held by Joseph Roberds, John Lewis and James Sherman, commissioners, a petition signed by divers citizens of the county, praying for a restoration to Vernon township of that part of Chester which formerly belonged to Vernon, that is, that the Lebanon state road be the line between said townships; whereupon the commissioners aforesaid, being of opinion that said alteration is necessary, adjudge and order that the said alteration be made, and that the road aforesaid be hereafter taken and esteemed to be the line between said townships."

This line ran through the village of Sligo, which, by 1849, although still unincorporated, had grown to be quite a good-sized town. A movement was started by its citizens and those of the immediate vicinity to form a new township, of which its would be the business center. On March 5, 1849, a petition was presented to the commissioners praying that a new township be formed out of the territory therein described, which included parts of Chester, Vernon and Union townships. The commissioners appointed Hiram Madden to make a survey of the territory named, to ascertain the number of square miles it contained. It was found that this territory did not contain a sufficient area, as required by law, for the formation of a township and the petition was withdrawn. The following petition was drawn up at once, circulated and presented to the commissioners on May 1, 1849, asking for the formation of a new township, the survey this time containing more territory than before:

"To the Commissioners of Clinton County, Ohio:

"Your petitioners, citizens of Clinton county, Ohio, respectfully represent that we labor under great inconvenience on account of our very remote situation from the place of holding elections, and from the place where other township business is transacted, in consequence of which we respectfully, but most earnestly, ask you to establish a township to be taken out of Union, Chester and Vernon townships. (Here follows a description of the territory the same as in the survey.)

"We, your petitioners, now claim it is an act of justice, as there is left in each of the townships from which the proposed new township is to be taken, ample amount of territory to still constitute a constitutional township, that our petition be granted as now asked for, and which is signed by citizens and voters in the districts included in the boundary of the new township.

"Henry Harvey, William W. Sheppard, John P. Black, Elihu Hambleton, Joel McKinney, John R. Jobe, George Carter, William Vandervort, David Pyle, Micajah Moore, Harlan Maden, William Bennett, Henry Hazard, David S. Pyle, Jeremiah Kimbrough, Daniel Shank, Abel Thornberry, Jabez H. Hadley, Jehu Pyle, William Cooper, Samuel J. Cleland, James M. Davis, Eden Andrew, William Ballard, David Harlan, Benjamin Brackney, Egbert K. Howland, James H. Elkins, John H. Moore, Adam Osborne, Uriah W. Hunt, John Crosson, Chalkley Albertson, Ezekiel Hornaday, Eli Kimbrough, John Hadley, Jr., William B. Andrew, John B. Davis, George Maden, Lewis F. Davis, George Slack, Esq., William Osborn, John H. Elkins, Ezekiel Conklin, Samuel Moore, Aaron Howell, William S. Riley, Alfred Black, Joshua Clark, Joseph Thatcher, Stacy Haines, Daniel Smith, S. Lindley, John Kimbrough, B. F. Laplane, Lorenzo Jenks, James Black, Joshua Moore, William A. Glover, Asa Green, William P. Harvey, Isaac Hornaday, Jesse Thatcher, J. H. Longshore, Alfred Hollcraft, Alexander Bowen, David Curl, Jacob Hadley, Gideon Truss, Alexander Cleland, Joseph Moore, Alden Jenks, John Townsend, William Henson, John Pyle, Clinton Parks, Eli Hadley, Levi Stratton, Simon Hadley, Levi N. Miller, David Jenks, Lorenzo Clark, Samuel Omerman, Cyrus E. Carter, Calvin Andrew, Joseph W. Slack, John J. Anson, William Simons, Moses Izard, John Hornaday, Simon Harvey, Joseph Wingfield, John Fallis, Amos Haines, Jonathan D. Hadley, Ezra Moon, William Daniels, William Moore, Augustus Buck, John B. Carter, Thomas J. Cast, David F. Harlan, Samuel Andrew, Reed Feris, E. F. Curl, Micajah Stratton, Hiram Maden, Eli Harvey, John Daugherty, Thomas Kimbrough, John Cleland, Ira Ferris, John B. Smith, DeLos Feris, Samuel Mart, Nathan M. Evritt, Artemas Nickerson, Jeremiah Kimbrough, Seneca Wildman, John Maden, Isaac Schooley, Eli Maden, Mahlon Stratton, Armoni Hale, Edward S. Davis, Alexander Harlan, Isaac Harvey, David Thatcher, Enoch Carter, Thomas J. Daugherty."

SURVEY OF ADAMS TOWNSHIP.

The following is the survey of the township as accompanying the petition and adopted as the boundaries of the township. It has remained unchanged to date:

"Beginning at a point opposite Jonathan Hadley's, at a stake in Warren county line, in A. Branstrator's field; thence east 118 poles to Jonathan Hadley's, excluding him; thence to Isaac Hawkins' farm south 68° 20′ east, crossing Todd's Fork at one mile and 194 poles, to the turnpike road at one mile and 290 poles, whole distance, two miles and 40 poles, to a stake including the said Hawkins; thence to the land line of John Osborne, south 58° east two miles and 102 poles, to a beech and two small mulberries; thence east 116 poles to the west line of Union Township, to a stake and three beeches; thence south 1° west 44 poles, to the southwest corner of Union Township, to a dead beech and white oak; thence south 1° east 320 poles to a stake in said line in Peter Osborn's field; thence north 7° west, crossing Cincinnati State Road at one mile and 60 poles, the county road at Joshua Moore's at one mile, 312 poles, the county road at Haines Moore's at two miles and 140 poles, Lytle's Creek at two miles and 170 poles, the turnpike road at three miles and 102 poles, Todd's Fork at four miles and 280 poles, Waynesville road at five miles and 60 poles (whole distance five miles and 71 poles), to a stake; thence west 81 poles, crossing the Waynesville road at 11 poles to a stake, where Union Township line crosses the county road leading from Clarksville to Centre Meeting House; thence to Daniel Collett's, Esq., south 86° 48′ west, three miles and 165 poles, crossing Miller's Creek at 205 poles, excluding said Collett; thence west to the Warren County line, south 1° west two miles and 571 poles to the beginning, crossing the Lebanon road and line of Vernon and Chester Townships at two miles and 46 poles, containing twenty-two and one-quarter square miles." This survey was made by Hiram Maden, a pioneer surveyor of the new township.

The commissioners considered the matter on May 1, 1849, and ordered that the township be established and that an election should be held in the new township on May 12, to elect the following officers: Three trustees, one clerk, one treasurer, one assessor and one constable. The county commissioners at this time were Azel Walker, Joseph Hoskins and Jesse Doan. The election was held on the date set, in the shop of John H. Moore, in Sligo, with Henry Harvey, David Jenks and W. B. Andrews as the judges. The following men were elected to fill the offices: Jeremiah Harvey, David Jenks and Peter Osborn, trustees; Jonathan D. Hadley, clerk; Dr. W. W. Shappard, assessor; Simon Harvey, treasurer, and James H. Elkins, constable. Henry Hazard was elected justice of the peace on October 10, of the same year.

MILLS.

The streams of the township furnished the power for the early mills. In 1805 Mordecai Mendenhall built a grist-mill on Todd's fork, about a mile above the mouth of Dutch creek. He sold it, with one hundred and forty acres of land, on March 15, 1806, to Jonathan Wright, who owned it until 1814, when he sold it to Richard Fallis. Fallis refitted and enlarged it and ran it until 1826, when he sold it, with a tract of two hundred and fifty-six acres of land, to his nephew, Jonathan Fallis. In 1830 the mill, with forty-seven acres of land, was sold by Jonathan Fallis to Josiah Townsend, but Townsend died soon after and the administrator of his estate deeded it back to Fallis by the order of court, in payment of an unpaid balance due on the original purchase price. Fallis at once sold it to John Hadley, who owned it until 1841, when he sold it to Stacey Haines, who ran it until 1854. It was afterwards owned by Thomas Kimbrough, Jeremiah Kimbrough, his son, William L. Hadley, Thomas Hazard, A. U. Hadley, and again by William L. Hadley. Its use having been discontinued and the building fallen into decay, he removed it about 1867.

Eli Harvey and John Hadley, brothers-in-law, built, in 1808, a grist-mill on Todd's fork, about a mile below Springfield meeting house. It afterwards came into the sole possession of John Hadley and gained a wide reputation and patronage as Hadley's mill. His sons, Isaac and John, afterwards ran it for a long period and sold it in the early fifties to Jesse Thatcher. Soon after its purchase by Thatcher, it caught fire and burned down. He rebuilt it in a magnificent manner and ran it for about twenty years, when he took it down and moved it to Wilmington.

A saw-mill was built on Lytle's creek, near where Ogden now stands, by John Holladay in 1818, and about three years later a grist-mill was added. The saw-mill was rebuilt about 1846 and a short time afterward the grist-mill was refitted and steam power installed.

In the year 1811, Caleb Harvey built a carding and fulling-mill on his farm on Little creek and kept it running for several years. It stood a few rods up the stream from where the Lebanon road crosses the creek. This mill did a flourishing business in its time and was one of the most widely known mills in the county. The early settlers often came from miles distant to this mill to get their wool carded and formed into rolls, and their blankets and jeans fulled. It was often forced to run at nights. A man by the name of Alexander Montgomery was for many years its proprietor. It has long since disappeared.

Another mill in the township that has long since followed its predecessors was built about the year 1842 by William B. Andrew on Lytle's creek, about a mile and a half above its mouth. It was a saw-mill and was kept running for many years.

All of the above mentioned mills had decayed and disappeared by 1882 except the mill at Ogden, which was still standing, but in disuse. At that time even, it was considered a relic of the past and pointed out to all the visitors of that village. But the younger generations of today do not have even the decaying and fallen ruins of these old mills to remind them of the times when their grandfathers, as lads, carried a bag of grain on the back of "old Dobbin" to the mill, for the family's flour.

SCHOOL HOUSES.

The first school house in the township was erected in 1808, on the land of Isaac Harvey, about one-fourth of a mile north of Todd's fork. In 1812 or 1813 there was a school building built on the Nicholas Carter farm and in 1814 another was erected on the farm of Isaac Stout, about a quarter of a mile east of Lytle's Creek meeting house. In 1813 or 1814 George Carter, with the help of Jeremiah Kimbrough, Thomas Kersey and Nathan Mendenhall, built a log school on his farm. Several other school buildings were erected from time to time and several were controlled by the society of Friends.

In 1834 there was a school house built on what was then the Holaday farm (afterwards known as the Quinby farm), and, about 1845, there was a neat frame building erected by the society of Friends at Lytle's Creek meeting house. After several years these all became district schools and passed under the control of the board of education of the township. All these old buildings have long since disappeared and not a vestige of them remains today to even identify the spots where they stood. In 1853 a new school law, with a new system of maintaining schools, went into force, and the township was subdivided and redistricted throughout. The old school houses were abandoned, new sites procured and new buildings erected. The old log school house, with the large fireplace, the greased-paper windows, the stools and seats without a support for the back, with no blackboards or maps, have become a thing of the past forever. Among the early teachers were William Holaday, George Carter, Warren Sabin, Joseph Doan, John Harvey, James Dakin, Henry Harvey, Eli Harvey, Thomas Kersey, Hiram Maden and James Osborn; of the second generation, were William Cooper, James Crawford, Thomas Green and Henry Zimmerman.

THE PIONEERS.

The first resident of the township was Samuel Lee, who, by 1804, had built a cabin in the neighborhood of the Springfield meeting house, on what was afterward known as the Isaac Harvey land. Archibald Edwards, Peter Dicks, his brother-in-law, Isaac Harvey, Jacob Hale and John Hadley came from Ohio in the following year and settled in the same vicinity. Soon afterward Isaac Harvey journeyed to North Carolina, where he purchased, with his brother, Eli, the great Pollard tract of two thousand acres of land, of a Pollard who resided at Richmond, Virginia. He returned to Ohio, bringing his brothers, Eli, Joshua and Caleb, and their families, with him in the fall of 1806. They all settled on the Pollard tract and were the foundation of the great Harvey settlement of Adams township. Another brother, William, followed them from North Carolina a few years later. These brothers had two sisters, Martha and Lydia; Martha married Jacob Hale, Sr., and Lydia married John Hadley.

Isaac Harvey, who lived near Springfield in a brick house built in 1814, married a sister of Peter Dicks by the name of Lydia. To them were born three sons, William, Harlan and Simon D., and six daughters, Nancy, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Martha, Lydia and Ruth. William, the eldest son, married a young lady by the name of Crew; Nancy, the eldest daughter, married Archibald Edwards; Elizabeth married Enock Harlan; Rebecca became the wife of Jonathan Hadley; Martha, the wife of Aaron Antram; Ruth, the wife of a man by the name of Towel. Mary Stanfielf was the maiden name of the wife of Eli Harvey, who settled between Lytle's creek and Todd's fork, near their junction. He died on April 12, 1822, at the age of sixty years, leaving one son, William, and three daughters, Ann, Mary and Cynthia. Joshua Harvey, a brother of Isaac and Eli, who settled on the south of Todd's fork, was married three times. He first married a woman by the name of Morrison, by whom he had five children, Caleb, Hannah, Simon, Levi and Robert. Mary Moon, his second wife and the sister of James Moon, was the mother of twins, Jehu and Nancy. Samuel and Abigail were the children of the third wife, a sister of Reuben, Isaac and John Chew. Caleb Harvey, a fourth brother, settled about one-half a mile southwest of Springfield. His wife was Sarah, daughter of Jesse and Hannah Towel, of North Carolina. The fruits of this marriage were six children, Jesse, Joshua, Hannah, Eli, Rebecca and Elizabeth, the eldest being born in North Carolina. His wife died on June 27, 1825, at the age of forty-eight; he died at the age of fifty-four on December 12, 1830. They were both buried at Springfield. Their son Joshua died in 1831, leaving a small daughter, Nancy, who was raised in her paternal grandfather's household. William Harvey, the fifth brother, married Mary, the daughter of David and Sarah Vestal. To them were born in North Carolina three sons, John, Eli and David, and on Ohio soil, two daughters, Sarah and Elizabeth. He died on December 5, 1858, at the age of eighty-eight, and his wife followed him five years later, in 1863, in her ninety-sixth year. Both found their final resting place at Springfield.

Eli Harvey, son of William, was born in North Carolina, in 1803, died in April, 1872, at the age of sixty-nine, and was buried at Springfield. His first wife was Sarah, daughter of John and Mary Fallis, and the mother of six children, Lydia, Mary, William Penn, Esther, Ann and Sarah. She died in July, 1835, at the age of thirty. His second wife was Ruth, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Fisher, and the mother of Joseph, Isaac, Hannah, John, James and Sinai. The first two died in infancy.

Isaac Harvey, son of Caleb, married a daughter of Nathaniel and Mary Edwards, of Warren county, Ohio, and was the father of nine children, Caleb, Elizabeth, Mary Jane, Rebecca, William, Nathaniel, Abigail, Jesse H. and Enos F.

Preserved Dakin came from New York state in 1806, and settled on what was afterwards the Lebanon road, near Lytle's Creek meeting house. He soon afterwards removed to Chester township.

Mordecai Mendenhall settled on Todd's fork in 1806, building a mill there which he afterwards sold to Jonathan Wright and which later became known as the Fallis mill. A brother of his, Nathan Mendenhall, who was a brother-in-law of Jeremiah Kimbrough, settled on a farm in the same vicinity.

Joshua Nickerson settled in 1804, on Todd's fork about a mile above the Harvey settlement. He came from the state of New York. He had three sons and one daughter by the name of Clark, David, Artemus and Susannah. Susannah married William Morrow and afterward lived in Warren county, Ohio. Clark, the eldest son, married Martha Ashby and was the father of five children, three sons, James, Joshua and David, and two daughters. One of the daughters married a McKay, and the other became the wife of Evan Hadley. Artemus Nickerson married Elizabeth Reed and had six children, Susannah, Amanda, Mary, Elizabeth, Abigail and Samuel R. David married a young woman by the name of Spencer and moved to Indiana.

David Ferris settled in Adams township as early as 1805 or 1806. Jeremiah Poe settled on Todd's fork, in the Gates survey, prior to 1809, but soon afterward sold his farm and sought a home elsewhere. A man by the name of Wright, one of the first settlers of the township, and the donor of the land for the graveyard at Lytle's creek, sold his farm in 1816, to Mahlon Stratton, and moved away.

John Hadley and his wife, Lydia, daughter of William and Elizabeth Harvey, sister of Eli, Isaac, William, Caleb and Joshua Harvey, came to Ohio from North Carolina in 1806 with the party of Harveys, Hadleys, Dicks, Hales and Edwards mentioned above. John Hadley was born the son of Joshua and Ruth Hadley, on September 23, 1770, in Chatham county, North Carolina. He was married to Lydia Harvey, of Orange county, North Carolina, in Crane Creek monthly meeting, as early as 1794. They were the parents of twelve children: William, Simon, Elizabeth, Joshua, Jacob, Isaac, Eli, John, Thomas, Jonathan D., Ruth and Jane, all but four of whom were born before they moved to Ohio. Of these, Joshua died in infancy and Thomas, at the age of nineteen. With his brother-in-law, Eli Harvey, John Hadley built and afterwards became the owner of what was for years known as the Hadley mill. It stood on Todd's fork, about a mile below the Springfield meeting house. Both he and his wife were lifelong members of the society of Friends and members of the Springfield monthly meeting. He died in 1832, when sixty-two years of age. His widow survived him twenty years. They were both laid to rest in the Springfield cemetery.

William Hadley, their eldest son, was born on July 18, 1795, in North Carolina, and came to Ohio with his father in 1806. His first wife was Sarah Lindley, who died on April 28, 1829, and who was the mother of seven children, Jonathan, Deborah, Thomas (who died in infancy), Eleanor, Eli L., Mary and Milton. He afterwards married Susannah Thatcher, the widow of Thomas Thatcher and the daughter of Joseph Stratton. She was the mother of two children, Sarah and William. William Hadley died on October 23, 1845. His wife died on August 18, 1880, at the ripe old age of sixty-six years, and was buried at Springfield.

Simon Hadley, the second son of John and Lydia (Harvey) Hadley, was born, November 1, 1796, in North Carolina and came to Ohio with his parents. His wife was Ann, the daughter of Thomas Kersey, Sr. He and his wife were residents of Adams township until their deaths, on May 13, 1870, and September 28, 1843, respectively. Their seven children were Jabez, Rebecca, Lydia, John, Julia, Ann K. and Mary M. Several years after the death of his first wife, Simon Hadley married a widow, Mary I. O'Neall, whose maiden name had been Ingham. Elizabeth, the third child and eldest daughter of John Hadley, married Ezekiel Hornaday. She died, May 9, 1850, at fifty-two years of age.

Jacob Hadley was born in North Carolina, on the 3rd of March, 1801. His wife was Mary, daughter of Beale and Mary Butler, of Wayne county, Indiana. He was a resident of Adams township until 1868, when he moved to Wilmington. He was always a strict member of the society of Friends and was considered by all who knew him to be a minister of ability. He always held to the original teachings and doctrines of the Friends in all their purity and simplicity, and was strenuously opposed to the innovations in their manner of worship which came to prevail. His wife died on July 20, 1858, at the age of fifty-seven, and he himself was gathered to his fathers, at the age of seventy-eight, on February 11, 1879. Springfield is the final resting place of both of these venerable pioneers. Their seven children were: Samuel H., Eliza Ann, William Beale, Elwood, Mary B., Susannah Jane and Naomi.

Isaac Hadley, the sixth child of John Hadley, married Lydia, daughter of John Hazard, by whom he had seven children, Calvin, Elizabeth, Phoebe, Elmira, Henry, Rebecca and Harriet. He died, at the age of thirty-six, on July 22, 1839. His widow later became the wife of James Smith, and, on his death, the wife of William Pyle, son of Jehu Pyle, Sr.

Eli Hadley, the next son of John Hadley, was born on September 27, 1804; he married Abigail, the daughter of Reuben and Rhoda Green, and died on November 29, 1854, at the age of fifty. His wife died on April 30, 1887, at the age of twenty-eight. Their five children were Mahala G., Gulielma, Thomas, Micajah and Rhoda.

John Hadley, also a son of John and Lydia (Harvey) Hadley, was born on April 15, 1810, and married Ann, daughter of John and Elizabeth Wildman, of Clark county, Ohio. To them was born seven children: Hiram, Elizabeth, Margaret, Deborah, Henry,

Ruth and Seth. Deborah and Ruth died in infancy. His wife died on April 21, 1848, and was buried at Springfield. He afterwards married Rhoda Stanton, a widow, and lived at Springboro, in Warren county. He died in March, 1882, and is buried at Springfield.

Jonathan D. Hadley, the youngest son of John and Lydia Hadley, was born August 10, 1812. He married Susannah Clawson, daughter of William Clawson, and their union was blessed with four children, Louisa, Mahlon, John William and Evan. He died about 1872, at Clarksville. His widow died at Wilmington, in 1874, and both are buried at Springfield. Ruth Hadley became the wife of W. B. Andrew. She died on October 19, 1852. Jane, the youngest child of John and Lydia Hadley, married Seneca Wildman and, with her husband, moved to Iowa in the early sixties.

William Hadley, son of Joshua and Ruth Hadley, and a brother of John Hadley, emigrated from North Carolina to Ohio in 1816, and settled in Vernon township. Jonathan T. Hadley, son of Simon and Elizabeth Hadley, emigrated from North Carolina to Ohio in 1810, and settled in Adams township near the Warren county line. He married Rebecca, daughter of Isaac Harvey, by whom he had nine children, Elizabeth, Lydia, Samuel L., Ruth, Isaac, Simon, Deborah, Milton and Harlan H.

The Harvey and Hadley families were by far the most numerous of the early settlers of the western part of Clinton county. With but few exceptions, they were all members of the society of Friends. Many still live in their ancestral homes, while others have moved to other counties in Ohio, and others to other states, especially Indiana and Iowa.

William and Nathan Harlan were brothers and sons of Enoch Harlan, of Guilford county, North Carolina. They came to Ohio in 1805 and settled about a mile from Springfield. Nathan, the eldest son, married, in North Carolina, Sarah Hunt, the daughter of a minister. They had nine children, as follow: Lydia, Enoch, Martha, Nathan, Edith, Prudence, Jabez, John and Hannah. William married, also in North Carolina, Charity Kimbrough, a daughter of Jeremiah Kimbrough, and their union was blessed with nine children also; David, Margaret, Jonathan, Ruth, Nancy, Enoch, William, Nathaniel and Edith. John and Enoch Harlan, brothers of William and Nathan, came with their mother from North Carolina, and, after a short residence in Highland county, settled in the same vicinity in the spring of 1807. John Harlan married Lydia Hale, the daughter of Jacob Hale, and was the father of the following children: Jacob, Elizabeth, Rebecca, James and Warren. There were others who died in infancy.

John had the following brothers: William, David, Enoch, Nathan, Jonathan, Nathaniel and Solomon, and three sisters, Nancy Mendenhall, Hannah Maden and Rebecca Hampton. All this family, except Nathaniel, settled in the vicinity of Springfield. David and Solomon, arriving in 1811, were the last to come. Their mother's name was Edith, and she was a sister of Eliabeth Harvey, who came with her sons, as mentioned above, to Ohio in 1806. They were both widows.

Ezekiel Hornada, who was born on February 26, 1796, in Randolph county, North Carolina, came with the Harvey brothers to Ohio in 1806. His mother's name was Dicks, and he was a nephew of Isaac Harvey's by marriage. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of John Hadley, on November 11, 1818, and was the father of twelve children: John, Jehu, Isaiah, Jane, Simon, Mary, William, Eleanor, Lydia, Eli, Isaac and Louisa. His wife died in 1850 and was buried at Springfield. He later married again, and, at the age of eighty-six, moved to Indiana.

Reuben Green was born on July 28, 1770, in Grayson county, North Carolina. He married Rhoda, daughter of David and Mary Ballard, on January 5, 1797, and in the fall of 1811 moved to Ohio and settled near Center meeting house, in Adams township. He bought one hundred and seventy-five acres of land, in 1813, of William Lytle, on Lytle's creek, to which he moved, and lived the remainder of his life. His wife died, at the age of sixty-eight, on February 10, 1843. He died on Christmas day, 1852. They were both buried at Lytle's creek. They were the parents of twelve children, Isaac, Mary, David, Lydia, Robert, Asa, Anna, Abigail, John, Susannah, Rowland and Rhoda.

Asa Green, a son of the above, was born in Grayson county, North Carolina, on January 5, 1811, and came to Ohio with his father in the fall of 1811. His wife was a daughter of Nathaniel Carter. They were the parents of eight children: Jane, Reuben, Mary Ann, Cyrus, Guliema, John C., Samuel G. and Nancy Emily.

John Holaday came from Virginia in 1814 and settled on what was afterwards known as the Asa Green farm. He lived here fifteen or sixteen years, when he sold the farm to Asa Green and moved to Jefferson township, this county.

Samuel Andrew came from Orange county, North Carolina, to Ohio, in 1810, and settled in Greene county for two years, when he moved to Lytle's creek, on the farm where he lived until his death, July 18, 1871. He was born in Orange county, North Carolina, the son of William and Hannah Andrew, and married, on October 17, 1805, Delilah, daughter of John and Susannah Baker, of Chatham county, North Carolina. His wife died in 1856. They were both buried at Springfield. Their children were William B., John, Hannah and Susannah.

His eldest son, William B. Andrew, was born on July 21, 1806, and married Ruth, the daughter of John Hadley. They were the parents of ten children, Eliza Jane, Hannah, Samuel, Delilah, Isaac H., John T., William H., Jacob, Lydia and Wilson His wife died on October 19, 1852. In 1868 he removed to Hendy county, Iowa, where he died.

Susannah, the youngest daughter of Samuel and Delilah Andrew, married John McFadden, in 1847. They remained on the home farm, caring for her parents in their declining years. Her husband died on July 6, 1871. She was the mother of seven children, Samuel, Martha, Jane, Esther Ann, Mary E., James L., Laura D. and John W.

Henry Andrew, a brother of Samuel Andrew, was born, February 12, 1777, in Orange county, North Carolina. He married Jame Mills and to them were born seven children, Robert, John, Hannah, Joseph, William, Jonathan and Sarah. They moved to Ohio at an early day and settled on a farm adjoining his brothers. He removed to Jefferson township some years later.

Henry Andrew, a second brother of Samuel Andrew, came to Adams township about the same time. He was the father of nine children, Ira, Eden, Minerva, Calvin, Cyrus, Miles, Mary Ann, John Wesley and Emily.

Samuel Chew married Abigail Green, sister of Reuben Green, and was the first settler on what was afterwards known as the John Anson farm. He had four sons, Isaac, Ephraim, John and Reuben, and three daughters, Alice, Mary and Ruth.

Joshua Moore came to Ohio in 1811. He was born the son of Thomas and Sarah Moore, of Center county, Pennsylvania, on the 17th of October, 1791. He married Nancy, a daughter of Joseph and Theodosia Stratton. They first lived in Wilmington two years before they settled in what is now Adams township. His death occurred on February 7, 1874. His widow died in December, 1881. They had a family of twelve children, David S., John Haines, Sarah Ann, Micajah, William, Joseph, Harriet, Nancy, Joshua, Benjamin, Jehu C. and Seth.

Hiram Moore, brother of Joshua, came to Ohio about two years after his brother, Joshua, did. He married Eliza, a daughter of John Antram.

Caleb Moore, another brother of Joshua Moore, was born about 1800 and came to Ohio from Pennsylvania, about 1832, and settled on the Joseph Stratton farm on Lytle's creek. He married Nancy, the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier by the name of Andrew Jack. They were the parents of a family of six children, William, John, Harris C., Hannah, Emily and Nancy Ellen. His first wife died about 1845 and Mr. Moore afterwards married Martha Miller. They had two children, Ethelbert J. and Martha Adaline.

Two other brothers of this family, John and Isaac Moore, came to Ohio, about 1832. Isaac married Susannah, a daughter of Reuben Green. He died on October 6, 1840, at the age of twenty-eight. John Moore was born on August 31, 1798. He married Ann Moore, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah Moore, of Center county, Pennsylvania, and who was born on July 6, 1805. They moved to Newcastle, Indiana, where he died. She later married Jasper Evans.

Elizabeth, widow of Samuel Moore, who died in Pennsylvania, came to Ohio about 1832. She died in her eighty-sixth year, on August 13, 1874. She was a sister of Nancy, wife of Caleb Moore. She was the mother of seven children, Melinda, Nancy, Sarah Ann, Melissa, Eliza, Evaline and Samuel.

One of the foremost of the pioneers of Adams township was George Maden, Sr. He settled on what was later known as the Jabez Hadley farm. By his first wife, who was the widow Reynolds, and whose maiden name was Harvey, he had four children, Eli, George, Elizabeth and Edith. His second wife was Elizabeth, sister of George Carter. This union was blessed with the following children: Hiram, Solomon, John, Nancy, Rebecca, Mary, Ruth and Deborah. He lived to an advanced age and is buried, as is also his wife, Elizabeth, at Lytle's creek. His son, George, married Mary Chew, daughter of Samuel Chew, and a sister of Isaac, Ephraim, John and Reuben Chew. He moved to Indiana, where he later died. Elizabeth married a person by the name of Reeves; Edith married Joseph Stubbs; Solomon married a Robbins; John died a bachelor; Nancy became the wife of Henry Harvey; Rebecca became the wife of Reuben Chew, son of Samuel Chew; Mary married Amos Harvey, brother of Henry Harvey; Ruth became the wife of Robert Hunt, son of Jacob and Lydia Hunt, and Deborah married a man who lived in Indiana.

Eli Maden married Hannah Harlan, daughter of Enoch Harlan, by whom he was the father of six children, Harlan, John, George, Hiram, Rowena and Rebecca. Harlan was the oldest son and married Marguerite, a daughter of William Osborn, Sr., and Hiram married William Harvey's daughter, Hannah.

Hiram Maden, son of George Maden, Sr., was born on January 28, 1792, in Orange county, North Carolina, and emigrated to Ohio with his father. About the year 1826 he married Susannah, daughter of Jehu and Sarah Stuart. There were three children by the union, Sarah, George and Jehu. Susannah lived only a few years after their marriage and was buried at Lytle's creek. About the year 1834 Hiram Maden married Elizabeth, daughter of William and Susannah Osborn. She was the mother of seven children, William, John, Elizabeth, Hiram, Susannah and Thomas Elwood. He died in April, 1871, and his wife, Elizabeth, died on January 10, 1866, at the age of sixty-two.

In November, 1809, Jeremiah Kimbrough, with his wife, and family of six children, moved to Ohio, and in the spring of 1810 settled upon one hundred acres of land in the Murray survey. This was afterwards known as the George Carter and Micajah Stratton farm and was on Todd's fork, near the northeastern part of the township. Kimbrough was a native of Rowan county, North Carolina, and was born on September 15, 1778. His wife was Sarah Mendenhall, a sister of Nathan Mendenhall. They were married in Rowan county in 1799, and at the time of their moving to Ohio the following children were born: Thomas, September 18, 1800; Elizabeth, January 3, 1802; Susannah, March 13, 1803; Hannah, October, 1804; Charity, July 3, 1807, and Sarah, January, 1809. In 1812 he sold his farm to George Carter and moved to Tennessee, but not liking the country he returned, it is said, without unpacking his wagon, and, again took up his residence on Todd's fork, near Springfield, Adams township. He died in his carriage on August 15, 1850. His daughter died in 1859 at the home of her daughter, Elizabeth Howell. The following children were born after the arrival of the family in Ohio: Mary, 1810; John, 1812; Ira, 1815; Edith, 1820, and Eli, 1821.

Elizabeth, who was the first to marry, became the wife of Benjamin Howell; Susannah married Robert Hollcraft; Hannah married William Ballard, son of John Ballard, and, on his death, a man by the name of Kerwin, in Grant county, Indiana;

Charity married Lewis Hiatt, son of Jesse Hiatt, and she died in 1863; Mary married Caleb Townsend, son of John Townsend; John married Demice Beach, daughter of Benjamin Beach; Ira married Clara Howland, daughter of Barnabas Howland; Edith married Hiram Daugherty; Eli married Margaret, daughter of John Townsend. All the children but Thomas and Elizabeth moved out of the township, most of them to the state of Indiana.

Thomas Kimbrough, the eldest child of Jeremiah and Sarah (Mendenhall) Kimbrough, was married on April 4, 1822, to Elizabeth, the daughter of Jesse Hiatt, a brother of Lewis Hiatt. The loving couple lived to see their sixtieth wedding anniversary, and for many years held the distinction of being the oldest married couple residing in Adams township. They had a family of nine children, as follow: Martha, who married James Spray; Sarah, who married John Brazil; Jeremiah; Mary, who married John W. Richardson; Edith, who married William Edwards; Jesse; Susannah, wife of Harlan H. Hadley; Demetrius, who married Esther Bangham; Charity, wife of Aaron Harvey, son of William Harvey and grandson of Isaac Harvey. Jeremiah, the eldest son, who was born on October 14, 1827, was married, in 1849, to Esther, daughter of Eli and Sarah Harvey. She was the mother of one child, Louisa, and died on December 18, 1859. His second wife was Rhoda, daughter of Eli Hadley and sister of Micajah and Thomas Hadley.

John Johnson was an early settler, who lived on the north side of Lytle's creek. Abel Thornberry married his daughter, Rhoda.

One of the early settlers of Grant's survey was Robert Howell. Prior to 1810 he settled on what is known as Indian branch, building his cabin by a large spring. He planted a nursery and set out quite an extensive orchard of peach and apple trees. He had a large family of children. All the family moved farther west prior to 1832 except one son, Benjamin, who was married, about the year 1820, to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Jeremiah Kimbrough. He was born on July 14, 1792, and emigrated to Ohio with his father. He was the first settler upon what is known as the Howell farm. He had a family of ten children as follow: Jeremiah, Jedidah, Riley, Aaron, Patsy, Henry, Adeline, William, John and Benjamin. He died on July 2, 1855. His widow survived him over thirty years.

Among the foremost and best known of the pioneers of Adams township stands George Carter. Carter was born on March 8, 1782, the son of John and Anna Carter, of Orange county, North Carolina. His wife, Miriam, was born on February 2, 1787, the daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth Wilson, of Randolph, Virginia. They came to Ohio in 1812, settling about one mile west of the Lytle's Creek meeting house, on what was always afterwards known as the Micajah Stratton farm. For over forty years he was a school teacher. He was also a minister in the society of Friends, being considered one of the ablest of the church, especially on doctrinal points. Seven children blessed the union of this happy couple, Jesse, John, Samuel, Wilson, Cyrus, Louisa and George. Both parents lived to a ripe old age and were buried at Grassy Run.

Nathaniel Carter, who was a son of John and Ann Carter, of Orange county, North Carolina, and a brother of George Carter, was born on June 21, 1779. His wife was Nancy, daughter of John and Susannah Baker, of Chatham county, North Carolina. They came to Ohio in 1812 and settled in Dudley's survey, between where the villages of Ogden and Sligo now are. They were the parents of six children, Jane, born on February 17, 1802, who married Samuel Gaskill; John B.; Enoch; Susannah, who married Asa Green; Ann, who married William Holladay. Nathaniel Carter died on March 3, 1843, in his sixty-fourth year; Nancy, his widow, died on November 5, 1863, at the age of eighty-two, surviving him more than twenty years.

Conrad Smith was another pioneer who settled in the Gates survey about 1815. He married Elizabeth McDaniel and was the father of five children, John, George, Daniel, Abigail and Susannah. Both Smith and his wife are buried at Lytle's creek.

Nathan Stalker settled on Lytle's creek as early as 1809 and was one of the first blacksmiths of the township. His wife was Mary Ballard, daughter of David Ballard. Isaac Stout settled on Lytle's creek, on the Isaiah Stout farm, about 1807. His wife's name was Susannah and they were the parents of the following children: Jesse, Sarah, Phoebe, Lydia, Rebecca, Matilda, Isaac and Isaiah. Charles Stout was a first cousin of Isaac Stout, and also one of the first settlers.

Another pioneer family that furnished many early settlers was that of Pyle. John and Jehu Pyle came to Clinton county about 1832 and played a great part in the development of Adams township.

Benjamin Farquhar came from Maryland to Ohio in 1805. His wife was Rachel, a daughter of Jonathan and Susannah Wright, who came from Maryland about the same time. Farquhar bought land and settled in what is now the extreme northeastern part of Adams township. He was the father of the following children: Uriah, Cyrus, Allen, Jonathan, Josiah, Susannah, Edwin, Rebecca and Rachel.

David Stearn was an early settler of the southwest part of the county, who came with his three sons, Melzar, Luther and Harvey, and two daughters, from Massachusetts in 1813. His wife's name was Achsah Cranson. He was buried at Southwick cemetery. For several years he kept a dairy and made cheese and butter.

Joseph and Mahlon Stratton were cousins who settled on Lytle's creek in 1809. Thomas Kersey came to Ohio and settled on Todd's fork in 1812, on land adjoining John Carter, his brother-in-law. William Osborn came to Ohio in the fall of 1815, and, after living for a year or so on the Samuel Harvey place, on Lytle's creek, bought one hundred acres of land and settled on it in J. Roberts' survey, in the extreme southeastern part of the township. Jacob Hale was one of the first settlers on Todd's fork. He came to this country, first, in 1805, in company with Isaac Harvey and John Hadley. They returned to North Carolina, and, as explained above, moved to Adams township with their families. These three men were all brothers-in-law.

The following are the officers of Adams township in 1915: Trustees, Albert Earley, H. A. Coate and Harry Smith; clerk, Evert Hadley; treasurer, T. J. Winfield. Population, seven hundred and one.

SLIGO.

Adams township has two towns within its limits, neither of which is incorporated. The first of these is Sligo. This little village had no existence prior to the building of the Goshen and Wilmington turnpike. A man by the name of George Taylor, a hatter by trade, had a shop there on a lot in the forks of the road long before the town was laid out. This lot was afterwards owned by John Kimbrough, on which he built a house in 1841 or 1842, the first two-story house erected in the town. In this building he kept a tavern for several years. The first toll gate was built by John Shields in 1840. The second toll-gate house was built by Rebecca Kersey, sister of Thomas Kersey, but the gate was kept by Mrs. Beach. The toll gate has been long since torn down, but the house remained for a number of years afterwards.

John Swindler was the first blacksmith in Sligo, and John Hawthorn, the second. Hawthorn left in the spring of 1839 and went to Eaton. John Kimbrough commenced smithing in the same shop, a log one, in 1839. This shop stood north of the pike, but on the south side of the old road. This was torn down and a brick one erected in 1841, by Kimbrough. Soon afterward, George Slack built a two-story brick residence on the south side of the pike and occupied it until he moved west.

The town received its name from the brand of iron that was used at the blacksmith shop at the time, it having been made at the Sligo mills, in Pittsburgh. The mill probably had taken the name from a town of a similar cognomen in the western part of Ireland. Matthias O'Neall, who owned a farm south of the pike, sold to John Kimbrough an acre and a half of land, July 12, 1841, and a year later sold him three-fourths of an acre more.

This was afterwards divided into smaller lots by Kimbrough and sold to various persons. Of the early residents of Sligo, there were John Kimbrough, John H. Longshore, Delos Ferris, George Slack, J. W. Slack, Allen Hazard, John H. Moore, Dr. W. W. Shepherd, Simon Hadley, Simon Harvey, Calvin Andrew, William S. Riley, Jesse Thatcher, Ira Kimbrough, John M. Brazil, Isaac Schooley, Edward S. Davis, David Thatcher, Cyrus E. Carter, Henry Harvey, John P. Black, Elihu Hambleton, Harry Hazard, Alfred Hollcraft, Jabez H. Hadley, Egbert K. Howland, William Henson and Ira Ferris. Allen Hazard, Jacob Hadley, William L. Hadley, John H. Moore and James Haney were some of the early storekeepers. Joseph W. Slack was for many years engaged in the manufacture of carriages, buggies and wagons, sometimes giving employment to as many as fifteen men.

The postoffice was established at Sligo on March 13, 1844. It remained here until September 8, 1865. The list of the postmasters who served this office during its existence are as follow: George Slack, March 13, 1844, to March 11, 1850; William Shepherd, to January 15, 1852; Allen Hazard, to October 31, 1857; Joseph W. Slack, to December 8, 1862, and William W. Shepherd, to September 8, 1865.

There has been a steady falling off in the population of all of the rural towns, and Sligo has not been an exception. At present there are about twenty-five families in the village. W. E. Davis keeps a general store and also has a huckster wagon. Marion Wilson runs the village blacksmith shop.

OGDEN.

Ogden had no existence until some years after the building of the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley railroad. It was first called Linden, but there was a station on the Marietta & Cincinnati road by the name of Lyndon and, in consequence, many mistakes occurred in shipping freight out of Cincinnati, causing delay and confusion in receiving goods. This name was then abandoned and Ogden substituted, being named for Ogden on the Pacific railroad. It was made a passenger and freight station in 1855, by the railroad authorities; seven hundred dollars was raised by the citizens of this vicinity and donated to the railroad company for the purpose of getting the station established at that point, the stopping place for passengers theretofore having been about half a mile farther west, at Andrew's Mill. Afterward there was some land donated to the company for stock pens, switches, etc. Asa Green deserves the praise for getting the station established here. Mr. Green erected the first building in Ogden. This was used as a station-house and store room, and has been occupied ever since as such, some additions having been added since. He also, with the assistance of some other parties of the neighborhood, put up the freight depot. A small house, built by Peyton Burton, was moved across the creek to a lot and used as a residence by John Marsh, the first station agent. John Wiseman built the second residence in Ogden. Mr. Wiseman was a miller by trade. Asa Green laid off five lots in 1857, on the south side of the railroad, on land bought by John B. Carter. In 1859, Jacob Beard built a residence. In December, 1860, Carter laid off four lots on the north side of the railroad, and Asa Green, five. In June, 1866, there was a church lot and five others laid off by Asa Green, making twenty in all.

In the spring of 1864, David F. Carter built a residence, and in March, of that year, I. W. Quinby purchased the corner lot of Asa Green, and moved a two-story frame building from Sligo to it. He used the lower story for a store room and the second story he fitted up for a residence. In October, of that year, he and Amos Huffman, under the firm name of Quinby & Huffman, opened a store. In 1864 Abraham Haney built a residence and various residences were erected from time to time. Adam Osborn built the first blacksmith shop in 1864. Among the early station and railroad agents were the following: John Marsh, Jacob Beard, Isaac Robertson, Huffman & Osborn, Jeremiah Kimbrough, George W. Owens and Clare & Colter. Among the early postmasters were Isaiah W. Quinby, David S. Osborn, Isaac Roberts, Isaiah H. Osborn, Samuel G. Green, George W. Owens, James E. Smith and Samuel G. Green.

CHAPTER XVIII.

CHESTER TOWNSHIP.

Chester township occupies the northeast corner of Clinton county. It is bounded on the east by Liberty and Union and on the south by Adams townships, of this county. On the west it is bounded by Wayne and Massie townships, of Warren county, and on the north by Spring Valley and Caesar Creek townships, of Greene. It is four and eighty-seven hundredths miles in width from east to west and its length from north to south measures six and thirty-one hundredths miles. It includes within its bounds thirty and seventy-three hundredths square miles of land.

Clinton county, when first organized, in 1810, included but three townships, Chester, Richland and Vernon. Chester township was by far the largest in the area and population of the three. Its boundary lines at that time are lost in the dim vistas of the past and are impossible to locate definitely and accurately, but perhaps the following is as nearly correct as can be ascertained at the present time: All of Liberty township, part of Wilson, then on a line south so as to include Wilmington, and to a point where a line drawn west would include the northern half of Adams township, then along the Warren and Greene county-lines to the beginning.

In 1813 Union township was formed from parts of Chester, Richland and Vernon townships. Hence its name. Liberty township, including the present territory included within Liberty township and the west half of Wilson, was formed from the territory of Chester township in 1817. In May, 1849, the southern part of Chester went to form the northern part of the newly created Adams township. Since that date there have been no changes in the townships' boundaries.

TOWNSHIP RECORDS.

All the township records from the date of its organization, 1810, up to 1829, and from 1845 to 1864, have disappeared. It is not known whether they were lost by fire or were destroyed. Due to that fact, very little can be gleaned about the early history of the township.

At a meeting of the trustees at the residence of James Dakin on Saturday, April 18, 1829, a tax of three-eighths of one mill was levied for township purposes, and the roads of the township were redistricted. In June, 1829, at an extra session of the trustees, the schools of the township were redistricted, "agreeably to the provisions of the law passed February 10, 1829."

STREAMS.

The streams of Chester township are small, none of the larger streams of the county extending within its limits for any distance. However, the tributaries of the larger streams are numerous and sufficient to give necessary and entirely adequate drainage of the land. Dutch creek enters the township from Union township, near the south end of the east boundary, flows across the southeast corner to empty its waters into Todd's fork, just outside of the township. Anderson's creek finds its source in Wilson township, meanders its way across Liberty to merely cross the tip of the northeast corner of Chester, before it passes on its way into Greene county, where it returns across the northwest corner of the township and joins its waters with those of Caesar creek as they flow from the northwest, and quietly glides out of the township again, this time into Warren county. The tributaries of this stream are Buck run, Turkey run, Trace branch, Jonah's run and Layton's run. All these but Layton's run are tributary to Caesar creek. Buck run rises in Liberty township, flows in a westerly direction across the length of Chester township to empty into Caesar creek just above the point where the latter crosses the Warren county line. Layton's run is a branch of Dutch creek.

MILLS.

One of the first mills of the township was that of Robert Millhouse, at the mouth of Buck run, but operated by the waters of Caesar creek. This was originally a saw-mill, but later stone-burrs were put in and corn-grists were ground there. George Arnold erected a saw-mill on Buck run, just above the Dakin Corner pike, which was kept in operation for many years. The Millhouses also built a carding and fulling-mill on Buck run, which was kept in operation until about 1828, when it was removed to the old David Jay farm and turned into a school house under the direction of the Caesar Creek monthly meeting of Friends. James Brown built a carding- and fulling-mill on Trace branch in a very early day. A saw-mill was afterward erected there also. All these mills have given up their duties decades ago. They, with their dams, have long ago crumbled into ruins and today, in most instances, their sites are in cultivation These little mills and their crude dams were built in the most humble manner and with the least possible outlay for expense. Their machinery was meager, simple in construction and brief in details. Their operation was often a side line with their owners and they were not infrequently operated only at nights, on wet days and during the winter months.

ROADS.

The absence of early records makes its difficult to locate the early roads. There is a tradition that the first road of the township was one that run from Waynesville to Wilmington, that it passed north of where Harveysburg now is, north of the old McIntyre tavern to Oakland, thence by way of Centre to Wilmington; that it was a perfectly straight line, blazed by an Indian, who received a gallon of whiskey for his services. There is some evidence that points to the conclusion that this trail was traveled as early as 1802. The Bullskin road started from the Ohio river, traversed the state due north to the lakes and was laid out in 1807. Another early road was the Jenkins mill road, that extended from Port William to Mt. Holy, on the Little Miami, crossing the Bullskin in the village of Burlington. Another started from the village of Clarksville, and intersected the Bullskin just south of where the latter village stands today. The roads of those days were mere trails, blazed through the forest and filled with stumps, logs, tree tops and sloughs. The toll roads that followed were a great improvement, but to get off of a toll road was to get into trouble. Then followed the plank roads, of which but one was ever built in the township. It was on the Wilmington & Harveysburg road and was constructed in 1852. It was made of sawed oak plank, one and a half inches in thickness, eight or ten feet in length, laid down on the ground. They were never a success and were often the source of grave accidents. It was later covered with gravel. About the year 1867 every road in the township was graveled and the result was a system of beautiful pikes.

BURIAL GROUNDS.

Undoubtedly the oldest cemetery in the township, if not in the county, is the old Jenkins graveyard. It is located three-quarters of a mile east of New Burlington, to the left of the pike leading from that village to Limberton. The Greene county line passes through it. It is upon lands in survey 571, entered by Albert Gallatin in 1787, and purchased by Aaron Jenkins in 1799. The land was set aside by the latter for burial purposes and has since borne his name. His was the first body to be buried there in 1807, one hundred and eight years ago. It belongs to no sect nor church, but is kept up by Spring Valley township in Greene county and Chester in Clinton.

The first person to be buried in the cemetery at the Springfield monthly meeting house was Lydia, the wife of Isaac Harvey and who died on January 1, 1813. Many of the pioneers of this and Adams township found their last resting place here.

In 1830 the Methodist Episcopal church organized a congregation at Mount Pisgah, in survey 3,908. A little graveyard was attached to their church building. Only a few graves are to be found there. Other burial places are to be found at the Jonah's Run meeting house and at the Caesar Creek monthly meeting house.

PIONEERS.

By the laws of the state of Virginia, two thousand six hundred sixty-six and two-thirds acres of land were to be the reward to James Robertson for his services as a lieutenant for three years in the Continental regiments of Virginia. Philip Barbour was his heir-at-law and, in time, Albert Gallatin became the latter's assignee and, on October 18, 1787, entered survey 571, "situated on the lower side of Cæsar creek," and containing seven hundred sixty-six and two-thirds acres of land. Twelve years afterward, or in 1799, Aaron Jenkins came from Tennessee and purchased the entire tract of land. He erected thereon a hewed-log house, of the double pattern. His family consisted of five children, three sons, Aaron, James and Baldwin, and two daughters, one of whom was named Lydia. He died in 1807. He was probably the first person to settle within the present confines of Chester township.

One of the most prominent of the early pioneer families was that descended from Thomas Lucas. The members of this family originally came from New Jersey, where they were among the first settlers of that colony, receiving, with others, land grants from the English crown. A member of this family, at a very early date, emigrated beyond the Appalachian mountains, settled upon the Indian's "happy hunting ground" and saw the erection of the state of Kentucky. A son of his, Thomas Lucas, mentioned above, early left his parental fireside and moved to Cincinnati about 1875, where he remained for some years. He was the father of six sons, Thomas, Abraham, Ebenezer, John, Caleb and Francis. In 1802 Caleb Lucas purchased of Abijah O'Neal, a land speculator, of Lebanon, one hundred and fifty acres of land in survey 3,916, wholly within the limits of Clinton county. He moved upon his purchase the same year, erected a hewed-log cabin, and began at once to clear his land. He was the father of the following children: Thomas, born October 13, 1799; Sarah, March 29, 1802; Catherine, December 10, 1804; Elizabeth, February 7, 1807; Mary, March 18, 1809; Rachel, April 13, 1811; Frederick, February 22, 1814; Caleb, February 1, 1817; and Ebenezer, October, 1819.

Layton Jay, and wife, Nancy, came to Ohio from New Berry district, South Carolina, about 1804. They came by way of Tennessee and Kentucky, crossing the Ohio river at Cincinnati on a flat boat, the horses tied to it and swimming behind. They landed near the present site of Waynesville, and the family remained there in camp for some time, or until the husband and father could find a place of settlement. He finally took a lease on the lands of James Murray, or what was afterwards known as the Thomas Longstretch farm. His coming was contemporary with the arrival of Robert Eachus, Jacob Haines, Isaac Perkins, Mahlon Haworth and a few others.

Isaac Webb, who, for seven years, was a soldier in the Revolutionary army, received from his grateful country a warrant for two thousand six hundred sixty-six and two-thirds acres of land. One thousand of this he entered as a part of warrant No. 2,446, "on the upper side of Caesar creek," and was numbered survey 583, bearing the date October 17, 1792.

James Hawkins came from Union county, South Carolina, to Ohio with the ever-growing stream of emigrants in the year 1806 and settled in present Chester township.

Daily, from 1806, the tide of immigration flowed on unceasingly. From the hills of Pennsylvania and Virginia, the barren lands of the Carolinas, the dark grounds of Tennessee and Kentucky, from New York and far-off New England, they came. But the majority of the early emigrants were Carolinians, not all natives, but persons who came by that route from Pennsylvania and Virginia. Among the most prominent must be mentioned such names as the following: Henry Millhouse, Daiv and Clement Whitson, John Furnas, George Arnold, James Craine, Preserved Dakin, Joshua Nickerson, Elijah Sabin, William, Enoch and Charles Haynes, Enoch Harlan, Nathan and William Harlan, Jacob Hale, William and Debqrah McMillan, William and Enoch Faversham, Job Jeffries, Daniel Birdsell, Robert Reese, Caleb Easterling, John Mills, Sr., Moses McKay and John Buckley.

The following are the officers of Chester township in 1915: Trustees, T. C. Haydock, Clark Osborn and Alfred Van Tress; clerk, W. A. Bailey; treasurer, H. L. Landy. Population, twelve hundred and nine.

NEW BURLINGTON.

The second village in point of age, but the first in point of size, in Chester township, is New Burlington. It is located in the extreme northwest corner of the township and the northern portion of the village extends into Greene county. It is located in Gallatin's survey, No. 570. The original purchaser of the land on which it stands was Aaron Jenkins, who, on his death, left the land to his son, Baldwin. About the year 1820 Baldwin Jenkins sold one hundred acres of his land to Edward Powers, who, in the same year, built a log house on it and settled there. Shortly afterward Powers sold the hundred acres in question to James Jay, a native of Newberry district, South Carolina, who, in 1829, erected, in the northwest quarter of his land, a story-and-a-half frame dwelling, and occupied it. Griswold B. Hawes, in 1831, rented this building of Jay, converted part of it into a building room and occupied it the same year as a dwelling and store. In the spring of 1833, Jacob Peirson, Sr., Jacob Peirson, Jr., John Grant and John Morford, who were doing business at that time at Mt. Holly under the firm name of Peirson, Grant & Company, came to New Burlington, purchased the stock of Hawes and opened a branch under the management of John Grant. At the same time they purchased of Jay the lot just mentioned, with a frontage on the Bullskin road of thirty feet and a depth of twenty feet, and lot No. 1 in the northeast "square," which contained fifty-nine square rods. The consideration for this, including the building, was one hundred dollars. In this same year (1833) the above mentioned John Grant erected on the latter piece of land a substantial two-story frame building. This building stood for many years. James Jay erected a Conger, a hewed-log house; William Osborn, a log house; William Hurley, a one-story two-story frame building the same year. Others who built homes this year were: Joel frame, and Jordan Whitson and Arza Gage, log dwellings.

The year 1834 saw the village in a flourishing condition. In that year came Ezra Smith, from Mt. Holly, and purchased lot No. 2, northeast square, and erected a one-story frame dwelling and shoe-shop. In the same year Samuel Weaver, a native of Hampshire county, Virginia, purchased lot No. 3, in the northeast square. He received a half acre for twenty-five dollars. He was a tailor by trade and opened a shop in his dwelling. Also, in this year, Aaron Hendley purchased lot No. 4, in the same square. With him came William Hendley and his son, John M., and their families. The son purchased land north of lot No. 4, and the father all the land belonging to Jay north of the village plat, namely, fifty-one and a half acres. John M. Hendley's land consisted of about four acres, on which he immediately erected a tannery. The first school in the village was opened in 1833, with Sarah Hollingsworth as the instructor. On February 13, 1834, Isel Ellis purchased of James Jay, for thirty dollars, lot No. 2, in the northwest square, and a few years later erected a substantial two-story frame building. By the year 1834 the store of Mr. Grant was in a flourishing condition, and among the names to be found on his ledger of that year the following should be mentioned: Charles Mann, Asa Fisher, Henry Mann, Sr., Bellfield Jenkins, William Hurley, David Gaskill, Francis McKay, William Ogborn, James Smith, Solomon Whitson, James Grant, David Mann, John Sanders, Aaron Collett, James Jenkins, John Arnold, Frederick Incas, Joel Ellis, Samuel Spray, Benjamin Hawes, Burgess Morgan, Alex Jay, Aaron Jenkins, Zebulon Dakin, William Arnold, Jordan Whitson, Jacob Ellis, Jacob Peterson, John Spray, Robert Kelley, Joseph Michner, Daniel H. Collett, Allen Linton, John Wilson, Isaiah Quinby, James Hawkins, Sr., Solomon Van Meter, Arza Gage, Henry Fletcher, Stephen Buckley and George Arnold. In 1835 James Jenkins erected a two-story building on lot No. 2, southwest square, which was occupied the next year by John Harrison, a native of England, with a general merchandise stock. Harrison remained in business until 1838, when he sold the stock to the firm of Harrison, McKay & Company, of which he himself was the senior partner. James Smith, a resident of Mt. Holly, came to the village in 1835 and opened a blacksmith shop. For many years he was associated with John Grant in the manufacture of carriages, wagons, buggies and general blacksmithing. He died in 1875, at the age of sixty-five years. Other early settlers of this hamlet were: Francis Moffet, a blacksmith; James Haydock, coming from New Jersey in 1838, a tanner by trade; W. B. Hamilton, from Maryland, a harness-maker and a saddler. The postoffice was established in 1839, under the administration of Martin Van Buren. John Grant was the first postmaster, with David Hollingsworth as deputy. William Burr, a young man, and a nephew of Grant's, was the mail-rider, the route being from Burlington to Xenia.

By 1880 the village contained seventy dwellings, two dry-goods stores, three groceries, one saw-mill, two churches, one school, one undertaking establishment, one wagon shop, three blacksmith shops, two physicians and one carpenter shop. Its population at that time was about four hundred.

The history of this town would not be complete without a brief reference to the "underground railroad," which plied through this town in the early times. This important road had a track across Chester township, and New Burlington was one of the chief centers in this county, and which, during the time it was in operation, did a large business.

John Grant's house was the principal station in this township and was often filled with dusky passengers, fresh from the blue-grass country of Kentucky. They seemed anxious to try the experiment of a climate nearer the North star and under a different form of government. In Mr. Grant's house there was a hole to the garret, where the fleeing slaves were secreted; sheets were also hung along the side porch in order that the negroes could be taken down to their meals without any one seeing them.

There was also another station in this township, northwest of New Burlington, on Cæsar's creek. This was the home of Stephen Compton. Mr. Compton's house was built with a cellar, but the opening to this was through a hole in the floor, which could easily be closed and even the most careful observer could not discern it.

The slaves were brought from Cincinnati by Samuel and John Compton and Levi Coffin and, after secreting them here awhile, they were taken to Monroe's, at Xenia. James Farquhar ran a "Liberator," which was a large covered wagon made for the purpose to Jamestown. The chief agents in this traffic were Peter Harrison, Allen Linton, W. B. Hamilton, Benjamin Farquhar and James Haydock.

The business interests of New Burlington at present consist of W. C. Smith's general store, feed barn, etc.; William Blair, groceries and notions; T. C. Haydock, Jr., grocery; T. C. Haydock, shoes; Benjamin Lemar, grocery; H. C. Corr, meat market; W. H. Reeves, restaurant; A. C. Blair & Sons, barbers; George Phillips and Charles Robinson, blacksmiths; H. O. Whitaker and W. F. McCray are the village physicians, both of the "old school" of doctors; Frank Robinson owns a modern saw and planing-mill.

There are several noteworthy incidents and special features of the town, among which are the fact that the postoffice is at present located in Greene county. Marion Isenhower is the present postmaster. The room where W. C. Smith's store is now located was an "underground station" and has been built some eighty years; James Haydock, who was the father of T. C. Haydock, Sr., ran a tannery in this town for fifty years and his son has kept a shoe store for thirty years. In the aggregate, they have been in the leather business in the same stand for eighty years.

New Burlington now has a population of three hundred and fifty. It is a very modern little town. It has a good band of sixteen members, with good equipment and new uniforms. T. C. Haydock, Jr., is the present director. The line of Greene and Clinton counties passes through the town and several of the different houses of worship, lodge buildings, etc., are in Greene county.

OAKLAND.

The village of Oakland is situated in the southeast corner of Chester township, in Gates' survey, No. 2,230, on the highway that leads from Wilmington to Waynesville. It is undoubtedly the oldest town in Clinton county. Several of the oldest settlers of the county spoke of Oakland as one of the points in the county when they first came. One such mention is that of John Leonard, who spoke of Oakland and Waynesville as two points well known through which they had to pass in 1805 on their way from Cincinnati to the place of their settlement on Todd's fork.

The original village plat was laid out by James Murray on December 27, 1806, with the hope that it would be adopted as a county seat. When this hope was disappointed on the organization of the county in 1810, it grew very slowly. The village took its name from the many giant trees of oak that stood thickly on the grounds of that locality. In this village the first brick house in the county was built by James Birdsall. William Birdsall came to the township in February, 1838, and purchased two of the farms that previously belonged to James Birdsall, his cousin. He laid out the present village plat of Oakland on the west side of the original plat.

Owing to the fact that it was merely a country village, with no railroad or natural advantages to further its growth, it has remained little more than a wayside hamlet. There are present some fifteen houses in the village. The professional interests consist of one physician, J. B. McKenzie, and an apiarist, James Vineard.

KINGMAN.

This little hamlet lies at the west end of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad. It was never platted and evidently its existence came about through the "stoppage" of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad, which has its terminus here. The business interests of the town are taken care of by H. W. Smith & Company, who have an elevator and general store in that part of the town known as South Kingman.

That part of the town which is off the railroad and evidently was laid out first is known as North Kingman. In this part of the town there are about twenty families. The township house is located here. The business interests are William Hazard's general store and blacksmith shop and L. D. Fleming's saw-mill. The high school building burned on November 16, 1914, and a new building is in the process of construction. It will be an eight-room structure and will cost twenty-five thousand dollars. This is a consolidated school, with three rooms for the high school and four for the grades. The enrollment for this year in the high school was eighty, and the 1915 graduating class numbered eight. H. H. Smith is the principal.

CHAPTER XIX.

CLARK TOWNSHIP.

Clark township is bounded on the east by Greene township, of Clinton county; on the southeast and south by Highland county; on the west by Brown county and Jefferson township, of Clinton county, and on the northwest and north by Washington township. It is located in the southern part of the county and extends further south than any other portion of the county. It is very irregular in shape. A line drawn between the extremest points north and south would extend about nine miles and such a line across the center, east and west, would measure about six and a half miles. Its area includes about twenty-three thousand five hundred acres of land. This section was part of the Virginia military district and, prior to the organization of Clinton county in 1810, the eastern portion was included in Highland county and the western portion was embraced in Warren county, the line between the two being about one-half mile west of the present site of Martinsville. From 1810 to 1817, the portion east of this line was included in Green township, that west of the line, in Vernon. A petition, signed by many citizens of this section of the county, was presented to the county commissioners on July 14, 1816, asking that a new township be organized with the boundaries as they are at present, except that it extended northward to Cowan's creek, thus including all the eastern portion of Washington township. It was reduced to its present confines by the establishment of Washington township in 1835.

NATURAL FEATURES.

The East fork of the Little Miami river drains the southern and southeastern parts of the township. Its tributaries are mingled so thoroughly with those of the East fork of Todd's fork, which drains the northern and western portions of the township, that the securing of the outlets for the erection of farm drains has always been a rather simple matter. Large, open ditches have been built through the central and southwestern portions of the township, thus completing the natural drainage systems. The greater portion of the township is level or slightly rolling, with a gradual and general slope toward the south or southwest.

SETTLEMENT.

Tradition has it that Thomas Johns was the first to settle within the present bounds of Clark township. He is said to have located on the East fork, about three miles southeast of the present site of Martinsville. Nothing about the place of his birth or of the date of his settlement can be ascertained. However, it is known that Isaac Miller settled about three miles east of Martinsville. The story is told that Mr. Miller, needing a hoe, journeyed sixteen miles on foot through the forests to New Market in Highland county to make his purchase. Joseph McKibben also settled about the same time in the same neighborhood. In 1806, John Wright came from North Carolina, bought the present site of Martinsville, for two dollars an acre, and settled there. He was mainly instrumental in the laying-out of that village and erected the first house within its limits. A daughter of his was the first person to be interred in the Friend's graveyard at Martinsville. By the year 1808, Samuel McCulloch had settled on East fork, four miles southeast of Martinsville, and Isaac Van Meter and John Jones near the present site of Lynchburg.

Daniel and Joseph Moon, brothers, came from Jefferson county, Tennessee, in the spring of 1808, and settled about one mile east of Martinsville. Samuel Moon, another brother, and John Ruth, a brother-in-law and the husband of Jane Moore, came to the same neighborhood in the following fall. In the spring of the following year, 1809, Joseph Moon, Sr., father of the above, with his family and two sons, William and Jesse and their families, and his brother, John Moon, joined the others in the new settlement. Another brother-in-law, James Garner, the husband of Mary Moon, settled in the same limits in 1811.

In 1810, John Beales, of North Carolina, Christopher Hiatt, of Virginia, and James Puckett and Daniel Puckett, both from North Carolina, settled in the neighborhood about Martinsville. Daniel Puckett was a minister in the Friends church and was one of the first to preach the gospel in the new settlement. He afterwards moved to Indiana. William West settled one-half a mile north of Martinsville in 1811. He is the ancestor of the great family of Wests, of Clark township. Joseph Mills, Sr., of North Carolina, settled to the northeast of Martinsville in 1814. In the same year, David Hockett, Sr., settled in that neighborhood. He died in 1842, at the ripe age of seventy-seven. Jonathan Hockett, a brother of David, settled one-half mile west of Martinsville in 1816.

Jacob Hunt and family of Virginia, settled a short distance to the north of Martinsville in 1816 and the following year were joined by his brother, Thomas Hunt, who settled adjoining. In 1819, Aaron Betts, of Virginia, settled to the west of Martinsville, purchasing a large tract of land.

The following names should be mentioned in a list of the early pioneers of the township. No authentic information could be obtained as to the date of their settlements: John Lytle, William Nixon, Aaron Ruse, William and Richard Owsley, Joshua Betterton, Daniel Nordyke, Jacob Jackson, Owen West, Isaac, William and Robert Jones, Gideon McKibben, Thomas McLin, William Chalfont, William Davis, Ashley Johnson, George Shields, William Patterson and James Hadley.

MILLS.

In the first days of the settlement the meal for bread for the community was ground on a hand-mill owned by Joseph Moon, Sr. A short time afterwards, Isaac Nordyke built a horse-mill five or six miles away from the Martinsville settlement. The next opportunities were to take two or three bushels of grain on horseback to the mill on Cowan's creek or the East fork. When the water was too low for these mills to operate, a journey of three or four days was required to reach the mills on the Miami. The first mill to be built within the confines of the township was a saw and grist-mill built by William Leagitt on the East fork, followed by Isaac Jones, near Lynchburg, and the third was built by Aaron Ruse on the same stream, between Leagitt's and Jones'. William Patterson built the fourth mill in the township on the East fork of Todd's fork, half a mile northwest of Martinsville. A carding-mill, run by oxen on an inclined wheel, was built about 1827, by Christopher Hiatt. John Lytle later erected another carding-machine near the present site of Martinsville, as did also Curtis Jackson. The first mill within the township to use steam power was built about a mile west of that town in 1833 or 1834. Isaac Pidgeon applied steam to a carding and fulling machine, to which he attached apparatus for grinding corn a short time later. Two other steam-mills were built later—one known as Kester's, about two miles northeast of Martinsville, which was removed several years later to Farmer's Station; the other, in Martinsville, built with money raised by subscription for that purpose. The mill was built and operated for a while by Angus McCoy and Daniel Carey. This mill was destroyed by fire about the year 1860, while owned by Jehu Davis, who erected another building.

The following are the officers of Clark township in 1915: Trustees, Newton Davis, Albert Wood and Frank Brown; clerk, H. A. Clark; treasurer, Harley Botts. The population is sixteen hundred and sixty-seven.

MARTINSVILLE.

By L. Eulass Spencer.

Martinsville is situated in the northern part of Clark township, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern railroad, about midway between New Vienna and Blanchester. This village was laid out and platted by John Wright, William Nixon and James Moon, proprietors, on September 23, 1816. It was part of the David Bradford survey, No. 2,391.

The first election for this township was held in John Wright's store, in Martinsville. In the year 1806, John Wright, of North Carolina, settled upon land from which the larger part of the present site of Martinsville was taken, buying the land at two dollars per acre. Mr. Wright was mainly instrumental in the laying out of the village and erected the first house within the present limits.

About the year 1828, John Lytle erected a carding machine near the present site of the village, and Curtis Jackson built a mill near by, both of which were run by oxen on an inclined wheel. A steam mill, the first in the village, was erected at Martinsville, with funds raised by subscription, about two thousand dollars having been obtained for the purpose. The mill was built and operated for a time by Angus McCoy and Daniel Carey. This mill was destroyd by fire in 1860 or 1861, while owned by Jehu Davis. The first merchants in the village were Lewis Garrett and Robert Grant. Their store was opened up about the time of the laying out of the town, in 1816. It is said that the main feature of their business was the liquor traffic. They soon failed. They were soon followed by John Wright, whose entire capital did not exceed five hundred dollars. The first hotel was opened by Samuel Harbin, who was followed by Peyton Burton, who was succeeded by Samuel Hiatt. The first hatters were John Chew and Thomas Sally. William Moon was the first blacksmith and gunsmith, opening a shop as early as 1809. Asaph Hiatt was the first cabinetmaker, beginning his work about 1815. Jesse Jackson was the first to follow shoemaking as a profession, and Aaron Bets was the first tanner.

About 1834-1835, Dr. John E. Dalton, of New Hampshire, became a resident of Martinsville. He was probably the first practicing physician who resided in the township. Doctor Dalton was also engaged in the mercantile business, and brought the first case of boots of Eastern manufacture ever offered for sale in the village. The issue of the Wilmington Democrat and Herald for January 31, 1834, mentioned the fact that a post-office had been established at Martinsville and Dr. John E. Dalton appointed postmaster. The Doctor must, therefore, have come to the village not later than 1833. He was succeeded in the postoffice by David W. Hockett, and the third postmaster was John Hart. Others who have served this office are: Charles Cline, G. R. Moon, William Himes, Thomas Gaddis, C. C. Moon, Charles McKenzie, C. L. Hixson and J. T. Crawford, and the present postmaster, C. W. Turner, who received the appointment in 1914. His assistant is Mrs. Turner.

When Doctor Dalton and others petitioned for the office, the law required that offices should be at least four miles apart. To ascertain whether the office could be obtained, the distance to Cuba, the nearest postoffice, was measured with a tape line, and it was found to be but very little over the required distance. Doctor Dalton also had the honor of being the first to agitate the temperance cause publicly in the community.

The population of this village, according to the census of 1880, was 355; 1890, 336; 1900, 338; 1910, 334. A telegraph office was opened in 1863-64 by I. N. Miller. From this station, during the fall and winter of 1881, about $100,000 worth of hogs and $20,000 worth of wheat were shipped. The valuation of town lots in Martinsville, according to the assessment of 1880, was $11,813; valuation of dwellings, $30,345; valuation of other buildings, $2,965; valuation of mill property, $1,400; total value, $46,523.

The present officers are: Mayor, E. C. Garner; marshal, Fred Aldrich; clerk, L. M. Townsend; health officer, Fred Aldrich; street commissioner, J. D. Loney; treasurer, L. C.

Dolph; councilmen: President, Dr. V. T. Scott, H. B. Hunt, William Cline, George Collins, Ernest R. Hazard, H. J. Wright.

The high school has an enrollment of one hundred and seventy pupils; the following teachers have been employed for the ensuing term: Superintendent, Karl Kay; principal, Miss Clara E. Smith; assistants, Roy M. Black, Joe V. Deck, Miss Esther T. Carroll, Mrs. Gertrude Winters, Miss Josephine Simmons. The teachers and pupils have a splendid new thirty-five-thousand-dollar building in which to do their work. Members of the school board are: President, Dr. W. K. Ruble; clerk, J. M. West; George Townsend, Harry Greene, Homer Eaglin.

Martinsville has a volunteer fire department, the equipment consisting of a hand engine, operated by twenty men, and one thousand feet of hose. There are five wells located in different parts of the village, which furnish an ample supply of water in time of fires. E. R. Hazard is the fire chief.

The Martinsville band was organized in 1913 by H. A. Clark. There are fourteen pieces. Their concerts on the public square every Thursday night are enjoyed and highly appreciated by great crowds of people.

The Martinsville Protective Association was organized in 1907. The officers of this organization are: President, C. B. Clelland; vice-president, Jesse Moon; secretary, F. W. Spencer; treasurer, W. T. Scott.

The Farmers Bank, D. D. Hunt, president; L. M. Townsend, cashier; capitalization, twenty-five thousand dollars, was established in 1863 by F. M. Moore and Nathaniel Hunter, who were succeeded on August 1, 1873, by Larkin Clelland and Milton Hunt.

BUSINESS INTERESTS.

W. T. Jay, dry-goods, boots, shoes, carpets and groceries, started in business in 1897, in a room twenty by eighty feet. Mr. Jay conducted this business until 1901, when he shipped his stock to New Albany, Indiana. But realizing his mistake in leaving this prosperous town, he returned within a year and opened up a store in the same room he had occupied before. He is now doing business at the old stand. Mr. Jay has been successful, as the number of years he has been in business will testify. The Clinton Supply Company, S. S. Montgomery, proprietor, deals in dry-goods, notions, boots, shoes and carpets. In 1910, S. S. Montgomery and William Hunt purchased the stock of dry-goods, notions, boots and shoes of Kester & Moon. Immediately upon taking possession they closed out at auction a part of the stock purchased of Kester & Moon and replenished with new and staple stock. In 1914, the firm dissolved partnership, Mr. Montgomery taking over the entire business. He has an extensive installment business, which keeps one man on the road all the time. M. E. West, groceries, hardware, paint, harness, etc., has been in business since 1903. Eight of these years he was associated with F. W. Hadley, but in 1911 this partnership was dissolved. Botts & Dolph sell groceries, hardware, paints, harness, etc. In 1906 Harley Botts purchased the above line of Alva Florea. Later in the same year Mr. Botts sold out, Mr. Florea again becoming the owner. In 1907, Mr. Botts repurchased the stock of Mr. Florea and was the sole owner until 1910, when L. C. Dolph bought a half interest in the business. F. W. Spencer, restaurant and confectionery, commenced business in 1902. He manufactures his ice cream, having a power plant of one hundred gallons per day capacity. By persistent effort and courteous treatment he has established a successful business. J. E. Thrusher, jeweler, also handles shoes and does shoe repairing. Odis Wood opened a barber shop in 1912. A. M. Peale is a painter and paperhanger, also cobbler. W. A. Denius, baker, started in business in 1914, and from all indications it will be a permanent establishment. Mrs. J. L. Loney, milliner and dressmaker, is assisted by her daughter, Ethalyn. Simmons Sisters handle millinery. Ernest R. Hazard, lumber, feed and coal, moved to Martinsville in the spring of 1910, having purchasd the business of H. J. Wright. Mr. Hazard has one of the most up-to-date lumber yards for a small town in the state. When the new addition to Martinsville was opened up Mr. Hazard purchased some lots and built a handsome residence for himself and family. Clinton Hotel—H. J. Swearingen & Son conduct this popular hotel. H. J. Swearingen & Son, livery and feed and auto service, have been in business since 1903. Dr. H. A. Clark, dentist, enjoys a lucrative business. Dr. W. T. Scott located in our town in 1889, and Dr. W. K. Ruble has been in practice since 1890. S. M. White, undertaker, located here in 1914. The Martinsville Creamery Company is a stock company, operated by George Neffner and managed by F. N. Smith. George Harris, blacksmith, woodworker and general repairing, became the successor to P. M. Webb in March, 1915. F. N. Smith, coal and grain, moved to Martinsville in 1914. R. H. James, tinsmith, located here in 1909. West & Townsend, real estate, farming implements and plumbing, located here in 1890. A. F. Shaper & Son have a large machine shop in course of construction, which will be in operation in the near future. Lewis Pfister, blacksmith, one of the pioneers of the town, began manufacturing buggies in 1885, under the firm name of Vance & Pfister. This firm did an extensive business at the time. Buggies can still be seen that were made by them twenty-nine years ago. In 1874 George Harris became a partner with Mr. Pfister in the blacksmithing department, the firm name being Pfister & Harris. They conducted the blacksmithing business until 1903, when the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Pfister continuing the business.

Other business interests include: W. W. Townsend, plumber; H. J. Swearenger, livery; Clyde Herron, dry cleaning; B. W. Williamson, O. Guy Rhonemus, decorators and painters; Will Christ, veterinary; W. J. Kirby & Son and Christopher Savage, stock buyers; Mack Brown, who resides in this township, is a breeder of fancy Poland China hogs; he is also an excellent judge of hogs and has taken many prizes on his hogs at the state fairs of Ohio and Illinois; Scott Brender is a White Orpington fancier, and is also the owner of " Patsy Dumas," the great racing mare, which has a mark of 2:10. "Patsy Dumas" is a pacer and has won considerable money in this and neighboring states.

Martinsville has quite a reputation for her trained bloodhounds. They are the property of W. T. Scott and C. W. Turner. These hounds are noted in this part of the state for their efficiency. William Pracht is the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at present.

The religious interests of the town are taken care of by the following churches: Church of Christ, Methodist and Friends. The town also supports three temperance societies, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union proper and Young People's Branch and Loyal Temperance Legion, branches of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. These societies are ever ready to help the poor and administer to the sick. In fact, they aid in every way they can to cheer and bless humanity. This society has at present fifty-four members.

While the town is loyal to the religious work at home, yet it does not neglect the work elsewhere. The Christian Women's Board of Missions Auxiliary is a branch of the Christian Women's Board of Missions, whose headquarters are at Indianapolis, Indiana. They support missionaries in foreign fields, schools in the mountains and also for the negroes of the South; furnish Bible charts to the state universities and also look after the foreigner as soon as he comes to our land.

The Young People's Branch, a branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, are doing splendid work. They meet every two weeks at the home of one of the members, and enjoy a social hour after the business session of the meeting. They can boast of being the largest Young People's Branch society in the county, having an enrollment of sixty-five members. The motto of this society is "Others." Their colors are blue and white.

The Martinsville Good Reading Club was organized in March, 1912. The club consists of twelve members and its object is to promote good reading and social enjoyment. After the business session of each meeting a program of readings and music is enjoyed. Refreshments are then served by the hostess. The motto of this society is, "Speak no evil, hear no evil, see no evil." The colors are red, white and blue.

FARMER'S STATION.

Farmer's Station is a stop on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, about midway between Martinsville and New Vienna. This town was never platted, and evidently sprang up after the building of the railroad through this part of the county. J. F. McKibben is the present agent for this railroad. Kibben also owns and runs an up-to-date general merchandise store in the village. A produce house is also kept in connection with the store. R. E. Ellis and Benjamin Drake have a blacksmith shop and do general repair work of all kinds. F. M. & Ed Achor are dealers in buggies and farm implements. There are two coal yards in the village, operated by McKibben & Preston. The population at present comprises about twenty families.

JONESBORO.

Jonesboro is the last town started in Clark township. This little hamlet is situated just south of Martinsville, on the Martinsville and Westboro pike. It is merely a cluster of houses on the cross roads and was never platted. There are no business or professional interests at present.

CHAPTER XX.

GREEN TOWNSHIP.

Clinton county was formed from the territory of Highland and Warren counties and Green township had been organized while this territory was still a part of Highland county. Clinton county was not organized until 1810 and evidently Green township was organized some two or three years prior to this date. In one of the early township books we find this record: "(1) October 28, 1809, William Noble's ear mark of his hogs, sheep and cattle is a crop and under-slit in the right ear and a hole in the left." "(2) December 4, 1809, Thomas Cox's ear mark of his hogs, sheep and cattle is a swallow fork and under-bit in the left ear and a hole in the left."

It is also a matter of record that the early citizens of this township paid tax as citizens of Green township, Highland county. Two of the tax receipts are given as evidence of the fact: "Tax receipt, October 6, 1807. Received of Micajah Nordyke $2.65 of land and county tax for the year. Received by B. W. Johnson." "November 9, 1809. Received of Micajah Nordyke his state and county tax: state tax $2.25, county tax 45 cents; 300 acres of land, No. 4,397." Therefore, we can safely draw the conclusion that this township was formed as early as 1809.

Green township lies in the southeast part of Clinton county. It is bounded on the southeast by Highland county; on the west by Clark, Washington and Union townships; on the north by Union and Wayne townships and on the northeast by Wayne township. Its form is rhomboidal. This township contains about forty-three square miles of land, or twenty-seven thousand five hundred and twenty acres. The northeast part of the township lies on the waters of Paint creek; the southwest part lies on the headwaters of the Little Miami river.

TOPOGRAPHY.

The surface of the land is gently rolling, but in some places it is very level. All of the land is tillable. The soil is excellent and the larger part is a black loam, of great depth and very productive. A large part of this township was once rejected swamps, but the energy and efforts of the early citizens have been rewarded by the value and productiveness of this land which has been reclaimed. It is drained by the smaller tributaries of the East Fork of the Little Miami river, Cowan's creek, Lee's creek and Paint creek. There are no springs in this township, but water of an excellent quality can be obtained but a few feet below the surface of the soil.

SETTLEMENT.

The white man evidently made his first appearance in this township about the year 1800. The exact time when he came here is not a matter of record, and tradition is not authentic in such matters. The first settlers to take out land with the intention of making this their permanent home were Joseph Anthony, who came here from Virginia; Abner Van Meter and Samuel Clevenger; Morgan Van Meter, who was a native of Morgantown, Virginia, and who settled in the vicinity of Snow Hill in the year 1800. Van Meter purchased two hundred acres of land, on which he erected a double log house and this was the first log cabin erected in the township.

It is thought by older inhabitants of this township that the first settlement was made a little southwest of the center of the township on the East fork of the Little Miami river. Micajah Nordyke was among the first settlers to locate here. He was a native of North Carolina and came to this county in the year 1804. In 1806 he sold his former claim and settled a short distance west, in the same township. The Nordyke brothers were born in North Carolina, but, while yet quite young, moved to South Carolina and remained there a short time, when they moved to Tennessee, on a stream called Lost creek. They came direct to Clinton county from this place and remained here until their death. They purchased their land for two dollars and fifty cents an acre of Col. A. Buford, who then owned a large tract of this region.

As one bit of living organism will attract others, so this small settlement in the far-off wilderness served as a nucleus around which many others gathered. Joshua and Stephen Hussey emigrated from North Carolina, their native state, in the year 1806-07 and bought land in this township, a portion of which is included in the present limits of the town of New Vienna. The first house built by these brothers was only a short distance from New Vienna. Charles Harris, who was the father of Elisha Harris, bought a tract of land in this township and began the work of improving it and getting it under cultivation. About the same time, Thomas Cox, who was the father of Vincent Cox, of New Vienna, settled here. Other early settlers who assisted in the upbuilding of the township, are Joseph Anthony, William Noble, Sr., Aaron Cox and Eliha Noble. Charles Harris built the "Snow Hill house," and opened a tavern there, probably the first opened in the county. Mr. Harris's brother-in-law, Samuel Wasson, built a house about the same time and near the Snow Hill house and commenced to entertain travelers.

The land in the northwest part of the township was held originally in large tracts, which Congress had bestowed for military services rendered in the Revolutionary struggle, or in repelling the attacks of the savage aborigines of the county. In consequence of this, the northern and northwestern part of the township was not settled as early as the southern and southeastern part. The pioneers of this region were brave, big-hearted, truthful, generous and kind. They left the civilization of their early homes and sought their fortunes in the wilds of the Mississippi valley. After these men had found the lands which they had bought, the first thing they did was to erect a rude structure called a cabin, for the protection of those for whom they were ready to sacrifice their lives. When suitable sites were located on which to build their cabins, they at once began the work of construction, which consisted in the hewing and shaping of the logs and putting them together, and in a marvelously short time there would rise in the woods these embryo homes. In these crude homes, the loving housewife and playful children were afterwards to share the love and caresses, hardships and privations of their noble husbands and fathers. These log houses were usually small, with but one large room, some sixteen or eighteen by twenty feet square, eight or nine feet high, constructed of rough logs, covered with clapboards, three or four feet long and six to ten inches in width, laid in layers and held to their places with poles. The spaces between the logs were filled with pieces of timber and covered with mortar made of clay and water. The floor was rough, made of puncheons or slabs, split from the trunks of trees and smoothed on one side. In the center of one wall the chimney was constructed, which usually took up the entire side of the house. This was constructed by cutting away three or four of the lower logs at one end of the buildings and then building them to the wall again by attaching pieces between the ends of the logs removed and parts still remaining in the walls. Against these logs and timbers, stones were placed, against which the fire was built. This was called the back wall and the chimney was constructed by laying together small pieces of timber and plastering these within and without with clay mortar. The clothing of these early pioneers was hand-made and was called linsey-woolsey.

A gloom was cast over the thinly-settled community by the death of the child of Abner Van Meter, which was the first death to occur in the township.

For several years after the coming of the first settler, the growth of the township was slow. Emigrants came in from the south and east, but the influx was rather scanty. By 1820 the population had increased until practically all of the lands were occupied. The growth and progress was steady from then to the present time and the farms, which now yield large crops, were reclaimed by these sturdy pioneers.

FIRST SCHOOL.

It is rather uncertain where the first school was located in this township, but popular opinion among the older inhabitants seems to point to the town of New Vienna. This house was built about the year 1812. Robert Peggin was first employed to keep this school, but he was a man of intemperance and lax morals and was soon released. James Savage was the next employe, but, morally, he was very little better, hence he was likewise released.

The following are the officers of Green township in 1915: Trustees, William Cashman, C. B. Miller and Charles Johnson; clerk, H. L. Bower; treasurer, William H. Holmes. Population, two thousand one hundred fifty-eight.

NEW VIENNA.

By A. W. Boden.

New Vienna is located between Cincinnati and Chillicothe, on the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern. It is situated within the boundary line of Clinton county but borders on Highland.

Hussey sold his interest to Joseph Starr.

"Buzzard's Glory," as the town was first called, was laid off as a village April 21, 1835, by Nathan Linton, surveyor, for Thomas Hussey (father of Stephen Hussey). It was called "Buzzard's Glory" from the fact that a man by the name of Mortimer, in the early days, about 1812 or 1813, was running a tanyard over in the "Canada" part of town. It was part of the Collohill survey No. 1,078. While thus employed, he became financially embarrassed, and his stock was levied on. The hides were taken out to the vats preparatory to sale and hung on poles where they remained for several days, affording bait for an innumerable throng of buzzards, and while they were thus flocking to feed on Mortimer's hides, the place was dubbed "Buzzard's Glory." Harkens T. Van Winkle gave the town its present name of New Vienna.

Among the first settlers were Thomas and Joshua Hussey. They started a grist-mill in 1826, near where the home of John T. Wright is now located. They continued in business until the year 1833, when they purchased an engine and began running a steam grist and saw-mill.

During the year 1827, Rafe Mortimer and Stephen Hussey sunk a tanyard in that part of town now known as "Canada." This tanyard was located just between what is now known as the William Moore property and the home of William Rollison. Remains of the old tanyard can yet be seen there. The firm continued in business until 1829, when Mr.

In 1829, Stephen Hussey and William Reese opened a store in a building that stood where the present residence of William Triplett stands. This was the first business of its kind ever conducted in New Vienna. They sold their goods to Thomas Hussey and Henry Kennedy. These gentlemen were afterward succeeded in business by George Townsend and he by Judge Isaac Thornburg.

In 1829 Jonathan Haworth and Thomas Reese started a carding-mill. About the year 1834, Zion Rains put in operation an oil-mill for the manufacture of linseed oil.

The first hotel in New Vienna was kept by Girard Morgan on the lot now occupied by the residence of Frank W. Hadley. John E. Dalton was the first practicing physician of the village. Granville Osborne was the first, as well as the present, tinner of the town, and John Spears, the principal blacksmith.

Among the names of the early settlers in this community are some of the well-known family names of today. Their names and date of settlement are as follow: Micajah Nordyke, 1806; Jehu Ellis, 1806; Morgan Van Meter, Charles Harris, William Noble, James Johnson, John Shockley, Nathan Hockett, Joseph Hockett, John Hockett, Eleazer Johnson, Absalom Van Meter, Stephen Hussey, Sr., Joshua Hussey, Nordyke and others settled around them. When they began to hear their neighbor's dog bark they thought they were getting pretty close.

The first public improvement in the new settlement was to build a house of worship. Micajah Nordyke donated three acres of land where what is now known as the Quaker cemetery is located, on the farm of Lawrence Wright. On this site was built a log house of two rooms, with one door and one window in each room. The two rooms were connected by sliding shutters in the partition. A stone hearth was placed in the center of each room to burn charcoal on, as stoves could not be procured at that time. This was in about the year 1809.

This first house of worship was what is known now as the Friends church. They occupied this building until the year 1871, when their present house was built. At that time the Friends had their principal printing office of the United States in New Vienna and sent out from here printed matter, such as weekly papers, monthlies, books, etc.

The first school in the new colony was taught on the Henry Nordyke place, still known as the Nordyke farm and lying next to the farm of Charles Miller. It was taught by Daniel Frazier. The next school, in the same house, was taught by Moses Foley. The next was taught in the log meeting house above described by Robert Ellis.

The first house built expressly for school purposes was a large building on the lot now occupied by the residence of Fred Johnson; this was built in 1820, and was warmed by the first stove that was brought here.

A Mr. Rains erected an oil factory where Mrs. Rena Edwards now lives and was quite successful in this enterprise for a while. Silas Woodmansee and George W. Matthews opened the second store in the village.

The Methodist Episcopal church was organized in the early history of the village, probably about the year 1843. Their first house of worship was built about 1850, on a site at the edge of where their church now stands. This continued until 1876, when the present building was erected. A Rev. C. B. Warrington was the first preacher to visit this place and at the commencement of the first meeting Mrs. Bowers was the only member in town.

The first Baptist church was erected about two miles east of the village on what is now known as the Burnett land and adjoining the old cemetery, which is still there. It was then known as "Hard-Shell Baptist church." After a time a division occurred, when the more liberal-minded collected themselves together and kept up worship at the houses of friends until the band grew strong enough to erect a place of worship, which they did in 1840.

The Catholic church was more recently organized and at first bought and used the old school building which stood on the site now occupied by their church. This building was removed and they built the church they now occupy.

The Church of Christ has existed as an organized body since 1866. The ground work was laid by W. D. Moore, who was then a missionary at this place under the auspices of Mt. Olive, Bethel and New Antioch churches. The churches employed him for one-fourth of his time for one year, commencing in the fall of 1859, to labor at New Vienna. In June, 1869, W. D. Moore and Rev. Mr. Bacon held a discussion, involving the doctrine of Universalism. This discussion, it is said, settled the question in this community of the doctrine of unconditional salvation. In the fall of 1866, from one thousand to one thousand five hundred dollars was subscribed for building a church house and the work was postponed until spring. With spring came the War of the Rebellion and the work was not begun until the end of the war. The building was first built in 1866 or 1867, with Zephaniah Spears and Clark Dixon as overseers.

From the time New Vienna was first laid out until 1880, it steadily increased in population and business. In 1880, it ranked as the second town in the county and in some respects commanded a larger trade than did the county seat.

Since 1880, New Vienna has almost remained stationary as to population, although the business conditions have been improved with the advancing times.

At the present time New Vienna is a village of about nine hundred souls.

New Vienna has good cement walks throughout the town, has good streets and supports a municipal water and light plant. She has two dry-goods stores, four grocery stores and one hardware store. Three of the groceries have hardware departments in connection. The town is well supplied with three first-class restaurants and confectioneries, two meat markets, two drug stores, two clothing stores, one book store and the best weekly paper in southern Ohio. It has one jewelry store and one bank, the New Vienna Bank being one of the two roll of honor banks of Clinton county. It has three blacksmith shops, two garages, one buggy repository, one harness shop, one furniture store, one furniture repairing establishment, a first-class bakery and an up-to-date dry-cleaning establishment. It has five good churches, five fraternal orders and their auxiliaries, two livery barns and three auto livery concerns.

In the manufacturing line New Vienna is represented by one of the largest and best flour-mills on the Baltimore & Ohio South Western between Cincinnati and Parkersburg. There is also a creamery with an established reputation with all handlers of creamery butter; a tile and brick plant, an agricultural lime plant and a lumber-mill.

The New Vienna high school is one of the best in the state, as proven by the fact that the United States commissioner of education saw fit to send a representative from his office to inspect it. It is the first school in the state of Ohio to employ a domestic science director for twelve months in the year. The town is also favored with the county normal and a six-weeks' summer normal session.

Roy C. Hale is the present postmaster. O. C. Borden is the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The present town officials are: John W. Matthews, mayor; R. J. Rulon, clerk; John B. Swingley, marshal; William H. Curtis, J. L. Michael, L. G. Morton, Fred S. Johnson, William Foreman and Thomas Hodson, councilmen; John F. Schuler, George M. Neffner and W. R. Pemberton, board of public works; O. C. Borden, E. E. Haynes, C. O. Bernard, John Edingfield and C. N. Carey, school board.

NEW ANTIOCH.

New Antioch is but a hamlet, of probably one hundred and fifty inhabitants, situated a half-mile to the northeast of the New Vienna and Wilmington pike, and about eight miles from the former place. It was platted by Charles Underwood, surveyor, for Paul Hulls, Jr., David Marble and others, on February 28, 1851. It is part of Johnson and others' survey No. 2,386. Its buildings are all frame, but good and substantial, and takes on an appearance of thrift. Two pikes pass through the town.

The early industries consisted of a mill, operated by John Duchane; two stores, run by the Layman Brothers and the Rulon Brothers. John Barrett was the early shoemaker, and Pressley Rulon accommodated the early citizens with harness. The present business and professional interests consist of one general merchandise store, owned by C. V. Murphy; one grocery store, owned by J. W. Summers; three blacksmith shops, Thomas Devers, Elmer Urton and William Arrsmith operating them; Nelson Hall is the village barber; James Hobson runs a shoe shop; J. W. Durham owns and operates a flour and saw-mill, and V. E. Hutchins is the village physician.

Snow Hill is the only other hamlet in this township, and is one of the early towns laid out in the county. It was platted and laid out for Charles Harris, proprietor, November 11, 1817, on the William Talifairo survey No. 192.

Morgantown is a defunct town of Green township. The village was first laid out on what is known as the Washington Spear farm near Snow Hill, now owned by the Swingley estate. This settlement was called Morgantown and there were but a very few houses built there.

This village was platted on February 23, 1816, and laid out for Isaac Pearson, Jr., and Mary Van Matre, the proprietors. This was part of the William Tallifairo survey No. 1,101. It remained a town but a short time, and was then vacated and reverted back to farm land.

CHAPTER XXI.

JEFFERSON TOWNSHIP.

Jefferson township was organized in the year 1839 from the territory taken from Clark and Marion townships. This is one of the three townships which lie along the southern border of Clinton county. It is bounded by Brown county on the south, by Clark township on the east, by Marion township on the west and by Washington township on the north. The survey of this township was made in the winter season by one of the pioneers of the county, Peyton West, who was elected and served as county surveyor for several terms. Jefferson township took its name from the third President of the United States. This township contains about twenty-three square miles, or fourteen thousand seven hundred and twenty acres.

NATURAL FEATURES.

The surface of Jefferson township is generally level, but is susceptible of drainage at a reasonable cost. The only broken land in the township lies along the West fork of the Miami river and near the Brown county line, but this portion of land may be cultivated without difficulty and is now under a good state of cultivation. Jefferson township is drained by the West fork of the Miami river, which is the only stream flowing through this township, although it has as its branches and tributaries Plum run, Dry run, Moon's branch, Hale's branch, Lick branch, Sugartree branch and Bee branch. The West fork, as it is known to the natives, enters the township in the northeastern part and runs in a southwesterly direction to a point near the village of Westboro, where it bears south, crossing the Brown county line, and continues about one and one-half miles in the same direction and empties into the East fork of the Little Miami river.

There is a considerable outcrop of blue limestone along the West fork, Dry run and Moon's branch, and large quantities of this have been taken to different parts of the county and utilized in the stone work of buildings and miscellaneous purposes. Some of the quarries along the creeks, where the stone comes near the surface, have been opened and considerable stone taken out and utilized in the macadamized roads of this section The heavy growth of timber, which covered almost every acre of the township, has prevented the rapid settlement and improvement. Oak, hickory, white maple, elm, with specimens of almost all other varieties common to this part of Ohio, were the distinguishing varieties of timber found in this locality by the early settlers. The value of the white oak was great and, owing to the fact that it was very extensive and of a good size and growth, made the early settlers quite wealthy in itself. Much of it was made into planks, shingles and staves and taken to other parts of the county for use. A large portion of the oak was of a tough variety and was well adapted for the manufacture of plows and wagons, for which purpose great quantities were shipped. Much of the ash and hickory has also been used by wagon and buggy manufacturers. The white maple has been chiefly used for house building. But a great amount of the timber was ruthlessly wasted in the clearing of the land for cultivation. In the pioneer days only the finest timber could be sold and there was not a ready market at all times, in consequence the only expedient was to cut down and burn the trees, or deaden and finally burn on the ground, in order that the fields could be plowed.

STORM.

Clinton county was visited by a great tornado, May 22, 1860, which was especially destructive to Jefferson township. It made havoc with the timber, much of which was broken down and torn up by the roots, or bent and damaged. This storm also did much damage to buildings and orchards, many houses and barns being unroofed. A portion of the brick school house at Westboro was blown down while school was in session, but, thanks to Him who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," no one was injured; also a portion of the Methodist Episcopal church at Westboro was blown down. This storm was probably the most remarkable meteorological occurrence that has been witnessed since the settlement of the township.

SOIL.

The most of this township may be regarded as fairly productive, with some portions as quite fertile. All cereals are successfully raised and the soil is regarded as particularly well adapted to the cultivation of the potato. On the level portions, which include by far the greater part of the township, it has been proved quite profitable to tile, owing to the compact nature of the soil.

EARLY SETTLERS.

Samuel Jackson bears the distinction of building the first house in this township about the year 1812. Mr. Jackson had emigrated from Tennessee in the year 1800, and had settled in the eastern part of what is now Highland county, on Rocky fork. Hunting was his chief occupation and during the year 1801 he killed two panthers and quite a number of deer and bears. Brush creek and Sun Fish hills were his chief hunting grounds for a number of years. He removed to the southwestern part of the township in 1818 and there settled on the lands which were later owned by Alfred Daugherty and known as the Lyons farm. Soon after this time Mr. Jackson returned to Tennessee and later he moved to Cass county, Texas, where he was still living at the outbreak of the Civil War.

A Mr. Hale was the first settler in the Hale's branch neighborhood. He made the selection of a building site while in the company of John Randall, John Bunson and Ephraim Jones. This party, which was engaged in shipping salt from the salt works near Pittsburgh to Cincinnati, on flat-bottom boats, was returning on foot across the country, about the year 1818, as was their custom. They encamped for the night in what was then a beautiful oak forest, near a branch not far from where Wilson Bailey lived. The following morning, as one of the party related, when about to break camp, Hale remarked that the place was so attractive that he intended to return and settle there. True to his word, he did return, built a cabin, cleared a field and resided here a short time but soon became dissatisfied and left. Jesse Hockett was the next settler, and, in fact, the first permanent settler, as Mr. Hale's sojourn had been only temporary. He settled on the same branch and became a permanent resident.

The first hewed-log house built in the township was erected by Joseph Hockett, who emigrated from Tennessee and cleared the lands near Hixon's school house, but soon afterward bought land in the Hale's branch neighborhood, to which he removed and there remained until his death, in 1843. The early settlers in the Bee branch neighborhood were John Garner, Thomas Comer and Mr. Brunson. John Starr, Richard Starr, William Starr and John Thornhill were among the first settlers in the vicinity of Westboro.

William Hamer, while looking at the country in 1816, killed a large black bear. Whether this had any influence on Mr. Hamer's location or land we cannot say, but it is a fact that the following year he settled in the southern part of the township, not far from where he encountered the bear. During the years 1817-18, William Hamer and John Thompson built a saw-mill on the West fork. This was the first saw-mill in the township and was operated with some degree of success for a number of years, but in the time of a great freshet, the dam, which was made of logs, washed away and was never rebuilt. The foundation logs were still left as a monument to these men, who were esteemed for their honesty and integrity, and as further evidence of their industry and perseverance.

Another well-known settler in the southern part of this township was Thomas Sermon, who had served in the Revolutionary War. Mr. Sermon came from Kentucky and settled on the lands of James Taylor, who would not sell to anyone as long as the old veteran desired to occupy it. An incident is told of his regard for the old soldier. A party was desirous of buying some land of Mr. Taylor and, when he refused, they assigned as a reason why he should sell "that the old fellow was cutting timber where he pleased and doing no good generally." This provoked the wrath of Mr. Taylor, who replied, in substance, with his usual warmth when aroused, that "such a man as the applicant was not worthy of being a landowner, and that he would not sell land to a man that sought to dispossess or disturb an old soldier, who had gone, as it were, with his life in his hands, and suffered to secure the liberty we enjoy."

Peter Shick made the first settlement north of where the Baltimore & Ohio railroad now runs. Mr. Shick was a Baptist minister and settled here in 1830. Among the other early settlers of the township who came here and became permanent and prominent settlers were, William Garner, Joseph Hinshaw and Granville Haines, who settled in the Westboro neighborhood; Thomas Moon, Nathan Hoggatt, Jesse Hockett and others, in the Hale's branch neighborhood; Joseph D. Moon, Daniel H. Moon, John Holaday, Thomas B. Johnson and John W. Johnson, who settled on or near the old road leading from Martinsville to Woodville.

MILLS.

William Moon built a saw-mill on the West fork about the year 1831, which proved to be a success and was a great public benefit to the early citizens, as large quantities of lumber was turned out from this mill, which was needed for building purposes and the manufacture of wagons, plows and other implements. This mill continued in operation until about the year 1855. In the year 1850, two brothers, Lewis and Thomas Hockett, built the first steam saw-mill in the township. It was operated with great success by them for a number of years and was later sold to Jacob Rhonemus, who continued to run it for a time, but it was afterward owned by several parties and continued in operation for quite a number of years. Jonathan Vandervort built the first flouring-mill, in the year 1858. It was located at Westboro and was still in operation in the early nineties, at which time it was owned by Settles, Lacock & White. In the year 1838 John Hamer built and put in operation the first carding machine. It was located on the west side of the West fork, a short distance from where the village of Westboro now stands; to this he had a grist-mill attached, and continued to run the same for quite a number of years, but it proved his financial downfall.

S. J. Spees, Tummouse & Adams built the Westboro woolen-mills in the year 1868 at a cost of about seven thousand dollars. The building was ninety feet long and thirty feet wide and covered a commodious cellar, thirty by sixty feet. This portion of the building was originally built for a railroad depot. In April, 1874, the establishment was purchased of S. J. Spees by S. Wickersham & Sons, who continued to operate it for a time. When running, eight hands were employed, and both merchant and custom work was done by this factory. The products were shipped to all the towns in this immediate locality and the following towns have been supplied with jeans, flannels and blankets from this mill: St. Martins, Fayetteville, Cynthiana, Newtonville, Edenton, Goshen, Blanchester, Wilmington, Cuba, Clarksville, Martinsville, New Vienna, Washington Court House and Lynchburg.

The first church organization in the township was that of the Friends, about the year 1825. In 1838 the United Brethren organized a society made up of the citizens of Plum run and Westboro neighborhoods. The later changes in the church history will be taken up in full in another chapter of this book.

The military history of Jefferson township will also be taken up in another chapter, as it would require more space than can be here allowed to give even a synopsis of the many deeds of valor and heroism that were performed in the late Civil War by her volunteers.

There are two railroads passing through this township, both of which are now controlled by the Baltimore & Ohio line and give the citizens of Jefferson ample train accommodations, both for travel and also as a means of transporting their products to the foreign markets.

The first school taught in the township was conducted by Thomas Abbott in the year 1823, in a cabin on the West fork. This was only a short distance from where the village of Westboro now stands. The next teacher was probably Jesse Hockett. The first school house was located on the north bank of the West fork, opposite the lands of John W. Jackson. This was also used as a meeting house by the society of Friends. The later changes will be taken up under the Educational chapter.

The following are the officers of Jefferson township in 1915: Trustees, Taylor Connor, Gideon Hoggatt and Frank Brandenburg; clerk, Harley Johnson; treasurer, W. S. Osborn. Population, thirteen hundred thirty-eight.

WESTBORO.

Westboro was laid out and platted on June 7, 1838, for Josiah Graham, proprietor, by David Wickersham, surveyor. It is part of the John Breckenridge survey No. 3,045. This village is located in Jefferson township, on the Hillsboro branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, four miles east of Blanchester. It was originally the voting place for the township, and its growth did not begin until the railroad was run through the county. The Westboro woolen mills were built in the year 1868 by S. J. Spees, Tunmous & Adams, at a cost of about seven thousand dollars. The building was ninety feet long by thirty feet wide. It covers a commodious cellar, thirty by sixty feet, under that portion of the building which was originally constructed for a depot. In April, 1874, the establishment was purchased of S. J. Spees by S. Wickersham & Son, who operated the same until about fifteen years ago. It is now used as a wareroom by W. A. Hudson. While the mills were in operation they did both merchant and custom work, and their products were shipped to the following towns and supplied their respective neighborhoods with flannel, jeans and blankets: St. Martins, Fayetteville, Cynthiana, Newtonville, Edenton, Goshen, Blanchester, Wilmington, Cuba, Clarksville, Martinsville, New Vienna, Washington Court House and Lynchburg.

Westboro now has a population of two hundred and fifty. D. L. Woodruff is the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. G. B. Wiles is the postmaster. It has three general merchandise stores, operated as follow: C. J. Uible & Company, Harley Johnson, manager; W. P. Hammer & Son; J. D. Hodson & Company, E. J. Hockett, manager. The flour-mill is owned and operated by R. E. Burton. W. A. Hudson uses the building which was formerly occupied by the Westboro woolen mills for a wareroom and deals in coal, cement, tile, etc. Other business interests are: Barber, Harley Johnson; stock buyer, T. W. Hixon; blacksmith shop, F. M. Nichols; fancy chicken fancier, J. R. Hammer. The physicians of the village are, Drs. C. A. Tribett and A. F. Dennison. Westboro is an important shipping point for hogs, grain, wool and hay. It is also the pump station for the Hillsboro branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. There are three churches in the village, Friends, New Light and Methodist Episcopal. The Independent Order of Odd Fellows owns a nice building and has a very strong chapter here.

MIDLAND CITY.

Midland City is situated on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and the crossing of the Wilmington and Westboro pike, twelve miles south of Wilmington. It was first laid out as Clinton Valley. It is noted for being a great coaling and water station of the said road and gives employment to a number of men. It is also accommodated by the Midland division of the same road. The village has a population at present of approximately four hundred people. Midland City is incorporated and the town officials at present are: Riley Davis, mayor; B. V. Moon, clerk; Ezekiel Walker, marshal; J. A. Walker, George Fordice, A. C. Hamilton, George Patton, Quince Henderson and Harry Hall, councilmen. Maces Foster is the postmaster and Roy Wallace the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

The business interests of the town are as follow: General stores, Maces Foster, F. J. Martin and E. H. Osborn; F. P. Walker runs a grocery store. Roy O. Boulwar, grocery and general merchandise; C. N. Connor, grocery and restaurant: Ed Shaw, barber shop: F. A. Flora and J. A. Walker, blacksmith shop: J. C. Wickersham, grain dealer: Dennis Foster, hotel; Inez Walker, boarding house; B. V. Moon and C. C. Foster, livery: William Badey, butcher: Harry and Forest Bady, cement block manufacturers; A. B. Martin is the village physician. Midland City is an excellent shipping point for the different farm products.

Big Onion is a flag stop on the Hillsboro branch of the Baltimore & Ohio. Kluck's Crossing is in the southeastern part of Jefferson township and on the Clark township line. This was a charcoal-burning station for a number of years. The ovens were the largest in this part of the state and gave employment to quite a number of men, but this industry has died out and at present Kluck's Crossing is merely a flag stop.

CHAPTER XXII.

LIBERTY TOWNSHIP.

Liberty township was organized on July 15, 1817, but the history of this township dates much farther back than the time of organization. Liberty township lies along the northern border of the county, in the center of the northern tier of townships. It is bounded by Greene county on the north, Wilson township on the east and Chester township on the west, while its entire south line borders on Union township. It is three miles wide from north to south and six miles long from east to west, and contains fifteen thousand four hundred and sixty acres of land. This township is afforded ample drainage through the streams which flow through the township, and these also serve as outlets for artificial drains. The largest of these is Anderson's fork, a stream of considerable size and importance, which flows through the entire length of the township from east to west, and empties its waters into Caesar's creek about one-half mile below New Burlington. Buck run flows into Cæsar's creek outside the county and drains the entire southwestern part. Dutch creek also flows through a small portion of the southern part. These streams, with their tributaries, prove invaluable to the farmers of this locality in their drainage.

When the pioneers came to this township they found the land covered with a dense growth of timber of the following varieties, viz: White oak, burr oak, sugar tree, beech, black walnut, ash, elm, etc. These were largely used in the manufacture of wagons and farm implements and the construction of houses. In later years the land is so completely cleared of timber that it has become a veritable prairie.

THE LAND.

The land is rolling along the different streams of the township and there are many acres of fine farming land in these bottoms. The country about Port William is level and, consequently, the streams do not have so great a fall and spread out over larger bottoms. The land in the early days was covered with water for about six months of the year. The soil is black and loose and rests upon a subsoil of clay. This land is peculiarly adapted to the raising of cereals, corn, wheat and oats being the principal products. It is thought by geologists that this township was once the bed of a lake, but since its drainage the soil is of a rich, deep black loam.

Clinton limestone is found in abundance and of a good quality in this township. There are several quarries which are turning out stone for building purposes and are quite extensively worked. The stone from these quarries was always in big demand and large quantities were shipped to neighboring towns but, with the coming of cement and the substitute which concrete has been for stone, the business has suffered. Gravel can be found in great abundance along the streams and is used quite extensively on the roads of the township.

THE PIONEERS.

The first white man to settle within the limits of Liberty township was Stephen Mendenhall, who was born in Tennessee in the year 1780. While yet a small boy, he moved to North Carolina, where he remained until the age of twenty-two, when he took unto himself a wife, and a short time later moved to Waynesville, Ohio. In 1803 he came to Liberty township and settled on a farm of one hundred acres on Dutch creek. The first summer they had only the native Indians for neighbors, the nearest white family at this time being seven miles away. At the time of his settlement the country was indeed an unbroken wilderness and game of all kinds, such as deer, bears, wolves, turkeys, etc., was plentiful. But the signal for a new dawn was ushered in with the first sounds of his axe.

The next settler to locate in this township was Samuel Miller, who emigrated from Kentucky in 1804. Mr. Miller purchased a tract of six hundred acres on Anderson's fork and made this his permanent habitation. He was for a number of years the leading character in this section of the county and did as much to promote the neighborhood and township as any man in this locality. He was the first justice of the peace in this township. It is interesting to note that he was first elected in 1814, two years before the township was organized, and served from that time until his death, a period of nearly thirty years. He furnished the hand-mill with which the early pioneers ground their corn. He was also chosen as the first trustee of the township. He built the second grist-mill in the township, in the year 1833, but this mill was destroyed by fire and was rebuilt by Amos C. Hyatt.

There was an addition of three families in 1805, on Anderson's fork. Abram Ellis and family moved here from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and settled just across the creek from Squire Miller's. Aaron Jenkins and family, who came to this county from Virginia, and Joseph Lucas, of Pennsylvania, were among the next settlers. Mr. Ellis was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, where he served for seven years, participating in the battles of Brandywine, Long Island and many others. He was with Washington when he crossed the Delaware and witnessed the surrender of Cornwallis.

William Ireland was the next settler in this township. Mr. Ireland was born in the country which bears his name, in 1770, and emigrated to this country when he was but three years old. He came to this county in March, 1806, from Scott county, Kentucky. He taught the first Sunday school in the township and took a deep interest in religious matters. In 1819 he built the first brick house in the township.

Christian Stephens settled in this township in 1806 and located on Anderson's fork. Mr. Stephens was a native of Frederick county, Virginia. His father, Peter Stephens, followed his son two years later. Christopher Ellis and wife, Elizabeth, also came to this township from Frederick county, Virginia.

John Johnson and wife, Susanna, came from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio, in 1805, and the next year settled in Liberty township. The first election in this township was held at Mr. Johnson's house. John Unthank emigrated from Guilford county, North Carolina, in 1807 and settled on the banks of Anderson fork. Mr. Unthank built a grist-mill where the town of Port William is now located. This was the first mill built in this section of the country, and settlers for miles around came to Unthank's mill. The township elections for several years were held at this mill. Great public gatherings were also held at this mill and it was a sort of gathering place for the early settlers.

David Fairfield, an Irishman, emigrated to this section from Kentucky with his family in 1810. The same year Isaac Haines and wife came from New Jersey and located here. David Adkinson and family, from York county, Pennsylvania, settled here. Owing to defective titles, Isaac Haines, Joseph Adkinson, Henry Hester, David Fairfield and others, owning to the amount of one thousand acres of land in W. Nelson's survey, lost all.

In 1812 Josiah Borton moved here from New Jersey. In the same year John Strickle and wife, Susanna, emigrated from near Winchester, Virginia, and settled near Chillicothe; after remaining a year, they removed to the farm of Jacob Strickle. John Strickle was perhaps the first blacksmith to ply his trade in this township. William Hoblet moved with his family, in 1812, to Liberty township and took up his permanent residence. He was one of the first trustees of the township. Mr. Hoblet was a tanner by trade and carried on his business of tanning on his farm for a number of years.

Benjamin Bangham, who was a native of England, purchased a tract of two hundred acres and settled here with his family on March 13, 1812. In the east end of the township, in the same year, Isaac Jones and wife, Phoebe, purchased a tract of one hundred acres and moved here from Greene county, Tennessee. Solomon Stanbaugh (or Stanbrough) was another early settler in this part of the township. Jonathan Hoskins came to this section from Guilford county, North Carolina, and settled on what was known as the Thornburgh place, about the year 1814. John Woolman and wife, Polly, emigrated from New Jersey about the year 1810 and settled in this township. Samuel Wilson and wife, Sarah, purchased a tract of three hundred acres and settled here in the year 1817, but, owing to defective titles and failure to meet the payments, they moved out of the township in 1821. John Oglesbee came to this township in 1817 and, two years later, moved onto a farm on Anderson's fork. Isaac Constance came in 1817 from Kentucky. William Constance, who also settled here with his father, was a soldier in the War of 1812. Isaiah Oglesbee, father of John Oglesbee, emigrated from Frederick county, Virginia, with his family, in the year 1817. Jacob Beal came from Pennsylvania and settled on the creek above Port William. About the same time his brother, Isaac Beal, emigrated to this township. Another early settler to this section was John Copeland and wife, Judith. Other settlers were Daniel and Solomon Early, David Hoblet, Ashley Johnson, Samuel Mitchell, Charles B. Williams, John King, David Shields, Henry Wooley, Henry Welch, Zachariah Moorman, Obed Waln and James Burden.

EARLY CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS.

The first house of worship erected in this township was completed in the year 1818, by the Methodist Episcopal denomination and was denominated "Salem." It was built of logs and, although the comforts which the present generation of church workers enjoy were lacking, still the early zeal of the pioneers was shown in their long and arduous worshipping.

The first school house was built in 1812. Henry Hester was the first teacher. This building was erected from round logs and served as a seat of learning until 1830, when a hewed-log house was put up on the site of the old one. The Rev. Griffield, a Presbyterian minister of Wilmington, taught the first school in this building. The second school in the township was built in 1816 and was known as the Salem school house. Aaron Jenkins donated the land and a log house was erected. Samuel Hyde was the first teacher. The first school house in the eastern end of the township was erected in 1827 and Aquila Dorsey was hired to teach the first school.

The old state road was the first laid out in this township. It was established by the first Legislature that convened in Ohio, in 1802, and was opened soon afterward from Chillicothe to Old Town. This road entered the township about the center of its southern line and, taking a northwesterly course, enters Greene county near Lumberton.

Shadrach Thornburgh and William Stanley built a pottery kiln in this township in 1827. They burned sugar pots for the early settlers. At that time there was a sugar camp on nearly every farm and they did quite an extensive business with their kiln. There were also many copper stills on Anderson's fork. Robert Stanley, John Oglesbee, James Babb, Josiah Borton, Samuel Miller, William Ireland and Jacob Peterson each owned one. Whiskey was sold for eighteen cents per gallon and was freely used. The first store was started in a log house on Anderson's fork about 1828, by Samuel Smith. This, the first store of any importance in the township, was managed by Jackson Walker. Aaron Weller began the manufacture of drain tile in 1856, the tile being made on a wheel by hand. In the same year Allen Hiatt put in the first tile ditch. In 1858 Mr. Weller erected a modern tile factory and has furnished hundreds of miles of tile which has been laid in this section.

STATISTICS.

There was no listing of personal property by townships until 1826. At that time, the only personal property listed for taxation in this township was cattle and horses. This township reported 143 horses, valued at $5,720, and 211 neat cattle, valued at $1,688, making a total of $7,408. Horses were valued at a uniform price of $40 a head, and cattle at $8 a head. The value of the real estate was $32,614, making a total of $40,022. In 1881, the value of the property, real and personal, in the township, was $813,175. The population in 1880 was 1,382; in 1890, 1,299; in 1900, 1,253, and in 1910, 1,089.

The following are the officers of Liberty township in 1915: Trustees, Dennis Stephens, J. W. Brackney and Charles M. Stephens; clerk, F. M. Strickle; treasurer, E. P. Gordin. Population, one thousand and eighty-nine.

PORT WILLIAM.

Port William is the largest town in Liberty township and the chief town in the northern part of the county. This village was first started on the west side of Todd's fork, in 1816, by John Unthank. It was first called West Liberty. It is located on the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton railroad. Only a few houses were built before 1829 and the town was not platted until October 13, 1832, for Michael Jenkins, the proprietor. It is a part of surveys Nos. 4,366 and 1,728.

A log house, evidently the first in the hamlet, was erected by Jesse Dillon, son-in-law of Unthank, not far from the old factory. Garland Johnson also erected a log house, among the first, in 1829, and in the same year he started the first store in the town. A few years later he built an addition to his dwelling and moved the store into a room of the same. The first blacksmith shop was erected in 1828. Among the early business men of the town were: Addison Mills, grocer; Anson Massie, saddler; Marshall Jenks, merchant; Samuel Johnson, tanner; James M. Hoblet, merchant.

In 1825, Steel Taylor built a fulling-mill below and on the opposite side of the creek from where the old woolen factory stood. The woolen factory was erected in the spring and summer of 1846, by Lewis Clark, who owned the same. It was later owned by Moon & Crooper, who did an extensive business in their line for a number of years. Jonathan Perkins started the first saloon in 1838. The building in which it was kept was where Hugh Johnson later kept a beef shop, and which was burned down a short time later.

Since the opening of the railroad in 1878, it has been a good market for all farm products. Thousands of bushels of wheat and corn are shipped from this point each year.

The following is a business directory of Port William: Banks, Port William Banking Company; barbers, D. R. Powers, F. M. Conklin; blacksmiths, Charles Conklin, J. H. Thomas; coal yards, Faulkner & Burnett; elevator, O. W. Linkhart & Son; flour-mill, W. O. Beam; garage, J. C. Beal; general merchandise, Rowland & Gordon, F. L. Barlow, G. H. Clark; hardware, J. A. Stevens; hotel, A. D. Sanderson; livery, A. B. Reed & Son; milliner, Mrs. Bernice Sanderson; meat market, O. A. Mason; pool room, J. A. Conklin & Son; physician, P. D. Esbey; restaurant and ice cream parlor, Jenkins Bros.; saw mill, Clabaugh & Son; veterinary, Earl Starbuck.

J. C. Ellis is the present postmaster. F. M. Strickle is the agent for the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton railroad. J. A. Gilbert is the mayor and N. J. Conklin is marshal. The town has a population at present of three hundred.

LUMBERTON.

Lumberton lies on the northern edge of the county between New Burlington and Port William, and on the Wilmington and Xenia pike. This village was called Lumberton for a town of that name in New Jersey. The first house built in the village was used for a wagon shop by Samuel Woolman, about 1820. About the same time he built a log house on the lot where Doctor Crawford resided for a number of years. Later John Borton built a small frame house on the opposite corner. The first store was started by Joshua C. James in 1839. Tunis Conkling was the first blacksmith.

Although this town was settled and named early, it was not platted until May 20, 1853. The business interests in 1880 consisted of one grocery store, a cooper two blacksmiths, one wagonmaker and a stonemason; one physician attended the ills of the settlers. The general merchandise store is owned and managed by Elmer Lewis. The two blacksmith shops are run by C. H. Hansell and Jacob Oglesbee. The population at present is about seventy.

GURNEYVILLE.

Gurneyville is situated in the southwestern part of Liberty township, on the Liberty and Union township line. This little hamlet was platted for David McMillan, proprietor, March 2, 1847, and is part of the Nelson survey No. 1735. It was named by Mr. McMillan in honor of Joseph John Gurney, a noted member of the Society of Friends. Andrew Haughey built the first house in 1847 and in the following year John Grant started a store in this building. Mr. McMillan's ambition was to build up a town here, but he never lived to realize his ambition. There are only a few houses to mark the site at present. The general store is operated by C. H. Smith and the blacksmith shop by Dallas Carey.

M'KAY'S STATION.

McKay's Station is a flag stop on the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton railroad. It was never platted and has sprung up since the railroad came through. It was named in honor of Alfred McKay, who gave most of the lots to those who would put up good houses on the same. This was quite a shipping point for grain and live stock, but at present is nothing more than a flag stop. George Hamilton has a general merchandise store and does a nice business. Clare was formerly the name for the postoffice.

MT. PLEASANT.

Mt. Pleasant at present consists of a voting precinct and is located on the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton railroad. By a special act of the Legislature in 1875, the trustees of the township were authorized to divide the township into two voting precincts. Previous to this time the township voted at Port William. The trustees, under this authority, established a voting precinct at Mt. Pleasant.

Mt. Pleasant is also the center for one of the consolidated school districts of this township. This building was erected at a cost of fifteen thousand dollars. It has three rooms and three teachers in the high school. Professor Hodson is the district superintendent. There were twenty-eight enrolled in the high school and thirty in the grades. There were three in the 1915 graduating class.

An elevator marks the spot for Oglesby Station, which is located on the Dayton, Toledo & Ironton railroad. Wilbur Oglesby is the manager of this elevator, hence the name for the place. It was never platted and no attempt was ever made to establish a town here.

CHAPTER XXIII.

MARION TOWNSHIP.

Marion township occupies the southwestern corner of Clinton county and is bounded on the north by Vernon township, on the east by Washington and Jefferson townships, on the south by Brown county and on the west by Warren county. For the most part, the surface of the township would be called undulating, but in some places it is very level. The soil is productive and in some parts of the township is underlaid with a stratum of fine gravel at a depth of from six to eighteen feet. The principal streams are Second creek, running from the northern part of the township to the west side near the center; Lick creek, running west through the southern part and out at the west side near the southern corner, and Whitacre's run, which flows from east to west, south of the center. A vast quantity of the land was formerly swampy and too wet for cultivation, but, by the use of modern systems of ditching and draining, these lands have been made tillable and very fertile.

SETTLEMENTS.

The settlement of this township began long before its organization and soon after the organization of the county. It has been definitely established that Jonathan Baldwin was the first to settle within the limits of Marion township. Baldwin was born at, or near, Morgantown, Monongalia county, Virginia, November 30, 1786, and remained with his father until 1804, when he emigrated to Ohio and settled in Guernsey county. Two years later he removed to Warren county, near the present town of Morrow, and engaged in working by the month, building flat-boats for William Whitacre, with whom he remained until 1811. In that year he married Harriet Blancett and removed to near Springboro, in Warren county. In 1812 he enlisted in the army and served in the campaign of that year under Gen. William Henry Harrison. He then returned home, where he remained until 1814, when he came to Marion township and settled on a tract of land of one hundred and thirty acres on Second creek, this land being the residue of four hundred acres previously purchased by him of General Lytle. Immediately upon his arrival, Mr. Baldwin, with the help of his two brothers, Samuel and Benjamin, cut the logs and erected the first dwelling in the township. His nearest neighbor at this time was four miles away, the intervening distance being covered with a heavy forest. On the completion of the cabin, the brothers left Jonathan to clear the land and they returned to their home in Warren county. This was in February, 1814, and by the spring of 1815 he had six acres of land cleared and ready to be planted with corn for that year's use. He died on August 28, 1868, in his eighty-second year. He was married twice; his first wife died on October 27, 1834, and his second wife, Mary, on July 25, 1856. His son, William H. Baldwin, who died on November 19, 1862, when fifty-two years of age, was for many years one of the most prominent citizens of the township. He was township clerk, justice of the peace, postmaster, general of the county militia, state senator, and judge of the second judicial district of Ohio.

Reuben Gillis was another early settler of this township. He was born on the Elkhorn, eleven miles north of Lexington, Scott county, on August 8, 1789. His father brought him to Ohio in May, 1799, when he settled in Warren county. From here the son later moved to Clinton, near where Blanchester now is, and where he continued to reside until his death, in 1877. When he came to the Blanchester neighborhood, Jonathan Baldwin, Galvin Morrison, William Liston, Sr., George Crossen, the widow Kate Crossen, Edward Crossen, William Clark, Mr. Stanberry, Elisha Whitacre, Nicholas Burns and William Caudle were already living on Second creek.

The first white child born in the township was Benjamin Baldwin, who was born on October 15, 1815, and who for years lived on a farm near Blanchester and is still remembered by the residents of that community. At this time the nearest neighborhood was about Collins' tavern, now called Villar's chapel, a distance of seven miles.

Galvin Morrison emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio in 1815, and located in this township on what was later known as the William Zimmer farm. Soon afterward Elisha Whitacre; Recompense Stansbury, from New Jersey; Hiram Anderson, William Liston and Edward Crossen settled in the township. Among the early pioneers should also be mentioned Jeremiah Rowan, John Cooper, William Crossen, Mrs. Henry Shank, Wilfred Cusick, Hartwell Gilliam, Reuben Murphy and Gertrude Newell.

FORMATION OF THE TOWNSHIP.

This township was formed by an act of the county commissioners, August 5, 1830. The first election in the township was held in the woods near the cabin of Tobias Barnett (sometimes called Bernard), on September 4, 1830, when the following officers were elected: John Mitchell, John Stephens and John Salisbury, trustees; Hiram Anderson, clerk, and Edward Crossen, Jr., treasurer. The farm on which this election was held is on the Twin pike, leading from Blanchester to Wilmington, about one and a half miles northeast of the former place. John Cooper was elected justice of the peace the following November. The following composed the electorate of the township at this election of the justice of the peace: Jonathan Baldwin, G. Morrison, Hiram Anderson, Recompense Stansbury, John Salisbury, Nicholas Burns, Thomas Elsey, Jonathan Kirk, William Brown, Irwine Garrison, Benjamin Garrison, James Bryant, William Clark, William Hudson, Salby Hudson, Jeremiah Rowan, John Caddle, Lewis Nebber, Reuben Gillis, John Smith, Azel Lyon, Elisha Whitacre, Edward Crossen, Israel Lidles, Isaac Coons, William Sharrow, John Trump, Benjamin Murphy, James Cochran, David Fisher and Isaac Martin.

EARLY SCHOOLS.

The first school house in the township was a log house built on a half acre of land donated by Hiram Anderson for that purpose, and the first school taught in it was by James Cochran, an ex-soldier of the Revolutionary War. This site was afterwards used as a burial place. Catharine, the wife of Galvin Morrison, was the first person to be interred here. It is now filled with the graves of the early settlers of the township. The next school building was a log house on the south bank of Second creek. It was taught by Benjamin Baldwin, the father of Jonathan Baldwin and also a soldier in our war for independence. This site is now within the confines of the town of Blanchester. A third school building was built on the farm of William Crossen.

Compared with our modern, well-planned and well-built school buildings, even in the remotest rural districts, these early log school houses were crude affairs indeed. They were heated by fire-places, requiring logs five or six feet in length. The seats consisted of slabs, three to four inches thick, six to eight inches wide and eight to twelve feet long, hewed on the upper side. They were set about eighteen inches above the floor, so high that most of the children's feet did not touch the floor. School was in session most of the day, but the children never complained, living in the hope that some day their feet would touch the floor. But few even realized that dream, for they were almost always taken from school at an early age and put to work on the farm, helping their parents. The writing desks were made by placing plank along the wall at the sides of the room, with a strip fastened at the bottom.

These schools were operated and maintained by subscription, each settler subscribing so many pupils, at from a dollar and twenty-five cents to a dollar and a half per pupil, for a quarter of about sixty-five days. Twenty students were considered a large school and but few branches were then thought necessary. Some paid their subscriptions in money and some in produce. However, many paid in wood and this was cut near the school building. The teacher boarded around among the patrons, dividing his time among them. When a pupil had advanced as far as the single rule of three, with a slight knowledge of Peter Parley's geography, he was considered as having a sufficient education, and would be taken from school and put to work in a clearing. Usually the girls were not so far advanced, as it was deemed more necessary to educate them in the kitchen and household duties, and it was thought, too, that they had not the faculties of learning as had the boys.

The following are the officers of Marion township in 1915: Trustees, S. A. Losh, I. Tedrick and James Reeves; clerk, H. C. Reed; treasurer, Clay Watkins. Population, two thousand five hundred and thirty-three.

BLANCHESTER.

Blanchester was laid out by Joseph and John Blancett and the plat was recorded on March 23, 1832. There were originally twenty-four lots, four poles by eight poles square. The lots were numbered consecutively from 1 to 24, distributed along the main street, Howard, which ran northwest and southeast, and one cross street, Broadway, which ran northeast and southwest. The courses of the lots were north forty-five and one-half degrees east by south, forty-five and one-half degrees east. This village is situated in the southeastern part of Marion township and is the only town in said township.

On March 6, 1865, the necessary proceedings were taken and the town duly incorporated by the county commissioners under the laws of the state of Ohio. On August 9, 1873, the incorporation was extended to include contiguous territory, on a petition signed by property owners within the territory to be annexed, and recommended by the authorities of the town. Anshutz & Patterson's addition, including the school lot and also Clark, High and Columbus streets, was platted on February 2, 1874. J. H. Trickey's addition, with Central avenue and South Broadway street, was platted on November 16, 1877.

Blanchester is located at the junction of the Blanchester and Hillsboro branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern railroad. The interurban line from Blanchester to the suburbs of Cincinnati affords the people of this community excellent train service. Wilson's run and Second creek surround the town on three sides and connect at the eastern edge of the corporation.

The first merchant to locate here was Joseph Blancett, who occupied a hewed-log house. He kept a general line of groceries, notions and such other articles as would be found in a country store of that day. Blancett was followed by Isaac Frazier and William H. Baldwin. The former kept his store in a log house in the village, but the latter occupied a stand at a point outside the present corporate limits. William Bundy was the first blacksmith, and had his shop in a log building, where he plied his trade here many years before any other blacksmith came to this community. Bryant Trickey was the first wagon-maker and also plied his trade in a log shop. On the 24th of March, 1870, S. R. Nickerson began the publication of the Blanchester Herald, and continued eighteen months, when he sold it to James S. Turk, who, in a short time, changed the name to the Marion Independent, the publication of which ceased about October 1, 1872. The history of later papers may be found in the chapter on newspapers.

Blanchester has suffered the greatest disaster that has ever been visited upon any town in Clinton county. This prosperous little village was overtaken by a serious calamity on October 18, 1895, and within the brief space of six hours the business portion of the town was almost entirely consumed and a number of her most enterprising citizens were financially ruined.

The fire broke out at 1:30 P. M. in an old stable in the rear of the livery barn of W. W. Burke. There was no definite knowledge as to the origin of the fire, though the most generally accepted theory was that some person had carelessly thrown a cigar stub either in or near the stable and that the conflagration started from that apparently trifling act. From this, the brick livery stable of W. W. Burke was ignited. Not until the fire got under good headway in the stable of Burke was it discovered, and soon a general alarm was given. The streets were soon fairly alive with people doing what they could prevent the spread of the flames. Blanchester's fire department was a volunteer brigade, under the captaincy of Jacob Baldwin, and their only equipment was an old hand engine, while the only available water was such as could be pumped from wells and cisterns, and in many of them the water was very low. Within a very short time, fanned by a stiff wind, the flames spread so rapidly that it became apparent that the town was doomed unless outside aid could be speedily secured.

Mayor Foote telegraphed Hillsboro, Lynchburg and Loveland, all of which responded at once and, transportation being at hand, were soon on the ground. By the time of the arrival of outside aid the square bounded by Main, Wall and Church streets and the railroad tracks, and that bounded by Main, Wright, Cherry and Broadway, were involved in the flames. Everyone who could carry a bucket assisted the firemen in fighting the still-spreading flames. But the cisterns and wells became exhausted of their supply of water, and the only recourse was to get water from the creek, a distance of five squares.

By seven o'clock in the evening the three business squares were largely destroyed and the residence portion of the town was seriously threatened. Then followed the most intense excitement. People became frantic in their efforts to get their household goods to places of safety; but in a number of instances they were compelled to abandon the work of rescue, the flames spreading too rapidly for them.

The Methodist church and three residences adjoining, thought to be at a safe distance from the conflagration, were ignited by burning embers being carried three squares through the air and over intervening dwellings. The church was gutted and the three residences, including the pretty home of Lyman Simonton, were entirely destroyed.

The loss was estimated at one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, with insurance of less than twenty-nine thousand dollars—a little more than one-fourth. Hence the unfortunate people suffered a loss of nearly one hundred thousand dollars, besides the loss sustained by tradesmen while preparing for a resumption of business. The extent of the damage wrought can be more fully comprehended by the reader when we state that seventy-two buildings, including dwellings and barns, were destroyed, and that nearly the entire business portion of the town was swept away. Fortunately, no one was killed or seriously injured by the disaster.

On Saturday, Mayor Foote called a citizens' meeting to be held at the Universalist church for the purpose of organizing a committee for the relief of the sufferers. A large number of citizens responded. The meeting organized with the following officers: Professor Cadwallader, chairman; C. B. Watkins, secretary; E. D. Smith, treasurer; J. M. Fisher, Rev. Hamilton, A. Crosson, J. W. West, Mayor Foote and J. S. Dewey, executive council. A committee of fifteen ladies and men was appointed to solicit aid from the hundreds who visited the fire-stricken town on Sunday. The good people of the county were very loyal and generous in coming to the aid of their stricken neighbors. A vote of thanks was tendered the fire department of Hillsboro, Loveland and Lynchburg, all of which battled nobly against the fire fiend; also, to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company for their prompt action in furnishing transportation to the fire companies of these towns.

A clipping from the Clinton County Democrat, commenting on the fire, said: "The situation at Blanchester is almost appalling and will require a long time for the village to recover from the effects thereof. Comparatively few business rooms remain, and not much headway can be made before next spring." The fire, while a great calamity and an inestimable loss to many of the citizens, was really a blessing in disguise, for within less than two years the business section was completely rebuilt with modern brick buildings. Where once frame buildings stood, their places are now filled with fire-proof structures.

The Clinton County Democrat of November 28, 1895, printed the following: "After having risen Phoenix-like from the ashes of the late terrible fire, Blanchester was visited Monday night with a terrible and destructive wind storm, and quite a number of the new buildings in the course of construction and those left standing by the fire were damaged to a greater or less extent. The wind blew a perfect gale the entire night, and many people had to seek places of safety, thinking that any minute the houses they occupied would be blown from their foundations. The entire roof was blown from the Carnahan block. The north fire wall on the new Rice building was blown off and went crashing through the roof of the new building just completed and occupied by the Snyder & Anderson Hardware Company. The walls of the Methodist church, left standing from the fire, were blown over, and completely buried the material, doors, windows, etc., belonging to Mrs. Willoughby, who had just had them placed on the ground preparatory to constructing a new dwelling to replace the one destroyed by fire. Window glass was blown from the fronts of the store room of H. L. Day, druggist; Z. T. Peddicord, furniture, and Doctor Anshutz, dental parlors. The walls of the old Broadway livery stable were blown down and the roof of a large warehouse near the railroad, belonging to James Gustin, was blown off.

"But, undismayed, every one is at work this morning clearing off the debris. It was, indeed, a night for terror to many of the citizens of this community, and one that will never be forgotten. The peculiar color of the sky was a feature of the storm, the west having a dull, red hue."

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

The following is a list of the business interests at Blanchester: Architect, George Baldwin; attorneys, Savage & Savage, B. S. Scott and Joseph Brant; agents, Baltimore & Ohio, F. O. Allison, Cincinnati & Muskingham Valley, Mrs. David Curless; banks, First National, Merchants and Farmers; barbers, H. A. Baldwin and Thomas Hewett; Palace, T. J. Warning, proprietor; Arcade, Bowen & Mullenix, proprietors; H. W. Osborne. Blacksmiths, C. W. Smithson & Son, L. H. Watkins, A. Leonard, Houck & Gilliland, Hottinger & Burroughs, William Greenfield; brooms, Ratchford Brothers, C. A. Moon, Edward Espy; carpenters, Milton Laymon, Harry Hall, Vernon Spencer, John Spencer, John Klock, Lewis Achor, Albert Achor, Homer John; chiropractor, O. I. Bennett; coal, Craig & Oberlin, Amos Foote, A. N. Williamson; contractors, Dewey Brothers & Company, A. Crosson; confectioneries, J. E. Reeder, Clarence Frye, Clyde Daugherty, Mrs. O. L. Haworth, W. H. Frey; creameries, A. Curless Sons & Company; dentist, B. F. Wade, J. H. Shank, J. A. McPhail, J. W. Anshutz, R. S. Spickard; drugs, G. V. Losh, Day & Son, H. E. Katzenmeyer; dry-goods, S. Haines & Company, Rice Brothers, The Mercantile Company; factories, Overalls, Hershey & Rice, Southern Ohio Handle Factory, Star Hames & Company, Hames and Cast Saddle Trees, Blanchester Canning Company; fish market, Pearl Hendry; fruit store, John Cafeo; furniture, Reed & Robertson; garage, W. W. Reeves, John Carr, John Howe; gardeners, John Pommert, C. P. Starkey; groceries, People's Cash Grocery, Frank Rudell, Guy Irvin, W. N. Hunter, I. J. Long, C. M. Riley, E. D. Wing, Harry Griswold; hardware, P. E. Snyder, Hampton & Shank, Anderson & Brant; harness, John Hudson; hotels, Arcade, Brindley; insurance, George Snider, John Frazee and Henry Hagadorn; Andrews & Laymon, L. S. Lorish; jewelry, H. C. Reed, George Deck; junk, Walter Powers; laundry, Model Laundry; livery, Harley Richardson, Leo King; live stock, Brown & Fritz; machinery, Collins & Arbogart, W. H. Carnahan; meat markets, Penquite Brothers, Earnest Whitenack; millinery, Lillian Norton, R. L. Moon & Company, Jackson Sisters; milling, D. W. Hogan; music, Mrs. Icie Shawhan; newspapers, Blanchester Star Republican, Blanchester News; painters and decorators, Frank King, Elias Wilkins, Clem Baldwin, J. W. Hottinger, C. L. Shumard, William Osborne, George Kelsey, O. E. Hawthorne, H. Lieka; physicians, F. M. Baldwin, J. H. Norman, L. J. Spickard, Robert Conard, Raymond Watkins; plumbing, W. I. Gebhart; pool, J. W. Smith, A. B. Gilliland; shoe repairing, S. C. Ross, W. W. Homan; studio, Arthur Studio; tailors, A. E. Eskew, Corliss; theaters, Dreamland, Pastime; undertakers, A. L. Hannah, Harry Frey, Burk & Eichelberger; upholstering, Alton McKinney; variety store, George Taylor.

The present officials of Blanchester are as follow: J. W. Gustin, mayor; W. L. Hixson, clerk; J. M. Brant, solicitor; A. Titus, health officer; H. F. Hudson, treasurer; Ed Anderson, fire chief; T. J. Walker, marshal; H. M. Hall, John Carr and J. H. Shank, board of public affairs; H. E. Katzenmeyer, clerk of public affairs; Amos Foote, Aetna Laymon, Jacob Kohlhagen, C. M. Day, J. R. Ross and J. O. Norman, council.

CHAPTER XXIV.

RICHLAND TOWNSHIP.

Richland was one of the three original townships into which the county was divided by the commissioners on April 6, 1810, and was erected in words as follows: "Ordered, that all that part of Clinton county east of the old boundary line of Warren county shall be one township known by the name of Richland." This was the preliminary act, but the township was not surveyed nor its boundaries described until August 10, 1813, at which time the original boundaries were fixed as follow: "Beginning at large hickory at the corner of Green township, in the line of Union township, thence running with the line of Green township, to the southerly corner of the county and at the corner of Fayette county, thence north with the county line to the northeast corner, thence west with the county line to the original line of Warren county, thence south with said original line of Union township, thence with the line of Union township to the place of beginning." The township originally comprised all of that teritory now included in Wilson, Wayne and Green, in addition to its present territory, also parts of Liberty, Union and Clark.

CHANGES IN AREA.

The township has been cut down four times. The first was on August 21, 1813, when a part of the township was cut off from the west side to form Union and Green townships; on July 15, 1817, another part was taken from the same side to form Liberty; the third change came on March 4, 1837, when a part was taken to form Wayne township; and the last change came in August, 1850, when Wilson township was formed. The township, as it now exists, is of an irregular shape, being in its longest part, east and west, about eight miles long, by four miles wide, and containing twenty-one thousand two hundred and ten and seventy-two hundredths acres of land.

Richland township is situated in the extreme northeastern corner of the county and its boundaries are as follow: On the north by Wilson township and Fayette county; on the east by Fayette county; on the south by Wayne township, and on the west by Wilson and Union townships. It is not definitely known from whence the name was derived, but it is supposed and rather well warranted, that it was so named on account of the rich soil of the territory originally comprised within its border.

NATURAL FEATURES.

The township has good drainage through the waters of Lee's creek in the south and Rattlesnake creek in the northeast corner. As tributaries to this latter creek and serving as an excellent drain for the eastern part, are Palmer's branch, Wilson's branch and Grassy branch, and the western part is drained by Anderson's and Todd's fork.

On almost a due line with the old Urbana road, extending through the full width of the township, from north to south, is a water shed. This shed has an elevation of about one hundred feet and divides the waters of the Scioto from those of the Miami, the streams of the east running into the Scioto, through Rattlesnake creek and its tributaries, while those of the west flow into the Miami river. Anderson's fork, running north-northeast empties into Caesar's creek in the extreme northwest corner of the county, at New Burlington, and a branch of Todd's fork drains the western limit of the township.

Richland township has a rather level surface. There are no hills or breaks of any kind, although the grade in the eastern part is about six feet to the mile, ascending to the table lands or water shed. The slope on the western side is much less. The land is somewhat rolling between Anderson's fork and the water shed, but resumes the level appearance from Anderson's fork to the western side of the township. This township is blessed with a lack of waste land; there are no swamps, bogs or land under water; no broken, hilly country, and no stone lands, and, in fact, no untillable lands. Even the beds of the streams are so narrow that they occupy a very small acreage of the land as compared with those in adjoining counties.

SOIL.

Richland township, in the beginning of the nineteenth century, was little better than a huge swamp of bog. Timber covered the ground with such a heavy growth that the fallen timber, leaves and undergrowth were unable to dry out and lay in a half-decayed mass of several inches in depth. The earth was wet and almost covered with pools of standing water and the rays of the sun were prevented from penetrating the thick foliage and reaching the sodden earth. This made it undesirable on the part of the early settlers, who preferred locating on more elevated lands, free from water, and it is not hard to see why this township was slow in beginning its growth. But with the clearing of this land and the introduction of drain tile, this has become one of the banner townships of the county.

The soil of Richland township is of a rich, alluvial formation and is based on a clayey subsoil. In some places this has a stratum of stone underlying it at a depth of from four to six feet. An example of this underlying stone is the bed of Anderson's fork. It is composed entirely of this stone, a stratum of which underlies the creek, extending about a mile from the stream on the west side and about a hundred yards from it on the east. This is a limestone formation and belongs to the group called Clinton, which is found quite extensively throughout the county. This limestone is used for building purposes and macadamized road material; it also produces a very good grade of lime, which, although the color is not pure white, is just as good for building purposes as the whiter grade. The land of the township is particularly well adapted to the raising of corn and grass, but until recently it has not been as profitable for cereals as other townships of the county. However, with the improved system of drainage and the introduction of drain tile, it is rapidly moving to the front in the raising of all farm products.

TIMBER.

The timber of the township covered a wide variety and quality. Some of the timber grew to a great size and was used in the manufacture of different products. Elm and maple grew in great abundance in the lower lands and clearly indicated the richness of the soil on which they grew. The burr oak and sugar tree grew in great profusion on the higher lands and, in fact, in all parts of the township. Other trees of a wide and varied variety peculiar to this locality could be found. The black walnut and blue ash was used by the settlers to make rails from and today would be of great value if still standing. There was also a great growth of underbrush and vines through which a passage could only be cut with great difficulty and labor.

LAND ENTRIES.

The whole of this township is in what is known as the Virginia military district. This is composed of surveys entered by holders of military warrants, which were issued by the government for payment to the Revolutionary warriors who were not regularly enrolled in the army, but were a sort of militia. The government at that time did not have money to pay their soldiers for their services and in consequence would issue them tracts of land as payment. The following is a list of the entries and surveys made in this township:

Entry No. 550, August 4, 1787. Richard C. Anderson and Mayo Carrington, four thousand acres of land on military warrant No. 856. Surveyed March 3, 1794, by John O'Bannon, district surveyor.

Entry No. 698, August 8, 1787. Jonathan Clark, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 172. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 4, 1794.

Entry No. 727, August 8, 1787. Clement Biddle, assignee, one thousand acres, on several military warrants, Nos. 1,756, 1,906, 187, 1,891, 1,789. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 7, 1794.

Entry No. 729, August 8, 1787. John Tench, assignee, one thousand two hundred acres of land, a part of military warrant No. 2,377. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 4, 1794.

Entry No. 730, August 8, 1787. Lieut. Nathaniel Anderson, one thousand acres of land, a part of military warrant No. 2,235. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 4, 1794.

Entry No. 732, August 8, 1787. Capt. William Lindsay, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 1,199. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 8, 1794.

Entry No. 738, August 8, 1787. Capt. Nathaniel Burwell, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 2,133. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 8, 1794.

Entry No. 763, August 8, 1787. Lieut.-Col. Presley Neville, one thousand four hundred acres of land, a part of military warrant No. 18. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 8, 1794.

Entry No. 766, August 8, 1787. Lieut.-Col. Presley Neville, one thousand four hundred acres of land, part of military warrant No. 18. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 10, 1794.

Entry No. 837, August 9, 1787. Lieut.-Col. Presley Neville, one thousand four hundred acres of land east of his entry No. 766, but withdrew the entry and on May 7, 1784, he entered one thousand four hundred acres, part of military warrant No. 18. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, June 15, 1794.

Entry No. 854, August 10, 1787. Lieut.-Col. Thomas Posey, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 240. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 22, 1794.

Entry No. 855, August 10, 1787. Capt. Thomas Pemberton, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 398. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 19, 1794. Four hundred acres of this entry was withdrawn and entered in survey 274.

Entry No. 895, August 10, 1787. Lieut. William Whitaker, one thousand acres of land, part of military warrant No. 2,121. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 21, 1794.

Entry No. 891, August 10, 1787. Capt. Joseph Scott, Jr., one thousand acres of land, part of military survey No. 1,887. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 17, 1794.

Entry No. 900, August 10, 1787. Lieut.-Col. Edward Carrington, one thousand five hundred acres of land, part of military warrant No. 1,792. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, April 5, 1794.

Entry No. 932, August 11, 1787. James Galt, heir, one thousand acres of land, on military warrant No. 194. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 18, 1794.

Entry No. 1,061, August 13, 1787. Gen. Daniel Morgan, two thousand five hundred acres of land, on military warrant No. 19. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, April 1, 1794.

Entry No. 1,449, August 18, 1787. Col Edward Carrington, one thousand five hundred ares of land, which was withdrawn, and on March 13, 1794, he entered one thousand two hundred acres on military warrant No. 1,792. Surveyed by John O'Bannon, March 29, 1794.

Entry No. 6,298, July 17, 1809. Thomas Bagwell and Agnes Lingo, representatives of Thomas Lingo, deceased, three hundred and nine acres of land on two military warrants, Bagwell, two hundred acres on No. 5,579, and Mrs. Lingo, one hundred and nine acres on part of 5,589. Surveyed by John Galloway, Jr., July 20, 1809.

In addition to these surveys, there are, jutting into the township, small corners of T. Bland's entry, No. 885, Lieut. John Jameson's entry, No. 907, and Capt. William Lindsay's entry No. 963.

Owing to the fact that the early titles were very imperfect on the lands derived by the settlers, the early settlement of this township was greatly retarded. In quite a number of cases the settlers would purchase tracts of land, of varying extent, and, after clearing it and making improvements, would find that the seller had no title. In consequence, they would have to pay for the land a second time, or engage in a useless lawsuit, which would invariably result in a judgment in favor of the new claimant. People were, therefore, afraid to buy, and preferred taking the land direct from the government in regularly surveyed townships.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The honor which is always due the first settler or settlers in a new community can not be definitely placed in the instance of Richland township. Who the first settler of this township was, has long been a matter of doubt and the honor will have to be divided. It is the general belief among the older inhabitants of this township that the first home was established in what is now called the Reed settlement. This was one of the three distinct settlements which was made in this county in the beginning. The Reed settlement was located on the Wimlington and Washington pike; the second was the Upper Prairie settlement, along Anderson's fork, and the third was the Palmer settlement, in the Tench survey.

If we are right in order of settlement, then the honor is due Absalom and Samuel Reed, as they were the founders of the Reed settlement. They emigrated from Bourbon county, Kentucky, with their families, in 1803, and settled on land in the Lindsay survey. At the time when the Reed brothers settled here the celebrated Indian chief, Logan, with his band, is said to have been occupying this land. They were joined by their brother, Cyrus, who had passed through the War of 1812, coming here in 1819. The next year, 1804, saw the second settlements by Thomas Stett, David Reed and Samuel Reed. All of these settlers were of Irish descent and were related, as Mr. Stett had married a sister of the Reeds. All of these settlers took up land, and being sturdy, industrious men, contributed greatly to the early growth of the township. Thomas Hardwick was the next settler, coming to this county in 1805-06. Mr. Hardwick built the first horse-mill in the township. He was a respectable, honest, hardworking frontiersman. Ezekiel Spurgeon settled in Richland township in 1808. Other and later settlers who contributed to the early growth of the township are, Levi Arnold, who came into the township shortly after 1807; William Cue, who took out one hundred acres of land in the Tench survey and settled here in 1810; William Burris, who came to this township previous to 1812; James Gallaher, who settled here in 1810; David Osborn, Richard Thornburg, Richard Mills, Michael Myers and Henry Myers, all of whom settled on Rattlesnake and Wilson branch, north of Sabina, prior to 1813; Joshua White, who was one of the soldiers from New Jersey who helped to put down the insurrection in Pennsylvania; after his discharge, he settled in Pennsylvania and came to this township in 1829; Joseph Roberds settled here in 1818 and located on the Posey survey; Mrs. Catherine Jacks came to this township in 1818, but her husband had settled here in 1810; John Jacks settled here in 1818, but was one of the unfortunate who lost his land through defective titles; Mr. Jacks built a horse-mill in 1825, which was well patronized by the early settlers; Francis Wining came into the township in 1815; Edward ("Ned") Crabb was in this township as early as 1812 and was located in the Posey settlement. We close with this list, as the township was beginning to be pretty well settled by this time and the settlers experienced less difficulty and labor, on account of the drier condition of the ground and the convenience furnished by civilization. One more early settler should well be mentioned, namely, James Gillispie, who built the "Burnt tavern," and, in the fall of 1813-14, sunk a tannery on his farm.

ROADS.

The first road of any kind in the township was a trail, called the "Miami" or "Chillicothe trace," which was a mere path cleared through the forest and is supposed to have been opened by the Indians. It extended from Chillicothe, through Sabina and down Anderson's fork to Oldtown. The Kenton trace is another such road. The Urbana road was the first regularly established highway in the township. Other roads followed soon after and have been worked out in detail in another chapter.

SCHOOLS.

The schools of this township follow along the general lines similar to those of other townships of this county. The log school house was the first seat of learning. There were schools in this township as early as 1814. James Ferguson, an itinerant schoolmaster, was the first regular teacher in this section. He was followed by Bloomingdale Daugherty, in 1815. This school house was in the Biddle survey, about half a mile west of the "Burnt tavern." Another early school was conducted by a man named Pellum, in 1820-21. A subscription school was taught in the eastern part of the township in 1817-18, being conducted first by Thomas Powell, but it was short lived. These log school houses continued until the year 1830, when a definite school system was inaugurated.

EARLY INDUSTRIES.

Among other industries than those previously mentioned, was a distillery built by William Spurgeon, in 1822. It operated for about five years and was then moved to the old "Cherry lot," but it only operated one year in its new quarters. The first brick yard was on ground which is now within the corporation of Sabina. This was started in 1827, by William Lomax, who furnished the brick for many of the first brick houses in the township. The clay for the bricks was tramped out by oxen. The first stationary saw-mill was built by James Spurgeon in 1836. The first steam saw-mill was built by A. C. Mills, in 1851. The first steam grist or flouring-mill was erected by Benjamin and James Jarolds, in Reesville, in 1861.

The following are the officers of Richland township for 1915: Trustees, W. A. Ewing, Peter Yowrell and Clyde Haines; clerk, Frank L. Johnson; treasurer, Herman Gallaher. Population, two thousand six hundred and fifty-six.

SABINA.

The town of Sabina is located in the central eastern part of Richland township. It was platted by Warren Sabin in 1830 and the proprietor named it in his own honor. The land on which the town is situated is a part of survey 766 and was originally entered by P. Neville. The plat of the town was recorded on December 6, 1830, and contained thirty-seven lots, distributed along one main street, Howard, and one cross street, Washington. To the average person of the present time the width of the lots and streets and alleys may appear confusing. The description of the town on the plat book in the recorder's office at Wilmington says that the lots and streets are so many "poles" wide, which, in language of today, means so many rods, a "pole" being equivalent to sixteen and a half feet.

It is hardly necessary to state that the first building within the limits of the present town was a log structure. On the site of the town, Elisha Long built this first rude building many years before anyone thought of laying out a town. Elijah Sabin built the first house in the town after it was laid out, in 1830, although it appears that he was really not the first actual settler. This honor goes to Andrew Love, who was also the first postmaster and tavern keeper, a dual line of activity, which made him the most important man in the infant village. Warren Sabin, the proprietor, and William

McMillan were the first store keepers. For a decade they had all the mercantile business to themselves, but in 1841 they were compelled to share the trade of the community with Jacob Theobold, the third merchant in the village. Isaac Haines was probably the first blacksmith and, as may easily be imagined, he found all he could do.

It is not possible to trace the growth of the town in detail during the eighty-five years since its enterprising proprietor first placed it on the map of Clinton county. With the coming of the railroad, in the fifties, it took on new life, and its natural location in a fine farming section, has insured it a steady growth from year to year since that time. It may not be amiss to note the nature of the business and professional life of the town thirty-five years ago. Speaking of that time, it is recorded that there were "three dry-goods stores, three drug stores, two hardware stores, three clothing stores, nine groceries, one furniture dealer and undertaker, two saddleries, two grain dealers, two butchers, two tailor shops, three shoe shops, two milliners, one baker and confectioner, one wagon-maker, one silversmith, three blacksmiths, two tin shops, two lumber dealers, two mantua makers, two stock dealers, two painters, three plasterers, three brick makers, five brick masons, eleven carpenters, one barber shop, one tile factory, one coal dealer, one newspaper, one real estate agent, two insurance agents, a telegraph and express office, one bank, two ministers, three lawyers, four doctors, two hotels, two milliner shops, a brass band of fifteen members—and three saloons."

In 1881 the town and township together built a large, two-story brick building, with a town hall in the second story and offices for the town and township officials on the first floor. The building also contains the village lock-up and the fire department. The fire department has a one-horse wagon, with ladders and all necessary equipment for a town of this size.

The finances of Sabina and the community are safely trusted to the careful management of the two banks. The First National, with a capitalization of fifty thousand dollars, has C. R. Ellis, president; Lewis Whitnery, cashier; William Snyder, teller, with Grant Martin, Truston Waddle, Oliver Waddle, C. R. Ellis and A. N. Haines, as directors. The Sabina Bank, organized in 1875, has won and held the confidence of the conservative people. E. A. Lewis is president; G. A. Pavey, vice-president, and W. B. Gallaher, cashier. This bank is the home of the Building and Loan Company, a prosperous organization that for twenty-seven years has not foreclosed a mortgage and has been the agency of financial growth.

Two hotels furnish homes for the traveling public as well as the home people, who live at these hostelries. The Haney hotel, near the railroad, is equipped with modern conveniences. Arch Brown is proprietor and B. Q. Brown, manager. The Rapp House needs no description of any kind. It has stood the test of time. For seventy years it has been the mecca for tired and hungry people. Today it is owned and managed by three of the Rapp sisters, the Misses Agatha, Alice and Kate. The Key boarding house is more private in its appointments, yet lays covers for scores daily.

The mercantile establishments are representative of Ohio energy, and the merchants, to a man, endeavor to place honesty above gain. P. J. Curren, proprietor of the Old Home store, has been identified with Sabina's business perhaps as long and as satisfactorily as any of the present merchants. In the dry-goods and ready-to-wear clothes emporiums, E. A. Thornhill's is the longest established, having been here since 1896. In the various departments of this store one will find up-to-date goods rivaling city stores. Rice Brothers, with George Shack, of Columbus, as manager, is a new firm, and the courteous treatment accorded each customer by the salespeople in this busy store is drawing a large and deserved patronage. The Worthmore, with Louis Goodman as manager, is worth more than a half dozen stores run on the usual scale of villages. In Ort's department store, dry-goods, furniture, queensware, groceries and rugs are all disposed of to the satisfaction of the purchasers. The Spot Cash store and the National five-and-ten-cent stores are both enterprising concerns. In the hardware line there are four stores. Hargrave, near the railroad, has a full line of hardware and keeps men busy on the road all the year with the sale and delivery of implements. Smith Brothers, who have taken over the Pavey store, are more centrally located and are in the front rank with displayed goods. They also handle groceries.

Fred Dufau, since 1892, has served the people when they were in need of harness, leather goods and hardware. Recently, with no detriment to his harness interests, he has enlarged his hardware department and is now showing a complete line. Charles Robins & Son have, in connection with their hardware, a tin shop and plumbing office. This industrious firm sells furnaces and has installed many hot air, steam and hot water plants. H. C. Shoop & Company, successors to James B. Tener, have experienced workmen in their harness and saddlery departments. They also handle a line of trunks, suitcases and handbags.

In up-to-date garages, Sabina compares favorably with other towns in southern Ohio. The Auto Inn, E. R. Mills, proprietor, is so conveniently located that autos coming either direction on the state roads run in for a stop, whether or not they need repairs. The business of this garage has so increased that it was necessary to build a new addition to be used for storage exclusively. The Sabina Motor Car Company, Harry Griffith & Sons, proprietors, also handle popular machines.

There are four first-class groceries, with a separate fruit store, owned by James Matthews. E. E. Beck and Ed Perrill handle the trade from the northern end of the town, and Q. C. Martin and the Farmers grocery, each have stores of quality. In the Martin grocery can be found rare and costly china and cut glass. James Rumyan and the Sparks Jewelry Company both handle splendid goods and each guarantees their repair work.

Two liveries lend their assistance, when solicited, to add to the pleasure of the people. James Richards attracts trade, as he holds friends, by his integrity. Frank Reynolds, next to the postoffice, has, in addition to the usual country service, auto livery and is busy seven days out of the week. The Gaskins furniture store, with more than seven thousand square feet of floor space, is the rival of city stores. It is due to the proprietor, Henry Tenellyn, whose upright business dealings have put this store in the front rank.

There are four drug stores, that of John Spurgeon's being, perhaps, the most widely known. G. W. Dunn and Darius Welch have clean, fresh drugs with able pharmacists. The Sabina Drug Company, C. C. Best-Ishman, proprietor, is an up-to-date store. It's the only place of the kind with an ice cream parlor in connection with the fountain and the only drug store in the county not holding an internal revenue license.

Three restaurants cater to the hungry man: Swisshelm, in the Kennedy building; Webb's, with John Tewellyn, as the chef, and the Palace, where Sam Terry cooks and serves meals. Hyer's bakery is sufficient reason for the housewives not baking their bread and cakes. Henry Adams, the poultry man, averages two thousand dozen eggs per day and about three thousand pounds of poultry each week.

George Manmisel and Christ Shoop have meat markets, and W. D. Rapp & Son own and operate two grain elevators. They also have a coal yard. Stephen Thorne is the pioneer elevator man and wool buyer. Sam Moore, with his feed store, and J. I. Stover, with his feed and seed store, handle only the best in their line.

Roy T. Curtis has, in connection with his big coal business, all supplies needed by builders. The two lumber firms also handle coal. The Allen Lumber Company, R. W. Allen, manager, and the lumber yard of Samuel Plymire are two of the substantial organizations of the town.

Hill & Curtis for years has been the firm name of the book store and news-stand. Often have members of the firm changed, the older giving place to the younger, but the firm name and the firm policy remain the same. Johnson Brothers, tailors, have a clientele of which any tailoring establishment might be proud. John R. Chance, the dry-cleaner, is kept busy and his shoe agency is making rapid sales. U. R. Day, E. Ewing, Charles Barnes, Betty Pettiford and Bert Moon, a former Wilmington boy, have sanitary barber shops. J. E. Allmon and George Frity look after the leather repairs. The insurance interests are looked after by John Burris, Gallaher & Dakin and Will Allen. Beautiful homes have been earned by each of the four village smithies and there are no men of higher repute than Messrs. Varo & Mont Dowden, James Maddox and Will Andrews.

Summer amusements are centered in the Airdrome and the Pastime theater. The opera house, a township building, has a seating capacity of eight hundred and is a handsome addition to the town. It was built in 1894, at a cost of thirty thousand dollars, under the regime of John W. Moore, John P. Langdon and John J. Custis.

The town lacks not for the arts. Prof. H. C. Halle, a Sabina boy, who studied under leading English masters in art, conducts classes and gives private lessons in his beautifully appointed studio. During his seventeen years in Canada he received important public commissions; his mayoralty portraits are now hanging in the Kingston municipal building. He gained reputable standing as an ivory miniature painter and taught drawing in the government art schools of Canada. He has passed the Royal College of Music examinations, studying with Dr. James Dickinson. He also sang in St. Michael's cathedral for eight years. Mrs. Leola Brown-Haines has large classes in music, both vocal and instrumental.

While both precincts defeated woman's suffrage, yet the voters take off their hats to their business women. Mrs. Winetta Thorpe-Smith has been very successful as the manager of the telephone exchange. The Miller studio is being managed by Marie Cohn, whose work is pleasing to the people. Four millinery stores, owned and managed by the following ladies speak well for the vanity of their sex: the New Idea, with Mrs. Heasley and Miss Williams, Dunn & Blakley, Rilla Haynes and Betty Henry.

Among the secret orders of the town are the Masons, Eastern Star, Odd Fellows, Rebekahs, Modern Woodmen and the Royal Neighbors. Besides a number of clubs, devoted to the furtherance of social affairs the town has the Thrice-Five Club and the Bay View Club, two literary organizations.

Both Mr. Littleton and Mr. Bottomfield are young men of sterling worth and capable funeral directors. Mr. Littleton has the only motor funeral car in the county. The Sabina cemetery is composed of twenty-five acres of naturally elevated ground and is a beautiful place. Reuben Merriweather, the caretaker, whose ability for years was aided by his work in a green house, is an artist, and the resting place for the dead is a pleasant, pretty spot. There are already four mausoleums, with three more to be erected in the near future. The cemetery board is composed of J. C. Burnett, A. N. Dowden, J. B. Wilson, John McDaniel and John Mathew. The clerk of the board is Howard Barns.

Lewis Lewellyn is the music store man and places pianos in three counties.

The Ideal Pump Company is putting out cistern pumps that are popular and deservedly so. This company also makes a fruit dryer. The Clinton Manufacturing Company, owned by O. A. West, is one of the money-making concerns of the community. The big tile yard, owned by the Darbyshires for a score of years, is situated just north of town and has now passed under the management of Peter Darbyshire, a graduate of the high school, class of 1915. Here drainage tile, ranging from four to ten inches, is made and finds a ready market. Spurgeon Brothers, with their skilled cement work, have done much in the work of improving and beautifying the town.

The Custis Ice Cream factory runs throughout the year, and Clyde Custis, the young proprietor, is an artist in the business of making plain and fancy creams and ices. Daily he ships to Washington C. H., Wilmington, Bowersville and all the nearby towns.

WATER AND LIGHT PLANT.

In 1898 the municipal water and light plant was installed, at a cost of thirty-five thousand dollars. At the time of its inception the present superintendent, O. T. Brown, was at the helm. At divers times changes have been made in the management, but again Mr. Brown is the superintendent. Electric service costs only six cents a watt, as cheap as can be secured in the state. The plant is located in the eastern part of town and three acres of ground is beautifully parked with flowers blooming to gladden the hearts of the many visitors. With a half dozen assistants, the superintendent leaves nothing undone. The service is second to none in the state and the water, which is brought from three drilled wells of one hundred seventy-five feet each, is chemically pure. This paying institution is managed by a board of public affairs, consisting of John Mathew, James Runyan and Charles Custis, with George C. Barns as clerk. The clerk's office is in the city building, and here, again, the superintendent has shown evidence of his beauty-loving nature by surrounding the building with flowers and plants and a well-kept lawn. Here, too, is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union fountain, affording cool refreshment to the warm and thirsty public.

Another of the larger concerns is the Swaim canning factory, owned by Charles W. Swaim, of Wilmington, and managed by Hoy Barlow, who, for the past ten years, has been very successful at the head of the concern. This factory gives employment to one hundred and twenty people from August 10 to September 20, putting in the hands of the laborers about one thousand two hundred dollars per week. The usual output each season is near one million cans of corn, and this year there has been installed another line of machinery, which will enable them to can pork and beans, pumpkins, etc. Not only are the village people proud and pleased with the factory and the opportunity thus given them for labor and its resultant advantages, but the farmers likewise are benefited. With an acreage of six hundred acres, on which the yield runs from twenty-five to forty dollars per acre, the farmer is thus enabled to handle his money three months or more earlier than he would did he wait for the crop to mature.

Sabina has two railroads, the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley.

The News-Record, with James F. Gaskins, editor, and the Sabina Tribune, owned and edited by Howard Barns, are both wide-awake, newsy papers, with moral men behind them.

Occasionally local men receive government appointments. Such was the commission to P. Merrill Griffith as consul to Santiago, Cuba; to M. D. Barns, for district assessor, and recently the commission coming to Prof. W. H. Cole from Governor Willis, appointing him trustee to the Ohio Archaeology and Historical Association, a position his learning qualifies him to fill with honor.

The physical well-being of the community is in the hands of skilled and learned physicians. In the profession are Doctors Craig, Fisher, West, Lightner, Cole and Stuntz. In dentistry there are Drs. W. A. Burnett and J. L. Parrott. Drs. E. C. Langdon and Herbert Armstrong are veterinarians.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

The schools are in excellent condition. A commodious structure, well lighted, modernly heated and ventilated, insures comfort to the three hundred and fifty pupils. Beside the eighth grade teachers, the high school, with ninety-five pupils, is under the care of Professor Hannum, with three instructors and a special teacher in music. The coming year the increase of pupils will necessitate the addition of another room in the high school and one more teacher is to be added to the already efficient corps. Outside pupils' tuition, under Professor Hannum, amounts to one thousand per year.

The spiritual welfare of the people is looked after by representatives of five different denominations, the Friends, with John R. Nelson in charge; First Methodist Episcopal, N. D. Stafford, pastor; Methodist Protestant, Dr. A. L. Reynolds; Church of Christ and African Methodist Episcopal. These churches are all handsome edifices, and each denomination has auxiliaries that are splendidly helping in all good causes.

MUNICIPAL HISTORY.

On August 9, 1873, the corporate limits of the town were extended to meet the growing population. The incorporation of the town dates from 1850, at which time Mr. Morris was appointed as the first mayor. He served about a month and then resigned, being succeeded by Jacob Theobold. Owing to the fact that the early records of the town are missing, it has not been possible to secure a complete list of the mayors of the town, but the following list is practically complete: M. Morris, Jacob Theobold, John Bridwell, Jacob Lair, C. P. Gallaher, David Giffin (died in office, 1881), W. H. Dakin, A. M. Griffith, J. L. Johnson, C. L. Gallaher, Martin Kennedy, A. N. Dowden, Will C. Dakin, A. N. Dowden, George C. Barns and W. H. Dakin, the present incumbent. The town council is now composed of Harry Ort (president), John Butterfield, Yeazle, William Pavey, Kyle Glass and W. H. Barlow. The other town officers are as follow: P. H. Sparks, clerk; Henry Lewellen, treasurer; B. F. Hartley, marshal; Dr. F. G. Lightner, health officer.

REESVILLE.

The town of Reesville, originally known as Cross Roads, was platted by Moses Reese in the summer of 1857, the plat being recorded on July 11 of that year. The town plat originally consisted of twenty acres and "seventeen and seventy-five hundredths poles" of land, divided into twenty-five lots, lying along the railroad, with the Urbana highway running through it as a cross street. The town is located in Richland township, two and a half miles west of Sabina.

A postoffice was established soon after the town was laid out, with J. E. Barr as the first postmaster. Jonathan and Henry Ruckers were the first merchants, having established a store here before the town was laid out, in 1857. Other early merchants were Samuel Reed, Baron Douglass, William Wilson and William Lyons. Christian Rhonemus started a store in 1858 and members of this family were engaged in business in the town for many years. In 1858 Robert McClellan, a tailor, established himself in his trade in the town, but evidently he did not stay long. No other man has ever ventured the establishment of a similar business. Alfred Bloone operated a grist-mill and Alexander Sellars a saw-mill for many years.

The town gradually grew in importance and, according to the census of 1880, was then a flourishing village of one hundred and fifty population. At that time the following enterprises were to be found: Four general stores, a drug-store, two saloons, two blacksmith shops, one shoe shop, postoffice, depot, one church, and one school building. In 1915 the village interests include the following: Heirominus & Son, general merchandise; John Weller, groceries; Auber Jenkins and Charles Kingery, barbers; A. A. George and Arnold Conklin, blacksmiths; Brindle & Ewing, elevator; E. T. Severs and James Crawford, carpenters and contractors; J. A. Hatfield, paperhangers and painters; L. J. Staubus & Sons, plasterers.

The postoffice is in the store of Heironimus & Son, and about seventy families now receive their mail at this office. The village enjoys six mails daily. The Methodist Protestants have the only church, the present pastor being Rev. John Mercer. A fine school building was erected in 1912 and four teachers are now employed. Two vans haul the children in from the surrounding community. The Junior Order of United American Mechanics is the only fraternal order in the village.

Reesville has station stops on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley railroads.

MELVIN.

The village of Melvin is located on the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley railroad, in the extreme western part of Richland township. It has never been platted. It came into existence after the railroad came through the township in 1883. Jacob Baker and Albert Haines opened the first store. Other merchants have been George Howard, Philip Cahill and Daniel Baker. It is essentially a shipping point for farm products, and the two elevators take care of several thousand dollars' worth of grain and live stock annually. There are now three stores in the village, operated by J. W. Channel, F. W. Shrack and E. E. Howard, respectively. J. W. Channel also owns an elevator and deals largely in grain, wire fencing and posts, coal, etc. The firm of Ewing & Custis operate the other elevator and also deal in grain, fencing materials, coal, etc.

The largest industry in the town is the Melvin Tile and Brick Company, which was incorporated in 1909 and started business the same year. The principal stockholders are J. W. Channel, F. J. Pendry, Valentine Kaufman, C. E. Custis, Albert Custis, Gertrude Channel, Alexander Wilson and G. W. Wade. The capital stock of the company is ten thousand dollars and the annual output of the factory averages five thousand dollars. F. J. Pendry is president of the company and J. W. Channel is secretary-treasurer. J. W. and Gertrude Channel own ninety-three per cent. of the stock, C. E. Custis being the next largest stockholder. Walter Channel is the general manager of the factory. Tile comprises most of the output, only a small amount of brick being manufactured. Just as this volume went to press, information is received that the Melvin brick and tile plant was completely destroyed by fire on the night of August 9, 1915. The loss was fourteen thousand dollars, with insurance of only two thousand dollars.

The postmaster is F. W. Shrack, who is also the station agent for the Pennsylvania. Henry Denica is the Baltimore & Ohio agent. The village blacksmith is James Wright, while John Ford is the only carpenter. The population is in the neighborhood of seventy-five.

CHAPTER XXV.

UNION TOWNSHIP.

Union township is bounded on the west by Chester and Adams townships; on the north by Liberty; on the northeast by Wilson; on the east by Richland and Wayne; on the southeast by Green; on the south by Washington, and on the southwest by Vernon.

East from Wilmington to the township line, the land is level, but the southeast portion of the township is somewhat undulating. Following the source of Cowan's creek southwest from Burtonville, the land is rough and broken. Between Cowan's creek and Wilmington, the land is more level, but along Todd's fork, north and west of Wilmington, it is undulating and well-drained. For the most part, the soil of the township is a dark loam, extending to some depth, and is particularly adapted to the culture of grain and grasses. Along Cowan's and Lytle's creeks, the soil is of a mixture of dark and yellow loam and is especially good for wheat. Along Todd's fork the soil is a mixture of loam and clay, and the bottom lands, although small, are very valuable on account of the richness of the soil.

In its primeval state, the portion of the township east of Wilmington was covered with a dense growth of ash, hickory, elm, oak, some maple, beech and other woods. Along Cowan's and Lytle's creeks, the growth of timber was largely of walnut, poplar, ash, elm, oak, beech and sugar tree. The bottoms and hills along Todd's fork were originally covered with oak, walnut, cherry, linn, hickory, ash, sugar, hackberry and buckeye, with a dense undergrowth.

STREAMS.

Todd's fork, Dutch creek, Lytle's creek and Cowan's creek are the main watercourses of Union township, supplying a good drainage system and also good water for stock and other purposes. Lytle's creek flows in a westerly direction and is just south of Wilmington, which is situated on its branches. Cowan's creek resembles Lytle's creek very closely as to soil and timber. Dutch creek is a small stream which empties into Todd's fork in Adams township and which runs across the northwest corner of Union township in a southwesterly direction.

Todd's fork is the largest and principal water course of Union township. Its headwaters are mostly in the eastern and northeastern parts of Union township, although some are still farther north and east. In the early days the grazing along the streams was excellent on account of the thick growth of shrubbery and grasses. The bottoms were covered with spice bushes and pea vines, the former of which the pioneers used for tea and the latter for feed for the cattle and hogs. White clover was also very abundant and proved a great aid to the pioneers as feed for their stock. Todd's fork is the only stream in the township which produces any stone and from this stream it has been quarried for many years. The stone is of good quality and easily obtained and many of the early settlers used it for the rude chimneys on their cabins. It was later used for larger residences and outbuildings and also in the construction of roads.

In 1803 the Legislature passed an act establishing about sixteen or eighteen state roads, but only a few of them had been opened up in 1806. Up to that time, no road had been opened into Union township, but each community had its own paths of travel, made by blazing or marking trees. One of the trails from Todd's fork to Chillicothe crossed that stream near Center meeting house, passed through the woods to Van Meter's and thence to the Scioto valley. The township is now a network of excellent roads and the traveler today would little guess that they were at one time nothing but blazed trails through a dense forest.

PIONEERS.

One of the very earliest pioneers of Clinton county was Timothy Bennett, who came to the Northwest territory in 1800 and, in the middle of March, 1801, settled one and one-half miles east of where Wilmington now stands. He was born in New Jersey, near Philadelphia, on January 27, 1765, and little is known of his early history except that he was reared on a farm. After reaching maturity, he moved to Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, where he was married, in 1789, to Elizabeth Hoblitt, the daughter of Michael Hoblitt, a native of Germany and the ancestors of the Hoblitts of Clinton and Greene counties. In the fall of 1789, Mr. Bennett, in company with his wife's father and family, went down the Ohio river to Limestone, now Maysville, Kentucky. Although the Indians were exceedingly troublesome at that time, the party managed to land in safety. After exploring the country in various directions, they finally located at a point near the present town of Versailles, in Woodford county, and here Mr. Bennett lived for ten years. In the fall of 1790, Mr. Bennett joined the expedition of General Harmar, which rendezvoused at Cincinnati, then a small village, whence they marched north to old Chillicothe. Mr. Bennett was honorably discharged near this point and sent home, having become too lame to travel on account of a cancer on his leg.

In the fall of 1799, Mr. Bennett purchased about two hundred acres of land between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers. The land was represented to him to lie between the Little Miami and Caesar's creek and he thought it to be a part of the country through which he had passed with Harmar about nine years before. Mr. Bennett at once began to make arrangements to settle the new land and, with his family, started from Kentucky in the spring of 1800. His family consisted of his wife and six children, two sons and four daughters. Their only means of transportation was pack-horses and these were provided to carry Mrs. Bennett and the youngest child, Nathaniel, the bedding, wearing apparel, provisions, agricultural tools, cooking utensils and the small children who were unable to walk. The stock was driven behind the pack-horses by the larger children. Mr. Bennett carried a rifle and kept the family supplied with food during the journey.

Upon arriving in the Centerville neighborhood, he found his brother-in-law, Soboston Hoblitt, some of his old friends from New Jersey and some from Kentucky. It appeared, however, that none of these friends could guide him to his newly purchased land, and he was finally directed to a Mr. McFarland, who lived on the Little Miami and who was familiar enough with the lay of the land to serve as his guide. After having found his land, Mr. Bennett returned to the Centerville neighborhood and, in January, 1801, he came with his brother-in-law, John Hoblitt, and his four eldest children, to erect his new home. He then returned for Mrs. Bennett and the other children and the family took up their new abode in the wilderness.

After a most eventful and successful career as a pioneer, Mr. Bennett passed away in 1827, after having made his will in 1823. He is believed to have been twice elected to the office of county commissioner of Clinton county, but ceased to fill this position in 1815.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, twelve children were born, three sons and nine daughters, Michael, Phoebe, Mary, Catharine, Sarah, Nathaniel, Amy, Margaret, Keziah, Eunice, Jemima and Timothy.

George Haworth, another prominent pioneer of Clinton county, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1748, the son of James Haworth, a native of Pennsylvania, and the grandson of George Haworth, who came from Lancashire, England, with William Penn in 1699. George Haworth, the subject of this mention, moved with his parents to near Winchester, Virginia, where they lived on a mountain range called Apple Pie ridge. Here he grew to manhood and married Susannah Dillon. They moved to North Carolina, settling on the Yadkin river near the home of Daniel Boone. Hearing Boone's fine description of Kentucky, Mr. and Mrs. Haworth joined his colony and, on September 25, 1771, left their homes and started from that state. Upon crossing the Alleghanies, the party was attacked by Indians and several of them slain. This so disheartened the remainder of the party that some of them went back about forty miles and settled on Clinch river, but Mr. Haworth and his brother returned to North Carolina, where they remained for twelve years. They then made another attempt to settle in Kentucky, but, finding the Indians still troublesome, they went south into Tennessee and built a new home in what is now Greene county in that state. The family lived here until 1803, when they moved to Ohio and settled on Todd's fork, where Mr. Haworth had purchased seventeen hundred and fifty acres of land. Mr. Haworth is said to have been the second settler in Union township and here he built a grist-mill. Eight of his sons also cleared and opened up farms in this county. George Haworth continued to reside in this county until 1825, when, several of his sons having moved to Illinois, he also sold out and moved to that state, having settled at Quaker Point, near Georgetown, in Vermilion county. Mr. Haworth was a member of the society of Friends and, in the latter years of his life, a minister in this society. About 1807 or 1808, he went on horseback to Baltimore, as a representative from Miami quarterly meeting, to attend the yearly meeting.

Nathan Linton was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, January 17, 1778, the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Harvey) Linton. Samuel Linton, the son of Benjamin and Jane (Cowgal) Linton, was born on December 17, 1741, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he grew to manhood and learned the trade of a weaver. He was married on May 10, 1775, to Elizabeth Harvey, who was born on March 8, 1748, and to them were born six children, Samuel, Nathan, David, Jane and Elizabeth, twins, and James. Nathan Linton visited Ohio in 1801 and, upon returning to Pennsylvania, induced his father to emigrate. The mother and one son, Samuel, having died, the father and the other five children moved to Ohio in 1802, arriving in Waynesville on the last day of May. In 1803 Samuel Linton bought five hundred acres of land on Todd's fork and his two sons, Nathan and David, took charge of this land, while the father remained on the land at Waynesville. In 1805 all of the family moved to the Todd's fork farm.

Nathan Linton was married on January 31, 1806, to Rachel Smith, the daughter of Seth Smith, of Walnut creek, Highland county. The Smith family came from Greene county, Tennessee. To Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Linton were born twelve children, Elizabeth, Abi, Samuel, Seth, David, James, Mary, Nathan, Benjamin, Cyrus, Ruth and Jane.

Nathan Linton began his career as a surveyor in Clinton county in 1803 and did much of the surveying between the Miami and Scioto rivers, also directing the claimants to their lands. At the organization of the county in 1810, he was appointed county surveyor, which position he filled for twenty years, refusing to be re-appointed at the end of that time. He was much interested in fruit growing and sheep raising. Mr. Linton was a member of the Friends church, to which the family had belonged for many generations. His father was a well-educated man and a great admirer of Thomas Jefferson. After a long and useful life, Nathan Linton died at his home in Clinton county on February 11, 1858, in his eighty-first year.

Robert Eachus was born on November 23, 1763, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the son of Robert and Mary (Griffith) Eachus, the former of whom was an inn-keeper. They were the parents of six children, of whom Robert was the fourth. Robert Eachus, Sr., died when his son, Robert, Jr., was a mere lad and the boy was reared by some relatives in the country. He learned the trade of a wagon-maker and worked at this business for many years.

On November 20, 1788, Mr. Eachus was married in Frederick county, Virginia, to Phoebe Thornburgh and, shortly after, they moved to Martinsburg, Berkeley county, Virginia, where he opened a wagon shop. In 1794, Mr. Eachus, with a companion, started west in search of a new location, but in western Pennsylvania they found themselves in the midst of the "Whiskey Insurrection," and, thinking it unsafe to go farther, they returned home. In 1798 Mr. Eachus emigrated to Tennessee and settled in Washington county, where he resided for four years. In 1802 he started for Ohio, arriving at Waynesville on June 1, of that year. He lived at Waynesville but a short time and then moved to Clear creek, in Warren county. In the fall of 1804 he moved to a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which he had purchased in the Center neighborhood. One of the terms of the purchase was that he should build a grist-mill upon the land, which he did and which proved of great benefit to the early settlers. He was elected justice of the peace in Warren county and filled this position until about 1806, when Clinton county was formed and his land was in the new county. However, he was appointed one of the justices of Chester township, Clinton county, and later, on March 28, 1810, he was appointed recorder for the county. In May, 1805, a meeting was held at the home of Mr. Eachus for the purpose of establishing a Friends church in the neighborhood. Accordingly, a house was built of unhewn logs, without floor or dust, and meetings were held there twice a week. This was probably the first house of worship in Clinton county.

Robert Eachus and wife were the parents of four children, three daughters and one son, Mary, Betsy, Julianna and David. Robert Eachus had a birthright in the Friends church, but, on account of his fighting in the Revolutionary War, he was expelled from the church. However, some years before his death, his membership was restored. He died on March 24, 1829.

Mahlon Haworth, the son of George Haworth, was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1775. He made an exploring tour of Ohio in 1800, and, being well pleased with the country, came in 1804 with his family and John and James Wright and their families, from Tennessee to southern Ohio. They stopped at Waynesville, which was then a popular stopping place for emigrants, and, in a very short time, settled on Todd's fork. They arrived late in the fall, but temporary shelters were put up to protect them from the cold until more substantial houses could be erected. Mahlon Haworth and his wife were the parents of eleven children, Rebecca, George D., Ezekiel, Susannah, Mary, Phoebe, Mahlon, John, Elijah, James and Richard. Eight of these children grew to maturity and were valuable citizens in Clinton county.

Mrs. Haworth was a devout member of the Friends church and Mr. Haworth was also possessed of a deep religious feeling. Many official positions were urged upon him, but he never accepted any. He died on March 23, 1850, at his home in Clinton county.

Nathan Hines came to Ohio from North Carolina early in the year 1804 and settled on Dutch creek, where he had purchased land from James Murray. He set to work at once to build a cabin, which was twelve feet square, and into which he moved his family. When Hur Hodgson and his family came to this locality, not having a house built, they lived for several weeks in this small cabin with the Hines family, which shows the warm hospitality of the early settlers.

Stephen Mendenhall, an Englishman, bought one hundred and forty-two acres of land from James Murray on February 4, 1812, for two hundred dollars. He had three brothers, Aaron, Mordecai and Moses.

Isaac Perkins was born on June 30, 1762, and married Phena Leonard, who was born on March 14, 1763. In November, 1802, he started from North Carolina to Ohio with his family and arrived at Waynesville on January 8, 1803, settling in Clinton county on March 4, 1804.

Hur Hodgson was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, May 16, 1767, and came to Clinton county in 1804. He was first married to a sister of Judge Isaac Thornburgh, and later to Achsah Dillon, the daughter of Jesse Dillon. He was the father of ten children, Mary, Isaac, Jesse, Jonathan, John, Elizabeth, Hannah, Ira, Nathan and Joel. He bought one hundred acres of land in 1804 from Miller & Studebaker. Francis Hester accompanied the Hodgson family to this county.

Dr. John E. Greer came to Waynesville in 1822 and remained there until 1837, when he moved to Indiana, where he died. He was married to a Miss Jeffries, sister of Job Jeffries, Sr.

Samuel Vestal was born on October 26, 1796, in Chatham county, North Carolina, the son of John Vestal, who came to the Portsmouth neighborhood in 1799. In the spring of 1803 John Vestal moved to Waynesville and soon afterward settled on Todd's fork, where he died in 1804. Samuel Vestal was married to Edith Ballard on April 3, 1825. She was brought to Ohio by her parents in 1803, when but three months old. John Vestal, the father of Samuel, made his will on July 10, 1804, and to his son he left two hundred acres of land.

Spencer Ballard was born on August 29, 1771, the son of Moorman Ballard, who was born on May 15, 1747, and died on April 27, 1821. On December 7, 1796, Spencer Ballard was married to Rebecca Haworth, the daughter of George Haworth, and to them were born twelve children, Amos, Benajah, Lydia, Edith, Minerva, John, Olive, Jordan, Phoebe, Rebecca, Mary and one who died unnamed.

On November 4, 1804, Joseph Doan came to Clinton county from Chatham county, North Carolina, and purchased two hundred and thirty-eight acres of land. He was born on October 23, 1759, and died on May 28, 1838. He was the father of twelve children, Thomas, John, Ruth, William, Elizabeth, Joseph, Jesse, Jonathan, Jacob, Rachel, Elisha and Mary. This family was accompanied by John Stout and his family, who purchased one hundred and sixty-five acres of land.

Jesse Hughes, Sr., a native of Berkeley county, Virginia, was one of the first associate judges of Clinton county. At an early age, he was brought to Chester county, Pennsylvania, by his parents and, in 1784, came with his uncle to Jefferson county, Kentucky, being seventeen years old at the time. He was one of the colony which made the first settlement on the present site of Louisville, which was then called Hughes Station. Jesse Hughes was a soldier and served under Gen. George Rogers Clark in 1786 against the Indians. He came to Clinton county in March, 1805, and settled two miles southeast of Wilmington. At the organization of Clinton county, in 1810, Mr. Hughes was elected one of the three associate judges and held this office for twenty-eight consecutive years. The first term of court was held in his barn. He was married, in 1790 in Kentucky, to Elizabeth Drake and to them were born nine children, David, Delilah, Jesse, Jr., Catherine, Jemima, Elizabeth, Charles D., Mary and Morgan. After the death of his wife, Elizabeth, Judge Hughes was married again, his second wife surviving him.

Joseph Roberds, generally called "Squire Roberds," was born on Broad river, in Union district, South Carolina, February 4, 1766. He was married, at the age of twenty-two, to Anna Randall, although they were not married according to the rules of the Friends church and, for that reason, were expelled from the church. Mrs. Roberds later joined the Christian church, but Mr. Roberds never joined any other religious body. On account of slavery, Mr. Roberds left South Carolina in 1804 and came to Waynesville, Ohio, where he remained through the summer. In 1805 he settled on Lytle's creek, about three miles below the present site of Wilmington. In the following year, he purchased a small tract of land on Cowan's creek and moved to it. At the organization of Clinton county, he was appointed a justice of the peace of Richland township. He also held the offices of collector of state revenue and county tax, sheriff and county commissioner,

In the fall of 1833, he and his wife moved to Indiana, settling near Jonesboro in Grant county. His wife died in 1850 and he, in July, 1863, in his ninety-eighth year.

Azel Walker was born in Virginia in 1774, the son of Mordecai Walker. He was married in Virginia to Hannah Jackson and to them were born ten children, William, Josiah J., Lewis M., Joseph S., Rachel, Ruth, Elijah, Abel, Betsey Ann and Samuel. The family came to Warren county in 1804 and, leaving his wife and children at Waynesville, Mr. Walker came to Clinton county and erected a cabin, moving the family here in 1805.

Henry Babb came from Frederick county, Virginia, to Ohio in 1806 and settled on two hundred and fifty acres of land which his wife had inherited from her father. He and his wife were the parents of five sons and five daughters, Peter, Thomas, Henry, Azel, Sampson, Mary, Rebecca, Rachel, Hannah and Lydia. Henry Babb was one of the first county commissioners of Clinton county and served in this office two years.

William Venard was born probably in Pennsylvania and, when a child, was taken to Kentucky by his parents. In 1802 he came with his father to Ohio and purchased fifty acres of land. He was one of the first justices of the peace of Richland township. In the War of 1812, he served in Tupper's brigade as a private and was wounded at the siege of Ft. Meigs. He died near Kokomo, Indiana.

Moses Frazier was born on August 4, 1791, in Frederick county, Virginia, and was taken by his parents to Greene county, Tennessee, in the following year. In 1806 the family moved to Clinton county and located in the Dover neighborhood. Moses Frazier was married in 1813 to Lydia Pusey, who died in 1823, leaving five small children. Mr. Frazier was married a second time, in 1825, to Elizabeth Farr, who survived him. He died at his old home on January 17, 1874, and was buried in the burying-ground at Dover.

Jacob Haines, the father of Zimri Haines, was born on February 19, 1778, in Pennsylvania. When a boy, he moved with his parents to Guilford county, North Carolina, and was married there, in 1800, to Mary Leonard. He came to Ohio in 1803, stopping for a short time in Waynesville, and in 1804 located in Union township, Clinton county. He died here on June 17, 1854.

Thomas Rich was born on July 4, 1785, in Virginia. When two years of age, he was taken to North Carolina, where he lived until 1809. In that year, he came to Clinton county and located on Lytle's creek, west of Wilmington.

Hezekiah Hiatt was born on March 23, 1786, in Guilford county, North Carolina. He came to Union township, Clinton county, in 1808 and was married to Ann Perkins, the daughter of Isaac Perkins, in July, 1810.

John Haines came to Ohio from North Carolina in 1808 and his first residence was a cabin on the south side of Dutch creek. Job Haines had a blacksmith shop on the south and west side of the branch, and Joseph Haines had a still-house on Dutch creek. Their father was Joshua Haines, of Pennsylvania. Jacob Haines and his brothers were first cousins of Noah Haines, an early settler of Waynesville. John Haines, who built the first mill at Waynesville, was also a cousin.

Gayer Starbuck was born on the island of Nantucket in 1777, the son of Hezekiah and Mary Starbuck. Hezekiah Starbuck was born on the island of Nantucket on April 10, 1749, and was captain of a whaling vessel for several years. In 1771 he was married and in 1785 moved with his family to Guilford county, North Carolina, where his wife died in 1806. He died in Clinton county in 1830. Gayer Starbuck learned the trade of a blacksmith in North Carolina and followed this trade for many years. In 1799 he was married to Susannah Dillon, the daughter of Jesse Dillon, Sr., and in 1807 they came to Greene county, Ohio. In 1810 they settled on the farm which remained their home the rest of their lives. They were the parents of ten children, five sons and five daughters. She died in 1861 and he in 1866.

Latham Starbuck, a brother of Gayer, came from Tennessee to Union township, Clinton county, in 1811, with his family. He cleared land and built a cabin and later purchased fifty acres in Wilson township, which he traded for one hundred acres in Union township. He lived upon this farm the remainder of his life, dying about 1871.

John McWhorter was born in Wilmington, Delaware, and came from Loudoun county, Virginia, to Ohio in 1809. In the spring of 1810 he came to Union township, Clinton county, and lived in an old school house until he could build a cabin for himself. He died on December 24, 1856.

Joseph Whinery was born on February 27, 1787, in York county, Pennsylvania, and came to Ohio about 1810. In the spring of 1813, he returned to Pennsylvania and, in October of that year, came back to Ohio with his brother, Thomas, and Robert Way, the well-known teacher. They settled in Union township on Dutch creek. He was married in 1814 to Lydia Perkins and to them were born ten children, five sons and five daughters. He moved to Indiana in 1837 and died there on April 24, 1873.

Mordecai Walker, a minister of the Friends church and the father of Azel Walker, heretofore mentioned, bought a tract of one thousand acres north of Wilmington, which he divided among his four children, Lydia, Elizabeth, Azel and William. Mordecai Walker came to Clinton county about 1811 or 1812, although some of his children came in 1805 or 1806. He died in this county about 1833.

Col. Thomas Gaddis was born on December 28, 1744, and came to Clinton county in September, 1814, after having received a deed for three hundred and twenty-five acres of land on April 21, 1810. He came to Ohio with a party, coming down the Ohio river in boats. The first winter the party lived in a cabin belonging to Henry Babb, a relative of Colonel Gaddis. Col. Thomas Gaddis served in the Revolutionary War under General Washington and took great pride in his commission and discharge, which were signed by "the father of his country." Colonel Gaddis was married to Hannah Rice, who died on February 4, 1835, in her eighty-eighth year. He died on June 10, 1834.

In 1802 James Moon and his wife emigrated from North Carolina to Ohio, she stopping temporarily in Waynesville, while he went into the wilderness to select a location. He selected land on Todd's fork, four miles north of the present site of Wilmington. Here he erected a cabin and his wife joined him in 1804. They had no children and both lived to a ripe old age, dying on the old farm.

John Leonard was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, and was married to Lydia Starbuck in 1805. Early in 1806 they started for Ohio and located in Union township, Clinton county, on Todd's fork. They were the parents of fourteen children, thirteen of whom grew to maturity. John Leonard died on December 7, 1870, at the age of eighty-eight, and his wife died on May 30, 1874, at the age of ninety-one.

George McManis came from Kentucky to Ohio in 1807 and settled about three miles southeast of the present site of Wilmington. At the organization of the county in 1810, he was appointed one of the associate judges of the county. One of his sons, John, was at one time auditor and recorder of Clinton county, and another one, George, was at one time associate judge of the county.

The first families to settle in the southeastern part of Union township were the McKenzies and the Spencers. These families came from Kentucky. Although a feud existed between the families, they assisted each other in erecting cabins and clearing land. The Spencer family was of a rather reckless character, but proved to be industrious and valuable citizens. James Spencer served under General Harrison in the Indian war of 1811, carrying provisions for the army.

Isaac Wilson came to Ohio from Kentucky and built his cabin on the north side of Cowan's creek. He was probably the first to settle on that side of the creek south of Wilmington. He was closely followed by John and Charles McGrew, Thomas Wright and others.

About the time of the War of 1812 and soon after, Nathan Stalker, Isaac Stout, Adam Reynard, Caleb, Joshua and Haines Moore located south of Lytle's creek in Union township. J. J. Lacy, John Jacks, John and Samuel Martin, emigrants from Virginia, settled along Cowan's creek and Indian run in the vicinity of Burtonsville.

TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

On August 21, 1813, at a special meeting of the county commissioners of Clinton county, Union township was organized from the three original townships, Vernon, Chester and Richland. It received its name from its formation of the union of these subdivisions. Its boundary was described as follows: "Beginning at an elm in Enos Clevenger's land, marked three hacks and a blaze; thence running east three and one-half miles to a black ash marked for a corner as before, easterly corner of said township; thence north three and one-half miles to a large hickory, corner of the division line between Richland and Green townships; thence same course four and one-half miles to two elms, northerly corner to said township; thence west seven miles to a large beech, westerly corner to said township; thence south eight miles, southerly corner to said township; thence east three and one-half miles to the place of beginning. The first election ordered to be held September 10, 1813."

MILLS.

The first mill in the township, and probably the first in the county, was built on Todd's fork in 1805 by Robert Eachus. This mill has been heretofore mentioned in the short sketch of the life of Robert Eachus. About 1805 or 1806, Mahlon Haworth also built a grist-mill on Todd's fork. This mill was run by both horse and water power. George Haworth built a grist-mill on this stream in an early day, just west of the Xenia pike.

During the War of 1812, a saw- and grist-mill was erected on Lytle's creek by William Butler, one mile from the village of Wilmington. Mr. Butler later sold the mill to David Stratton, who operated it for fifteen or twenty years. The dam was destroyed by high waters and the mill abandoned, later being entirely swept away by the water.

Nathan Stalker built a grist-mill on Lytle's creek in 1815 and later sold his land and mill to Joshua Moore. Mr. Moore operated the mill for many years, when his brother, Haines Moore, purchased the enterprise. He conducted the mill for some time, but the operations ceased many years ago.

Peyton Burton, a well-known millwright, built a number of mills in Clinton county and also remodeled several. He built a steam grist-mill just south of Wilmington and, as there was no mill of this kind in this section of the county, it did an extensive business. He also built a steam grist-mill on Cowan's creek and later built one run by water power at Burtonville. The latter mill was sold to Thomas Custis and afterward was destroyed by fire.

The following are the officers of Vernon township in 1915: Trustees, R. J. Humphreys, Russell A. Sewell and W. F. Hildebrecht; clerk, G. H. Kelley; treasurer, H. W. Baugh. Population, twelve hundred and twenty-six.

CLARKSVILLE.

Clarksville is situated in the western part of Vernon township, on the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley railroad. It was laid out April 27, 1816, by William Hadley, proprietor. The surveying was done by Peyton West. The town, as originally laid out, consisted of forty-four lots, of the usual size, four poles front and eight poles back. Marrow's addition was laid out about 1840. In the year 1858, the boundaries were extended, taking in a quantity of the adjoining land, the survey being made by James Linton. The land thus taken in was divided into lots and numbered as outlots; a plat was made, with streets, etc., of the whole, but the work was irregularly done and the territory thus added cannot be considered as an addition to the town.

The lots composing the original town were dry, with gravel deposit beneath, making excellent natural drainage for cellars, but the land adjoining, almost up to the original town, was not a very inviting locality for settlers at that time. It is situated on the banks of Todd's fork, which winds around through the bottom lands, and the waters, crossing the bottoms during heavy rains, made pools and bayous, which did not give promise of ever being fit for cultivation. Then all these bottoms were covered with timber, with a heavy growth of underbrush and vines. The East fork ran on the south side of the town, but is a more rapid stream and does not leave its channel until it passes the town.

Samuel T. Louden built the first cabin and opened a hotel or tavern. Keeping tavern in early times was hardly the thing it is in the present day. It consisted in furnishing the traveler with the rough and substantial fare common to all settlers—a bed in a loft or in an addition in which to sleep, and last, but not least, with plenty of whiskey to keep up his spirits and to act as an antidote or preventive of malarial poison, so common in new countries. Mr. Louden sold his hotel to Joseph Wysong. John Oxley built the second house in the village in the year 1815. Ephraim Kibby moved to Clarksville in 1817. He was a tanner by trade, and was the first to engage in that business in the village. Kibby bought out the stock of William Smalley, who had a small tannery west of Clarksville. Kibby was a member of the Baptist church, was thrifty and prosperous in his business, and at the time of his death, which occurred in 1876, was well known in Clinton county. John Keenan and Joseph Thompson were among the early settlers of Clarksville.

The first saddler and harness-maker was John Hadley. Hadley made his saddle-trees out of dogwood forks. He, with Eli Hale, opened the second store in the village. Afterward he dealt in the pork trade and dealt largely in cattle. His personal efforts and the general business carried on and planned by him formed a very important part in making the town the prosperous business center it was in the early times. Elisha Kirk was the first hatter. Eli Helmich and Abram Nicholson were among the first blacksmiths. Jacob Longstreth opened the first store in the village. Among the first carpenters were Samuel T. Louden, James Abbott and William Michael. Michael afterward became judge at Lebanon. The first shoemaker was Joseph Wysong. Samuel Hyde was the first cabinet-maker; his shop was an old building which was afterward used as a school house. William Slater carried on the business of cabinet-maker and later was succeeded by J. Thomas, E. Titus and Alfred Cast. John McCarty was the first cooper. The immense pork trade of Clarksville made coopering a very important business in the village, and there were several cooper shops running at the same time and all doing a good business. James Coyle was among the first coopers. William Dogget carried on a cooper business at the corner of Main and Second streets. Isaiah Wilkerson, at a later date, ran a shop near where the Baptist church stood.

John Kelley was probably the first tailor. This was also a very important business in the early times, and tailor shops have been carried on by Harrison Compton, S. H. Wilson, K. S. Kearns and others. A business which has disappeared from smaller towns was hat making. This business was carried on in Clarksville in early times, first by Richard Lackey, afterward by Mr. Black. John Dempsey was also an early hatter. He served in the Mexican War and was constable of Vernon township for many years. He was crippled by palsy and was a peculiar character.

The first wagon-maker was George Harris. Samuel French was an early stone-mason. James Marrow was the first and only distiller. Joseph Wysong was the first postmaster of the village. Jacob Longstreth was the first physician.

Soon after its establishment or laying out, Clarksville was well represented in the trades. Merchants, tanners, tailors, wagon-makers, blacksmiths, carpenters, hatters, harness-makers and coopers were making the village lively and business-like. But at a later day, about the year 1840-44, the town assumed its greatest importance, the pork trade at that time placing it on a flourishing basis. Among the most noted pork packers were: Hale & Cook, who had their slaughter house on the East fork, just above the bridge, on the Goshen pike; John Hadley and James Lindsay. Hogs were driven from all parts of Clinton county, as well as from Highland and Ross counties. The hogs slaughtered in those days were not the improved breeds we have now. In early times they were partly fatted on mast, and they were wild, raw-boned, with snouts so long sometimes that, as expressed by an old settler in describing them, "they could root nine feet in the ground after a poke root, and still see a man over the top." We do know that they were driven ten or twenty miles sometimes, and then had to be caught with dogs or shot at the slaughter pens. The lard from the slaughtered porkers was placed in kegs and, together with the meat just from the salt, was hauled to Cincinnati in wagons. The time taken by a teamster in making a trip was about six days. Regarding the number slaughtered, one of the older residents estimated that as high as forty to fifty thousand hogs would be slaughtered and packed in Clarksville in one season. This brought an immense trade to the town, and stores, hotels and all trades flourished.

Some of the heavy teamsters of the day were William Marrow, William McCray, Charles Urton and, later, Armstrong McCray, Milt Watson, James Villars. These teamsters would take their provisions, horse feed and bedding along, and sleep on the floor of some tavern. It was a rough life, but was relished by the men. The independence of the wild, rough life was by no means unpleasant.

Among the early school teachers in the village were Nancy Tufts, David Eachus and Carter B. Harlan, brother of the late Judge R. B. Harlan. Clarksville had two separate school houses until 1868, when it was made a special district. For a number of years the Friends or Quakers maintained a separate school in a building of their own.

Among the physicians of this early date were Doctors Hampton, Crawford, A. T. Davis and Tribbey. Though in early times diseases, such as malaria, fevers, ague, etc., were more prevalent, it seems that the doctors of the "old school" found their work laborious and their pay scanty and uncertain and had to revert to other forms of occupation for sustenance. Longstreth kept a store, Tribbey was a farmer, and A. T. Davis represented the county in the Legislature.

A number of the early settlers who came to Clarksville and contributed in the building up of the town are Dr. H. W. Baugh, Dr. T. S. Garland, Dr. Z. T. Garland, Dr. E. S. Stevens, Levi Collins, John Thomas, James Starry, who was the first silversmith of Clarksville, S. C. Kelley, James Linton and James Wysong.

Clarksville was incorporated on March 1, 1837. The present officers are: C. L. Hale, mayor; Otto Gharst, clerk; Gus J. Miller, treasurer; Frank Gray, marshal; Benjamin Thompson, Frank Hoover, S. V. Barry, Thomas Gray, Thomas Snook and P. C. Camp, councilmen. The population is four hundred twenty-five.

The worst calamity which Clarksville has had to suffer was a series of fires. The first of these occurred July 9, 1902, the destruction of the opera house, Linton's store, dwelling and implement room entailing a loss of twenty-four thousand dollars. The second fire occurred on October 15, 1909, destroying a dwelling, livery barn and blacksmith shop, at a loss of six thousand dollars. The third came January 12, 1911, when an implement room, dwelling and office were burned, at a loss of eight thousand dollars. On the site of the old opera house, a new one was erected, of concrete blocks, at a cost of eleven thousand dollars. After the first of these fires the council purchased a Waterhouse gasoline fire engine, at a cost of one thousand eight hundred dollars. The pavements of the town are cement and the streets are in good condition. The canning factory of Baugh, Bown & Baugh did seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of business in 1912. The first jail was constructed in 1873 and is still standing, although a new jail was erected in 1880.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

The business interests of Clarksville are as follow: Auto livery, C. L. Hall, A. J. Walker; banker, Farmers' National; barber, Alpheus Bogan; blacksmiths, John Fordyce, Al Smith, Leroy Ellis; canning factor, Baugh, Batten & Baugh, Linton; chiropactor, Glen C. Gray; creamery, French Brothers, Bauer & Company; drug store, C. W. Snook; dry-goods, R. C. Patterson, E. R. Shank & Company; feed and implements, McQuinn Brothers; flour-mill, J. W. Murrell; general stores, G. W. Stephens, L. L. White; garage and blacksmith, G. J. Miller; grocery and restaurant, P. C. Camp; hotels, Eureka, Frank Gray, proprietor; Star, Wysong Sisters, proprietors; Mrs. Moore; implements and buggies, J. T. Gray & Brothers; liveries, Frank Gray, Thomas Smith; lumber yard, A. D. Madden Estate; newspaper, Clarksville Herald; physicians, F. A. Batten, C. W. Snook; restaurants, Kate Penquite, Nellie Norton, Roy Cleaver, R. W. Andrews; veterinaries, Burl Gray, S. J. Rigdon.

Mrs. J. P. Ford is the present postmistress and J. H. Dodd is the railroad agent. Clarksville has an excellent band of twenty pieces, of which J. H. Dodd is the director. The fox-hounds of Clarksville are noted for their cunningness in tracking the sly animals and this afford the citizens of Clarksville great pleasure and a diversion from the hard toils of the day.

There are numerous threshing outfits that work out of this village, among which are A. T. Vandervort, Suttles Brothers, Ed Villars and two company machines; one of these is managed by Albert Pyles, and the other by Frank Bevan. The chief breeders of fancy Jersey cattle in this neighborhood are E. H. Urton, Earl and Myrtle Pyle and Lon Carson. Walter Richardson is a breeder of Shorthorn cattle. George Sabin is the only apiarist in this part of the county. The Oasis fruit farm, managed by George H. Anson, furnishes small fruit to the patrons of this county.

Pansy is the only other town in this township. This little hamlet, which is located in the extreme southern part of the township, has never been platted and has never increased from a rural hamlet.

CHAPTER XXVI.

VERNON TOWNSHIP.

Vernon township is located in the central western portion of Clinton county. It is bounded on the north by Adams township, on the east by Washington, on the south by Marion township and on the west by Warren county. It is one of the three original townships of which Clinton county was composed at the time of its organization in 1810. At that time it included also Marion and parts of Adams, Washington, Clark, Union and Jefferson townships. Todd's fork, a tributary of the Little Miami river, Cowan's creek, East fork of Todd's fork and Sewell's run, tributaries of Todd's fork, flow through the township, coming together, or nearly so, in the western part, near the town of Clarksville.

FORMATION OF THE TOWNSHIP.

The boundaries of Vernon township, as first organized, included all the territory south of Lytle's creek and south of a line from the mouth of Lytle's creek to the Warren county line, and extending east to the old Warren county line in the line of Richland township. The township was organized in 1810. The records of the township from its organization to 1826 are lost or have been destroyed and only the most meager details can be gleaned from scattered sources.

The commissioners' record show order No. 7, to Elisha Cast, July 18, 1810, for the amount of fourteen dollars and a half, "for sitting as judge of election, delivering poll books and for assessing the township and making returns of the assessment." David Sewell was chosen as the first justice of the peace. On October 17, 1810, Daniel Ball received an order for three dollars and seventy-five cents for five wolf scalps six months old. These records would seem to show that the first township officials were: Elisha Cast, John Sewell and Benjamin Smalley, trustees, and Aaron Sewell, clerk.

From the year 1826, the records as regards township officers and receipts and expenditures have been well preserved. The following is the clerk's statement for 1825, in full:

"Statement of receipts and expenditures of Vernon township from the 9th day of March, 1826, to the 8th day of March, 1827, inclusive:

"RECEIPTS.

"Received of J. Biggs as security for T. Foreman	$ 3.55
"Received of J. Harris, Esq., fines by him collected	16.97½
"Received of A. Tribbey, Esq., the amount of a note on J. Cox	7.68¾
"Received of same on judgment of S. Brown	18.46
"Received of same on judgment on R. Stansbury	20.87½
"Total	$67.54¾

"EXPENDITURES.

"John Villars, Supervisor, for services	$ 2.81¼
"W. Austin and E. Cast, Overseers of the Poor	1.50
"D. Wright, Supervisor, for his services	1.12½
"J. Baldwin, Supervisor, for his services	3.00
"W. Elzey, Supervisor, for his services	2.62½
"J. H. Marshall, Constable, for serving pauper's warrant	.55
"J. Lawrence, for services as Trustee and Supervisor	3.00
"J. Tribbey, for services as Trustee and Supervisor	3.75

"U. Biggs, Clerk, for services	6.96½
"Same for blank book for Clerk's office	1.50
"L. Elzey, Supervisor, for his services	2.25
"J. Dalby and J. Conklin, late Overseers of the Poor	2.00
"J. Garrison, late Constable, for summoning township officers	3.50
"J. Biggs, for a room to hold township meetings in	2.00
"John Lytle, late Trustee, for services	.75
"Total	$37.32¾"

At this time Vernon township included Adams, Clark (or the greater part of what is now Clark), Jefferson and Marion townships, also part of present Washington township, and enumerated two hundred and eighty-three householders for school purposes.

The following are the summaries of the statements between the years 1829 and 1836, inclusive:

Year.	Receipts.	Expenditures.
1829	$ 50.71	$49.93
1831	36.57	33.61
1833	90.921	35.37
1834	90.873	47.13
1836	122.879	98.064

From the year 1836 to 1862 the records are again missing. In the later year the following were the township officials: William Carson, J. W. Warner and W. B. Smith, trustees; W. H. Gardner, clerk; J. W. Compton, assessor; Albert Parker, treasurer, and John Dempsey, constable.

It was not until 1872 that the township began to take on anything like its present proportions. On April 1, of that year, the funds on hand were, cemetery fund, $84.81; abandoned grave yard fund, $107.97; poor funds, $426.27; township funds, $324.94; road fund, $186.83; total, $1,130.82. The entire number of votes polled on that date was two hundred and eighty-six.

At the annual election held April 5, 1875, the question of a special tax levy for a township house was submitted to the voters of the township, with the following result: Yes, one hundred and sixty-two votes; No, one hundred and eleven votes. A special tax of two thousand dollars was levied and a neat and substantial building was erected for township purposes.

THE PIONEERS.

David Sewell was the first settler of Vernon township. He became the owner of the of Archibald Campbell's survey, No. 2250, early in the year 1798, on the East fork of Todd's fork, in what is now Clinton county, but was then known as Hamilton county, Northwest territory. He made arrangements to move upon it with his sons, John and Aaron, and his daughter and son-in-law, Hannah and Peter Burr. In 1798, in company with Isaac Tullis, Mary Hendricks and some of the Cowans, the Sewell family came by way of Pittsburgh in wagons and flatboats to the present site of Columbus. From that point they went to Bedell's station in the present Warren county. It is probable that they found their land soon after. The Sewells came in wagons, cutting their way through the heavy virgin forest, and the trail they left is still known as the "Sewell trace," crossing Todd's fork near the town of Rochester and passing near where the old Nauvoo school house stood. At this time their were no nearer neighbors than Lebanon, fourteen miles away.

James McGee, in company with his brother-in-law, John McGregor, came to this township in 1803, and settled. They came from Loudoun county, Virginia. Jonathan Lawrence came in the year 1806. From North Carolina came Thomas Austin in 1809. James Harris emigrated from Loudoun county, Virginia, in 1809, and settled near the present village of Clarksville. William Hadley came in 1810, from North Carolina, and settled on what was later known as the M. P. Marshall farm. William Austin came in 1811 and settled near the Mt. Pleasant church. James Villars settled in Vernon township in 1813. Josiah Biggs, Lemuel, John and Parson Garrison, David Ferris, Samuel Stabler, Dr. Asahel Tribbey, Ephraim Smith, James Marshall, Ezekiel Cast and Thomas Harden were all among the early settlers and pioneers of Vernon township.

SCHOOLS.

In those early days, when the country was so sparsely settled, there were no public schools, but the people supported by subscriptions and work such schools as they could afford. The first school house in this township was a log cabin built about 1812, and the teacher was Levi Garretson. The first division of the township into school districts was in August, 1826, by the trustees of the township. The districts were immense in size. Some of the early teachers were Robert Eachus, Nugent Ward, Caleb Smith, A. R. Sewell, George Athey, Noah Newland and others.

ROADS.

The first roads of the new settlements were mere trails blazed through the great forest. Then the corduroy road, or causeway of logs, was considered a great improvement The log system of roadmaking, in regions where the soil was wet and timber abundant on the spot, and only costing the cutting, was a very effective means of making the old trails passable. No doubt travel over some of those old log roads must, at times, have been more serious than amusing. The logs were usually of unequal sizes and transit over such a surface in a wagon without springs must have been far from comfortable. The first road laid out in the township was what was known as the College township road. The Sewell settlement and Morgan Van Meter's house, at what is now known as Snow Hill, were the most important points on it. It is hard to recognize these old roads now from the field notes given, they have been changed so often. The Columbus & Cincinnati state road crossed the township from east to southwest. A road that passed by Villar's chapel and on toward Blanchester was laid out at a very early date. The road from Lawrence's to Clarksville was laid out in 1836.

The first pike through the township was the Goshen & Wilmington turnpike. It was built of broken stone in about 1840, by a company, and was kept up as a toll pike until about 1880, when the commissioners of Clinton county bought it and improved it. About 1870 the College township road, from Cuba to Clarksville, was piked. The road-bed was made twenty feet at the top, thirty-four feet at the base, and two feet high from the bottom of side drains. The road-bed was covered with gravel twelve feet wide and sixteen and one-fourth inches deep. About the year 1876, the road from Villar's chapel, through Blanchester to the Brown county line, was piked in the same manner. In 1880 the Goshen & Wilmington pike was purchased by the county commissioners and improved, making it a free pike. About the same year the road from the Goshen & Wilmington pike near Clarksville to the Warren county line, in the direction of Harveysburg, was piked.

The following are the officers of Union township in 1915: Trustees, Arthur Leonard, Robert White and C. R. Van Tress; clerk, A. W. Doan; treasurer, C. L. Haworth. Population, including Wilmington, six thousand two hundred and fifteen; outside of Wilmington, seventeen hundred and twenty-four.

The history of the towns of Union township will not require many words, as the history of Wilmington will be taken up in a separate chapter. There are three small hamlets marked on the county map. These are Deserted Camp, which has been taken up in detail in another chapter; Burtonville, which is situated on the Wilmington and Martinsville pike, and Clinton, which is a flag stop on the Midland division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. None of these villages was ever platted and at present they have no business or professional interests. Little Center is the location of a Friends church.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP.

The location of Washington township is very central, it being one of the two townships in the county that do not border on the county line. It is bounded on the north by Union, on the east by Green, on the south by Clark and Jefferson, and on the west by Marion and Vernon townships. Cowan's creek and Silver creek, which, with their tributaries, drain the northern and central parts of the township, and the East fork of Todd's fork, which flows through the south part of the township, are the principal streams. The township presents a plain of gently undulating land. The capacity of the soil equals that of any part of the county in productiveness.

EARLY SETTLERS.

In its session of 1802-03, the state Legislature provided for the opening of a state road leading from Chillicothe by way of Morgantown to College township in Butler county. This highway passed through Washington township and became the route by which the early settlers of this township were led to their home in the forest. Isaac Wilson, who came from Virginia and settled on the survey of Colonel Carrington in about the year 1803, was perhaps the first person to settle within the present bounds of Washington township. In 1805 came Thomas Thatcher, who located on a large tract of land in Capt. John Steele's survey No. 1458, on the banks of Silver creek. Thatcher was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1769. He came to this state with a four-horse team and the typical Virginia wagon, following the usual route through Pennsylvania, and encountering the delays, annoyances and vexations common to all of the early emigrants. He died in 1867, at the ripe old age ninety-eight years.

On his arrival on Silver creek, Thatcher found Joseph Roberts, John Jack, Samuel Ruble, John Wright and Edward Powers, they having arrived a short time before. Very little is known of these men or where they came from. About the year 1807, Col. Samuel Martin, together with his son, emigrated to this township from western Pennsylvania and settled in survey No. 996. After some time, he found that the title to his land was worthless and he and his son resumed their westward journey. Tradition tells us that he was one of the leading figures in the "Whiskey Insurrection" that occurred in western Pennsylania during Washington's administration as President.

Peter Tomlin, another pioneer of what is now known as Washington township, was born in Culpeper, Virginia, in 1776. He moved to Fredericksburg, Virginia, in 1802, and from thence, in 1808, to Clinton county, Ohio, settling on Captain Steele's survey No. 1458, where he reared a family of seventeen children. He was a man of great prominence in the affairs of the township and county and served as a captain in the War of 1812. He died in 1857, at the age of eighty-one, and was buried in what is known as the Lieurance cemetery, near his old home.

In 1806, Adon Clevenger came to this township and settled at Cross Roads, or what is today known as Cuba. He was born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1773, from whence he emigrated in 1804 to Waynesville, Warren county, Ohio. He opened and ran the first blacksmith's shop in the present town of Cuba. He plied his trade there for a couple of years, when he moved to Wilmington, and from there back to Cowan's creek, where he bought a small farm in Colonel Ridley's survey No. 2028, where he lived until his death, in 1853.

Very little is known of the early life of Peter Lieurance, who came to this county in 1806 and settled on Steele's survey No. 1458. He was born in Ashe county, North Carolina, in 1759, moved from North Carolina, in about the year 1800, to east Tennessee, where he resided a few years, and then removed to Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio. He was an enthusiastic member of the Baptist church and, as there was no church in the neighborhood at this time, meetings were held at his house until 1819, when he donated a lot for a church and cemetery, upon which a log church was erected and the first permanent organization of Baptists in Washington township was effected. He continued on the farm which he had cleared until about the year 1840, when, at the age of eighty-one, he sold this farm and removed to the then new prairies of Warren county, Illinois, where he lived until 1863, dying at the remarkable age of one hundred and four years. The eldest son of Peter Lieurance was Elijah, who was born in Ashe county, North Carolina, and removed with his father to Ohio in 1806 He served in the War of 1812, returning afterwards to his home and residing in the township in 1836, when he removed to Warren county, Illinois.

David Hays, who came to Washington township in 1845, was born near the city of Wilmington, in the state of Delaware, in the year 1766. It was during the days of his boyhood and about his home that the war for American independence was waged. In 1800 he moved to Frederick county, Virginia, where he married Mary Horsman in 1805. In the same year he removed to Harrison county, Ohio, where he resided until he moved to Washington township and settled in John Steele's survey No. 1458, where he resided until his death, in 1844.

David, Asa, Elisha and James Brown were the names of four brother pioneers of Washington township, who were born in Massachusetts during the days of the Revolutionary War, at the close of which they emigrated with their father to Owen county, Kentucky, where they grew to manhood. Between the years 1807 to 1810, they all removed from Kentucky to within the present confines of Washington township. They purchased land in the surveys of Steele, Carrington and Johnson.

David Clevenger was born in Frederick county, Virginia, about the year 1785, and moved to Ohio in 1808, settling in Dix survey No. 619. Several years later he moved farther west.

Jesse Graham came to this township in 1807 and bought and cleared a tract of land in Steuben's survey.

John Mitchell came in 1807; William Johns, William Baker, William R. Moon, William Biggs and William Biggs, Jr., in 1808; Robert Athey, about the year 1813; Martin and Jacob Roop, about the year 1815; John Matson, in 1817; Thomas Woodmansee, 1813; George Byard, 1816; John Crouse, 1817; Oliver Whitaker, 1805; John Buck, 1807; James Wilson, about 1810; Thomas Johns, 1808; Thomas Pennington, 1813; H. M. Greeen, 1835; Jacob Mann, 1818; Joshua Lazenby, 1817; Henry Cowgill, about 1812. Others that should be mentioned are Daniel and Jacob Beales, Thomas and Israel Johns, Ebenezer Christopher and John Brown, William Mabury, James Haworth, Charles McGrue, John Jack, John Dale, Samuel Ruble, Thomas Ludington, George Shannon, Amos Hankins, Empson Wright and Walter Starkey.

FORMATION OF THE TOWNSHIP.

Washington township was formed by order of the commissioners of Clinton county, at their regular session, in June, 1835, on a petition containing the following description:

"Beginning in the line of Union township, one mile west of the northwest line of Clark township; thence southward to Marion township, where the township line crosses the road leading from David Wright's to Blanchester, and continuing same course one mile into Marion township; thence eastward to intersect the line one mile south of the northeast corner of said township; thence across Clark township so as to include Samuel Batson; thence to the road leading from Cuba to Martinsville, eighty poles to the north of Robert Green's house; thence to where the Wilmington and Hillsboro road crosses the College township road; thence with the south side of said College township road to the northeast corner of Clark township; thence westward with the line of Union and Clark townships to the beginning, containing twenty-four and one-third square miles of land."

MILLS.

James Wilson built the first mill within the present bounds of Washington township on the banks of Cowan's creek. As nearly as can be ascertained, this mill was built about the year 1810. It stood a few rods above the road leading from Wilmington to Cuba. In the parlance of the times and neighborhood, it was called a "corn-cracker." A few years later a distillery was also added and the plant was operated by Mr. Wilson as both mill and distillery until about 1826 or 1827. Thomas Thatcher built a saw-mill on the banks of Silver creek about the year 1818, which he operated for about twenty years, when it fell into decay. About the time of its discontinuance, perhaps 1840, James Carman erected a saw-mill on Cowan's creek in survey No. 2029. This mill had a corn-cracker attached and was operated for many years. The mill was sold a few years later to Abel Biggs. It became so badly damaged by freshets that Mr. Biggs rebuilt it in 1853, and operated it for six or seven years, when it was so completely damaged by high waters that it was abandoned and allowed to fall into decay. The first steam-mill in the township was built by William B. Biggs in Cuba in about the year 1852. It also had a corn-cracker attachment, and was run for several years, burning down in about 1860. In 1853 or 1854, William R. Moon and John Mann built a saw- and grist-mill about one-half mile from Cuba, on the Martinsville road, which was operated successfully for several years. It was finally removed by Mr. Moon and sons to Cuba, where it became a first-class mill in every respect.

SCHOOLS.

The first school teachers of which we have any account were E. Hamilton, James Trimble, Benjamin Hunter, James Hamilton, Thomas Wilson, Robert Grant, John McKibben, George E. Honeycutt, Azariah Brown, Henry Lazenby and Elijah Hays. Of course the only schools these men taught were subscription schools.

Among the first regular physicians of the township may be mentioned Doctors Levacy, Smith, Miller, Bennett, Prewett, Moon and Briggs.

The following are the officers of Washington township in 1915: Trustees, Barney Osborn, J. W. B. Crouse and L. M. Moon; clerk, A. M. West; treasurer, D. F. Brown. Population, one thousand and four.

CUBA.

Cuba was the first town laid out in Washington township and, perhaps, the second in the county. It was first called Paris. This village was laid out and platted by Jonas Seaman and James Archer on September 9, 1814. It was part of the James Blackwell survey No. 1,457. The original, as well as the present, number of lots was one hundred.

The first hotel was kept by Mr. Armstrong, who opened a house of entertainment here in 1805 or 1806. It was at that time known as the Cross Roads, being the point where the trace or trail from the south crossed the College township road. This road was located and opened a few years prior, by an act of the Legislature of 1802-3, authorizing the laying out of various state roads, among which was the College township road, leading from Chillicothe, by way of Morgantown, to the College township line, now in Butler county. This road soon became quite a thoroughfare and the emigrant's wagon was constantly in sight; hence the necessity for houses of entertainment. Armstrong entertained the traveling public for a number of years and then retired. He was succeeded by Jonas Seaman, who remained in the hotel until the close of the War of 1812. Seaman was succeeded by J. J. Lacey, who occupied the premises for a short time and then gave way to Matthew Callaway, who acted as innkeeper for many years, being succeeded by Col. J. Ward Jones. This was about the year 1826.

Since that time the innkeepers of Cuba have been numerous and varied. This was a very profitable business until the opening of the railroad, causing the overland travel to give way to the more rapid transit by rail.

The Midland division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad passes through this village, and it was through the united efforts of Cuba, coupled with those of Wilmington and Sabina, that brought this road through Clinton county. This village donated her share for the building of this road and too much praise cannot be given her. Since the opening of this line, Cuba has taken on a new aspect and is at present a very busy little town. The town has three general merchandise stores, owned by the following: H. D. Pennington, J. M. Uible and D. F. Brown. W. R. Hughes & Son keep the blacksmith shop. The flour-mill is owned and operated by C. W. Burton. H. R. Vance is the agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and J. M. Uible is the postmaster. The population is approximately one hundred. The town is unincorporated and the limits are hard to define for estimating the population.

MORRISVILLE.

Morrisville is the second town in Washington township, both as to age and size. It was laid out and surveyed by Nathan Linton on June 16, 1840, on Isaac Morris's survey No. 1,367, and was named in honor of Mr. Morris, who owned a large tract of land adjoining it. It is situated four miles east of Cuba, in a very fine farming district and consists of but a few lots. It has one country store, owned by Robert Green; William Hall keeps a blacksmith shop. The population at present is sixty-two.

Macedonia is the only other town in this township. It was never platted and at present is nothing more than a crossroads, with a few houses.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP.

Prior to 1837 Wayne township had been a part of Green and Richland townships. In that year this township was formally established by an act of the county commissioners. Wayne township is situated in the southeastern part of Clinton county and is bounded on the north by Richland township, on the west by Green township, on the south by Highland county and on the east by Fayette county. It is located in one of the most fertile districts of Ohio and the early settlers found this a very desirable place to settle. This township has an elevation of about one thousand two hundred feet above the level of the sea and, although the topography is marked, it is comparatively level. It was known for a number of years as "the flats," but, by judicious drainage, it has become one of the most healthful and desirable parts of the county. It is very well watered and drained by several small streams and tributaries.

This township contains nineteen thousand eight hundred and thirty-four acres of land and at present the acreage of tillable land is very great. The soil is composed of natural drift and alluvial formation, having been covered, as it was, for centuries with a dense forest, which, through the decay of so much plant and animal life, has left the soil very rich. This has been increased through the efforts of the farmers, making its soil doubly rich. This township received its name from Gen. Anthony Wayne, who led an expedition through this township prior to 1794. In his march through this section of the state, he cut a trail which was used by the pioneers for many years.

As Wayne township was not made a separate township until 1837, many settlers, and, in fact, all of the early settlers, were located here before the township was organized. Among the first to make permanent settlements in this part were William Moore, who came to this township from Bourbon county, Kentucky, and settled about the year 1806. Among the pioneers who had settled here prior to 1810 were, John Jackson, from Tennessee; Edward Curtis, from Virginia; Joseph Rooks, Thomas Stell, John Oxley, Moses Paris, Stephen Martin, Thomas Draper, John Allen and Jesse Boxley. From 1810 to 1820 the settlers came in great numbers from Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Another rather reliable source gives the first settler as John Jackson, who has been mentioned previously. Mr. Jackson, it seems, came to this county in 1803 and settled on the Middle branch of Lee's creek, on one of the Ransdale surveys, No. 1,027. At the date of Mr. Jackson's settlement there were only about ten families within the boundaries of what is now Clinton county.

John Bowater Bales, better known to the early settlers as Borter Bales, settled on the West branch of Lee's creek. Mr. Bales built a mill where the road from New Lexington to Leesburg crosses the West branch. John Walters, uncle to John Walters, who settled on Todd's fork, and Nathaniel Pope were located near Leesburg at this time. Evan Evans and James Smith were also early settlers on Lee's creek.

Edward Curtis settled in the year 1805 on the north bank of Lee's creek. Mr. Curtis reared a large family and contributed to the early growth of the township. John Allen came in 1807, as did David Carter and Thomas Draper.

Benjamin Logan was probably the next settler in this township, and located on the East branch of Lee's creek. Mr. Logan came from Tennessee, bringing Mike Fry, the rail-splitter, with him; this, however, was not the same Mike Fry who came with Thomas Dailey and Woolards in 1819.

Thomas Adams was one of the settlers known as a "squatter"; that is, one who enters upon land belonging to another, without any title. Mr. Adams settled on the Gallatin survey, but the date has not been definitely fixed.

John Lyon, Sr., and Richard Lyon were also among the early settlers. Others who settled about this time were, Robert Antrim and family, David Carter, Edward Curtis, Jr., William Elliott and wife, Thomas Hardwick, Joseph Grice, David Stokesbury, the Thrailkill family, James Sinclair and family. This completes the early settlements in this township, all of which were made before the township really existed.

The following are the officers of Wayne township in 1915: Trustees, Frank Dabe, George Wilson and Joseph Winfield; clerk, Roy Grove; treasurer, David Babb. Population, one thousand and fifty-two.

CENTERVILLE.

Centerville was laid out on December 4, 1816. The proprietor of the town was Timothy Jones, who emigrated to this county from the state of Virginia. The principal street, Main, was laid off fifty-four poles long and four poles wide, and its parallel alleys are fifty-four poles long and one pole wide. Middle street is fifty-four poles long and three poles wide. The parallel alleys are the same length and one pole wide. Main street runs north forty-five degrees west, and Middle street runs at right angles to Main street. There were thirty-two lots in the original plat. These are laid out six poles in front and run back twelve poles. A stone is placed at the southeast corner of lot No. 2, and at the southwest corner of lot No. 16. Centerville is the voting precinct of Wayne township. This is the largest town in the township and, situated, as it is, in the center of a good farming community, it has an extensive trade.

When the postoffice was placed here it was given the name of Lee's Creek. Babb Brothers have a very modern and up-to-date general merchandise store. They reach the country patrons through three huckster trucks which have daily routes to different parts of the county. Oscar Jones is the postmaster and also keeps a general merchandise store. The saw and grist-mill is owned and operated by W. D. Jerrells. Fred Webb is the village blacksmith and C. I. Pidgeon is the restaurant keeper. The village is supplied by one physician, C. A. Shaeffer. The population, according to the last census, was one hundred and thirty. Centerville, although not on a railroad, is supplied with a postoffice, and receives a closed mail pouch daily from Sabina.

Centerville has a first-grade high school, which was erected at a cost of twenty thousand dollars. This town, as the name indicates, is located in the center of the township. While it has suffered from the lack of a railroad through it, it is still a thriving village.

Memphis is the only other town in the township. This hamlet is situated in the eastern part of the township and is merely a cluster of houses at a cross roads.

CHAPTER XXIX.

WILSON TOWNSHIP.

The first person to settle within the bounds of what is at present known as Wilson township was Amos Wilson, in honor of whom the township was named. Wilson was born in New Jersey, April 7, 1770, and moved with his parents to Kentucky in 1784, where he lived for seven years. He married Ann Mills on June 22, 1791. In 1795 he moved to Ohio, settling in Warren county near Waynesville, where he lived for over a year. In 1796 or 1797 he purchased two hundred acres of land from Joshua Carmen, located in Taylor's survey No. 736. Tracing his way with a pocket compass, he settled by mistake on R. Eggleston's survey No. 886. He spent almost a year improving this location, before he discovered his mistake and again made a mistake, moving onto what proved later to be Lindsey's survey No. 732. He first arrived in the township in 1799. He remained at the last-mentioned place until 1802 before finding out that he was again improving another's property, and not his own. In that year, Joshua Carmen came from Kentucky to look after the survey of land that he owned, bringing with him Mr. Wilson's brother-in-law, James Mills. On being told that he was not on his own land, he became so discouraged at the prospect of receiving no benefit from his years of labor that he made known his intention to return to the older settlements. Mr. Carmen persuaded him to give up this idea, and, as a part compensation for his repeated failures, made him a present of fifty acres adjoining his original purchase on the west. In the year 1807 his wife died; he was married during the same year to his second wife, Rachael James, with whom he lived until her death, in 1818. His third wife was Mary Coulter, widow of William Coulter. In 1827 he built the first brick house in this part of the country. In 1839 he became dissatisfied with his surroundings, sold his farm and moved to Delaware county, Indiana. In the same year his third wife died. In 1843 he married Eliza Dowden. Again becoming dissatisfied with his surroundings, he returned to Ohio in 1843 and bought his old home, where he remained until 1854, when he again removed to Delaware county, Indiana, where he died on October 27 of that year, in his eighty-fourth year.

PIONEERS.

In 1806 John Coulter bought land of Jacob Piatt, who owned Walker's survey No. 743, and began its improvement. Coulter was born in the county of Antrim, Ireland, July 18, 1777. He emigrated to America, landing in New York, where he remained for a short time, coming from thence to Cincinnati, Ohio. He leased a part of his purchase in what was later Wilson township, to Oliver Simpson for a term of three years, and came out immediately and began improvements near the place of the present family residence. Mr. Coulter, on June 11, 1807, married Margaret Gibson, a native of the county of Fermanagh, Ireland. In December, 1809, they moved to their new home, where they passed the remainder of their long, active and useful lives. They brought up a family of twelve children. Mr. Coulter died in 1857, aged nearly eighty years.

Another pioneer of this township was Ramoth Hankins, who came from Pennsylvania in 1809, on a prospecting tour and liked the appearance of the country so well that he bought one hundred acres of land in Walker's survey No. 743, and built a cabin on it in the same year. He returned to Pennsylvania, spent the following winter, and in the spring of 1810 he moved with his family, consisting of a wife and two children, to his Ohio home, reaching his destination on May 7.

Absalom and Cyrus Reed, brothers, came from Kentucky in 1810 and settled on Lindsay's survey No. 732. They were extensively engaged in stock-raising, being among the first to introduce improved breeds of cattle. John Watson, a native of Ireland, moved to this township in 1809. In 1810, William Fannon moved to the neighborhood and bought two hundred acres of land in Taylor's survey No. 736.

John Peelle, son of Reuben and Rhoda Peelle, was born in Wayne county, North Carolina, June 2, 1781. He remained with his parents until his twenty-fourth year, when he moved to Grayson county, Virginia, where he remained for one year. He then took a long trip through the then unknown "far West," traveling through Ohio and into the territory of Indiana as far as the site of the present city of Richmond. He returned to his parental home in North Carolina, but, becoming dissatisfied, again turned his face toward the west. Pausing on his way in Belmont county, Ohio, he fell victim to the wiles of the little god of love and married Lydia Bundy, according to the ceremony of the Society of Friends, of which they were both members. Soon after their marriage they moved to Fall Creek, where they lived until 1811, in which year they moved and settled near the place at present occupied by the village of Bowerville, Greene county. They remained at this place two years, moving, on March 1, 1813, to the northwest side of Call's survey No. 887, building a cabin and making other improvements. While living on Call's survey, he made his first purchase of land in Ohio, buying fifty acres in Draffin's survey No. 830. At first he had no intention of making his home on that survey, but secured the land for the purpose of making sugar from the fine grove of maples growing there. Having bought more land joining his "sugar orchard," he concluded to make that his home, which he did in 1820.

William Gallemore was born on November 5, 1776, in Guilford county, North Carolina, where he remained until his marriage, in 1801, to Mary Stanley. The young couple left North Carolina and went to Grayson county, Virginia, where they resided for about nine years. They then emigrated westward, making their home in Highland county, Ohio, for three years. Leaving Highland county, they went to Greene county, from which they moved, in 1815, to Clinton county, settling on Graffin's survey No. 830, where they passed the remainder of their lives, bringing up a family of ten children, five boys and five girls, all of whom reached maturity and married.

The other pioneers of the township, with the dates of their settlement, are: Col. Thomas Hinkson, 1807; Benjamin Bentley, about 1812; Mark and Isaac Pearson, 1815; Thomas Greer, Peter Jasper and Thomas Babb.

FORMATION OF THE TOWNSHIP.

An examination of the commissioners' records discloses the following document:

"Special session, August 20, 1850. This day the commissioners met pursuant to adjournment, present: Joseph Hoskins, Azel Walker and Enos L. Lacy.

"This day a petition was presented to the commissioners of the county, praying for a new township, to be taken from the townships of Richmond, Union and Liberty, as set forth in a petition signed by a majority of the householders residing within the boundaries of the proposed new township, of which the following is a copy, to wit:

"'To the Commissioners of Clinton County: Your petitioners, citizens of Clinton county, Ohio, respectfully present that we labor under great inconvenience on account of our very remote situation from the place of holding elections, and from the place where the other township business is transacted, in consequence of which we respectfully but most earnestly ask you to establish a township to be taken out of Union, Richland and Liberty townships, to be bounded as follows, to wit:

"'Beginning at the Fayette and Clinton county line, where said line crosses the southeast line of A. Benjamin's survey No. 927, thence southwesterly with the line of said survey to the east corner of Thomas Shaw's survey No. 844; thence with the southeasterly line of said line of said survey to the east corner of William Taylor's survey No. 726; thence with the southeast line of said survey to its south and east corner of William Lindsey's survey No. 732; thence westwardly across said survey to its west corner, and east corner of Thomas Bland's survey No. 885; thence northwardly with the northeasterly line of said Bland's survey to its north corner, and the east corner of William White's survey No. 2,714, in Union township; thence northwardly and with the northeast line of said survey No. 2,714 to the west corner of Richard Call's survey No. 887, and at or near the line of Union and Liberty townships; thence in a northeasterly direction to the northeast corner of Liberty and northwest corner of Richland townships, in the Greene county line; thence eastwardly with the north line of Clinton county to the place of beginning, which limits as here prescribed contain the amount of territory required by law to constitute a township.

"We, your petitioners, now claim it as an act of justice, inasmuch as there is left in each of the townships from which the proposed new township is to be taken ample amount of territory still to constitute a constitutional township; that our petition be granted as now asked for, and which is signed by citizens and voters in the district included in the limits of the new township, July 13, 1850'

Signed by Edmund Thorp, John C. Coulter, Edwin Raleigh, Harvey H. Hankins, James W. Fannon, John M. Hinkson, Jr., William G. Brown, John Oliver, Jr., Absalom Douglas, John Coulter, H. A. Douglas, S. "And being satisfied that thirty days' previous notice of such intended application had first been given by advertising in three public places within the boundaries of said proposed new township, the commissioners being also satisfied that it is necessary to erect a new township as prayed for by said petitioners, and as fully set forth by a plot and survey, made by Hiram Madden, surveyor, and this day presented by said petitioners to the county commissioners, by which they are satisfied that the said proposed new township embraces a territory of more than twenty-two square miles. Thereupon, the commissioners granted the prayer of said petitioners, and direct that a township shall be laid off and established according to the boundaries described in said petition, plat and survey, by the name of Wilson township; and direct that the boundaries as set forth in such plat and survey be recorded as required by law, together with the proceedings had by the board in relation thereto."

At the same meeting the commissioners, made the following allowances for platting and surveying the township: To Hiram Madden, surveyor, 9 days, at $1.50, $13.50; to Edwin Raleigh, chain-carrier, 6 days, at 75 cents, $4.50; to James Glover, chain-carrier, 6 days, at 75 cents, $4.50; to Edmund Thorp, marker, 6 days, at 75 cents, $4.50.

As a final act in the creation of the new township, an election was ordered to be held on Saturday, September 7, 1850, at the tavern of H. H. Bruce, in the town of Lewisville, for officers, three trustees, one clerk, one treasurer, one assessor and one constable. From the township records the following is taken:

"Between the hours of eight and ten o'clock A. M., a lawful number of the voters of Wilson township being present in the town of Bloomington, proceeeded to nominate Edmund Thorp, Samuel Furnace and Elisha Gallemore, judges of election, and Jesse Everest and H. T. Moorman, clerks. Proceeded to the election of three trustees, one clerk, one treasurer, one assessor and one constable for Wilson township. On examining the votes given the following persons were declared duly elected: Trustees, Anderson Horney, H. H. Hankins, John G. Coulter; clerk, Absalom Douglass; treasurer, William Peelle; constable, Isaac Turner; assessor, Isaac Turner."

They were all qualified and assumed the duties of their offices on September 10, 1850.

No changes were made in the roll of officers at the second election, held April 7, 1851, except in trustees. William Reed was chosen in the place of H. H. Hankins. Road supervisors were also chosen at this election, as follow: District No. 1, Adam Long; district No. 2, James Ritchie; district No. 3, Reuben Peelle; district No. 4, Eri Lamb; district No. 5, John D. Holson; district No. 6, Benjamin Barnes. A school tax of two mills to the dollar was voted on, on the grand levy, and resulted in ninety-three votes being cast for the school tax and forty-six votes against it.

At the same election the question of Clinton county subscribing two hundred thousand dollars toward the construction of the Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville railroad was submitted to the voters and was accepted by the vote of one hundred and forty-one in favor of the subscription and only twelve votes against.

At the present time Wilson township is one of the two townships of the county whose bounds are not crossed by a railroad.

The following are the officers of Wilson township in 1915: Trustees, C. E. Peelle, Bert Burns and J. F. Reardon; clerk, H. H. Creeden; treasurer, C. T. Telfair. Population, eight hundred thirty-two.

Wilson township is located in the northeastern portion of the county, and is bounded on the north by Fayette county, on the east by Richland township, on the south by Richland and Union townships and on the west by Union and Liberty townships. The surface of the township is either level or gently undulating. It is divided into two nearly equal portions by the watershed between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers. On the western side the descent is rather abrupt to Anderson's prairie, which fills the greater portion of that side and is drained by a creek of the same name. The land on the eastern side slopes off much more gradually to the beds of Wilson's creek and the Little Rattlesnake. These three streams form the natural drainage of the township. The soil is a rich black loam of an excellent quality of yellow clay, easily tilled.

BLOOMINGTON.

Bloomington is the only village in Wilson township. It was laid out in 1842 by the county surveyor, Peyton West, for James Degroot, the proprietor. This little hamlet first bore the name of Lewisville, but when the postoffice was established it was given the name which it now bears. Lewisville began small and has bravely held its "smallness." By the census of 1880, it contained a population of one hundred sixty-nine; at present the population is much less. The citizens of this little wayside village are served with two general stores, H. H. Creedon and S. M. Kellison; R. T. Briggs is the village blacksmith.

CHAPTER XXX.

TOWN OF WILMINGTON.

The site of the town of Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county, was, up to the year 1810, covered with a dense growth of timber. In that year, the county having been organized, it became necessary to locate a county seat. The town was laid out on a part of T. Posey's survey, No. 1,057, the land having been donated for that purpose and James McManis having been appointed director to act for the commissioners. The history of the location of the county seat is given in detail elsewhere in this work. The town was first named Clinton, but this name did not prove satisfactory and an order was therefore issued by the court of common pleas in September, 1810, changing it to Armenia. This name also proved to be unsatisfactory and, by the request of the donors, the court ordered that the name be changed to Mt. Pleasant, on December 31, of the same year. Still there was great dissatisfaction and on February 20, 1811, the court ordered that the name be changed to Wilmington, decreeing that there would be no further change unless authorized by an act of the Legislature. The town, as originally laid out, consisted of sixteen squares of eight lots each, the lots numbering consecutively from 1 to 128. For the benefit of the readers, the following description is given:

"State of Ohio, Clinton County, ss.:

"(IL. S.). Be it remembered that before me, the subscriber, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for the county of Clinton, personally appeared James McManis, Director for Clinton County, and proprietor of the land contained within the bounds of the town of Clinton, as conveyed to said James McManis in trust for the use and behoof of said county, and produced the within plat, which he acknowledged to be an accurate plat of said town of Clinton, and that Nos. 58 and 73 (as marked on said plat), are particularly set apart for public grounds. The plat is on a scale of ten poles to an inch; the streets are four poles wide, and the alleys one pole wide; the courses of the same are north eighty-nine degrees east, by south one degree east; the sizes of the lots five and a half poles in front, and ten and a half back, except those fronting South street, which are five and a quarter poles in front, and eleven poles back. All the other lots, as numbered on said plat, are for sale for the use and behoof of said county of Clinton, wherein said town lies, except two lots reserved by Joseph Doan (one of the donators). Said James McManis doth voluntarily acknowledge the land contained in said plat to be for public uses for the county of Clinton and town aforesaid within said county, in trust to and for the uses and purposes herein named, expressed or intended, agreeable to said plat, and for no other use or purpose whatever. Given under my hand and seal, August 2, 1810.

"ROBERT EACHUS, J. Peace.

"(No. 22). Received for record on the 2d day of August, 1810, and recorded on the 25th day of August, 1810, in Book A, pages 25 and 26. Examined by

"ROBERT EACHUS, R. C. C."

On January 15, 1828, the Legislature of Ohio passed an act incorporating the town of Wilmington, but the original limits have been extended by subsequent acts. The act passed on February 4, 1867, described the corporation boundaries as follow: "Beginning at the center of the Xenia road, at the northeast corner of Lewis M. Walker's land, thence running eastwardly across the Port William road, and along the line of Samuel Smith's land until it strikes the Prairie road opposite Sarah Haworth's barn; thence in a straight line to and along William Applegate's old line to a point on the turnpike; thence up the road to John Dillon's corner; thence with his west line to the Snow Hill road, at the east line of Jacob Patton's farm; thence with Patton's lines, James Fife's line, and the line of Jonathan Doan, to Lytle's creek: thence down the creek across the Cuba road, and across the old Cincinnati road, to the southeast corner of Leo Weltz's nursery lands; thence to the southeast corner of Nancy Lair's lands; thence northwardly across the Goshen & Waynesville turnpike to the place of beginning."

On March 3, 1828, the first election was held in the newly incorporated town, at which the following officers were elected: Isaiah Morris, mayor; Bebee Treusdell, recorder; Benjamin Hinkson, John McManis, Turner Welch, John McElwaine, William Stockdale, trustees. Levi Sheppard served as marshal in 1828.

TOWN OFFICIALS

Within the time specified in the act of incorporation, the above elected officers took the oath of office and filed the same with the recorder. Two of the officers, John McManis, a trustee, and Bebee Treusdell, recorder, having resigned, the council held a special meeting on November 7, 1828, at which they appointed new officers to take their places, George D. Haworth being appointed trustee and William Hibben, recorder. Subsequent elections were as follow:

March 2, 1829—Isaiah Morris, mayor; Calvin B. Woodruff, recorder; Benjamin Hinkson, John McElwain, Dr. Uriah Farquhar, Dr. Turner Welch, William Stockdale, trustees.

March 1, 1830—David Stratton, mayor; Philip F. Crihfield, recorder; Lewis Wright, William Hibben, Thomas Hibben, George Bruce, Jacob Strickle, trustees.

March 7, 1831—Warren Sabin, mayor; George Meyer, recorder; George Bruce, John Carman, Charles L. Kelley, Carter B. Harlan, George Fallis, trustees.

March 5, 1832—Amos T. Sewell, mayor; William W. Woodruff, recorder; James Fift, James Christy, Haines Moore, Israel Johns, Richard Peirce, trustees.

March 4, 1833—Thomas Hibben, mayor; Jesse Green, recorder; William Hibben, Benjamin Hinkson, Levi Sheppard, Laurence Fitzhugh, John B. Posey, trustees.

March 1, 1834—Samuel McCune, mayor; Jesse Green, recorder; Peter P. Nickerbocker, John C. Work, John McFall, Lewis Wright, George D. Haworth, trustees.

March 2, 1835—Daniel Kelley, mayor; Asa H. Hoge, recorder; Isaac Strickle, Dr. Amos T. Davis, Samuel McCune, Amos T. Sewell, Micajah Bailey, trustees.

November 6, 1835—Daniel Kelley, having resigned as mayor, Eli McGregor was elected to fill the vacancy.

March 7, 1836—Griffith Foos, mayor; Daniel C. Hinman, recorder.

March 6, 1837—Robert B. Harlan, mayor; Daniel C. Hinman; recorder.

March 5, 1838—George S. Jenkins, mayor; Abraham E. Strickle, recorder. George S. Jenkins resigned on September 18, 1838, and David F. Walker was appointed mayor on December 21, 1838.

March 6, 1839—Robert B. Harlan, mayor; John M. Harlan, recorder. John M. Harlan, having resigned, Noah S. Haines was appointed recorder on December 25, 1839.

March 10, 1840—Abraham E. Strickle, mayor; Robert Beeson, recorder.

1841—Thomas Hibben, mayor; Charles M. Bosworth, recorder. The latter having resigned, Elijah Sabin, Jr., was appointed recorder on July 10, 1841.

March 7, 1842—Franklin Corwin, mayor; William B. Magee, recorder.

March, 1843—Franklin Corwin, mayor; Webb Broomhall, recorder. Franklin Corwin having resigned on November 29, 1843, William Fuller was appointed mayor.

March, 1844—William Fuller, mayor; Webb Broomhall, recorder. The latter having resigned, he was succeeded by Daniel C. Hinman on August 26, 1844.

March, 1845—Robert B. Harlan, mayor; Joel C. Woodruff, recorder.

March 2, 1846—Amos T. Sewell, mayor; Roger B. Morey, recorder.

From 1846 to 1853 the record has not been found.

March, 1853—James E. Johnson, mayor.

April, 1854—Benjah W. Fuller, mayor. He resigned on May 24, 1854, and Grafton B. White was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Alonzo C. Diboll, elected April 2, 1855, and continued until March 6, 1857, when he resigned, and B. W. Fuller was appointed to fill the vacancy; April 6, 1857, William B. Fisher elected mayor; April 14, 1858, Joshua D. Hadley; April 17, 1859, C. C. Harris; April 2, 1860, L. F. Austin; April 9, 1861, Andrew H. Chapman, mayor; resigned and went into the army on July 26, 1861; William B. Fisher was appointed to fill the vacancy and served until April 6, 1863, when Lewis C. Walker was elected; April 4, 1864, William B. Fisher elected; April 6, 1865, LeRoy Pope; April 10, 1866, John C. Moon; April 9, 1867, LeRoy Pope; April 6, 1868, A. C. Diboll; April 9, 1869, Nathan M. Linton; April, 1870, Milton L. Ent; April, 1871, Levi Mills; April, 1872, David T. White, serving from April, 1873 to 1875; A. C. Diboll, April, 1875 to 1877; Melville Hayes, April, 1877-81; L. J. Walker, April, 1881, to 1885; Frank B. Mills, April, 1885-86; Z. A. A. Haworth, April, 1886-88; A. W. Doan, April, 1888-1896; M. J. Grady, April, 1896-1900; W. I. Stewart, April, 1900-1902; A. E. Clevenger, April, 1902-1904; W. H. Hartman, April, 1904-1912; Amos Huffman, January, 1912-1914; Charles Curl, January, 1914, to present time.

The present officials are as follow: Charles Curl, mayor; Frank Babb, clerk; A. C. Stone, treasurer; A. J. Brown, William Smith, Dell Lacy, F. A. Peele, E. E. Terrell and Thomas Bales, councilmen; Dr. G. W. Wire, health officer; Will Sliker, marshal; Richard Egan, night marshal; Frank Baker, fire chief.

The salaries of the different city officials are as follow: Mayor, $500 per year and fees; clerk, $400 per year; fire chief, $125 per year; firemen, $75; marshal, $720; night marshal, $600.

ADDITIONS.

To the original town of Wilmington, the following additions have been made: Joseph Doan's addition, eight lots, June 22, 1814, surveyed by Peter Burr; David Faulkner's addition, twenty lots, October 25, 1814; Nathaniel Carpenter's outlots, twelve in number, October 26, 1837; sub-division of part of Gen. Edward Stevens' survey, No. 2,693, by Jesse Hughes, Isaiah Morris and John Woolman, in December, 1826; Dillon's heirs' survey or outlots in Hawkins' survey, No. 2,690, in January, 1850; Mark Thatcher's addition, eight lots, August 31, 1830; Isaiah Morris' addition, fifteen lots, February 11, 1842; Walker & Fife's addition, twenty-two lots, January 7, 1853; Benjamin S. Strickle's plat of outlots, October 14, 1865; Benjamin S. Strickle's second addition, six lots, no date given; Cadwallader's addition, twenty-nine lots, May 18, 1866; African (or Wickersham's) addition, twenty-one lots, September, 1868; James' addition, fourteen lots, September 22, 1868; Hibben's heirs' addition, seven lots, November 5, 1869; Fitzhugh's addition, ten lots, April 27, 1870; Alfred Johnson's addition, forty-three lots, no date; J. & J. Doan's addition, twenty lots, March 7, 1871; Keith's addition, thirty-nine lots, April 5 and 8, 1871; J. S. C. Newham and wife's addition, twenty-six lots, May 31, 1871; R. E. Doan's first addition, forty-two lots, July 24, 1871; same, second addition, forty-four lots, no date given; Patrick Murphy's addition, six lots, September 2, 1871; Boswell & Madden's addition, seventeen lots, September 4, 1871; L. F. Van Cleve's addition, thirty-four lots, April 23, 1875; Brackney's addition, eighteen lots, April 17, 1880; Thomas Perfect's addition, twenty lots, May 10, 1881; C. C. Nichol's addition, thirteen lots, April 22, 1889; Scott's addition, eighty-one lots and four blocks, November 29, 1889; incorporated on petition of city council May 5, 1896, one thousand eight hundred fourteen and thirty-eight hundredths acres; S. M. Babb's addition, sixteen lots, May 7, 1897; Nathan Starbuck's addition, six lots, June 3, 1902; Jacob P. Brindle's addition, sixteen lots, August 8, 1902; S. M. Babb's second addition, nine lots, September 14, 1904; S. M. Babb's third addition, twenty-seven lots, June 16, 1905; Anna Hale Ketteile addition, six addition, five lots, March 29, 1906; Emma Brindle addition, six lots, September 26, 1907; J. E. R. Sine addition, thirty-six lots, September 11, 1908; W. & J. Fife's Elmwood addition, fifty lots, May 6, 1909; W. H. Pope's addition, twenty-two lots, September 15, 1909; A. Hazard's addition, thirteen lots, May 9, 1910; E. E. Terrell's addition, thirty-three lots, May 26, 1911; S. M. Babb's fourth addition, thirty-two lots, July 3, 1911; J. S. McCoy's addition, eleven lots, March 23, 1915.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

A search for a record of the first efforts for fire protection in Wilmington discloses the following ordinance as the initial provision for such protection:

"Section 1. Be it ordained by the town council of the town of Wilmington, that James Fife and Warren Sabin be and they are hereby appointed to examine the fire places attached to such tenements within the limits of the corporation as may be situated within such distance of each other as may render it possible in burning to communicate fire to each other (at least once a month, from the first of November to the first of April in each and every year). And the examiners, on discovering any fire-place or chimney which may be in such condition as, in their opinion, might communicate fire to the building to which it is attached; or to any other building, shall immediately report the same to the marshal, whose duty it shall be forthwith to notify the owner or occupant of such building, in writing, to repair such fire-place or chimney in such manner as he shall prescribe in his aforesaid notification.

"Section 2. . Be it further ordained, that if the person or persons so notified shall fail to repair his, her or their fire-place or fire-places, agreeably to the notice of the marshal, within ten days after he, she or they shall have received such notice, such person or persons shall, for every offense, on conviction before the mayor, be fined in a sum not exceeding $20, nor less than $2.

"Section 3. Be it further ordained, that it shall be deemed an offense against said corporation for any person or persons to burn powder in balls, or otherwise burn or set fire to any tar barrel, or throw any fire-balls, sky rockets, or any other combustible materials on fire whatever, within the limits of the corporation; and every person or persons so offending shall, on conviction before the mayor, be fined in any sum not exceeding $5, nor less than 25 cents.

"Section 4. Be it further ordained, that the marshal shall be hereby authorized to procure four fire hooks and six ladders for the use of the corporation; to erect a suitable shelter on the court house lot to preserve them; and to place them under such shelter in good order, so as to be ready on any emergency, and present his account for settlement to the town council.

"Section 5. Be it further ordained, that if any person or persons shall remove from their place of deposit any of the aforementioned hooks or ladders for any purpose other than the prevention or extinction of fire within the corporation, such person or persons shall on conviction before the mayor, for every such offense be fined in any sum not exceeding $5 nor less than $1.

"Section 6. Be it further ordained that John B. Posey, Samuel McCune, George Bruce, Edward Kelly and Warren Sabin be and are hereby appointed to have the care and management of the aforesaid hooks and ladders, and to have the exclusive direction and management of the whole operation of extinguishing fires where it shall break out within the corporation; and in case of the absence of John B. Posey, then Samuel McCune shall take command; and in his absence, George Bruce, and so on, agreeably to the order in which their names are set down in this ordinance.

"This ordinance to take effect and be in force from the 15th day of January, instant.

"January 2, 1830. "ISAIAH MORRIS, Mayor."

On March 14, 1840, the town council of Wilmington passed an ordinance for the organization of two fire companies, a hook and ladder company and a bucket company. The former company was to consist of forty able-bodied young men, and the latter of all the other able-bodied men of the town over seventeen years of age. A superintendent was elected by the council, and, together, they selected the forty young men for the hook and ladder company. This superintendent served temporarily until the spring election, when a superintendent was elected in the same way as the other village officers.

It was required of every owner of a dwelling house, store-house, shop or office within the town to provide himself with a fire bucket, to be made of leather and approved by the superintendent. It was to hold three gallons, and the name of the owner was to be printed or painted legibly on the same. These buckets were to be kept in a convenient place. It was also required of the owners of buildings that in case of fire, they convey the bucket or cause it to be conveyed to the place of danger. John Bush Posey was appointed the first superintendent of the fire companies and James Fife was appointed keeper of the hooks and ladders.

During the winter of 1874-75 and the spring of the latter year Wilmington was the scene of a number of fires of alarming size. These served to call attention of the people of the town to their inadequate fire protection and led to some prompt action. On May 12, 1875, the citizens assembled at the court house and organized a volunteer fire company, known as the "Clinton Fire Engine, Hook and Ladder and Hose Company of Wilmington, Ohio." Its original members were Charles Hughes, J. L. Hackney, S. Q. Fulton, H. C. Taylor, Jr., J. J. Barlow, I. W. Quinby, B. S. Linton, B. J. Whinery, G. L. Barlow, H. E. G. Girard, Wesley Brindle, William Schofield, W. A. Bogan, Charles Mathews, Robert McMillan, Robert Hazard, Lou Fisher, Levi Pike, N. H. Sidwell, J. A. Schofield, Henry Miller, J. B. Allen, Samuel Richards, J. McDermott, George R. Achor, M. R. Gaskill, W. H. Rannells, J. M. Kirk, E. W. Shepherd, E. S. Hadley, M. W. Moon, C. B. Dwiggins, D. A. Lamb, G. W. Green, Eli Hadley, E. K. Peters, David Babb, Charles Curl, P. S. Brindle, Charles Welch, Josiah Sparks, Charles McMillan, Frank Vantress, Jacob Burst, H. M. Barlow, George W. Brown, William M. Babb, Alf Clark, C. W. Bronson Luther Watkins, J. N. Lloyd, M. F. Crustin, Madison Betts, D. T. White, C. J. Hockett, S. W. Robinson, W. T. Crossley, L. H. Baldwin, John Reed, Preston Irwin, Will I. Denny, F. B. Mills and Clinton C. Harlan.

The officers elected were: J. L. Hackney, captain; Joseph Peters, first lieutenant of engine department; L. N. Pike, second lieutenant, engine department; Madison Betts, first lieutenant, hose department; Jacob Burst, second lieutenant, hose department; Robert Hazard, first engineer; Louis Fisher, second engineer; Robert McMillan, first lieutenant, hook and ladder department; E. W. Shepherd, second lieutenant, hook and ladder department; D. T. White, secretary, fire department, and W. H. Rannells, treasurer.

The town council immediately purchased a complete set of hooks and ladders, with a well-arranged truck for their removal, which was taken in charge by the hook and ladder company. A steam fire engine was also purchased by a committee appointed for that purpose. The engine was built by the Clapp & Jones Company, of Toledo, Ohio, at a cost of six thousand dollars, including two hose reels and a thousand feet of hose. The engine arrived Wednesday morning, May 26, 1875, and was tested on June 30. The following is an account of the testing written by a contemporary:

"It was fired up for the first time in the morning and, when in full play, threw water over the spire of the Methodist Episcopal church, which is one hundred and forty-four feet in height. In the afternoon, at three o'clock, the fire brigade was called out and proceeded with the engine and two hose reels to Mr. Bentley's pond, just east of town, where the engine was located.

"The hose was then run north to the pike, where a one and one-eighth inch nozzle was attached to the end of the first section of one hundred feet of hose. In about fifteen minutes after fire had been kindled, the engine began pumping, and soon threw water to a distance of three hundred and forty feet. The nozzle was then detached and the hose run up the pike to the college building and beyond, making one thousand feet of hose in all. The nozzle was attached, the signal given and the engine again began pumping. The experiment was a beautiful one and gave great satisfaction to all who saw it; the jet of water played with terrible force about the cornice of the college building, which is three stories high, and then clear over the edifice, cupola and all, and a long way beyond. After this a double hose was attached to the engine, and a nozzle at the end of each five hundred feet of hose. Through each of these two hose a stream of water was thrown of volume and force to answer any purpose that might ever be demanded of it in Wilmington. With these two streams the old flouring-mill, located near the railroad, was deluged with water, shingles and weather-boarding were knocked off, doors and blinds opened, all going to show the great force of the water. The demonstration was attended by a large number of people from the town and country."

On September 14, 1880, the name of the company was changed, by an amendment of the constitution, to that of the Wilmington Fire Company, and its different departments to the Clinton Engine Company, the Clinton Hook and Ladder Company and the Clinton Hose Company. The officers of this company in 1882 were: D. A. Lamb, chief; D. Peebles, captain; C. R. Fisher, secretary; W. H. Rannells, treasurer; J. N. Tucker, engineer; H. H. Barlow, first lieutenant, engine department; G. W. Brown, first lieutenant, hose department: H. G. Vandervort, second lieutenant, hose department: R. S. Fulton, first lieutenant, hook and ladder department; W. W. Bangham, second lieutenant, hook and ladder department; Charles Curl, fireman, and George Barlow, assistant engineer. At that time its membership consisted of seventy-five men.

Its equipment consisted of one steam engine, three hose reels, with fifteen hundred feet of serviceable hose, and one hook and ladder truck, fully equipped, and eleven public cisterns, with an average capacity of over two hundred and fifty barrels, located as follow: one at the court house corner on Main street; one on South, one half way between Main and Locust streets; one on the corner of Locust and South streets; one on the Baptist church corner; one at the junction of Columbus with Walnut; one at Main and Mulberry street crossing; one at the crossing of Wood and Maple streets; one in front of the Friends church, on Mulberry streeet; one south of the railroad, on South street, and one on Locust street, near Prairie avenue. The first named eight were constructed in 1870, and the others in 1875.

In 1890 the fire company was organized into the Wilmington fire department and made a paid company. At its organization it consisted of between twenty-eight and thirty men, with the following officers: Henry Barlow, chief; R. J. Lacy, assistant chief; Eugene Babb, first lieutenant; Frank Pannebaker, second lieutenant, and Charles Crane, lieutenant of hook and ladder wagon. Its equipment consisted of the steam engine and team, a fully equipped hook and ladder wagon, hose reels and about fifteen hundred feet of serviceable hose. The hose reels and hook and ladder truck were pulled by hand to the scene of the fire.

In 1903 the city council took about fifteen hundred dollars from the funds obtained by the sale of the municipal light plant and purchased some new equipment and had the engine overhauled.

In December, 1909, the city council reorganized the company and reduced its membership to one chief, one assistant chief, one engineer, the necessary number of drivers and seven other men. This makes the present size of the company ten men. They are: Frank Baker, chief; Frank Pannebaker, assistant chief; S. D. Meyers, captain; Arthur Sutton, secretary; Bert Cox, engineer; Charles Harmel, driver; James McCarthy, driver; Lewis Edwards, C. D. Wallace and Everett McElwee. There is a vacancy of one in the company at present. Its present equipment consists of a hose wagon, with about fifteen hundred feet of serviceable hose, a hook and ladder wagon, an engine and two teams.

WATERWORKS.

The village council, in April, 1889, appointed a committee, consisting of W. H. Rannells and P. S. Maloy, to inquire into the feasibility of constructing a water plant. They consulted with John P. Martin, an expert from Xenia, Ohio, who, on May 17, submitted plans for a system that would cost about ninety-three thousand dollars to install and about nine thousand dollars yearly to operate. The question of whether a water works should be built or not was submitted to the voters of the town on May 31, with the result that three hundred eighty-one voted "yes," and one hundred and fifty voted "no." On June 7, the town council decided to advertise for bids for the construction of the plant. The bids were opened on July 1, and on July 5, 1889, the council passed an ordinance entitled, "An ordinance, to submit to the qualified voters of the incorporated village of Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, the question of ratifying the contract between John P. Martin and his assigns and the incorporated village of Wilmington, supplying water to Wilmington and its inhabitants for fire and other purposes, dated the 5th day of July, A. D. 1889, as then set forth and, contingently upon the ratification of said contract, granting to the said John P. Martin and his assigns the right to lay, relay and maintain in and under the streets, lanes, alleys and public grounds of said corporation, water mains and appurtenances for the purpose of conveying water to said corporation and the citizens thereof in accordance with the terms of said contract." The council by this contract was to pay J. P. Martin five thousand dollars annually and to pay any city taxes that might be assessed against the property of the water plant for the first five years. The vote for ratification was held on Monday, August 5, 1889, and was rejected, four hundred fifty-one voting against the contract and two hundred thirty-three for it.

The question of a waterworks was then dropped until May 2, 1901, when another vote was taken on the question of whether or not the town should have a waterworks. Eight hundred and eighteen votes were cast on the question, five hundred and ninety-seven being in favor of it. Of those voting in favor of a waterworks, three hundred sixty-eight were for a franchise being granted and one hundred and eighty-nine wanted a municipally-owned plant.

In September, 1901, a company from Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, put in a bid of twenty thousand dollars for the electric light plant and fifty dollars per fire plug for the water franchise. This bid was not given much consideration and the proposition was allowed to rest.

Th next step taken was in the following form: "An ordinance to submit to the qualified voters of the incorporated village of Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, the question of ratifying the contract between J. R. Poindexter, of Cynthiana, Kentucky, and his assigns, and the incorporated village of Wilmington, for supplying water to the village of Wilmington and its inhabitants for fire, and for the use of its inhabitants for all other purposes; dated the 13th day of June, A. D. 1902. And, contingently upon the ratification of said contract, and to enable said Poindexter and his assigns to carry out the provisions of said contract, giving to the said J. R. Poindexter the right to lay, relay, and maintain in and under the streets, lanes and public grounds of said village, water mains for the purpose of conveying water to said corporation and its inhabitants thereof in pursuance of the provisions of said contract."

The contract called for the laying of not less than nine miles of mains, not less than four feet under the surface of the earth, and tested to the pressure of one hundred pounds to the square inch; to erect and maintain sixty first-class, double-nozzle, frost-proof hydrants of the most approved pattern; to build and maintain a building suitable "for all the purposes and needs of a combined pumping house, boiler room, electric-light and power station; to erect a steel stand pipe of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand gallons' capacity; the water to be of such character, purity and wholesomeness during the entire term of contract as to be acceptable to the council of the village and state board of health;" work on the plant to be started six months after the ratification of the contract and the plant to be ready for operation within one year after that date; the contract to run for twenty years, with the village having the right to purchase the plant at the end of that period, or at the end of every ten-year period thereafter; water to be furnished free to a specified number of drinking fountains and to city buildings. For this the village was to pay forty-five dollars annually per hydrant for sixty hydrants, in semi-annual payments.

The contract was referred to the voters of the town for ratification on Tuesday, July 22. The result of the vote was six hundred eighteen in favor of the ratification of the contract and forty-four against it.

The persons who received the franchise immediately set to work upon the construction of the new system. Great trouble was experienced, however, in finding a suitable water supply and before it was finally found the franchise was assigned, in 1904, to the Wilmington Water and Light Company, at that time holding the electric light franchise. They were successful and the village council, on July 6, 1906, passed the following resolution: "Whereas, the Wilmington Water and Light Company, having fully complied with all the requirements of their contract, and at the test of the said plant on June 28, 1906, all of the requirements were more than complied with; be it

"Resolved, that the said plant and report of said company be and the same is hereby accepted and approved."

The Wilmington Water and Light Company continued to furnish the town and its inhabitants with water until May 1, 1914, when its franchise and equipment were absorbed by the Dayton Power and Light Company, which is the present (1915) holder of the franchise.

WILMINGTON GAS, LIGHT AND COKE COMPANY.

The question of erecting gas works in Wilmington began to be agitated by the citizens in the early part of 1872, who had received propositions from R. T. Cloverdale, of Cincinnati. On February 9, 1872, the town council passed an ordinance giving the company the right to incorporate and install their plant. By the authority of the council, an election was held on November 4, 1872, to decide whether the citizens were willing to be taxed for the purpose of supplying the village with gas, and resulted in a vote of two hundred forty-five "yes" and forty-six "no." The proposition accepted was that the village should take not less than forty lamps, at a cost of three dollars and fifty cents per thousand cubic feet, and other consumers to be furnished at a rate of four dollars per thousand cubic feet. Ground was purchased, adjoining the railroad, of H. W. Hale, by Mr. Cloverdale, and gasworks erected. On April 10, 1873, the Wilmington Gas, Light and Coke Company was organized and the following officers elected: D. Sanders, president; T. Q. Hildebrant, secretary; Dr. L. B. Welch, treasurer; D. Sanders, T. Q. Hildebrant, Doctor Welch, J. S. Foster and Joseph Kirkup, directors.

The capital stock of the company was thirty thousand dollars and the contract price with Mr. Cloverdale for the erection of the works was twenty-two thousand six hundred dollars. The organization of the above company was a mere matter of form, inasmuch as none of the men were stockholders and had no pecuniary interest in the enterprise, it belonging solely to Mr. Cloverdale. Later in the spring, fifty-three lamps were located as follow: Ten on Columbus street, extending from Prarie avenue to South street; fourteen on Locust street, extending from Highland street to Mulberry; thirteen on Main street, extending from Wood to Walnut streets; nine on Sugartree street, extending from Walnut east; one at the alley on Mulberry, between Main and Locust; one on South street; one at each of the following places on South street: alleys between Sugartree and Main; Main and Locust; Locust and Columbus; saw-mill alley; one on Walnut, near the bridge.

The works were completed in the summer of 1873, and Wilmington for the first time appeared under gas lights on the evening of Saturday, August 8, 1873, when the citizens turned out en masse to see the village in a new light. Monday evening was the time set for the initial illumination, and, during the day, people arrived from Cincinnati, Circleville and Washington Court House to be present at the grand opening. The citizens entered into the spirit of preparation, and South Main never looked more pleasing and cheerful. As the shades of evening drew on, those of the citizens who had installed gas fixtures began lighting up, and by nightfall the streets made a beautiful apperance. Several of the business houses attracted general attention, and the following deserve mention for their beautiful display: Clinton County National Bank, R. M. Wickersham's dry-goods store, Irons & Crane, and Peter's hardware stores, Sanders' drug store, Marble's jewelry store, and the Gates House. In front of Sanders' drug store and the Gates House ornamental arches had been arranged, and underneath the arch, in front of the drug store, were the letters "S" and "T," and in front of the Gates House were "R. T. C."; the first signifying Sanders and Fulton, and the latter the initials of Mr. Cloverdale, the builder of the works. On the posts in front of the two banks temporary fixtures in the form of stars had been installed, which added much to the beauty and brilliancy of the street. At eight o'clock in the evening a delegation of the town council of Washington Court House, accompanied by the Wilmington council, and the officers of the company visited the gasworks and, under the guidance of Mr. Cloverdale, they were taken through the plant and shown the method of gas making. But the principal point of attraction for the evening was the banquet at the Gates House, given by Mr. Cloverdale for the officers of the company, the council of Wilmington and that of Washington Court House, with some invited guests from Cincinnati, Circleville and Wilmington. At nine o'clock the doors of the dining hall were thrown open and the guests were ushered in to a beautifully decorated and sumptuously laden table. After the luxuries had been partaken of to the fullest extent, the guests were given another feast in the form of toasts by different members present. All spoke congratulatory of the spirit and energy displayed by the citizens of Wilmington in the successful completion of a long-cherished object. The company was then entertained with some delightful music by the Wilmington String Band and Clark's Cornet Band and every one realized that the evening marked a new epoch in the life of the town.

The gasworks passed from the hands of Mr. Cloverdale to Samuel Covington, and from him to E. W. Hamlin, all Cincinnati men. It has been leased several times to other parties.

The present officers are: G. N. Clapp, president and general manager; A. L. Cole, secretary; S. G. Smith, treasurer; F. M. Clevenger, director. Mr. Clapp purchased the plant in 1899. He owned the plant individually for a number of years, but recently sold an interest to the other men, who now hold offices in the company. Besides furnishing light and fuel for the town, this company also manufactures coke, tar and by-products.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANTS.

In December, 1889, Adam Scott appeared before the village council of Wilmington and applied for an electric light franchise. Immediate action was deferred and a committee appointed to investigate. On December 20, Mr. Harlan, the manager of the Wilmington Gas Company, the holders of the gas franchise, appeared before the council and protested against the allowing of an electric franchise. On January 3, 1890, the council called a meeting of the citizens of the town for the evening of January 20, in the city hall, for the purpose of determining what public sentiment was on the subject. A small crowd gathered at the city hall on the appointed day, and, after a rather heated discussion, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, by the citizens of Wilmington, in mass meeting assembled, that it is the sense of the public that electric lighting is preferable to gas, and we would recommend to the council that action be taken to the establishment of an electric light plant in our town."

A bill delegating to the village council of Wilmington the authority to submit to the citizens of the town the question of selling bonds to a sum not to exceed twenty thousand dollars for the construction of an electric light plant, was presented to the state Legislature in April, 1891, was passed, and became a law.

When the council met on May 1, 1891, the gas company, whose contract expired November 1, 1893, offered to put in an electric light plant if granted a franchise. At this meeting the council ordered the question to be submitted to the voters of the town on June 1. The result of this vote was three hundred fifty-three votes "Yes" and only fifteen votes "No."

The council received bids for a plant on April 12, 1892, and seven bids were received for a light plant and eight for a steam power plant. The plant was bought of the Fort Wayne Company for eleven thousand four hundred seventy-five dollars, and the engines from the Erie City Iron Works for four thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars. The plant was to be installed according to specifications and running by July 22. On May 25, the council chose W. F. Hayes as the chief engineer, at a salary of fifty dollars a month and house rent; Joseph Merriman was made second engineer and Sam Glenn, lineman.

During the week ending August 31, the lights were turned on several times, but did not work very well. It was found that the engines that had been purchased were too small and a change was made from a hundred-horse-power engine to one of one hundred and fifty horse-power, at a cost of six hundred dollars to the city. A board of trustees, consisting of three men appointed by the council, was placed in charge of the plant.

On January 21, 1898, the village council ordered that the question of selling ten thousand dollars' worth of bonds to purchase a new engine for the electric light plant, and for the payment of its indebtedness, which had accumulated for several years past, be submitted to the voters of the town on February 24. At this same meeting G. W. Clapp, owner of the gasworks, offered for the light plant and a ten-year franchise, sixteen thousand dollars or any amount set by three disinterested appraisers. The vote on February 24, showed five hundred seventy for, and sixty-seven against the bond issue.

The report of the trustees of the plant for March 15, 1900, showed a deficit at the beginning of the year of twelve hundred ninety-eight dollars and five cents, but a total gain at the end of the year of one thousand eight hundred seventy-six dollars, putting the plant on a self-sustaining basis.

On June 5, 1901, H. F. Gwynn, of the Gwynn Central Station Heating Company (who had received a franchise for a central heating station), made a bid of twelve thousand dollars for the light plant. The council rejected this offer after consideration.

The council, on November 1, 1901, ordered that the light plant be offered for sale and that the clerk receive bids for the same. Bids were received, but, for some reason, none was accepted. The plant was again advertised for sale in the papers on January 1, 1903.

On January 9 the village council passed the following: "An ordinance to contract with the United Water and Light Company of New Jersey, for the purpose of lighting the streets, alleys, ways and commons of the village of Wilmington, Ohio, with electricity and furnishing light and power for public buildings and for use by private parties as herein set forth, said contract being dated the 9th day of January, A. D. 1903, to take effect the first day of February, A. D. 1903, to be in force for a period of ten years, to-wit, to February 1, A. D., 1913."

SOUTH STREET, WILMINGTON, LOOKING SOUTH FROM LOCUST STREET, 1864.

SOUTH STREET, LOOKING SOUTH FROM LOCUST STREET, 1910.

The company was to provide one hundred arc lights, at fifty-two dollars and fifty cents per lamp per annum, on a midnight schedule, or an additional twenty-two dollars and fifty cents for an all-night schedule.

On January 21, 1903, the electric light plant was sold to the United Water and Light Company, of New Jersey, for the sum of twelve thousand dollars—to be paid "on or before May 1, 1903, with five per cent. interest from February 1, 1903, until paid."

The trustees of the light plant continued in charge until March 1, 1903, when they made their last report, as follow:

Two more orders were made out after this report was prepared, amounting to $17.75, leaving $1,725.99, which was turned over to the city treasurer, R. C. Stumm, on May 6, 1903.

In 1903 the Wilmington Water and Light Company was formed and the United Water and Light Company of New Jersey gave way to it in October, 1904. In 1912 the contract with them was renewed, to take effect on February 1, 1913, and to run for ten more years.

The Wilmington Water and Light Company also received the water franchise and contract from the village council in 1906. This company continued to furnish the city with water and light until May 1, 1914, when it gave way to the Dayton Power and Light Company, Wilmington district, which is the present holder of both the water and light contracts and franchises. The officers of the Wilmington Water and Light Company, at the time of its liquidation, were Henry Lees, Plymouth, Pennsylvania, president; J. C. Martin, Wilmington, Ohio, vice-president; A. D. Shonk, Plymouth, Pennsylvania, secretary; and H. B. Schooley, Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, treasurer. The Dayton Power and Light Company purchased the total of the Wilmington company's one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars of bonds and one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars of stock on January 1, 1914, and later obtained permission from the public utilities commission to absorb it, which it did on May 1, 1914. The officers of the Dayton Power and Light Company are: F. M. Tait, New York, president and general manager; E. P. Matthews, Dayton, Ohio, vice-president and general counsel; W. M. Stroup, Dayton, Ohio, vice-president; O. H. Hutchins, Dayton, Ohio, associate general manager; Luther E. Funkhouser, Dayton, Ohio, secretary and treasurer; and F. C. Jeanot, Wilmington, superintendent of the Wilmington district.

LIGHT ARCHES.

In 1910, when the city of Wilmington was making preparations for their centennial celebration, four light arches were put up on South Street. This was merely a part of the home-coming decorations, but they added so much to the looks of the town that they were made a permanent fixture. After the centennial was over and the committees had made their settlements, they found that they had four hundred dollars left. It seemed that they were undecided how to spend this sum. After due deliberation, they decided to erect more arches. Several private donations were received and, with the amount already on hand, they had sufficient funds to erect nine additional arches. They were fitted with electric lights, adding greatly to the beauty of the town.

CITY HALL.

The question of levying a tax for the purpose of erecting a city hall and engine house was authorized to be submitted to the voters of the city of Wilmington by the council on March 17, 1876. The election was held April 3, 1876, and resulted in a vote of three hundred and eighty-three to one hundred and forty-six in favor of the project. The council was authorized by a special act of the state Legislature, dated March 17, 1877, to issue bonds not exceeding in amount fifteen thousand dollars, and to levy a tax not to exceed two and one-half mills of the valuation of the taxable property of the town.

The plans and specifications for the new structure were drawn up by William M. Cleveland, architect. The contract for its construction was awarded to Fisher & Hughes for sixteen thousand nine hundred and eighty dollars, but in the course of erection some changes were made and the cost of the building was increased to eighteen thousand three hundred ninety-nine dollars and forty-nine cents. Fisher & Hughes sublet the brick and stone work on the new building to McMillan Brothers, the galvanized iron and slating to Farquhar & Sparks, and the painting to Griffin & Austin. The plastering was done by P. J. Murphy, under employment of the contractor. The total cost was twenty thousand six dollars and fifty-two cents.

The first stone in this building was laid on Friday, May 25, 1877, by Robert McMillan, and the building was completed in the spring of 1878. It is an imposing structure, two stories high, with a mansard roof. The front is formed of three towers, reaching to the roof; the middle tower is surmounted by a belfry and clock, and in each roof of the other towers are two dormer windows. The clock in the middle tower was, at the time of its erection, the largest of its kind in the United States, outside of the clock on the city hall in Philadelphia. It now ranks sixth in size in this country. On the outside walls on either side are five buttresses extending from the ground to near the top of the building, four of which culminate, after making two offsets, in as many chimneys.

The hall was formally opened and dedicated under the direction of the city council on the evening of Thursday, April 18, 1878, when the building was presented by Mayor Hayes and received by W. B. Telfair, Esq. Music was furnished by the Wilmington orchestra and choir.

On the first floor of the building are eight rooms, as follow: East half, front room, mayor's office; middle room, for township purposes; rear room, council chamber; west half, occupied by the fire department; large room in front, engine room; three rooms in the rear occupied by the engineer of the fire department as a residence. The entire second story comprises the auditorium. Across the rear of the auditorium is a gallery. The stage is well equipped with several changes of scenery, a full-sized stage house, set of flood lights and several well-kept dressing rooms. The auditorium has a seating capacity of seven hundred and seven.

In 1910 five thousand dollars was spent in remodeling the auditorium and in purchasing new equipment for its stage. This was done in preparation for the Wilmington and Clinton County Centennial and Home-coming.

In consideration of two thousand dollars paid by the trustees of Union township to the village of Wilmington at the time of the erection of the building, the city granted them a perpetual lease on a room on the first floor of the building for township purposes.

STREET PAVING.

The initial work was begun towards paving the streets of Wilmington in the fall of 1913, but was soon stopped by court injunction, and was not resumed until the spring of 1915. The estimated value of the entire work, of a mile and one fifth, was seventy-two thousand dollars. The city paid twelve thousand dollars of this amount for street crossings and the property holders the remaining sixty thousand dollars. The entire contract was let at one time to Freshwater Brothers' Company, Chester, West Virginia. It is laid with Wassal brick, manufactured at Glouster, Ohio. F. H. Beckler, of Athens, was the engineer. The mile and a fifth of paving is on three streets: Main street, from Walnut on the east to Wood on the west; South street, from Birdsall on the north to the Pennsylvania railroad tracks on the south; Locust street, from the Baltimore & Ohio railroad tracks on the east to Mulberry on the west.

The street cleaning department is in charge of Charles Harmell and James McCarty. These two men are members of the fire department, receiving fifty dollars per month for their services in this capacity and five dollars extra for their work in sweeping the streets. The equipment consists of a sprinkler and a sweeper, the horses of the fire departmeent being used with the sprinkler and sweeper. The streets are cleaned three times a week.

WALKER MEMORIAL BUILDING.

According to the will of the late Samuel Walker, which was made in 1900 and read in 1903, clause three of said will gave to the city of Wilmington a certain part of the Walker estate. The first settlement of this will was made by the receivers of the estate to the city of Wilmington on December 5, 1911, and consisted of $25,555.54 in cash. This was only a part of the amount due the city. The city council purchased the interest of the heirs of this estate for $7.500 and gave Mrs. Walker's heirs $4,333.40 for their part and thus came into possession of the entire estate, or rather funds left by Mr. Walker for the memorial building. The clause which gave this amount to the city said that it should be used for the erection of a library and memorial building for the city.

The lot and that part of a building which had been previously constructed were purchased of the Wilmington Building and Loan Association for five thousand dollars. It had been previously owned by Outcalt & Zahn, who had placed the foundation for a garage but had been compelled to abandon the enterprise on account of insufficient funds. On March 7, 1913, the final settlement of the estate was made in the probate court and through this settlement the city came in possession of the remaining part of the Walker estate, to the amount of twenty-three thousand seven hundred dollars. The work on he memorial building was immediately begun and it was finished and dedicated in 1914.

This is a beautiful and modern building, located on Main street between Mulberry and South, adjoining the Martin hotel. The first floor is used as a business room, while the second story contains the Commercial Club rooms, a library room and a photograph studio.

WILSON FLAG TOWER.

The Wilson flag tower was dedicated on August 1, 1898. The dedication ceremony for this memorial was held in conjunction with the Peace-Day program. This was a gala day for the people of Wilmington and a general celebration was held. The city officials, fire department, lodges, school children and townspeople joined in the spirit of the day and helped to make the parade and dedication a success.

The flag staff is of galvanized iron and the frame work is eighteen feet square at the base and tapers to a height of one hundred and twenty feet. The flag staff is thirty feet high. There is a circle of sixteen lights at the top and present a beautiful appearance when lighted. This was erected at a cost of seven hundred dollars and was presented to the town by A. J. Wilson, president of the First National Bank. A platform for the accommodation of the band, octagonal in shape and enclosed by an iron rail, stands within the tower, at a distance of ten feet from the sidewalk.

MILITARY BAND.

The Wilmington Military Band was organized in 1887, with Edwin Bath as director. At this time it was known as the Grand Army Band. Mr. Bath served as director from 1887 to 1892, when he moved to Canada. Leo Weltz succeeded to the directorship, which position he held until 1906. During this time the band was reorganized and the name changed to the Wilmington Military Band. Mr. Bath, who has served as leader since 1906, received his musical education at Kneller Hall, London, England, which is the military school of music for England. He also served six years in the English army before emigrating to this country in 1881. Mr. Bath has been actively associated with different musical interests in this country and is a member of the Federation of Musicians, Local No. 1, Cincinnati.

The number of members in this band has never exceeded thirteen and only a few times has it fallen below this number. The present members are: Edwin Bath, director and solo cornet; W. H. Taylor, assistant solo cornet; Hamlin Smith, solo clarinet; C. E. Nichols, first clarinet; D. K. Palmer, second clarinet; Richard Bell, first alto; Moscow Marshall, second alto; Charles Troops, first trombone; James Keefe, second trombone; Jerome Devoe, baritone; E. Chestnut, E-flat tuba; Joe M. Walker, bass drum, and James Swisshelm, snare drum. This band has always been recognized as a leader in this part of the state and has attained a high standard of efficiency. It has a reputation of playing up-to-date, classical and popular music. Many of its members are capable soloists. Concerts are given by the band every Tuesday night during the summer months and meet with the heartiest approval of the town and country people. These concerts are given in the bandstand at the corner of Main and South streeets, which was built for this purpose in the Wilson tower. This is the most unique bandstand in this part of the state.

CHAMPION BRIDGE COMPANY.

The Champion Bridge Company commenced business some time prior to 1872, under the firm name of Wall & Bailey. At first they made only wooden bridges, but later manufactured an iron bridge which had been patented by Jonathan Wall. In 1872, when the present company was incorporated as the Champion Iron Bridge and Manufacturing Company, the stockholders were Jonathan Wall, Zimri Wall and A. I. Bailey. Later the name of the firm was changed to the Champion Bridge Company. Peter Clevenger was president of the company for many years prior to his death, in 1910. He was succeeded by his son, J. R. Clevenger, who, in turn, was followed by A. I. Bailey, the present head of the company. The other officers of the company are as follow: J. R. Clevenger, vice-president; A. C. Briggs, chief engineer and secretary; R. L. Owens, treasurer. Mr. Biggs has been secretary of the company since 1886. Mr. Owens succeeded his father, G. W. Owens, as diretcor in 1896, and followed Mr. Bailey as treasurer in 1914. The directorate of the company consists of the officers, with the addition of Dr. E. S. Briggs.

This company is now the oldest highway bridge company in the United States and does work throughout the whole country. The greatest amount of work, however, is done in Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and in the Southern states. The most notable bridges recently built by the company are as follow: Bridge at Jupiter, Florida, over the Loxahatchie river in Palm Beach county; bridge over the Scioto river at South Bloomfield, Pickaway county, Ohio; bridge over the Big Sandy river at Pikeville, Kentucky; several larger concrete structures in Polk county, Florida; lift bridge of the bascule type over the Hillsboro river at Fort Landerdale, Florida. In addition to bridge work, probably one-fourth of the output of the company is for steel buildings of the warehouse and factory type.

THE IRWIN AUGER BIT COMPANY.

The famous Irwin auger bit was patented on October 21, 1884, by Charles H. Irwin. The following year Mr. Irwin organized a stock company and began the manufacture of auger bits. The patent was improved on April 19, 1887. The company was first capitalized at fifty thousand dollars. The present officers are as follow: A. I. Bailey, president; M. R. Denver, vice-president; J. R. Clevenger, treasurer; S. A. Mitchell, secretary. This company originated and perfected the genuine and only Irwin bit and are its sole manufacturers. The distribution of their product is world wide, covering every civilized country.

FARQUHAR FURNACE COMPANY.

The Farquhar Furnace Company was organized in May, 1908, with the following stockholders and directors: M. R. Denver, E. J. Hiatt, M. J. Farquhar, O. J. Farquhar, F. M. Clevenger, J. R. Clevenger and A. J. Brown. In 1912 R. B. Monfort became a stockholder and director. The present officers are as follow: J. R. Clevenger, president; M. R. Denver, vice-president; A. J. Brown, secretary; E. J. Hiatt, treasurer; R. B. Monfort, manager, since 1912. These officers have been in charge since the organization of the company, with the exception of the president, M. J. Farquhar, who was president from 1908 to 1913, when J. R. Clevenger became the head of the company.

This company took over the manufacturing plant of M. J. and H. B. Farquhar, who had been engaged in the manufacture of furnaces for twenty years. They were first located on the Baltimore & Ohio tracks near the present Farquhar coal yard. The next location was in the brick building known as the pad factory building, on Ohio and B streets, in the north part of the city.

In April, 1915, a contract was let for a new factory to be located at the intersection of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and Owens avenue. This will be ready for occupancy by January, 1916. The company is capitalized at two hundred thousand dollars. Branch offices are maintained in Baltimore, Kansas City, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Greensboro, North Carolina and Portland, Oregon. The future of the company is very bright and the output is increasing from year to year with gratifying results.

WILMINGTON CASTING COMPANY.

The Wilmington Casting Company was organized in 1911 by P. S. Horton and Dr. Joseph W. Early, sole owners. It was reorganized and incorporated on April 28, 1915, with a capital of thirty thousand dollars and the following officers: P. S. Horton, president; Dr. J. W. Early, vice-president; E. R. Bales, secretary and treasurer, and

J. D. Boone, superintendent of shop. The company began work in its old foundry on Clarke street and moved into its new ten-thousand-dollar building at Truesdell and Charles street in August, 1915. The company makes a specialty of manufacturing gray iron castings.

THE NATIONAL SAFETY SNAP COMPANY.

The National Safety Snap Company of Wilmington was organized and incorporated, August 4, 1905, with a capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars. The owners of the company were the following officers: J. W. Lawhead, president; A. I. Bailey, vice-president; M. R. Denver, treasurer; Robert L. Owens, secretary, and R. C. Lawhead, director. Shortly after its organization the company purchased the buildings at the intersection of Mulberry street and the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, which it occupies at the present time. Since its foundation this firm has enjoyed a good business; its output has, on the average, practically doubled each year since it has been in business.

WILMINGTON AUTO COMPRESSOR COMPANY.

The Auto Compressor Company of Wilmington is an unincorporated concern that was organized in 1911 by the owners of the National Safety Snap Company. It manufactures air compressors and electric hand lamps. It bought a tract of land just north of the new plant of the Wilmington Casting Company in August, 1915.

THE TURNBULL MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

The Turnbull Manufacturing Company of Wilmington was originally organized in Columbus, Ohio, and for many years its plant was at No. 115 Vine street, Columbus. In February, 1913, it was purchased by Wilmington capital and incorporated, with J. W. Lawhead, president; E. E. Terrell, vice-president; R. C. Lawhead, treasurer; O. W. Hale, secretary; Mrs. Rate Vandervort, director. This company continued its operation in Columbus until July, 1915, when it was moved to Wilmington. It now occupies a new building on Sugartree street, between South and Mulberry streets, which it rents from Frank Gallup. Its present capital stock is one hundred and sixty thousand dollars. Its officers are: J. W. Lawhead, president; O. W. Hale, secretary; W. M. Winters, assistant secretary; R. C. Lawhead, treasurer; J. E. Fisher and Clyde Fisher, directors. The company manufactures ice cream cone and pop corn machinery, auto accessories and gas engines. Its goods are known as the "Turko" line.

CEMETERIES.

The old Methodist graveyard, located in the northeastern part of Wilmington, was originally the private burying ground of Isaiah Morris, who set apart a small lot prior to 1820. Ellis Pugh, Levi Sheppard and James Fife owned adjoining land and each made additions to it. On April 23, 1832, Levi Sheppard sold one-half acre of land to Amos T. Sewell, Charles Russell, E. Kelly, Israel Johns, James Christy, Daniel Jones and Thomas Gaskill, trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church of Wilmington, for twenty-five dollars. The land, which had been donated, was then thrown together and the Methodist graveyard formed. The first burial of which there is a record was that of Rachel Morris, on January 22, 1720, although it is probable that others were buried there before that, as it is the oldest graveyard in Wilmington. The remains of many of the old citizens, who were buried here, have been removed to Sugar Grove cemetery, among whom are the following prominent families: Morris, White, Holland, Gustin, Curtis, Treusdell, Sheppard, Hughes and Barrett.

In 1830 Mark Thatcher and wife deeded the old graveyard at the western end of Sugartree street, adjoining the Hicksite Friends church, to William Adams, Azel Walker and Jesse Doan, trustees of the society of Friends. The grounds have been abandoned as a burying place for a number of years.

On February 24, 1848, the General Assembly of Ohio passed an act providing for the incorporation of cemetery associations, and on April 11, 1857, a number of citizens of Clinton county met at the court house at Wilmington and organized the Sugar Grove Cemetery Association. The first officers of the association were: E. L. Lacy, president; Matthew Romback, W. C. Fife, J. E. Hibben, A. E. Strickle, J. W. Chaffin, L. B. Welch and E. L. Lacy, trustees, and Albert Hockett, clerk and treasurer. Nearly twenty-three acres of land situated southwest of Wilmington were purchased from William Hibben for one hundred dollars an acre and were laid out by Leo Weltz. Additions have since been made to the cemetery until it now contains about fifty acres. Catherine Kline was the first one buried in the cemetery, being buried on July 4, 1858. Isaiah Morris, the old pioneer, was the next one buried there, being interred on July 20, 1858, and the marble shaft which marks his grave was the first erected in the cemetery.

The cemetery derives its name from the timber which once covered the grounds and many of which have been left standing. These stately trees, the rolling ground, the beautiful monuments and a little stream, which flows quietly through its narrow channel, give the cemetery a beautiful appearance and make it a picturesque spot for the resting-place of the dead.

There is a special plot in the cemetery set aside for the burial of veterans of the Civil War. Two cannon, mounted on wheel carriages, are set in the midst of the soldiers' graves.

In the summer of 1915 a destructive wind storm swept across the cemetery and destroyed more than a score of beautiful trees. Some monuments were also damaged at the same time.

POSTOFFICE HISTORY.

The first postoffice was established at Wilmington in 1812, with Isaiah Morris as postmaster. It has been impossible to obtain the years served by the various men who have held the postoffice, but it is believed that they served in the following order: Isaiah Morris, James Magee, George Bruce, Joseph Hale, James E. Johnson, James Fallis (appointed in May, 1853), Thomas Van Tress, W. J. Marble, John C. Moon, W. P. Wolfe, C. N. Browning, William Clevenger, C. R. Fisher, John H. Hirt, John C. Smith, William F. Haines, and A. J. Hummel, who took the office on July 4, 1914.

It is not known where the early postmasters held forth. Johnson and Fallis were in a building at the corner of Main and Mulberry streets; Van Tress moved it to a room on South street. Later the office was in a room immediately north of the court house on the west side of South street. At the present time the office is in the building of the Clinton Telephone Company on West Main street, to which location it was moved in March, 1915.

Wilmington enjoys free carrier service and three regular carriers now make three daily deliveries each through the week. The business portion of the city gets four deliveries daily. Since the establishment of the rural free delivery, in 1902, Wilmington has been the distributing center for several hundred patrons. Nine carriers are sent from the local office each morning on as many different routes. A closed pouch is taken by one of the carriers to Port William each day.

Other towns in the county having rural carriers are as follow: Sabina, five; Blanchester, three; New Vienna, three; Martinsville, three; Clarksville, three; Westboro, New Burlington and Midland, one each. The other postoffices in the county are Lee's Creek, Cuba, Melvin and Reesville.

WILMINGTON LIBRARY COMPANY, 1816-39.

In February, 1816, some of the most prominent men of Wilmington assembled to form a library association, in order that the citizens might enjoy the advantages of a circulating library. It was provided in their constitution that "no books which should tend to discredit the Christian religion, or bring into disrepute any religious society or denomination, nor any books which tend to corrupt the morals or youth or others," should find a place in the library. All novels and plays were excluded, the "Vicar of Wakefield" being the only one admitted. The library contained more than one hundred and eight volumes, among which were the following: "Life of Washington," "Life of Franklin," Robertson's "Charles the Fifth," Robertson's "America," "Irish Rebellion," Rollin's "Ancient History," Goldsmith's "England," "History of New England," Josephus' Works, "French Revolution," "Naval Biography," "History of China," Milford's "Greece," Homer's "Iliad," Pope's "Essay on Man," Cowper's Poems, Young's "Night Thoughts," Nicholson's "Encyclopedia," Park's "Travels," Keats' "Elements," "Debates in the Virginia Convention," Washington's Letters, Jefferson's "Notes on Virginia," "Lewis and Clarke's Expedition," Ferguson's "Astronomy and Atlas," Columbus' "Vision," Fox's "Journal," "Tour to Morocco," Paley's "Philosophy and Theology," Watt's "Logic," Morse's "Universal Geography" Rushes Lectures, Curran's Speeches, "Modern Chivalry," "Botanic Garden," Cox on "Fruit Trees," Goldsmith's "Animated Nature" and Volney's Views." These books were kept in constant circulation by the members and it is an interesting fact that nearly every member of the association read Curran's Speeches.

Prominent among the names on the records of the librarian is that of Mary Fallis, afterward Mary Peirce, who is the only lady whose name appears on the records. Other active members were Peter Burr, Loammi Rigdon, Charles Paist, Isaiah Morris, George McManis, Mahlon Haworth, Eli Gaskill, Rice Gaddis, Jesse Hughes, Sr. and Jr., David Hughes, Thomas Kersey, William Brooks, Eli McGregor, Uriah Farquhar, William R. Cole, Nathan Linton, William Millikan, J. B. Seaman, John McManis, John A. Hays, Samuel T. Loudon, William Hibben, Samuel Wilson, Isaac Wright, James Birdsall, Richard Fallis, Henry and Peter Babb, John Stout, George Carter, Robert Way, John Eachus, James Gallaher, Aaron Sewell, Samuel H. Hale, James Dakin, James Harris, Arnold Treusdell, John Hadley, Joseph Doan, Richard Peirce, John McFall, George D. Haworth, Rockefeller and Perry Dakin, Amos T. Davis and P. F. Crihfield. Those more prominent as official members were Eli Gaskill, James McManis, William Millikan, Uriah Farquhar, Eli McGregor, Philip F. Crihfield, J. B. Seaman, John McManis, librarians and treasurers; Mahlon Haworth, Isaiah Morris, Uriah Farquhar, William Hibben, Eli McGregor, William Millikan, Nathan Linton, John McManis, Thomas Gaskill, Peter Burr, Loammi Rigdon, John A. Hays, George McManis, Charles Paist, directors.

The books show an enrollment of eighty-one members, some continuing from the beginning to the end. The library was sold out in 1839, most of the books being bought by the members. Pope's "Essay on Man" was purchased by Richard Peirce, who, it is said, could repeat the entire poem from memory. Thus ended the career of Wilmington's first library.

WILMINGTON READING ROOM, 1866-68.

A society called the Wilmington Reading Club was organized in December, 1866, by some of the leading citizens of Wilmington for the purpose of opening a reading room and lecture hall for the public. The first officers of the society were Amos Hockett, president; Madison Betts, Cyrus Linton, J. A. Smith and R. M. Wickersham, directors, and almost seven hundred dollars were subscribed to start it. Brackney's hall was furnished for the purpose and all of the leading newspapers, periodicals and magazines were provided. The room was open to the public generally and ladies and ministers of the gospel were admitted without paying a fee. The reading room was open from two to five o'clock every afternoon and from six to ten every evening, except Sunday. This reading room was maintained until July 10, 1868, when it was discontinued and all of the furnishings sold at public sale. And thus Wilmington's second library came to an end.

PUBLIC LIBRARY, WILMINGTON.

THE WILMINGTON LIBRARY.

The George Clinton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, recognizing the fact that a library is one of the greatest forces in modern educational progress, and that it was one of the greatest needs of Wilmington, organized, on February 20, 1899, at the home of Mrs. Dr. W. R. Hale, the Wilmington Library Association, with the following officers: Mrs. C. C. Nichols, president; Mrs. J. W. Wire, vice-president; Mrs. R. J. Lacy, secretary; Mrs. J. E. Orebaugh, treasurer; trustees, the officers and Mrs. S. C. Smith, Mrs. R. C. Stumm and Mrs. N. E. Bennett. The citizens of the town were called upon for subscriptions to a sustaining fund for the benefit of the library immediately after the organization of the society. This met with a generous response, the total amount subscribed being seven hundred and ten dollars. Of this amount, two hundred and ten dollars were donated by members of the George Clinton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Several interested friends in Cincinnati and Xenia sent donations, while many former residents sent contributions of books.

From the First National Bank were secured, in their building, two rooms, the use of one of them being offered gratuitously and for the other only a nominal rent was charged.

Suitable furniture was purchased, shelving put up, books and periodicals were selected, and the library and reading room were opened to the public on June 5, 1899, Miss Minnie Farren having been employed as librarian. Tickets were sold for one dollar, which gave to the purchaser the privileges of the library and reading room for one year; or, on the payment of seventy-five cents, one could have these privileges for six months. A request was made that on the opening day friends would bring donations of books. This request also met with a generous response and more than fifty volumes of suitable standard works were brought in. Besides books and periodicals, many gifts were received, among them a Webster's "International Dictionary," from Miss King, of Xenia; a dictionary rack, from Charles E. Nichols; a wall map of the United States, from Grace Browning; a bust of Shakespeare, from Emma Browning; pictures from Mrs. A. T. Quinn and Mrs. I. W. Quinby; a sign, painted, presented and hung by Sabin Brothers.

The first year of the library's existence saw three thousand eight hundred and eighty-one books drawn out and more than three thousand two hundred and eighty-six readers in the reading room. The second year was a hard one in the library work, because of lack of funds adequate for its needs, for the citizens were not called upon the second time for a sustaining fund and the only revenue was from the sale of tickets (one dollar a year), fines assessed and a few gifts from interested friends. To obtain funds there were given bread and cake sales, a dinner and supper, and auction on the court house corner of contributed articles, a sale of old rubber, an excursion to Dayton, a rummage sale and a concert. Some of the young men of Wilmington gave the proceeds of a football game, twenty-five dollars, to the library and with this, and the necessary balance, was purchased the Warner Library of Literature, a valuable addition to the reference department. A "book shower," given by the librarian at her home, added forty-eight volumes. The Six-and-Twenty Club, a club of Wilmington ladies, for years have donated each year twenty-six or more volumes.

In March, 1900, the Library Aid Society was organized, which met on invitation at the homes of the members. The amounts derived from this source were from seven to twenty-three dollars each time the society met. The Library Association availed itself of the arrangement made by the board of library commissioners of Ohio for the loan of books from the Ohio state library, whereby from twenty-five to thirty-five books might be kept three months. All the while, the association kept its purpose to give "the best reading to the greatest number at the least cost" constantly in view.

The village council created a special levy for the benefit of the library in March, 1901, when the library was incorporated and made free to the public. The association was given notice of this action on the part of the village council in the following message sent to its corresponding secretary:

"To the Wilmington Library Association, Greetings:

"In the vast social network known as 'society,' in one of its phases at least there should be expressed an educational interest, such as we see manifested by the D. A. R. ladies, in their endeavor to create and maintain a free library for Wilmingtonians. We hope and believe that the fire of your imagination, reinforced by the energy of your character and aided by the act of council, will stimulate you, if possible, to even greater works in the future than have characterized your commendable efforts in the past, in the upbuilding of the library. We have the honor and pleasure, ladies, to notify you that on last Friday night, in regular session, the village council created a special levy for the benefit of the library. The amount of the levy will be approximately eight hundred and fifty dollars. His honor, Mayor Stewart, appointed a special committee to notify you of this action. On behalf of the council, we are,

"G. W. Wire,
"R. S. Maloy,
"Committee."

The Library Association at this time was newly organized, with the following officers: Mrs. C. C. Nichols, president; Mrs. John E. Orebaugh, first vice-president; Mrs. S. G. Smith, second vice-president; Mrs. R. J. Lacy, recording secretary; Mrs. W. R. Hale, corresponding secretary. These constituted the board of trustees. Miss Minnie Farren was the librarian and Mrs. Susie Mory, the assistant librarian.

On February 7, 1903, Andrew Carnegie gave ten thousand dollars for the purpose of erecting a free public library building, provided the village council should appropriate one thousand dollars annually toward the support of the library. This the council decided to do, and the gift was accepted, February 13, 1903. A site on North South street was selected and purchased on the same day from J. C. Martin, twenty-eight hundred dollars being paid for the northwest corner of what had been known as "the Martin field," across from the high school building. The site was purchased by the village council, which in turn leased it for twenty-five years to the Library Association, on April 17, with the privilege of renewal at the end of that time for a like term.

W. S. Kauffman, of Richmond, Indiana, was secured as an architect and plans were accepted in June, 1903. On July 13, 1903, bids were received for the construction of the building and the contract awarded to John Doyle, of Wilmington, for eleven thousand one hundred sixty-eight dollars, exclusive of the lighting and heating, the building to be completed by February 1, 1904, (later an extension of time was made until May 15), and on July 16, 1903, the ground was staked off and the excavating commenced at once.

In June, 1903, Mr. Carnegie was asked for an increase of two thousand five hundred dollars to his gift, which was granted. At the same time the village council increased its annual subsidy to one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

At this time the officers of the association, who constituted the board of trustees of the library, were: Mrs. C. C. Nichols, president; Mrs. R. C. Stumm, first vice-president; Mrs. W. R. Hale, second vice-president; Mrs. R. J. Lacy, recording secretary; Mrs. S. G. Smith, corresponding secretary, and Dr. Elizabeth Shrieves, treasurer.

The cornerstone of the new building was laid on Thursday, September 17, 1903, with simple but appropriate ceremonies. At four thirty o'clock in the afternoon of that day the members of the Library Association assembled, with quite a number of interested persons, and brief exercises were conducted. In the absence from town of Mrs. C. C. Nichols, the president of the association, and also of Mrs. R. C. Stumm, first vice-president, Mrs. Dr. W. R. Hale, second vice-president, was in charge and presided over the ceremonies.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Robert Elder, of the First Baptist church, and an historical sketch of the association, which had been prepared by Mrs. Nichols, was read by Mrs. Hale and then deposited in the tin box in the stone. Following this there was deposited a copy of the Wilmington Journal of July 1, which contained a picture and a description of the new building, as taken from the plans, and there was also inclosed in the receptacle copies of all Wilmington papers of the issue of the third week in September, 1903. Following these there was deposited a finding list of the library, a finding list of the library supplement No. 1, from June 1, 1902, to January, 1903; and No. 2, from January, 1903, to September, 1903, these giving the name of every book in the library at that time. Also there was placed in the stone the rules and regulations of the Wilmington Library, three library cards, book slip, reader's slip and reader's card; the Daughters of the American Revolution year book, with the names of all the members of the Library Association; the names of the village council at the time of Mr. Carnegie's gift in February, 1903, and also of the members at that time.

After the various articles had been placed, the box was sealed, deposited within the stone and cemented securely. Mayor W. H. Hartman then delivered a short address, the stone was swung into place and the ceremonies were over, after which the masons resumed the work of erecting the walls.

In January, 1904, Mrs. C. C. Nichols, the president of the Library Association, gave a beautiful bronze tablet on which the names of all the members of the Library Association during 1903 and 1904, the building committee and the librarian, are shown in relief letters. The tablet is found on the north vestibule wall, to the left as one enters the building.

The library was dedicated by ceremonies, over which Mayor W. H. Hartman presided, on Thursday afternoon, June 30, 1904. The meeting was opened by a song rendered by a quartet composed of Messrs. Colvin and Hockett and Mesdames Linton and Hazard, with W. G. Fisher acting as accompanist. Rev. Walter Mitchell pronounced an invocation, which was followed by a solo by Robert Hockett. Mayor Hartman then read a letter from the Xenia Library Association, congratulating the Daughters of the American Revolution upon their great success. Prof. Charles B. Galbreath, librarian of the state library at Columbus, Ohio, then made the address of the evening. After the reading of the treasurer's report by Dr. Elizabeth Shrieves, and a solo by Mrs. Clate Linton, an appeal for funds was made by the Rev. J. G. Pumphrey, of the Methodist church. The afternoon was closed by a song by a quartet composed of Messrs. Hockett and Colvin and the Misses Howland and Thorne.

That evening the building was lighted for the first time and thrown open for a reception to the public. Hundreds of the citizens of the town called to see the interior of the building and many compliments were paid the ladies for their well-directed efforts and indefatigable labors. The library was opened for its readers on June 30.

The library building is a handsome structure, sixty by fifty-six feet, with a foundation of gray stone left in the rough, walls of buff pressed brick and roof of red tile. Entrance is made into a beautiful vestibule with floor of mosaic tile, marble wainscot, and doors of quartered oak. There are practically two floors, the main floor and a basement. In the basement on the north side are found toilet rooms, a magazine room, a bailer room and fuel bins; in the center is an auditorium, thirty-two by twenty-one feet with a stage about twelve feet square, and seating capacity of about two hundred people; on the south side is a museum, twenty-one feet wide and thirty-two feet long. On the main floor, facing the entrance, is what may be called a delivery lobby, seventeen by nineteen feet, with the librarian's desk; beyond the librarian's desk is the stack or book room; on the north is a general reading room and in its rear is a reference room; on the south side of the delivery lobby is a children's reading room and in its rear is the librarian's room.

The library has been remembered most generously by its many friends and patrons in the way of suitable gifts and bequests. The most notable example is the library of the late Judge Felix Grundy Slone, which was given to the library in April, 1914, by Mrs. Slone. This collection contains twelve hundred and seventy-five well-chosen volumes of standard works. They are found in handsome sectional book cases along the west wall of the adult reading room. They were accompanied by an excellent steel engraving of Shakespeare and his friends. This collection of books, a library in itself, is a fitting memorial to the memory of its donor.

A few other friends of the library and their gifts should be mentioned. Mrs. Katherine Denver Williams has contributed many well-chosen volumes. An annual Christmas present is received from Mrs. C. C. Nichols, in the form of books. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bosworth, of Cincinnati, have been very generous also. The Woman's Relief Corp gave a beautiful silk flag and ornate stand in 1913. Kent Browning contributed the outdoor flag. W. H. Cole, of Sabina, former superintendent of the Wilmington schools, gave the library his bound proceedings of the American Educational Association. This is only a partial list of the larger contributions that have been made.

In the basement of the building is found a museum that is a great credit to the library. The relics are placed under cover in beautiful, heavy, hand-carved walnut cases that were obtained by the library trustees from the estate of the late Capt. D. A. Lamb. Mrs. Maria S. Rickham, of Dayton, gave to the museum the great collection of relics that had been gathered by her son William Rickham from all portions of the country. The museum also contains a good collection of eggs, that was purchased by the town from the Samuel Walker estate. There are quite a few relics of pioneer households in the form of spinning wheels, distaffs, etc.

The Library Association is composed of the members of the George Clinton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. It is governed by six officers who constitute the board of trustees. Two trustees are elected annually to serve for three years. The present board of trustees and officers are, Mrs. C. C. Nichols, president; Mrs. Dr. W. R. Hale, first vice-president; Mrs. Charles Skimming, second vice-president; Mrs. Amos Huffman, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank L. Miller, corresponding secretary, and Dr. Elizabeth Shrieves, treasured. Miss Minnie Farren is the librarian, with the Misses Cleta Williams and Ethel McCoy as assistant librarians.

WILMINGTON COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Wilmington has had two commercial clubs within the past fifteen years, the first club leading more or less of a desultory existence from 1901 to 1910. The second and present club dates from 1914.

In the spring of 1901 a large number of the business and professional men of Wilmington conceived the idea of organizing a commercial club. A constitution and by-laws were adopted at a public meeting held in the mayor's office on March 12, 1910. D. A. Lamb was chairman of the meeting and Dr. Thomas L. Cooksey was secretary. The record shows that the club had sixty chartered members, including most of the leaders in the business and professional life of Wilmington. The first officers were as follows: Dr. George W. Wire, president; J. S. Kimbrough, vice-president; Dr. Thomas L. Cooksey, secretary; Frank L. Gallup, treasurer. For some reason, the club maintained an active existence for only two years. It held sporadic meetings up to January, 1903, but no other meeting is recorded until December 22, 1910, and this was the last one. The 1910 meeting was the result, evidently, of a breach of contract on the part of the Wilmington Water and Light Company and this last recorded meeting of the club was held to protest against the dilatory tactics of the public utility company. With this meeting the first commercial club of Wilmington closed its career.

The present Wilmington Commercial Club was organized on February 25, 1914, with the following officers: M. R. Denver, president; G. P. Thorpe, vice-president; Dr. F. A. Peelle, secretary; H. H. Henderson, assistant secretary; Frank L. Gallup, treasurer. Within a month there were one hundred and forty-four members enrolled and the membership has been materially increased since that time.

The object of this association is to promote the industrial, commercial and civic welfare of Wilmington, and to develop the manufacturing and industrial interests of the city and vicinity. Membership is limited to those recommended by a member of the association, active membership being contingent upon approval of the board of directors and the payment of stipulated fees. The admission fee is five dollars, with annual dues of two dollars.

The constitution provides for the appointment of seven committees, who are to take general charge of as many different lines of activities. These committees are as follow: Finance, J. W. Sparks, A. J. Bailey and S. G. Smith; city, mercantile and manufacturing industries, J. W. Lawhead, E. E. Ferrell, R. B. Montfort, J. W. Metzger and J. S. Hummel; entertainment, A. J. Brown and C. A. Rennells; press, H. B. Patterson, O. J. Thatcher and F. C. Jeannot; railroad relations, S. A. Mitchell, C. R. Fisher and J. R. Clevenger; membership, H. E. Hoskins, E. J. Hiatt, I. N. Lair, D. F. McCoy and Frank Murphy; civic relations, R. L. Owens, F. M. Clevenger and Joseph T. Doan.

The executive committee is composed of the five club officials, the same body constituting the board of directors and the committee on committees. The officers for the year 1915 are as follows: M. R. Denver, president; G. P. Thorpe, vice-president; Dr. F. A. Peelle, secretary; H. N. Henderson, assistant secretary; F. L. Gallup, treasurer.

The club meets on the second Friday of each month. Its handsomely appointed rooms are in the Samuel Walker Memorial building. Although the present club has been organized less than two years, it has already done much for the city. It was largely instrumental in bringing about the paving of the streets in 1914, and is now agitating additional paving. The club is also responsible for the fall festival, which was held for the first time in 1914.

CHAPTER XXXI.

SIDELIGHTS ON CLINTON COUNTY HISTORY.

ABOLITION IN CLINTON COUNTY.

To most of us who live in this day, when the black man, also, enjoys the privileges of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," those ante-bellum days that Harriet Beecher Stowe so vividly depicted in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," seem almost to belong to the dim vistas of the past. To us those days possess a gripping fascination. We hear and read with interest of those old times, when slavery existed in the United States, while in our heart we are glad that it has been forever banished from our door, even though the cost was the bloody struggle between the North and South. And is there any doubt that of all the interesting bits of historic incident possessed by these days gone by, the most fascinating of all is the work and operation of the "underground railroads"—railroads whose trains very seldom followed their schedule during the day and never carried a light at night.

Clinton county, so close to the territory of the slave-holder and early to be crossed by "Underground Railroad" lines, was among the first to feel the fire of the abolitionists. But a short time after the holding of the famous international abolition convention in London in the year 1840, Clinton county had an anti-slavery society of her own. In its issue for December 10, 1842, the Clinton Republican gives an account of one of its quarterly meetings. Wright Haynes was the president and James Linton, the secretary. Resolutions were offered and speechs made by B. C. Gilbert, A. Brooke, J. O. Wattles and S. Brooke, all of which are published at length. In February, 1842, an anti-slavery convention had been held at Wilmington, of which Perry Dakin was the president. A central committee was organized for Clinton county, and among those elected to serve upon it was Eli McGregor. The Abolition or Anti-Slavery party nominated a state ticket in 1842 also, with Leicester King as the gubernatorial nominee. The ticket received sixty-seven votes in Clinton county. At this time it should be remembered that one who stood for abolition was looked upon as almost mad. He was a social outcast and often the treatment of him bordered upon persecution. Even persons who were honestly opposed to slavery looked upon them as fanatics and thought they could accomplish no good by their methods. But the sentiment grew and in the fertile soil of Clinton county Friends, who were schooled in the doctrines of George Fox, William Penn, John Woolman and others, to "bear a faithful testimony against slavery," it flourished. Most of the Quakers were Whigs and to them a vote for abolition at first seemed like a vote for the Democrats, but gradually, under the leadership of Seth Linton, Dr. Abram Brooke, Abram Allen, John D. Thompson, John Hollin, Elihu Oren, Amos Davis and others, the seed was sown and the grain grew. This little group of Clinton county pioneer abolitionists found their inspiration in Levi Coffin, of Cincinnati, Isaac F. Hopper, of Philadelphia, Lydia Marie Child, of New York, and William Lloyd Garrison, of Boston. They believed that the right and the truth would triumph, and they imperiled their own names and fame in order to embrace those high principles, even though it was at the greatest personal sacrifice.

A state Abolition ticket was again placed before the public in 1844, with King again at its head. This time Clinton county honored it with two hundred and eighteen votes. In 1846, Samuel Lewis, for the same position, received three hundred and ninety-two votes in Clinton county. It has been impossible to ascertain whether the Abolitionists nominated a separate ticket in 1848. In 1850, however, a ticket was put in the field, upon which the name of Edward Smith appeared as the candidate for governor, and Clinton county gave him three hundred and fifty votes. On the same ticket Samuel Lewis received from this county two hundred and sixty-eight votes in 1851 and eight hundred and thirty-nine votes in 1853. The strength of the party steadily grew from this time until 1854, when the Republican party was organized, and Salmon P. Chase received in 1855 and 1857, respectively, one thousand six hundred and forty and one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight votes from this county. William Dennison, in 1859, received one thousand seven hundred twenty-one votes and in 1861 the Republican candidate received two thousand eighty-one votes. From a small beginning, the men who opposed slavery—men who were almost persecuted for their views—grew in power until they finally caused the overthrow of slavery in the United States and established the grand principles to which they had adhered when they were in a hopeless minority.

Among the early workers against slavery in Union township the names of Abram Allen, Jonathan Hadley, Thomas Hibben, Eli McGregor, Thomas Wraith, John Work and many others appear above the rest. It was these men that maintained the "underground railroad" stations and helped the fleeing slaves on their journey north to Canada. In this township the excitement became so great that even religious societies were affected, and, about the year 1844, a split occurred in the Methodist Episcopal church, which resulted in the organization of the Wesleyan Methodist church, a strong anti-slavery denomination. The latter society purchased the old school building at Wilmington and fitted it up for a house of worship. Rev. Mr. Voucher was one of the early ministers in this church, which continued its meetings until the results of the Civil War removed the cause of separation, when most of its members returned to the parent church.

Perhaps the strongest of the Abolitionists in Chester township was John Grant, of New Burlington. His chief aids were Allen Linton, Amos Compton, Sr., and Doctor Brooke, of Oakland. Doctor Brooke became so zealous in the anti-slavery cause that he erected a large building on his land that became known as Liberty Hall, where enthusiastic conventions were held.

In Clark township, Aaron Betts and Christopher Hiatt were the leaders and were constantly persecuted. The story is told that on one occasion, when some anti-slavery speakers were stopping over night at Mr. Hiatt's house, the manes and tails of their horses were trimmed closely by some of the pro-slavery citizens of the community.

Thomas Woodmansee, a pioneer of Washington township, was one of the original anti-slavery men of southern Ohio, and also kept a station on the "underground railroad."

Perhaps Liberty township has the most enviable anti-slavery history. The "underground road" that crossed this township seems to have done a thriving business during the time it was in operation. Elihu Oren's house seems to have been the principal station in the township and was often filled with dusky passengers fresh from the blue grass regions of Kentucky. The chief train on the road seems to have been known as the "Liberator." It was a large, closely-curtained carriage, made for the purpose by Abram Allen, that was driven at night, with the north star as its guide. The old "Liberator" was in the service for several years and carried many passengers, on their way to freedom. At Paintersville, there were two or three ready to relieve it of its passengers and care for them. Joseph Coat, Abel Beven and Doctor Watson knew when it was due to approach and just what disposition to make of its contents. Samuel Haines, of this township, was one of the pioneers of the anti-slavery cause and it is supposed that he cast the only vote that was given in this township for James G. Birney in 1840; but this was the last time he voted alone. The anti-slavery sentiment grew stronger every year.

DESERTED CAMP, STARBUCKTOWN.

MILL DAM AT PORT WILLIAM.

THE DESERTED CAMP.

The following story of the "deserted camp" is taken from the notes of the late Judge Robert B. Harlan, of Wilmington:

"Clinton county is by no means celebrated for her many places of historic interest. A reason for this may be found in the fact that no Indian town was located within her borders, and the white man's war-trace and the Indian warrior's road generally lay to the west or east of us. Among the places of more or less celebrity within the county, the Deserted Camp is perhaps the most conspicuous. This is a well-known landmark, and is prominently shown on the county map. It is situated on a high bank of Todd's fork, about three miles northeast of where Wilmington now is, on the spot now covered in part by Starbucktown. Surrounded by flat and rather low lands, this place of encampment is high and rolling, and, in a state of nature, was covered by a heavy growth of large oaks and such other trees as are common to the forests in the neighborhood. With such a surface, and so convenient both as to wood and water, it offered facilities for encampment unsurpassed for miles around.

"The name of the place was plainly derived from a circumstance which is said to have occurred there several years prior to the first white settlement in this part of the state.

"The tradition of the neighborhood is that an expedition in some force was fitted out in Kentucky during the existence of the long and bloody war between the people of that district and the Indians, to march against the towns of the Miamis or Mad Rivers. On its way, it encamped on Todd's fork, and in the morning it was discovered that one of the men had deserted to the enemy. Several questions arise here, as, What expedition is here referred to? When did it march? And who was the man who abandoned the brave and civilized Kentuckians to unite his fortunes with a savage people?

"The expedition was one of force, or it would never have ventured into the Indian county so far as the Deserted Camp. Four armies (if that is not too magnificent a term) were sent against the Indians mentioned above, and only four at any time.

"The above mentioned 'armies' consisted of Colonel Bowman's, in 1779; Gen. George Roger Clark's first, in 1780; Clark's second, in 1782; and Col. Benjamin Logan's, in 1786. Neither Harmar's, St. Clair's, nor Wayne's need be mentioned in this connection, because they were not fitted out in Kentucky, and were not near the Deserted Camp. Bowman and Clark marched against the Shawnee towns, but they either collected their forces at the mouth of the Licking river, opposite the point where Cincinnati now is, or marched that way. Neither Bowman nor Clark was ever within the limits of what is now Clinton county.

"Logan took another route. He marched by way of Bryants Station, on Elkhorn and the Lower Blue Lick to the Ohio river, where Maysville now is. This was a large force for that day. It was raised in Kentucky, in October, 1786, and Gen. Benjamin Logan received the command. General Logan, from whom Logan county derived its name, was a man well acquainted with Indian warfare and well qualified to command. The numerical strength of the force was variously estimated at from four hundred to seven hundred men. It was the second expedition fitted out in Kentucky that year. The first, commanded by George Rogers Clark, fifteen hundred strong, was on its way to the Illinois country. Kentucky had sustained a heavy drain of her men to supply the requisite force of General Clark's expedition, and when General Logan's call was made and responded to, she was, as it were, deprived of male help and defense.

"The mustering of these forces prevented the meeting of the convention elected to form a constitution for the state.

"The expedition under General Logan was raised for the purpose of punishing the warlike Shawneees for their murders and cruel outrages, and to keep the warriors of the Miami, Wyandot, Delaware and Shawnee tribes close at home, while General Clark was operating against the Wabash and Vermilion Indians.

"The men engaged in General Logan's expedition, among whom were Daniel Boone, Major (afterwards General) Simon Kenton, Judge McManis (an early associate judge of Clinton county) and Col. Robert Patterson (one of the proprietors and on old resident of Dayton), were mostly backwoods riflemen. All were mounted. They crossed the Ohio river at Limestone, now Maysville, and took a course almost directly north, aiming to strike the first blow at the Shawnee town on Mad river, the birthplace of the great Tecumseh, situated about five miles southwest of the site of the present city of Springfield, Clark county. They entered into what is now Clinton county at or near Lynchburg, Richland county, passed east of the sites of Martinsville, Morrisville and Wilmington, and west of the site of New Antioch, and encamped for the night at this point, since known as the Deserted Camp.

"Some time during the night, a Frenchman belonging to Logan's army deserted to give notice to the Indians of the near approach of the Kentuckians. The fact of his desertion was soon ascertained. The army was aroused and put in motion. The race for the Indian village was closely contested, but the deserter, having the advantage of the start, retained it until the end. When Logan arrived at the principal Indian town, the Indians were aroused and evidently trying to make their escape. The deserter had given notice of the approach of the Kentuckians, but not in time to enable the Indians to get away. Their towns were destroyed by fire and their fields of corn laid waste. Twenty warriors were killed, seventy or eighty prisoners taken, and the women and children left but a precarious supply of miserable food.

"The Frenchman who deserted from Logan's army had been taken prisoner by General Clark, in one of his campaigns in Illinois, under such circumstances as plainly showed that he and the Indians were not on opposite sides. He was permitted to accompany the army of Clark to Kentucky, where he remained two years, when he joined the forces of Logan and accompanied them to the crossing of Todd's fork.

"The camp then and there made was a controlling call for the deputy surveyor of Colonel Anderson, the principal surveyor of the lands reserved by the state of Virginia for the officers and men of three years' service in the Virginia, or Continental, establishment. On the county map, it is named the Deserted Camp. Five military surveys start from this spot, as one corner of each of these surveys. All call for 'beginning at Logan's encampment in October, 1786, where a man deserted from him.'"

SHADAGEE.

The location of the court house in what is known as "Shadagee square" has called attention to this peculiar name. Its origin is shrouded in Irish mystery and during the summer of 1915 many persons have been discussing the reason for applying this name to this particular square. The Journal-Republican probably is responsible for applying this name to the square bounded by South, Main, Sugartree and Walnut streets. The word "Shadagee" belongs properly to only the southwest corner of the square and by this peculiar Irish appellation Wilmington people have known it for more than a half century.

When the matter of locating the court house came up and that square was selected by nearly everybody as the proper place for the new building, the Journal-Republican commenced calling the entire square Shadagee, that being the shortest and simplest way to identify it, but, strictly speaking, the nickname Shadagee, through many years, has been applied to the one corner of the square.

From the best information which can be obtained, the corner got its name in the fifties at the time the first railroad was built through Wilmington. The road was known then as the Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville, but now is a part of the Pennsylvania system. The contractor who was building the section through this county employed and brought here a large force of Irish immigrants, many of whom could speak no language but their own, and for several weeks they were housed in temporary shacks near that corner. In those days Wilmington had saloons and bad whiskey provoked many fights. Drunk and disorderly cases were numerous in that section. In fact, Shadagee was Wilmington's bad section in the early days, and it is believed that during the time those Irish workmen were here some one of them applied that name to the fighting corner. Shadagee may be an Irish name, and the condition of that section of the town may have reminded one of the laborers of a similar place in Ireland. This is a surmise, but it is a reasonable one. The corner was given the nickname about that time and it has clung to it ever since. Lately the name was broadened to apply to the whole square, but, in all probability, the word Shadagee is of Irish origin and perhaps was, and it may be still, a well-known place on the "ould sod."

THE CLINTON COUNTY HOME-COMING.

The Clinton county and Wilmington centennial celebration and home-coming opened on Thursday, August 25, 1910. For a month three professional decorators, with their assistants, had been working night and day, and still many of the orders were left unfilled. There was not a business house or a residence but wore its gala dress.

The record shows that two thousand two hundred ninety persons registered, and many more failed to do so. People came from all over the United States; some had not been back for five or ten years, some for thirty or even fifty, but they all joined in the home-coming spirit, making it an occasion to be remembered and an important event in the history of the county.

The home-comers were entertained with band concerts, fire-works, receptions, reunions, addresses from prominent men of the state and county, centennial street pageants, and many other forms of amusement and events of interest to those assembled to enjoy the occasion. Over twenty thousand people thronged the streets on Friday, and the good order everywhere was remarkable.

The one hundredth birthday celebration of Clinton county came to a delightful close on Sunday, August 28. The occasion will long be remembered by the inhabitants of the county and those who returned to their native town, as an event to be remembered a life time.

CLINTON COUNTY INFIRMARY.

The commissioners of Clinton county approved the purchase, on March 20, 1835, of one hundred acres of land one mile east of Wilmington for the consideration of one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars as a site for a county infirmary. A building, erected on the farm a short time afterwards, was constructed with the constant view of strictest economy consistent with the requirements necessary for the convenience and comfort of the occupants. James Harris, James Fife and Isaiah Morris were appointed directors on March 11, 1836, and they at once selected as the superintendent and matron James Wilson and his wife Eleanor, then residents of Wilmington. They were in charge for four years. During their term of office the greatest number of inmates at any one time was seventeen, but the average number was much smaller. The first inmate admitted was Mary Johnson, of Clark township, a native of North Carolina. She had been a resident of Clinton county twenty-six years, a pauper for seventeen years and subject to fits of insanity. Julia Clause, the second person admitted, was from Union township, and was afterwards transferred to the asylum for the insane at Columbus. George Washington Morey, the second superintendent, remained in charge until March, 1845, when he was succeeded by Isaac Pidgeon. Mr. Pidgeon had charge of the infirmary from March, 1845, to March, 1855, and was succeeded by Humphrey Riddell, who was superintendent until September, 1855, when he resigned and was succeeded by William E. Ashcraft, who served until March, 1858. A. Taylor Moore then became superintendent and continued in the position until March, 1861, when he was, in turn, succeeded by Bennet B. Arnold, who remained until March, 1866. William P. Wolf entered upon the duties as superintendent in March, 1866, and continued in charge for three years. Josephus Blair succeeded him in March, 1869, and discharged the duties of that office until March, 1872, when H. F. Armstrong succeeded and continued the same until 1880. Armstrong's place was taken by Joseph N. Stephens, who remained until 1885. In 1885 Ralph Miller was appointed superintendent and remained in office until 1893, when he was succeeded by Joseph N. James. Mr. James served as superintendent for over fifteen years. He was succeeded by Charles Holaday, who gave way, in March, 1913, to Frank L. McDonald, the present incumbent of the office.

The first addition to the infirmary farm was made on April 10, 1856, when fifty acres were purchased from Jesse Hughes in survey No. 1,690, for two thousand six hundred dollars. The next addition was made on December 29, 1859, when thirty-six and three-quarter acres were purchased in the same survey from Jesse Hughes for the consideration of one thousand nine hundred and fourteen dollars and ninety cents. The third addition was made on March 28, 1867, from survey No. 1,162, and consisted of one hundred eleven and forty-one hundredths acres. This land was purchased of the sheriff of the county, who sold it under a partition suit styled Francis M. Underwood vs. Socrates Harlan et al. The price paid was six thousand two hundred sixty-six dollars and twenty-five cents. Fifteen acres in survey No. 2,690, bought on June 1, 1872, of James R. Webb, for one thousand eight hundred dollars, constituted the fourth addition to the farm. On March 6, 1876, a purchase of one and thirty-seven hundredths acres in survey No. 2,693, was made from James Wallace for one hundred sixty-five dollars and forty cents. The sixth addition was purchased from Edith Emma Moody on October 2, 1880, and consisted of fifty-four acres in survey No. 1,693. The sum paid for this tract of land was four thousand eighty-seven dollars and ninety-five cents. This brought the total area of the infirmary farm up to three hundred sixty-eight and fifty-two hundredths acres. However, at the present time (1915), the infirmary farm consists of three hundred and thirty and ninety-eight hundredths acres. When the remainder was disposed of by the county the historian has been unable to discover.

The county commissioners, on March 3, 1902, voted to refer to the voters of the county the question of whether twenty-seven thousand dollars should be spent in repairing and rebuilding the building. On July 11, 1902, the contract for repairing the infirmary was awarded to J. P. Vance for a total of eight thousand four hundred seventy-two dollars and thirty-five cents.

In 1913 a change was made in the management of the infirmary. At that time the board of infirmary directors was abolished and their powers divided between the superintendent and the county commissioners. The commissioners now select the superintendent. The following is a list of the directors:

1836, James Harris, James Fife, Isaiah Morris; 1839, Samuel Smith, William Ruble, Warren Sabin; 1843, Daniel C. CLINTON COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME.

The first official mention of a county children's home came on February 4, 1884, when the board of infirmary directors met in conference with the county commissioners to consider the cost of keeping dependent children in the children's homes of other counties. At this meeting it was agreed that "it would be a saving to the county if a suitable home could be built for the unfortunate and dependent children." The question of erecting such a home was referred to the voters of the county on April 10, 1884, the result being an affirmative majority. By October, 1884, a site had been purchased and buildings erected. William M. Mann, Joseph Noon and Harlan H. Hadley were appointed trustees, with their terms to end, respectively, on the first Monday in March, 1886, 1887 and 1889.

On July 20, 1899, the commissioners rejected bids for the construction of an addition to the children's home on the ground that they were too high for the amount of money in the treasury for that purpose. The report of the trustees for November 30, of the same year, shows thirteen children in the home.

In 1902 it was decided that a new home should be built, and on March 31, of that year, the commissioners accepted plans for a building submitted by Hannoford & Sons, and ordered the auditor to give notice for bids of the work. The bids were received and examined on May 9, and the contract let to J. P. Vance for the following items: Excavating, brick work, carpenter work, cut stone, heating, roofing, painting and glazing, plaster and iron work, at a total of twelve thousand five hundred and sixty-five dollars. The Electric Supply and Construction Company, of Columbus, Ohio, received the contract for the electrical work at one hundred dollars. The old home farm was disposed of and the new buildings erected on the present site of the home, about a mile northwest of the city of Wilmington, on the Xenia pike. The farm consists of forty-six and eighty-three hundredths acres, which was purchased from Shipley McMillan.

The following is a list of those who have acted as trustees of the children's home: 1885-6, William Mann, Joseph Noon, H. H. Hadley; 1889, L. P. Whinery, Joseph Noon, H. H. Hadley; 1892, Matthew Fife, Joseph Noon, H. H. Hadley; 1893, Matthew Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble, H. H. Hadley; 1894, Matthew Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble, Jesse N. Oren; 1897, Matthew Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble, C. Rhonemus; 1899, Jesse N. Oren, Matthew J. Fife, C. Rhonemus; 1900, Jesse N. Oren, Matthew J. Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble; 1901, Jesse N. Oren, Matthew J. Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble, C. Rhonemus; 1902, David M. Rudduck, Matthew J. Fife, Dr. R. T. Trimble, C. Rhonemus; 1908, David M. Rudduck, Matthew J. Fife, Dr. E. Briggs, C. Rhonemus; 1911, David M. Rudduck, J. F. Bennett, Dr. E. Briggs, C. Rhonemus; 1912-15, David M. Rudduck, J. F. Benett, J. E. Clevenger, C. Rhonemus, James E. Smith has been superintendent of the home for many years past.

FRIENDS WITH LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

During the Civil War there lived in Clinton county, about fifty miles northwest of Cincinnati, Isaac and Sarah Harvey. They were of the conservative type of Friends of that generation. Isaac was a man often "moved" to do what seemed, to his prudential neighbors, strange, if not foolish, things, which made some of them call him the "crazy Quaker." But he was also a man who did not feel "easy" in his mind if his concerns could not be translated into conduct.

As the war proceeded, and the cause which produced it persisted, in the summer of 1862 Isaac Harvey developed a compelling concern to visit Washington and lay the burden of his mind upon the heart of the great President. In 1868 Nellie Blessing-Eyster visited the Harveys, and the story of her experience was first printed in Harper's Magazine about 1874. In 1889 it was restated, and published in the New Voice, New York. The quotations are from this story, although we have taken the liberty of supplying the real names in place of the fictitious ones used by the author. We start the story with Nellie Blessing-Eyster's meeting with Isaac Harvey in the hallway of the Harvey home.

THE EYSTER STORY.

"I crossed the threshold, when suddenly, from an armchair just inside the door, there arose a tall, slender old man, who, leaning on his cane, confronted me. His appearance would have been remarkable anywhere. His dress was of coarse, but spotless, white linen, the only bit of color being a narrow black ribbon carelessly knotted under his broad, unstarched collar. His thin hair was white and fine as spun glass, a few locks falling over his high, unwrinkled forehead. His complexion was as fair as a girl's and the facial expression intellectual and benignant. His eyes, however, were concealed by green goggles. Such a vision of majestic old age instantly arrested me. Nothing could have been more unexpected. He at once spoke:

"'Thy footstep is that of a stranger; enter, for indeed thou art welcome,' was his salutation. Upon which, I advanced a step or two, and laid my ungloved hand in his with a few words of greeting.

"'Thy hand is that of a gentlewoman, and thy voice is low and pleasant. Be seated and tell me who thou art.'

"'I have come from the city of Harrisburg, in Pennsylvania, to visit my sister, Grace Harvey. I went with her to meeting this morning and was invited home to dinner by a lady whom my sister calls "Aunt Sarah Harvey." Do you know her?' I replied.

"'Yes, I do.' There was an instant's pause, when he said: 'Thou hast come, then, from the great world of which I know but little. God—ever blessed be His holy name—has seen fit to take away my sight, but I have witnessed the coming of the Lord, and mine eyes have seen the salvation of his people, so I am content.' and, clasping his long, well-shaped hands, his lips moved as if in prayer. My emotions were alive. They were those of awe, reverence and admiration commingled. His articulation was unusually distinct, every word having a purity of finish which would have been marked in the diction of a professional elocutionist.

"Surely this could not be Uncle Isaac, even though he was in a certain sense a 'little queer.' Before he again spoke, Aunt Sarah, Rebecca and my sister entered.

"'Thee got here first I see," said Aunt Sarah. 'Now, dear, thee must feel at home.' Let me take thy hat. We are plain people, but thee and Grace are truly welcome. Hast thou felt lonely this morning, father?' she asked, pushing aside the stray locks with which a breeze was toying, 'and did thy poor eyes pain thee much?'

"This, then, was the 'Crazy Quaker.' His smile was perfect, as he answered gently: 'Oh, no, mother, I forgot my eyes.' His words came to me very clearly: 'For our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.' I thank thee for bringing the young stranger home. I will enjoy her speech.'

"'I am the one to feel grateful, sir,' I replied impulsively. 'I have traveled a great deal in my life, but never before been in a place like this. Everything charms me, and I am glad of the privilege to just sit still and hear you talk. May I not also call you "Uncle Isaac?"'

"'Yes, if it pleaseth thee; but thou must not flatter. There is no jewel like unto sincerity; thy tones are earnest.'

"Aunt Sarah's kind heart was satisfied. 'I see three can entertain each other,' she said, 'so I will get dinner. Grace, thee and daughter can help me.' Uncle Isaac and I were left alone. He broke the silence by asking: 'Hast thou seen General Grant? Dost thou think him a good man? I long to hear his voice, and daily pray to God to strengthen his hands and to make him worthy of the great work to which he has been called.'

"I said I knew him only as the soldier-statesman, but I felt that he, perhaps, more than any living American, would perfect the grand schemes left unfinished by the death of Abraham Lincoln. At the mention of that name the old man's face glowed with a beauty almost divine. Every fiber in his body seemed animated with new life. Laying his hand lightly upon my shoulder, he asked in a voice of suppressed eagerness, 'Hast thou seen Abraham Lincoln?'

" 'Yes,' I said. 'Once I stood so near him while he addressed a multitude that every line of his grand face was as visible to me as is yours. It was the last time that he spoke to a crowd as Abraham Lincoln, citizen, for in a few days he took the oath of office as President of the United States. Once again I stood near him, but it was to look upon his coffined face as it lay in state in the Senate chamber of Pennsylvania. Did you ever see him, sir?'

"I asked the question mechanically, for, somehow, nothing seemed to me more unlikely.

" 'Ah, yes, yes; and a sadder face than his was then no one ever looked upon.'

"I was alive with curiosity, and exclaimed, 'Why, Uncle Isaac! where was he, and under what circumstances? Please tell me.'

" 'Perhaps thou wilt not sympathize with me. I rarely speak of these things save among my own people. In what light dost thou view the colored race?'

"The freeing of the slaves and the education of the freedmen had long been among my 'enthusiasms,' so, when called upon to 'rehearse the articles of my belief,' I did it so promptly that he could not doubt my sincerity. Folding his thin hands, his face wearing an expression of sweet gravity, and his words coming slowly as if he was weighing the value of each, he said:

" 'I will answer thy question. My quiet life has known few storms. I have loved God as my first, best and dearest friend, and He has ever dealt most tenderly with me.

" 'During the first years of the great rebellion, when I read and heard of the condition of the poor crushed negroes, I tried to think it was a cunning device of bad men to create greater enmity between the North and the South; but when I read Lincoln's speeches, I thought so good and wise a man could not be deceived, and then I resolved to go and see for yourself. At one of our first-day meetings I spoke of my intention, but although the brethren felt as I did upon the subject, they said it was rash for me to expose my life, for I could do no good. Nevertheless, I went, traveling on horseback through most of the Southland.

" 'Often my life was in danger from guerillas, but there was always an unseen arm between me and the actual foe, and in a few weeks I returned, saying the half had not been told of the sufferings of these poor, despised, yet God-fearing and God-trusting people.'

"Here his voice trembled with the overflow of pity of which his heart seemed the fountain.

" 'That summer,' he continued, 'I plowed and reaped and gathered in my harvest as usual. Day by day I prayed, at home and in the field, that God would show his delivering power as He had to the children of Israel. Nothing seemed to come in answer. Occasionally, during the beginning of the war, news reached us that battles had been fought by the Northern men and victories won, but still the poor colored people were not let go.

" 'One day, while plowing, I heard a voice, whether inside or outside of me I knew not, but I was awake. It said: "Go thou and see the President." I answered: "Yea, Lord, Thy servant heareth." And, unhitching my plow, I went at once to the house and said to mother: "Wilt thou go with me to Washington to see the President?" "Who sends thee?' she asked. "The Lord," I answered. "Where thou goest I will go," said mother, and began to make ready.

" 'My friends called me crazed; some said that this trip would be more foolish than the first, and that I who had never been to Washington and knew no one in it, could not gain access to the great President. The Lord knew I did not want to be foolhardy, but I had that on my mind which I must tell President Lincoln, and I had faith that He who feedeth the sparrows would direct me.

" 'We left here on the 17th of ninth month, 1862, the first time mother had been fifty miles from home in sixty years. It was a pleasant morning. Before we left the house we prayed that God would direct our wanderings, or, if He saw best, direct us to return. Part of our journey was by stage. Every one looked at and spoke to us kindly. Oh, God's world is beautiful when we see the invisible in it.

" 'We got to Washington the next morning. It was about early candle light, and there was so much confusion at the depot and on the street that mother clung to my arm, saying: "Oh, Isaac, we ought not to have come here! It looks like Babylon!" "But the Lord will help if we have faith that we are doing His will," I replied, and we walked away from the cars.

" 'Under a lamp-post there stood a noble-looking man reading a letter. I stepped before him and said: "Good friend, wilt thou tell us where to find President Lincoln?"

" 'He looked us all over before he spoke. We were neat and clean, and soon his face got bright and smiling, and he asked us a few plain questions. I told him we were Friends from Ohio who had come all of these weary miles to say a few words with President Lincoln. because the Lord had sent us. He nodded his head and said, "I understand." Then he took us to a large house, called Willard's hotel, and up to a little room away from all the noise.

" ' "Stay here," he said, "and I will see when the President can admit you." He was gone a long time, but meanwhile a young man brought us up a nice supper, which mother said was very hospitable in him, and when the gentleman returned he handed me a slip of paper upon which was written: "Admit the bearer to the chamber of the President at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning." My heart was so full of gratitude that I could not express my thanksgiving in words. That night was as peaceful as those at home in the meadows.

" 'The next morning the kind gentleman came and conducted us to the house near by in which the President lived. Every one whom we met seemed to know our conductor and took off their hats to him. I was glad that he had so many friends. At the door of the big porch he left us. promising to return in an hour. "You must make your talk with him brief," he said. "A big battle has just been fought at Antietam. The North is victorious, but at least twelve thousand men have been killed or wounded, and the President, like the rest of us, is in great trouble."

" 'I did not speak. I could not. The room into which we were first shown was full of people, all waiting, we supposed, to see the President. "Ah, Isaac, we shall not get near him today. See the anxious faces who come before us," whispered mother. "As God wills," I said.

" 'It was a sad place to be in, truly. There were soldiers' wives and wounded soldiers sitting around the large room, and not a soul but from whom joy and peace seemed to have fled. Some were weeping; soldiers with clinking spurs and short swords were rapidly walking through the halls; men with newspapers in their hands were reading the news from the seat of war, and the President's house seemed the center of the world. I felt what a solemn thing it must be to have so much power.'

"Here Uncle Isaac's voice got husky and tears fell from his eyes upon his wrinkled hands. I reverently brushed them off, and in a few minutes he continued:

"'When the summons came for us to enter—it was in advance of the others—my knees smote together, and for an instant I tottered. "Keep heart, Isaac," mother whispered, and we went forward. I fear thou wilt think me vain if I tell what followed.

"'"No fear, Uncle Isaac. Please proceed."

"'It seemed so wonderful that for a moment, I could not realize it. To think that such humble people as we were should be there in the actual presence of the greatest and best man in the world, and to be received by him as kindly, as if he was our own son, made me feel very strange. He shook hands with us and put his chair between us. Oh, how I honored the good man! But I said: "Wilt thou pardon me that I do not remove my hat?" Then he smiled, and his grave face lit up as he said, "Certainly, I understand it all." The dear, dear man'—and again Uncle Isaac stopped as though to revel, as a devout nun counts her beads, in the memory of that interview.

"But I was impatient. 'What, then, sir?' The answer came with a solemnity indescribable. My curiosity and his reminiscence were not in harmony.

"'Of that half hour it does not become me to speak. I will think of it gratefully throughout eternity. At last we had to go. The President took a hand of each of us in his, saying, "I thank you for this visit. May God bless you." Was there ever greater condescension than that? Just then I asked him if he would object to writing just a line or two, certifying that I had fulfilled my mission, so that I could show it to the council at home. He sat down to his table. Wilt thou open the drawer of that old secretary in the corner behind thee, and hand me a little box from therein?'

"Up to this moment I had not noticed my surroundings. The old-fashioned furniture was oiled and rubbed, and a large secretary which belonged to the colonial period was conspicuous. I obeyed instructions, and soon placed in the old man's trembling fingers a small, square tin box which was as bright as silver. Between two layers of cotton was a folded paper, already yellow. The words were verbatim these:

"'I take pleasure in asserting that I have had profitable intercourse with friend Isaac Harvey and his good wife, Sarah Harvey. May the Lord comfort them as they have sustained me. ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

"'September 19, 1862.'

"'Uncle Isaac!' I exclaimed, 'I can scarcely realize that away off here in the backwoods I should read such words traced by Mr. Lincoln's own hands. How singular!'

"'Not more so than the whole event was to us, dear child, from the first to the last. The following second-day the preliminary Proclamation of Emancipation was issued. Thank God! Thank God!'

"It is not possible to depict the devout fervor of the old patriarch's thanksgiving.

"'Our new friend was waiting at the outside door when we came out. I showed him the testimonial. He nodded his head affirmatively and said: "It is well,"

"'We soon left Washington, for our work was done and I longed for the quiet of home. Our friend took us to the omnibus which conveyed us to the cars, having treated us with a gracious hospitality which I can never forget. May the Lord care for him as he cared for us.'

"'Did you not learn his name?' I inquired, wondering what official in those days would have bestowed so much time and courtesy upon these unpretending folk.

"'Yes; he is high in the esteem of men and they call him Salmon P. Chase.'

"'Truly,' I thought, 'God exalteth the lowly, and they who trust in Him shall never be confounded.'

"In the published diary of Mr. Chase he describes the eventful cabinet meeting prior to the announcement, Monday, September 22, 1862. The Sunday morning directly succeeding Uncle Isaac's visit, Mr. Lincoln worked upon the Proclamation. God alone knows to what extent the President's long desired step was influenced by that half-hour's visit with Uncle Isaac; but I cannot help feeling that I have read a page in his history which would have been sealed but for my unexpected meeting with that precious old Quaker.

"I have repeated our conversation, word for word, but I can no more express the timbre of Uncle Isaac's sympathetic tones than I can arrange in bars and notes the song of a soaring skylark."

We pass suddenly from the poetic diction of Nellie Blessing-Eyster, to the prosaic confirmatory facts underlying the story. There are two very reliable sources of information along this line, represented by the two surviving sons of Isaac and Sarah Harvey. The son, Jesse, lives on the old homestead, near Clarksville, Ohio. The son, William, resides at Americus, Kansas. Jesse has no doubt that the story as told by Nellie Blessing-Eyster is substantially as she received it from his father.

Henry W. Wilbur spent two days in the company of William Harvey, at Indiana yearly meeting in August, 1911. He has many of the evident characteristics of his father, although he strongly resembles his mother. From William it was learned, as might have been expected, that his father was a pronounced antebellum abolitionist, and was connected with the "underground railroad." William was living at home when Isaac and Sarah made their visit to Washington, and remembers the details of his trip as it was told by his parents.

Isaac Harvey does not seem to have told Nellie Blessing-Eyster the subject matter of the concern which took him to the capital and the White House. William says that his father suggested to President Lincoln the advisability of stopping hostilities on an agreement of the government to pay to the owners three hundred dollars for each man, woman and child held in bondage in the country. The President felt sure that such a proposition would not be accepted by the leaders or the rank and file of the Confederacy.

Compensated emancipation, however, was not a new idea for President Lincoln. In March, 1862, he suggested that Congress pass a joint resolution providing that the United States co-operate with any state which may adopt gradual emancipation, to the extent of giving pecuniary aid to any commonwealth which should adopt this policy. This resolution passed both houses of Congress, but no practical result followed. It is well to remember that the original or preliminary draft of the Proclamation provided for the compensation of all loyal people, on the close of the rebellion, for all losses incurred by them, including the loss of slaves.

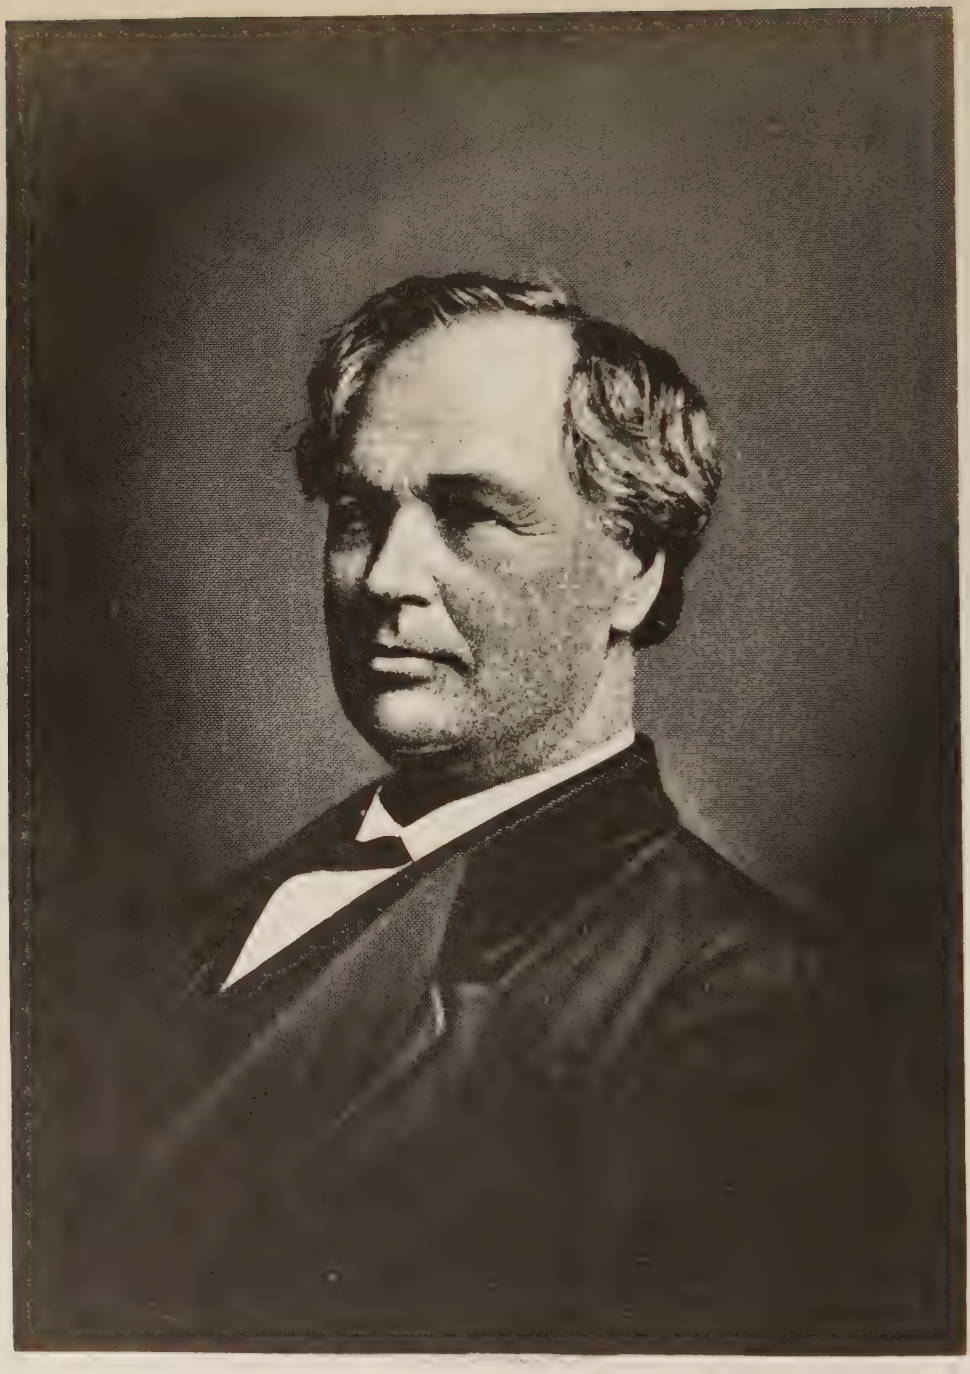
Whether the visit of Isaac and Sarah Harvey helped to hasten the initial draft of the Emancipation Proclamation is a question which must always remain in the field of conjecture. But one thing is certain, there was a very sudden and rather remarkable change in the President's mind on the subject. This followed several events which came in rapid order. On the 19th of August, 1862, Horace Greeley issued his famous open letter to the President, entitled "The Prayer of Twenty Millions." It was answered by the President on the 22d, in one of Lincoln's most terse and epigrammatic utterances. At that time he did not see that a vigorous emancipation policy on the part of the President would be wise or helpful. On the 13th of September a delegation from Protestant churches in Chicago visited the president, and vigorously urged him to take a pronounced stand for the overthrow of slavery. Still he was not convinced.

On the 19th, six days later, the Harveys were at the White House, and on the 22d the country was electrified by the preliminary draft of the Emancipation Proclamation being flashed over the wires.

Such was the order of events leading up to one of the epoch-making acts in human history. Remembering how responsive Lincoln was to the finer and deeper motives and emotions of the human heart, it is not hard to believe that the visit of Isaac and Sarah

Harvey came to the great President as a sort of spiritual revelation, confirming the external events and internal leadings which caused President Lincoln to make the final decision in the case as he did and when he did.

In any event, the story as told by Nellie Blessing-Eyster is worth preserving for its portrayal of the light and leadings of a Friend who represented the spirit of an older time, and also for its connection with Abraham Lincoln, now being considered the typical, if not the first American.



J. W. Denver

BIOGRAPHICAL

GEN. JAMES WILLIAM DENVER.

"Through events God makes all society plastic, and then raises up some great man to stamp his image and superscription upon the nation's hot and glowing heart." Few citizens of this great state of Ohio have ever served humanity or held the public esteeem in such generous measure as has the late Gen. James W. Denver. Certainly, few have achieved the distinction accorded him during a long and illustrious career. At the zenith of his powers, he became a national figure, and in this phase of his life, as well as in those of lesser public importance, he acquitted himself with signal honor and ability. This man seems to have leaped with a bound into places of distinction achieved by others only after slow and arduous labor. Through the successive stages of soldier, military official, lawyer, and statesman, he arose to the place of legislator in the national halls of Congress, governor of a Western territory, now a state, and general in the United States army. And in all of these, so great was his public service, that he reflected honor and glory upon the place that could claim him as citizen.

James W. Denver, son of Capt. Patrick and Jane (Campbell) Denver, was born at Winchester, Virginia, on October 23, 1817, descendant of a family whose history carries us back to the days of William the Conqueror. On the day that this nation laid to rest the "Father of his country" there landed on these shores a man whose part in the Irish rebellion had caused him to flee the mother country to avoid the penalty which the British government demanded for his patriotism, for a price had been put upon his head. This was Patrick Denver, grandfather of Gen. James W. Denver.

With his family, Patrick Denver went to the beautiful valley of Virginia to make his home. One of his sons, Arthur, was in the naval service, and was one of the men taken in Chesapeake bay and confined at Halifax by British authority to be sent to England on trial for treason, on the ground that his allegiance was due England, though he was an adopted citizen of the United States. Another son, Patrick, Jr., father of the subject of this biography, served first as a lieutenant, and then as a captain in the American army in the War of 1812. This young soldier married Jane Campbell, whose family was also distinguished for military service. In 1830 Capt. Patrick Denver removed with his family to this county, locating first at Wilmington and eventually settling on a farm near that town.

James, afterward General Denver, was the eldest of eleven children. His youth and early manhood were spent on the paternal farm, which he left in order to study law, graduating from the Cincinnati law school in the spring of 1844. For a short time thereafter he practiced law and edited the Thomas Jefferson, a Democratic newspaper at Xenia, Ohio. He then went westward, locating at Plattsburg, Missouri, and later, at Platte City, in the same state, where he remained until the outbreak of the war with Mexico. Fired with patriotic zeal, he recruited Company H of the Twelfth United States Volunteer Infantry, of which he was commissioned captain on April 9, 1847, serving in General Scott's army until the termination of hostilities. He then returned to Platte county, Missouri, and edited the Platte Argus until suddenly word came from beyond the Rocky mountains that there was found at last the fabled land of gold. In 1850 James Denver's adventurous nature sought new fields of conquest, and with a little band of followers, he started bravely across the Western plains and trackless ranges of the giant mountains. Only stout hearts could have defied the dangers and hardships that were before them, and although the ranks of the little group of travelers were decimated by disease, the survivors pushed onward until their hazardous journey was accomplished.

Finally, the mountains were climbed and the streams forded, and the forests traversed, and Sacramento was reached. It offered an attractive stopping-place, and there General Denver remained until the spring of 1851, when he engaged in trading between Humboldt bay and the mines. Temperamentally unable to keep out of politics, it was not long until his personal qualities had endeared him to the people, and in 1852 we find him a state senator.

It was during this time that he was placed in command by Governor Bigler of a relief train to rescue a large party of emigrants snow-bound in the Sierra Nevada mountains. Here, as in all of the experiences of his varied career, his physical bravery and moral courage enabled him to accomplish what he set out to do.

Easily becoming a conspicuous figure in California state politics, this born leader, in 1853, was elected secretary of state, which office he held until the autumn of 1855. The preceding fall he had been elected by the Democratic party to the thirty-fourth Congress of the United States from California, which state then had only two representatives. This session convened in December, 1855, and in this Congress the Hon. James Denver became a useful and prominent member, being made chairman of the select committee on the Pacific railroad, which reported a bill for the construction of three trans-continental lines. This seemed a wild scheme to the majority of the Congress, and later the bill, as reported, was limited to the construction of the Union Pacific, which bill was favorably received. Mr. Denver did not seek a re-nomination, and, at the expiration of his congressional term, President Buchanan appointed him commissioner of Indian affairs, the duties of which office he was faithfully discharging when he was urged to succeed Hon. Robert J. Walker, in the difficult management of affairs in Kansas territory. Reluctantly he consented to accept the governorship of that strife-torn territory, and entered upon his duties in December, 1857. Previously to his acceptance of this office, four territorial governors, even though backed by federal troops, had resigned their office, driven off by threats of assassination by outlaws, and it was generally held to be as much as a man's life was worth to accept the office of governor and rule those lawless lands. But Governor Denver, with characteristic bravery, determined to hold aloof from all factions, and to do his duty conscientiously. To this end, he dismissed the military, and adopted a course so firm, yet so just to all parties, that order was restored, and "bleeding Kansas" was no longer a reproach to the government or a terror to her neighbors. Colorado was then a portion of Kansas, and her beautiful capital city at Denver bears the name of the courageous man who thus brought about peace, order and prosperity within the borders of the territory.

Taking a peculiar and almost paternal interest in the welfare of the Indians, Governor Denver resigned from office on October 10, 1858, and returned to the duties of commissioner of Indian affairs, in which capacity he served until March 11, 1859, returning then to California. He later entered the race for United States senator from that state, but was defeated by two votes.

With such a record, it is not surprising that, at the outbreak of the Civil War, Governor Denver warmly espoused the cause of the Union, and, without solicitation on his part, received from President Lincoln, on August 14, 1861, the commission of brigadier-general of volunteers. General Denver was first placed in command of all the troops in Kansas, but soon afterward was sent to Pittsburg Landing, on General Rosecrans' staff, and from there was transferred to a more active field, being in command of the Third Brigade of Sherman's Division, in the Army of the Tennessee, until April, 1863. Then it was that personal affairs called him from the life of an army officer.

General Denver later engaged in the practice of law at Washington, D. C., having previously established his home in Wilmington, Ohio. In 1876, and again in 1880, he had become so conspicuous in national affairs that his name was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

In 1873 General Denver took an active part in organizing the veterans of the Mexican War, and he was the president of this national society until the time of his death. Among his last public services, was an effort to have Congress pass an act giving a twelve-dollar-a-month pension to the old Mexican War veterans.

On November 26, 1856, James W. Denver was married to Miss Louise C. Rombach, of Wilmington, Ohio, and to this union four children were born. Mrs. Katharine Denver Williams, of Wilmington; J. W. Denver, Jr.; Mrs. Mary Louise Lindley, of New York City, and Matthew R. Denver, president of the Clinton County National Bank, of Wilmington, mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Mrs. Williams is a woman of rare intellectual attainments, a social leader of distinction and president of the Civic League of Wilmington.

Gen. James W. Denver, noted soldier, lawyer and statesman, died on August 9, 1902, in Washington, D. C. Six feet two inches in stature and of fine proportions, General Denver was a man of dignified and commanding presence. Genial and refined, he had the happy faculty of attracting warm friendships, and retaining them. His cultivated mind was a storehouse of information, and his heart was big and broad in its sympathies.

This incomplete record of the life of Gen. James W. Denver shows that his name and the record of his works are graven deeply on the history of this country, and that to him, as a man and as a public servant, are due not only the honor but the gratitude of a people. Fearless in the face of danger that would have daunted weaker men, active, with an energy that seemed to know no bounds; loyal to his conception of right, even though he stood alone, this great man was born to be a leader, and to direct the destinies of a people. But "we yield homage only to the greatness that is goodness," and so, in placing the laurel wreath upon the brow of this man, we pay grateful and earnest tribute to nobility of heart and brain.

WILL R. HALE, D. D. S.

"The true man binds all his days together with an earnest, intense, passionate purpose. His yesterdays, todays and tomorrows march together, one solid column, animated by one thought, constrained by one conspiracy of desire, energizing toward one holy and helpful purpose, to serve man and love God." There seems a peculiar appropriateness in applying these words to the life of the man whose record is here briefly outlined, for he was favored by fortune to such an extent as to enable him to have a definite plan as to his life work as well as the means of carrying it out. However, it was necessary that he have also the force of character to transform opportunity into achievement, and the skill with which he has accomplished this, gives his biography a merited place in the present volume. Dr. Will R. Hale, a man of splendid professional attainments and of exemplary character, was born on August 7, 1854, in Wilmington, his father having come to Clinton county with five brothers in 1808.

Joseph Hale, father of Will R., was a prominent merchant in this city for a period of forty-five years. He came in pioneer days from North Carolina with his brothers William, Samuel, Harmony, Jacob and Eli. During all of his life in this state he engaged in the mercantile business, and passed away on February 24, 1890. In his personal character which was noted for rectitude, and in his business principles which were of the highest type, Mr. Hale handed down a worthy name to the son who, as he grew up in the community, took a prominent place. The mother, formerly Sarah Sewell, was born in Clinton county, and was a daughter of Amos T. Sewell, who was recorder of the county for thirty-two years, dying in office in the year 1855.

Will R. Hale has always lived in Wilmington. During the winters of 1872-73-74 he attended Wilmington College, and two years later was graduated from the department of dental surgery of the Ohio Dental College in Cincinnati. Having completed his studies with honors, the young dentist at once opened an office in his native city, and has been in continuous practice ever since. It may be of interest to note that out of a class of forty-seven members, only seventeen are now living.

On October 31, 1877, Will R. Hale was married to Amy Fuller, whose parents, Milton and Margaret (Gaither) Fuller, were residents of this county. The eldest child born of this union, a son, is now a prominent dentist living in Los Angeles, California. Their only daughter is named Mary Louisa Hale.

The fact that Doctor Hale is a member of both the Ohio State and National Dental societies indicates the position he occupies in the profession, and it might be added that his name and membership honors both organizations.

In spite of a busy professional life, Doctor Hale has found time for some of the social and fraternal organizations which broaden and beautify existence. The Doctor is a member of the Masonic lodge, and is also an Elk. In matters relating to politics, he is an independent voter.

Dr. and Mrs. Will R. Hale have traveled extensively, taking many delightful journeys to various parts of the country. Their beautiful home has been the scene of numerous attractive social affairs. Both Doctor and Mrs. Hale are genial in manner, warm in their friendships, broad in their outlook upon life, and true in their sympathies.

As a professional man, Doctor Hale is deservedly popular, as a citizen he is upright and generous, as a neighbor and friend, sincere. He is the type of man that every community needs.

CLIFTON D. BAILEY.

One of the most important industrial establishments in this part of the state of Ohio is the extensive plant of the Champion Bridge Company, at Wilmington, Clinton county, of which, for the past ten years, the gentleman whose name the reader notes above has been the superintendent and one of the important factors. Mr. Bailey was born in Clinton county and ever has had the interests of the county very dearly at heart. His position as superintendent of one of the chief industrial enterprises of the county gives him larger opportunity for the exercise of his wide influence in industrial affairs and it is undoubted that he has thus been able to do much for the community, a measure of service which it would be difficult properly to estimate. Needless to say he occupied a high place in the confidence and esteem of his associates in business and the highest regard of all who know him.

Clifton D. Bailey was born on a farm near Dover, in Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, on December 29, 1859, son of William and Maria (Tumlin) Bailey, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born on the same farm on which his son was born, in 1834, and died in 1865, and the latter of whom was born in Union township on July 1, 1839, and is still living.

William Bailey was the son of George and Lydia Bailey, both natives of this county, members of pioneer families. George Bailey's father was Daniel Bailey, who emigrated from South Carolina to Ohio, becoming one of the very earliest settlers in Union township. He and his wife were members of the Friends church and were active in all good works in the pioneer days of this county, having been accounted among the leaders of the social order in the community in which they settled. George Bailey was reared to manhood in Union township and then bought a farm in Liberty township, where he spent the rest of his life. He also was a Quaker, following the faith of his parents, and was a man of large influence in his neighborhood; a thrifty and industrious farmer and an excellent citizen. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, of whom William was the second in order of birth. William Bailey was reared on the home farm, a part of which he continued to manage after his marriage, and there he spent the rest of his life. He married Maria Tumlin, a member of one of the old families of this county and died at the age of thirty-one, leaving a widow and two sons, Corwin A., who is a machinist, living at Wilmington, this county, and Clifton D., the immediate subject of this sketch. His widow married, secondly, George R. Acre, of Wilmingtton, a carpenter, but there was no issue to this second union.

Clifton D. Bailey was but six years of age when his father died and he was reared on his grandfather's farm, remaining there until he was eighteen years of age, at which time he went to Wilmington to learn the blacksmith trade in the shops of the Champion Bridge Company and has been connected with that concern ever since, save for three years when he was working at Hamilton, Ohio. In 1906 Mr. Bailey was made superintendent of the shops of the Champion Bridge Company and ever since has occupied that important and responsible position.

On February 12, 1880, Clifton D. Bailey was united in marriage to Ella Johnson, who was born in Liberty township, this county, daughter of Harvey A. Johnson, a well-known Liberty township farmer, who still is living in that township, and to this union two children have been born, Elsie M., on May 18, 1883, and William A., September 5, 1884, living at Chicago Junction, Ohio, married Susan Haines and has two children.

Elsie M. Bailey was united in marriage on November 17, 1909, to Dr. Chester E. Kinzel, of Wilmington, present coroner of Clinton county, who was born in Zanesville, Ohio, on May 13, 1882, son of John W. and Christina (Mohler) Kinzel, both natives of Morgan county, this state, the former of whom was born in 1846 and died in 1900, and the latter of whom was born in 1852 and died in 1884. John Kinzel was a son of Charles and Lavina (Beckwith) Kinzel. The father of Charles was a German immigrant who came to America and located in the neighborhood of the city of Baltimore, where he became a farmer., Charles Kinzel, born in 1804, married Lavina Beckwith and about the year 1825 emigrated to Ohio, settling in Morgan county, where he bought a farm and operated extensive salt furnaces. He and his wife were the parents of seven children. Their son, John, married Christina Mohler, daughter of Caspar Mohler and wife, Germans who came to Ohio from Pennsylvania, settling in Morgan county, where they reared a family of ten children, and moved to Zanesville, this state, where Casper Mohler worked as a mechanic in a tile factory. He and his wife were the parents of three children: Harry G., a lawyer at Spokane, Washington; Dr. Chester E., of Wilmington, and Ida, who died at the age of two years. The mother of these children dying when Chester E. was three years of age, John Kinzel married, secondly, Mary Brown, of Zanesville, and continued to live in that city the rest of his life, his widow still living there.

Chester E. Kinzel was reared in the home of an aunt, Mrs. Mary L. Deaver, of Morgan county, and received his elementary education in the public schools of that county. After a course in a normal school, he began teaching school and for three years was thus engaged, after which he entered the Starling Medical School, at Columbus, Ohio, and was graduated from that institution in 1906, in July of which year he came to this county, locating in Wilmington, where he engaged in the practice of his profession and has thus been engaged ever since. A year or two previous to the election of 1914, Doctor Kinzel had been appointed coroner of Clinton county, to fill out an unexpired term, and in the following election was elected to that office and is now serving the public in that capacity. Doctor Kinzel is a Republican and a member of the Masons, the Elks and the Eagles. He and his wife are the parents of one child, a son, William Nelson, born on September 4, 1913.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey own and live in the famous old brick mansion on West Main street in Wilmington, which was built more than one hundred years ago and which was the birthplace of Addison Russell, whose memory ever will live in and about Wilmington. This fine old mansion is still in good condition and is the scene of much genial hospitality, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey being fond of entertaining their friends.

CHARLES CURL.

Charles Curl, mayor of Wilmington, is a splendid illustration of success won through self-reliance and earnest endeavor, having worked his way up through the successive stages of printer's apprentice, drug clerk, reporter and editor, and has been given the highest office it is in the power of his city to bestow. When only fifteen years old he learned to set type in a newspaper office, and since that day, the odor of printer's ink brings memories of the time when he had not yet learned to fear the "blue pencil."

Charles Curl was born while his mother was on a visit to Winchester, Frederick county, Virginia, February 29, 1844, although his parents were, at the time, residents of Clinton county. The father and mother were natives of Virginia, he being Daniel, and she, Harriett (Hackney) Curl, both of Irish ancestry. The former came to this county in the early days of 1838, his father being a grocer in Wilmington during the Civil War. Daniel died in 1881, and his widow is dead also.

The Curl home was one of integrity where the highest principles of life and conduct were inculcated, but it was also a place of strenuous work and struggle against the physical conditions that all parents of large families must face unless they are unusually blessed with this world's goods. Of the eight children of this home, four are still living. These are Mrs. Jennie L. Drake, of New Vienna, Ohio; Robert H., secretary of the Typographical Union at Cincinnati; Mrs. Mary L. Lewis, of Mt. Auburn, Ohio, and Charles, the subject of this sketch.

What education was obtainable to Charles Curl before his fifteenth year, he acquired in the schools of Wilmington, and on August 1, 1859, he secured employment in the office of the Clinton Republican, where he remained for three years, being glad to work at a salary of seventy-five dollars a year. This apprenticeship was followed by a trip to the city of Cincinnati, where he worked for the Cincinnati Enquirer for two years, at the end of which time he took up the duties of a drug clerk in a store at Sixth and Walnut streets, in that city. Having gained considerable experience in this vocation, Mr. Curl returned to his home and was employed in the drug store of P. R. Way & Company, where he remained for two years.

But again the newspaper field called the young man, and, journeying to Washington Court House, he worked in the offices of both the Register and Herald. On April 23, 1869, he returned to Wilmington and entered for the second time the office of the Clinton Republican, which was then owned by William B. Fisher and Addison B. Russell, then secretary of state. This proved a long period of service, for not until he took the chair of mayor did he sever his connections with the paper. This was on January 1, 1914, he having been elected the previous fall. Since being elected mayor, Mr. Curl has done considerable general newspaper work, being local representative for several out-of-town papers. The present honor conferred upon Mr. Curl is not the first political office he has held. For twelve years Mr. Curl was clerk of Union township, a position which might be considered a stepping-stone to his present office. He was also a member of the city council for six years, this including the period during which the opera house and city hall were built, and to both of these civic enterprises, Mr. Curl gave his best endeavor.

On December 28, 1869, Charles Curl was united in marriage to Martha Matilda Marble, a daughter of David Marble of the famous family of Marblehead, Massachusetts. The mother of Martha Matilda Marble was a Vandervort, one of the most widely-known families of this county, and a family of great influence. Of the children born of this marriage, Edgar died at the age of five weeks; Harriett Eliza married the Hon. R. E. Holliday, United States Consul to Santiago, Cuba, for the past twelve years, and recently promoted from fourth-class to second-class consulship, and they have three children, Martha, Margaret and Mary.

Mr. and Mrs. Curl are prominent socially in Wilmington society, and they have always stood for those substantial values which have to do with the higher life of the community. They are members of the Friends church, and give both their time and their means to build up their denomination.

Mr. Curl is a Republican, and has since youth had the interests of this party at heart.

Mr. Curl has a genial nature, a strong, forceful personality that both attracts and retains friends, a keen, analytical mind, and those qualities of leadership which inspire confidence and respect. Although a man much in public life, he is not self-seeking, for the honors which have come to him have been more in the form of recognition of public service than as "political plums." Mr. Curl's tastes are refined, and his influence is always on the side of right and justice.

EMERY R. BALES.

If one were in search of a representative business man of any community he would select a man of the type of Emery R. Bales, secretary and treasurer of the Wilmington Casting Company. Still a young man in years, Mr. Bales is, of course, enthusiastic, but he has other qualities that are just as necessary for the success of the man active in commercial and industrial pursuits. It is by reason of this combination of characteristics that the success of the well-known firm has been achieved, for it is not inappropriate to say that this firm is, no doubt, the leading one of its kind in this vicinity. They are extensive manufacturers of gray-iron castings.

Emery R. Bales was born on a farm in Chester township, Clinton county, on April 23, 1882, a son of William H. and Cordelia J. (Faulkner) Bales, both of whom were natives of Greene county.

William H. Bales located in Chester township in 1881, and lived there until the fall of 1905, when he removed to Wilmington, where he died on January 11, 1906. The mother, whose industry and devotion lightened many a burden for the husband and children of this home, passed away in March, 1910. William H. and Cordelia J. Bales were the parents of five children, as follow: Emery R., the subject of this biography; Thomas M., professor in Wilmington College; Elisha Allen, deceased at the age of fourteen; Lorena F., of Wilmington, and Ilo H., of Wilmington.

Emery R. Bales was fortunate in that he was able to acquire more than the education possible to the average boy, for after the common school course he was permitted to attend Wilmington College, interspersing farm work with the time spent in school. He was graduated from the college in 1904, and then taught school for one year in Sabina, Ohio. Mr. Bales next found employment in the First National Bank of Wilmington, and remained there for the next seven and one-half years, giving satisfaction in his work. In March, 1913, he decided to go into business for himself, and formed the partnership with E. E. Terrell, which continued to July 1, 1915. An extensive volume of business was built up, the special lines being real estate and insurance. This partnership was dissolved on July 1, 1915, that Mr. Bales might take up his interest in the castings company.

On March 23, 1910, Emery R. Bales was united in marriage with Elizabeth E. Magee, who was born in Chester township, a daughter of John and Mary Magee. Their only child is deceased.

Mr. Bales has held many offices of honor, both in the business world and in the social and religious organizations with which he has been connected. He is at present treasurer of the Wilmington Homestead Company. He is a Mason of high standing, as is indicated by the fact that he has held all the offices in Lodge No. 52.

Mr. Bales has allied himself with the Republican party as a matter of deep conviction. He has also taken sincere interest in religious affairs and for years has had much to do with the success of the organization to which he belongs, this being the Methodist Episcopal denomination. Besides being secretary and treasurer of the church board he is also one of its stewards.

Mr. Bales has applied his religious principles and training to business, and is known for his fair and honest dealing. He is genial in manner, makes friends easily, and is courteous and considerate always. Both he and his estimable wife are prominent in religious circles and in the social life of the city, to which they have contributed a high type of citizenship.

NICHOLAS W. VANDERVORT.

Few men were better known in Clinton county, Ohio, during the period in which he lived and labored than the late Nicholas W. Vandervort, for more than a quarter of a century a teacher in the public schools of this county. In his personal characteristics he combined the qualities which go to make up a scholar and a public-spirited man of affairs. He made his influence felt in the educational life of Clinton county, and was not unknown at the time of his death in the wider educational circles of the state. During the last six or eight years of his life he was engaged in farming in this county and made a commendable success of this vocation.

The late Nicholas W. Vandervort was born on May 31, 1835, near New Antioch, Clinton county, Ohio, and died on September 10, 1884. He was a son of Nicholas and Nancy Vandervort, the former of whom was born at Columbia, near Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1803, and the latter of whom was born in Warren county, Ohio. Nicholas Vandervort, Sr., was six years old when brought by his parents to Clinton county, where he grew to manhood, married and devoted his life to farming. Like his father before him, he was an earnest worker in the Christian church, and lived a truly useful life. He died on June 23, 1876, at the age of sixty-four years, his beloved wife having preceded him to the grave on January 11, 1873. They were the parents of eight children, of whom Nicholas W. was the fourth in order of birth. Among the others were James M., Thaddeus H., John M., Jonas S., Paul C. and William B.

The late Nicholas W. Vanderfort was brought up to farm labor. He received a good common-school education and had some extraordinary advantages in the high school at New Vienna, Ohio. At the age of eighteen he began teaching school, and in the fall of 1855 went to Illinois, where he taught near the city of Bloomington until the summer of 1857, at which time he returned to Ohio. In 1858 he attended a select school in New Vienna, qualifying himself for the teaching of higher branches. He continued teaching until 1878, having been during that time employed in the schools of Wilmington, Sabina, New Antioch and other places, embracing a period of twenty-five years. From 1878 until the time of his death, in 1884, he devoted his time and energies to farming.

On December 31, 1863, Nicholas W. Vandervort was married to Rate Winpiglar, an accomplished lady, who was also for many years a teacher in the public schools of Clinton county, and who was born at Martinsville, Clinton county, Ohio, on August 13, 1845, a daughter of Isaac and Myra (Hanley) Winpiglar, the former of whom was a native of Virginia, and the latter of Clermont county, Ohio. Isaac Winpiglar became an early settler in Ohio, married and located in Martinsville, where his death occurred in 1848. He had five children, two of whom, Helen, the wife of G. W. Robinett, and Mrs. Nicholas W. Vandervort, are surviving. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Winpiglar married a second time, her second husband being John Hyatt, and by this second marriage had three children, Louis H., Barnett B. and Clara E., the last named being the widow of L. D. Hodgson, by whom she had one son, Carey Vandervort Hodgson, who was educated by Mrs. Vandervort and is now in the service of the United States with the coast and geodetic survey. He spent some time in the Philippines and is now in Utah. He is a man of thirty-five, a credit to the name of Vandervort. Mr. Hyatt died in October, 1876, and his widow died in 1894.

Mrs. Vandervort's maternal grandparents were James Comstock and Hannah (Brunson) Hanley, both natives of New York state and early settlers in Clermont county, Ohio, where for many years the former was a school teacher.

The late Nicholas W. Vandervort served Clinton county long and faithfully in an educational way. For many years he was a prominent teacher in the public schools. He was also a member of the county board of examiners for several years. He was an ardent member and earnest worker in the Christian church at New Antioch and was undoubtedly one of Clinton county's most useful citizens.

Of Nicholas W. Vandervort's grandparents it may be said that his grandfather, Paul H. Vandervort, was born on January 1, 1815, near Starbuck Town, this county, the son of Josiah and Jane Vandervort. Josiah and Jane Vandervort resided at Columbia until 1809, when they moved to this county, and located at Todd's Fork, where they lived for three years, afterwards removing to near New Antioch, where they spent the remainder of their lives. They were among the earliest settlers of that community and were prominent in the organization and establishment of the early Christian church at New Antioch, in which they were among the leading members, and on account of their Christian and moral influence, they became factors of great strength in the progress of the church. Josiah Vandervort was an upright and industrious man of sound judgment, and was one of the first jurymen in Clinton county. He and his wife were the parents of six sons and five daughters, of whom Paul H. is the only one surviving. Mr. Vandervort died in 1842, and his widow in 1845.

Paul H. Vandervort, the uncle of the late Nicholas Vandervort, was two years old when his parents moved, in 1815, to near New Antioch, where he was reared and where he grew to manhood, and spent his life until August, 1879, when he retired from the farm and located in New Antioch, where he spent the rest of his days. He was one of the most prominent and useful citizens of Clinton county, and for twelve years served as a member of the board of commissioners. He was a member of the Clinton County Agricultural Society for thirteen years, and served as president of that organization for several years. He also held other minor offices. He, too, was a leading member of the Christian church, and upon the death of his father, was elected to fill the place as deacon in the church made vacant by his father's death. This office he filled for a quarter of a century and was then made elder. Paul H. Vandervort was twice married, the first time on October 19, 1836, to Matilda McKenzie, the daughter of John and Isabelle McKenzie, natives of Kentucky, and to this union four children were born: Mary Emily, who was the wife of E. W. Marble; Alpheus, who served three years in the Union army during the Civil War; Samantha, the wife of Dr. W. W. Canny, of Camden, Preble county, Ohio, and John W. Mrs. Vandervort died on June 20, 1876, and about three years later, on August 26, 1879, Paul H. Vandervort was married to Mrs. Mary Ann Mitchell, a daughter of James and Mary (Fleming) Mitchell.

The widow of the late Nicholas W. Vandervort removed to Wilmington some sixteen years after his death, in 1884, and there she devotes a great deal of her time to charity work. She taught school in Wilmington before her marriage and continued her work of teaching some time after her marriage. She and her husband both taught in the schools of that city, and many of their pupils are prominent business men and are very proud to remember them as their former teachers, Mrs. Vandervort being held in the highest respect not only by her former pupils, but by the entire community, to which her life has been so unselfishly and ungrudgingly devoted.

DR. FRANK R. SMITH.

The Smith family has been prominently connected with the agricultural, business and political life of Clinton county, Ohio, for two or three generations. Many of the members of this family have been prominent farmers in Clinton county, but the later generations seem to have turned their attention to business and to the professions. Frank R. Smith, D. D. S., a well-known and prosperous dentist of Wilmington, who has been engaged in the practice of his profession in this city for about seventeen years, is a representative of the fourth generation of the family in Clinton county, his grandfather on his paternal side having been born in this county.

Dr. Frank R. Smith was born on January 1, 1874, in Vernon township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of George H. and Jerusha Araminta (Bates) Smith, the former of whom was born near Ogden in Vernon, in 1840, and who died on February 28, 1878, when Frank R. was only four years old, and the latter born near Springboro, Warren county, on October 15, 1846, and is still living.

The paternal grandparents of Dr. Frank R. Smith were Daniel and Ann (Hartman) Smith, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, and the latter of whom was born in Virginia, and who was brought to Ohio from Virginia when a child. Daniel Smith owned a farm in Vernon township, where he lived and died. He and his wife and family were members of the Methodist Protestant church. They reared four sons and one daughter. Doctor Smith's maternal grandparents were William and Phoebe (Jenks) Bates, the former of whom was born in Utica, New York, in 1820, and who died in 1890, and the latter of whom was born near Saboy, Massachusetts, in 1822, and who died in 1901. William Bates came with his parents, Thomas and Sarah Bates, to Clinton county, Ohio, when a lad. Thomas Bates had emigrated from England when he was twelve years old. About 1835 the family removed from New York with thirteen children and settled in Clarksville, Clinton county, where they operated a dairy for John Hadley for several years. Thomas Bates moved from Clarksville to Springboro, Warren county where William Bates grew up. Later the father came to Washington township, Clinton county, and purchased the Woodmansee farm of three hundred acres and died there. Three of his sons divided the farm and lived there for many years. William Bates inherited a farm in Washington township and added to it in after life, living there until his death. He was a carpenter by trade and not only erected all of the buildings on his own place, but erected a good many barns on other farms. He was a dyed-in-the-wool Republican and prominent in local politics, especially in Washington township, where he served as township trustee. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Phoebe (Jenks) Bates, who was the wife of William Bates, was the daughter of Patton and Polly Jenks, who were born in Massachusetts. In 1840 they settled in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, where Patton Jenks purchased a farm of two hundred and eighty acres. It was upon this farm that he and his wife died. They had four children, of whom Doctor Smith's mother was the eldest. The others were Elsina, who died at the age of eleven; David, deceased, who was a farmer; Sarah Jane, who married Ira Hodson, of Dayton, Ohio, and who died in 1912.

George H. Smith, who was Doctor Smith's father, grew up in Vernon township, Clinton county, and after his marriage rented land in Vernon township. He was a strong Republican and in 1876 was elected sheriff of Clinton county, passing away in 1878 at the age of thirty-eight years, while the incumbent of that office. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Protestant church. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Masonic fraternity. In the latter he became a Knight Templar, a member of Ealey Commandery at Washington C. H. Dr. Frank R. Smith had only one brother, Edmond J., who was born in October, 1866, and who lives at Wilmington. He is a traveling salesman for the Champion Bridge Company, and married Elizabeth Lewis.

After the death of Dr. Frank R. Smith's father, his mother made her home with her parents until they passed away and then lived on the home place until 1913, when she moved to Wilmington, purchasing a home where she now lives.

Frank R. Smith was only four years old, as heretofore noted, when his father passed away, and he was taken by his mother to live on his maternal grandparents' farm in Washington township, and there he grew to manhood. After attending the district schools in Washington township, he became a student at Wilmington College, and finally entered the Cincinnati Dental College and was graduated with the class of 1896. Two years later he came to Wilmington and began the practice of his profession, where he has been engaged ever since. Doctor Smith has been successful in the practice of his profession and enjoys a large patronage.

On March 8, 1905, Frank R. Smith was married to Eleanor Madden, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of Arthur and Mary Madden, the former of whom is deceased, but the latter of whom is still living. Mrs. Smith's father was a traveling salesman who lived at Wilmington. At one time he served his fellow citizens as a member of the Ohio state Senate. Doctor and Mrs. Smith have no children.

Dr. Frank R. Smith is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a man who has made a special study of all of the modern devices of dentistry and is thoroughly up-to-date in the practice of his profession. He takes a worthy interest in public affairs, but has never aspired to office.

RUTHERFORD B. MONFORT.

In the life of the man whose name heads this sketch is an illustration of the American boy who has climbed to a position of trust and eminence through his own unaided efforts. As in the case of many of America's ambitious youth, there was little in his early years to aid him to the prominent place he was to occupy in later life. Therefore, all the more praise to him whose success is the result of honest endeavor, faith in himself, and courageous persistence in the face of every obstacle. The record of such a life is a most potent form of inspiration. Rutherford B. Monfort, manager of the Farquhar Furnace Company, was born in Warren county, Ohio, May 22, 1876, a son of P. and Elizabeth (Keever) Monfort, both natives of Warren county. The father, who passed away in 1901, never spent any part of his life in Clinton county, having remained on his farm; the mother, a good and devout Christian, is still living, at Lebanon, Ohio.

After completing the high school course at Waynesville, Rutherford B. Monfort attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio. For several years after his education was completed he remained on the home farm. Beginning in 1903, for a period of six years, he was identified with the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, one of the best-known manufacturing concerns in the United States. In this capacity he had charge of a branch of the correspondence department, becoming one of their most able managers. In 1909 there came an opportunity which promised better things in the future than the position he then had, and he resigned to become the bookkeeper for the company in which he is now manager. Beginning his connection with this firm in 1909, in three years he had proven himself so efficient, reliable and progressive that by a vote of the board of directors he was elected manager of the plant, as well as one of its directors.

The Farquhar Furnace Company, which was organized on May 1, 1908, are manufacturers of the Farquhar sanitary heating systems, and so extensive is their business that their products are marketed in thirty-three states.

On September 20, 1899, Rutherford B. Monfort was united in marriage with Abbie Ellis, of Harveysburg, Ohio, a daughter of Harvey and Mary (Rogers) Ellis. One daughter, Mary Elizabeth, has been born to this union. Mr. and Mrs. Monfort have a large circle of friends and their home is noted for its genial hospitality.

In these days of strict competition and sharp business practices, it is an honor, indeed, for a man to win a reputation for fair and square dealing, and for consideration for others' rights and privileges, and this may truly be said of Rutherford B. Monfort, who has the esteem, not only of his personal friends, but of his commercial associates as well.

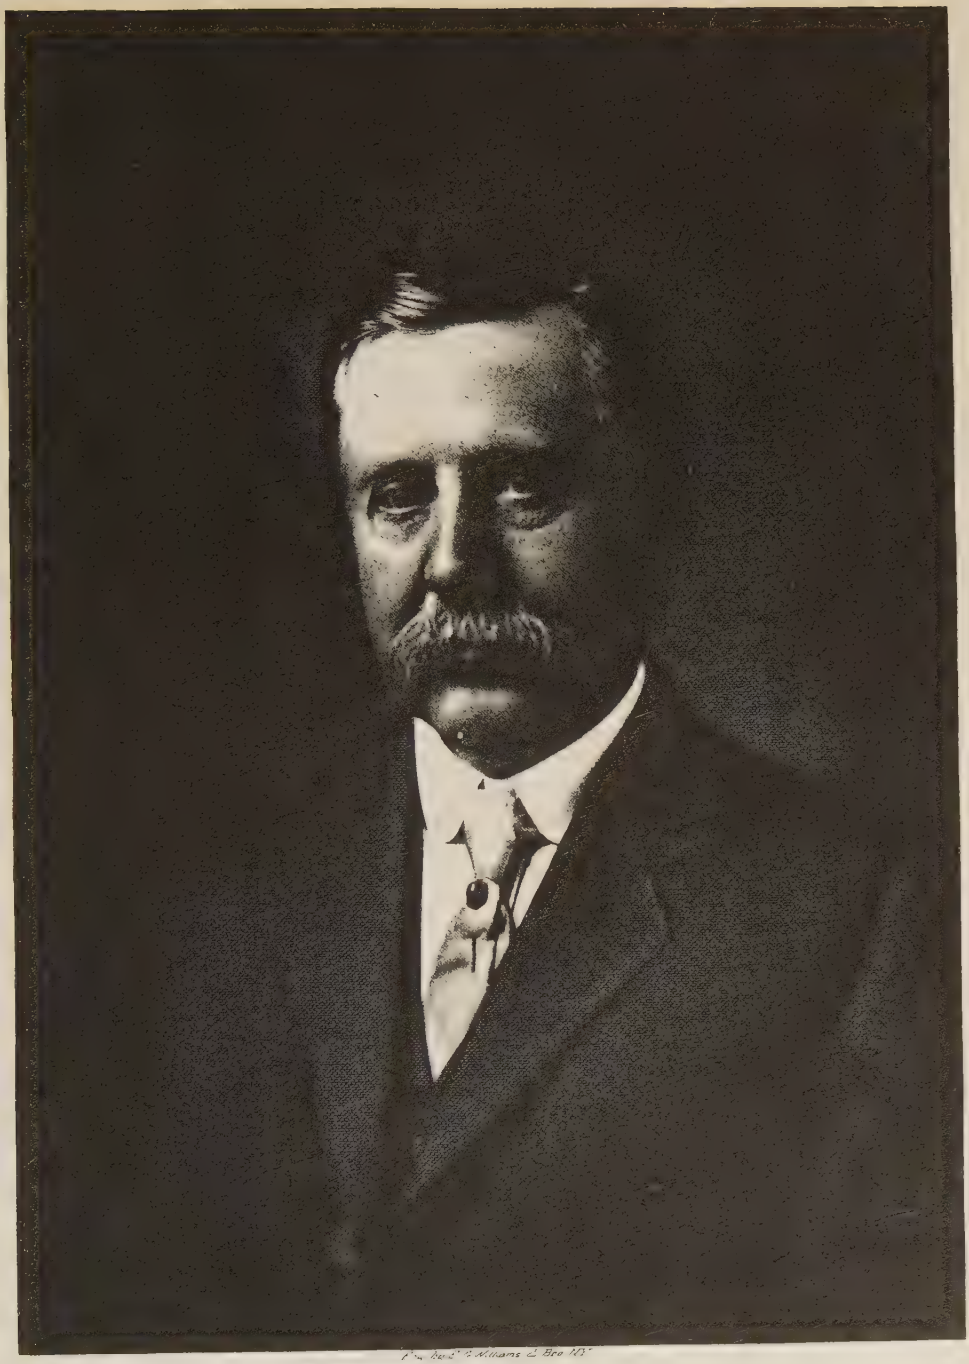
JOSIAH W. SPARKS.

One of the prominent citizens and progressive business men of Wilmington, Ohio, is Josiah W. Sparks, president of the Citizens National Bank, who, until February 1, 1915, owned and conducted a large hardware and implement business in Wilmington. Mr. Sparks was in the mercantile business in Wilmington for more than forty years and enjoyed the highest esteem and confidence of all with whom he had business dealings during that long period, as he does now with all his associates in the financial life of the community.

Josiah W. Sparks was born near Wilmington, Ohio, on March 4, 1848, and was reared on a farm four miles west of Wilmington. He is the son of Dr. Joseph K. and Abi (Linton) Sparks, the former of whom was born on July 10, 1790, in the Woodbury district of South Carolina, and died on September 17, 1873, and the latter, born on November 25, 1808, near Wilmington, Ohio, died on July 19, 1896. Dr. Joseph K. Sparks, who was a soldier in the War of 1812, came north and settled in Ohio because of his bitter opposition to slavery. He was married in Clinton county to Abi Linton, daughter of Nathan Linton, a pioneer settler of Clinton county, to which union were born four children, only one of whom, the subject of this sketch, is now living. Mr. Sparks has three half-brothers, his mother having been previously married to Jashia Farquhar, by whom she had two children, Benjamin and Frank Farquhar. Dr. Joseph W. Sparks was also previously married, and had one son by that union, George P. Sparks, the only one of these last named now living. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Sparks were Stephen and Mary (Evans) Sparks, natives of South Carolina and of English descent. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Sparks were Nathan and Rachel Linton.

In 1873 Mr. Sparks, who had inherited from his sterling ancestors his high ideals, progressive spirit and large abilities, located in Wilmington, where he entered the grocery store of the late Benjamin Farquhar. In 1875 he formed a partnership with Frank Farquhar in the hardware business and on May 18, of the same year, their store was destroyed by fire and its contents badly damaged. However, they were not discouraged by this loss, but purchased a new stock of goods and started again. The firm continued in business until 1885, when Mr. Farquhar retired and Mr. Sparks conducted the business alone until his retirement, on February 1, 1915. He carried a complete line of hardware, wagons, farm implements, stoves, pumps, fence and fertilizers. His store was modern and up-to-date in every respect. In 1906 Mr. Sparks helped to organize the Citizens National Bank and is now the president and one of the heavy stockholders of this bank.

Josiah W. Spark's large success in business and finance is due somewhat to the splendid educational training he received in the public schools of Clinton county and in Franklin, now Wilmington, College. Mr. Sparks was married on October 17, 1878, to Laura B. Haworth, who was born near Wilmington, this county, on December 29, 1854, daughter of George D. and Rebecca (Hoge) Haworth, the former of whom was born in 1829 and died in 1894, and the latter in 1833 and died in 1903. The Haworth family is of English descent, its American founder having come to this country in 1699. A part of the family settled in Clinton county in 1803 and the family since then has been closely identified with all of the interests which reflect the highest development of the county. To Mr. and Mrs. Sparks one child was born, a daughter, Ethel Rebecca, born on January 3, 1880, who died on February 10, 1899.



J. H. Sparks

Josiah W. Sparks is a Repubican in politics and a member of the Friends church, being a trustee, at Wilmington, of the Quarterly Meeting of the Society of Friends, treasurer of the Center Quarterly Meeting and a trustee of the Sugar Grove cemetery. Fraternally, he is a member of Star of Hope Lodge No. 127, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He has traveled extensively, both in America and Europe, and has the distinction of having made a trip around the world. He is a public-spirited citizen and is always one of the foremost promoters of any movement which has to do with the general welfare of the community. He is honest and upright in all of his dealings and is well known for his ability in financial and commercial circles, no resident of Clinton county being more popular throughout the county than he.

THOMAS SOUTH.

Among the earnest men of a past generation in Clinton county, whose enterprise, strength of character and engaging personality won a prominent place in the hearts of his neighbors and fellow citizens and the respect and confidence of the people of Clinton county, was the late Thomas South, who served two terms as sheriff of Clinton county, in which office he had a record for unusual efficiency, and who was an expert brick-mason. He helped to build many of the public buildings now standing in this county, was a man of positive views and laudable ambitions, and his influence was always exerted for the advancement of his friends. He was a very worthy citizen and a good man.

Thomas South was born on January 8, 1840, in Goshen, Clermont county, Ohio, and died on December 28, 1912. He was the son of Benjamin and Mary (Brunson) South, the former of whom was born in Cincinnati, and who died in 1862 of pneumonia, contracted while he was visiting his son in the Union army. His wife died on May 29, 1892, at the age of seventy-two years. Benjamin South was a stone-mason, and lived near Goshen in Clermont county all his life. All the members of his family were identified with the Presbyterian church. He and his wife had only two children, Thomas, the subject of this sketch, and William, who died on November 20, 1878, as the result of the accidental discharge of a gun while he was hunting. He also was a bricklayer by trade.

Thomas South attended the district schools of Clermont county, and later one of the leading business colleges at Cincinnati, where he obtained a good education. He was a man of more than ordinary native ability and made good use of his educational advantages and opportunities.

On June 9, 1861, Thomas South enlisted in Company C, Second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served practically to the end of the war, having been discharged on October 10, 1864. Wounded in the left hand in the battle of Perryville, Kentucky, he afterward was unable to carry a gun and served as orderly in the adjutant's office. Before this, however, he had participated in many battles and was a courageous soldier, a man of deep and abiding patriotism, who was willing to give up his life's blood in the cause of human freedom and in behalf of the perpetuity of the American Union.

Shortly after the close of the Civil War, Thomas South was married on September 14, 1865, to Martha Anderson, who was born at Owensville, Clermont county, Ohio, on September 20, 1847, and who is the daughter of Peter and Mary (Smith) Anderson, the former of whom was born in New Jersey and at the age of twenty-one located in Clermont county, Ohio. He died at the age of ninety-one years in 1876. His wife was born in Clermont county, Ohio, in 1816, and died in 1851. She was the daughter of Christopher and Margaret Smith, early settlers of Owensville, in Clermont county, and farmers by occupation. They came to Ohio from near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Christopher was a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

After his marriage, Thomas South continued working at his trade which he had learned as a boy. He worked as a brick-mason while living in Goshen, Ohio, but in 1869 he and the family removed to Wilmington, where he lived until his death in 1912. In 1905 he built a home at the corner of Walnut and Sugartree streets, and it is in this house that Mrs. South now lives.

In 1893 Mr. South was elected sheriff of Clinton county on the Republican ticket and served two terms, or four years in all. After retiring from public office and public service, he purchased a steam laundry and was associated with his son in the operation of this enterprise until his death.

Mr. and Mrs. South were the parents of five children, as follow: Mary, who was born on June 24, 1866, and died at the age of twenty in Wilmington, on July 26, 1886, was a student at Wilmington College; Harry, March 25, 1868, is a farmer in Adams township; Edward, February 27, 1871, died at the age of twenty-seven, on October 6, 1896; Benjamin, April 2, 1874, is the present sheriff of Clinton county, having been elected on the Republican ticket; Walter, February 27, 1880, is proprietor of the South Brother's laundry, of Wilmington.

The late Thomas South was a charter member of Morris McMillan Post, Grand Army of the Republic. An esteemed and valuable citizen of this great county, his death was widely mourned and he is generously remembered for the large part he had in the civic and political life of this county. Mrs. South is a refined and cultured woman and highly respected by the people of this city.

G. P. THORPE.

No greater tribute can be paid to a lawyer than the assertion that his personal code of ethics is higher than any written law. In a profession in which one's moral and ethical standards are so frequently and so severely tested, a man of whom this can be said is strong, indeed, and deserving of the greatest respect. To such there is but one ideal of right and justice, and to this, he must hold himself as rigidly as he would hold others. The man whose name appears at the head of this biography is a leading attorney of Wilmington, and a man of such mental attainment and such force of character that he is an important factor in the commercial, political, fraternal and social life of the community.

G. P. Thorpe was born at Sabina, Clinton county, Ohio, March 13, 1862, the son of H. H. and Emily (Roberts) Thorpe, both of whom were natives of Clinton county, the former having been born here a few months after his parents came from old Virginia. The elder Thorpe is permitted to live far beyond the usual span of life, for he is now eighty-three years of age. H. H. and Emily Thorpe had only one child, besides the subject of the present sketch, Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, of Sabina, Ohio.

The education of G. P. Thorpe was such as to prepare him for the prominent and active life he has since enjoyed. After availing himself of the advantages of the public schools of Sabina, the young man was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, in 1885, and from the Cincinnati Law School two years thereafter. He was admitted to the bar in 1887, and began the practice of his profession at Wilmington. He has been in active practice ever since, and has built up a large clientage.

Mr. Thorpe has played a conspicuous part in the professional and commercial life of the city, a statement corroborated by the fact that he is now vice-president of the Commercial Club. His ability as an attorney has given him leadership in a number of large business enterprises, one of these being the Clinton County Telephone Company. Of this concern he has been secretary and counsel, and has had charge of all of its legal and financial affairs for a number of years. He is one the board of directors of the Ohio Independent Telephone Association, and a member of its executive committee. Added to these activities, is the position of attorney for the Wilmington Homestead Company, which he has held for a period of over twenty years. He is also a member of its board of directors and of the finance committee.

On October 23, 1895, G. P. Thorpe was united in marriage with Roma Robinson, of Greenfield, Ohio. Mrs. Thorpe has taken a keen interest in the public career of her husband, and has made their home a charming center of social life. Mr. Thorpe is one of the two Republicans on the board of elections of Clinton county, the other two members of the board being Democrats.

It is not surprising that a man so closely connected with the business enterprises of a city should also be conspicuous in its civic and social life. There are in every community the men whose advice and good-will are sought when any public service or movement is in its inception. These are the men who not only aid in developing the material resources of their locality, but also help to form the moral standards, and it is, therefore, important that their own standards be high. It is well that some of Wilmington's most influential citizens are of this type, and among them is G. P. Thorpe.

Mr. Thorpe is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a trustee in Lodge No. 797, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

In his college days, G. P. Thorpe was a leader in athletics, and has kept up his interest in all clean and manly sports.

Although gifted above the average, the man whose career is the subject of this biography has not won his laurels without strenuous labor. Hard, conscientious work has been the rule. As a lawyer, Mr. Thorpe is fearless and fair; as a citizen, he is public-spirited and loyal; as a man, he is high-minded and just. In all of his affiliations, whether business, fraternal, political or social, he has had the esteem and admiration of his associates, and the respect and confidence of the public.

N. HUSTON MOORE.

N. Huston Moore, one of the enterprising farmers, bankers and business men of Clinton county, Ohio, is now living retired in Wilmington, the county seat. His reputation as one of the leading men of Clinton county is gladly conceded by all who know him. Mr. Moore belongs to the class of men who are natural leaders in the communities with which their fortunes are cast.

Born on January 10, 1833, in Grayson county, Virginia, N. Huston Moore is the son of Daniel and Martha (Hampton) Moore, the former of whom was born in Rockingham county, North Carolina, in 1799, and died in 1895, and the latter of whom was born in Grayson county, Virginia, in 1802, and lived to be over ninety years of age. Mr. Moore's paternal grandparents were Nimrod and Polly Moore, who were natives of England and early settlers in Rockingham county, North Carolina. They were farmers by occupation and members of the pioneer Methodist church. Mr. Moore's maternal grandparents, Andrew and Sallie (Griggs) Hampton, were natives of North Carolina. Gen. Wade Hampton, of North Carolina, was a first cousin of Mr. Moore's mother. His grandfather lived in Buncome county, North Carolina, and it was his parents who came from England. His grandfather died in Grayson county, Virginia, where he owned a large farm. He and his wife and family were members of the Baptist church. He was a large man with huge arms and shoulders and a man capable of great physical labor.

The father of N. Huston Moore left North Carolina when a young man with his parents and moved to Grayson county, Virginia. He soon had a farm of his own and lived upon it until his death. He was a Democrat. For many years he was a class leader in the Methodist church and his house was always the temporary abiding place for ministers of the Methodist church.

Daniel and Martha Moore were the parents of eleven children, six of whom are deceased. The living children are Joshua S., who is a farmer in Surrey county, North Carolina; N. Huston, the subject of this sketch; Violet, who married Joshua Simcox, of Tennessee; Matilda, deceased, and Mattie, who married Thomas H. Hightower and lives at Tasso, Tennessee. The deceased children are: Elizabeth, Sarah, Mary, Margaret, Andrew H. and Ezra N.

N. Huston Moore attended the district schools of Virginia and subsequently the academy at Hillsville, Carroll county, Virginia. After finishing the academic course, he taught school in Virginia to pay expenses incurred while a student at the academy. In 1856 Mr. Moore came to Wilmington, Ohio, and for some time worked in a general store at Bloomington. After a time he went to Atlanta, Logan county, Illinois, and there taught school for two years, after which he returned to Union township and rented farms for five years. By this time Mr. Moore had been able to save enough money to buy ninety-two and one-half acres of land, which he eventually sold and bought two hundred and twenty-five acres in Union township, where he lived for twelve years. At the end of this period, he paid off a debt of eleven thousand dollars on the place and then sold it, purchasing thirty-six acres at the edge of Wilmington, where he has lived ever since. Mr. Moore also owns a one hundred and fifty-five acre farm in Greene and Wayne townships. He is a director of the First National Bank of Wilmington. For many years he has kept a fine flock of Delaine Merino sheep and also for many years raised Poland China hogs.

On September 11, 1856, N. Huston Moore was married to Eliza Bentley, who died on May 20, 1859. They had one child, John, who is a contractor and builder at Fort Morgan, Colorado. On February 16, 1860, Mr. Moore was married secondly, to Martha Wilson, who was born on December 7, 1827, in Wilmington, Ohio, and who died on November 29, 1911. She was the daughter of James and Eleanor Wilson, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Kentucky. They owned a farm where Wilmington College now stands. He was the first superintendent of the Clinton county infirmary. He also bought and sold stock, which he drove through to Pittsburgh. His wife, who lived to be ninety-eight years old, died on February 21, 1899. To this second marriage there have been born three children: Orville B., who lives on Mr. Moore's farm in Greene and Wayne township; Thomas D., who is unmarried and lives with his father, and Nellie, who also lives with her father.

In addition to Mr. Moore's small farm of thirty-six acres at the edge of Wilmington, he owns an interest in the First National Bank of Wilmington. He is a Democrat and proud of the fact that he never scratched a ticket in all of his life. The Moore family all belong to the Christian church, and for fifty-five years Mr. Moore has been a member. At the present time he is chairman of the board of trustees of the Walnut Street church in Wilmington.

Few men have made more consistent progress as farmers and financiers than N. Huston Moore and few men living in Clinton county, who belong to the present generation, occupy a higher place in the esteem of the public than does he.

SIDNEY D. MYERS, V. S.

No more prominent veterinary surgeon may be found in the state of Ohio than Sidney D. Myers, V. S., a resident of Wilmington, Ohio, who was graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College, at Toronto, in 1894, and who has served as president and as secretary for two terms each of the Ohio State Veterinary Medical Association. Doctor Myers is now a member of the Ohio state board of veterinary examiners, and is a member of the American Veterinarian Medical Association, which is an international body.

Born on July 17, 1872, in Wayne county, Ohio, Sidney D. Myers is the son of S. B. (familiarly known as Doc) and Sadie (Christy) Myers, the former of whom was born on January 9, 1846, in Wayne county, Ohio, and who died on December 31, 1873, and the latter of whom was born on November 8, 1848, in Wayne county, Ohio, and who died on December 29, 1873. Sidney D. was only a little more than a year old when both of his parents passed away. His paternal grandparents, John and Mary J. (Kauke) Myers, were natives of Columbiana county, Ohio, and of Pennsylvania-Dutch descent. They were farmers by occupation and owned about two hundred acres of land in Wayne county. Both were members of the Baptist church. Doctor Myers' maternal grandparents were Pater and Margaret (Hardy) Christy, the former of whom was of Irish descent and the latter of Scottish descent. They were born in western Pennsylvania and early in life located in Wayne county, Ohio, where he was a farmer and well-to-do citizen. They were members of the Presbyterian church.

The late S. B. and Sadie (Christy) Myers were married on January 26, 1871, and about two years later both died of typhoid fever, the mother two days before the death of her husband. The young couple were just ready to go to housekeeping and had not left the parental roof at the time of their death. Doctor Myers had only one sister, who is younger than himself, Laura B., who married W. H. Troxel, a retail hardware dealer of Denver, Colorado. After the death of his parents, Doctor Myers was reared by his grandparents, both maternal and paternal, and later by his uncle, George Hutton and family. Until twenty years of age he worked on the farm and attended the Wooster, Ohio, high school. Later he was a student at the Ohio Normal School, at Ada, Ohio.

In 1892 Doctor Myers entered the Ontario Veterinary College, at Toronto, Canada, and after his graduation, in March, 1894, began the practice of his profession with Walter Shaw, V. S., at Dayton, where he remained only a few months. In the fall of the same year he located at Wilmington, and here he has practiced ever since. He has a model barn and takes care of horses in his barn.

On March 4, 1896, Sidney D. Myers was married to Elizabeth Hayes, who was born in the province of Ontario, Canada, at London, and who is the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Ralph) Hayes, the latter of whom was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, and who came to America when six years old. The former was born in Blanchard township, Perth county, Ontario, Canada, and was a farmer by occupation. He died in 1899, at the age of forty-seven and his wife died on February 1, 1914, at the age of seventy. They were members of the Episcopal church. To them were born nine children: John, Catherine, Alice, Mrs. Myers, Jennie, Adella, Charlotte (deceased), who married John McIntosh, Georgia and Russell. All of these children are living near London, Ontario. Doctor and Mrs. Myers have only one child, Neil, who was born on May 29, 1901.

Doctor Myers is a Republican. Doctor and Mrs. Myers are members of the Presbyterian church and he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is also a director in the Union Loan and Savings Company of Wilmington.

WILLIAM E. SMITH.

William E. Smith, a former farmer of Clinton county, who is now engaged in the livery business at Wilmington, is one of the enterprising citizens of this section of Ohio, and is well known for his aggressive habit, his power of leadership, and his cordial personal relations with his fellow townsmen.

William E. Smith was born on December 20, 1858, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Robert Henry and Elizabeth (Haney) Smith, the former of whom was born near Winchester, Virginia, in the Shenandoah valley, July 11, 1828, and who died on March 1, 1876, and the latter of whom was born in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia, November, 1824, and who died on October 31, 1897.

The paternal grandparents of William E. Smith were John S. and Susan Smith, both of whom were natives of Virginia, and who, when their son, Robert Henry, was a small lad, came from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio, and purchased a farm on the south side of Union township. They belonged to the Christian church. He died at the age of seventy-eight and she at the age of eighty-four. Mr. Smith's maternal grandparents were Charles and Sarah Haney, both of whom were natives of Virginia. Charles Haney became the heir to a great many slaves, but he was opposed to slavery and turned the slaves free. He and his wife were also members of the Christian church. Their daughter, Elizabeth, the mother of William E. Smith, was only six years old when they came from Virginia to Greene township, Clinton county, Ohio. Charles Haney was a well-to-do farmer and served in the War of 1812. His wife drew a pension after his death while she was living in New Antioch, Ohio.

Robert Henry Smith grew to manhood in Clinton county, Ohio, and became a miller by occupation, and owned and operated a flour-mill during early life. He served with the famous "Squirrel Hunters" during the Civil War, and as a result of his zeal his mill was burned, probably by members of the Knights of the Golden Circle, who were active in this county. Afterwards he purchased a farm in Union township, and lived there until his death. He was a Republican in politics, and his wife was a devout member of the Christian church. They had two children: William E., the subject of this sketch; and Eva, who married David Leaming, and after his death married Elmer Clevenger; she died in 1910.

Mrs. Robert Henry Smith was first married to Robertson Custis. After his death she was married to Robert Henry Smith. By her first marriage she had four children: Charles, lives in Wilmington and is a veteran of the Civil War: Thomas, lives in California and owns a cigar store in Santa Barbara, and two daughters, deceased.

William E. Smith attended the public schools in Union township and worked on his father's farm until he had attained his majority. After this he was married and lived on the home farm for five years, when he moved to a farm two miles southwest of Cuba, which was owned by his father-in-law, and where he lived for eight years. In 1899 he removed to Wilmington and purchased the Spray livery barn on West Main street. He has been successfully engaged in business in Wilmington for the past sixteen years.

On October 11, 1881, William E. Smith was married to Emma Cast, who was born in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Simeon and Mary Cast, both of whom are deceased. He was a farmer by occupation, but spent his later years in Wilmington.

To Mr. and Mrs. William E. Smith have been born two children: Eugenia, the first born, died in infancy; Harold S., who was born on December 23, 1891, is a bookkeeper in the Citizens National Bank at Wilmington. He is unmarried and lives with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith belong to the Baptist church, and Mr. Smith is a trustee of the church. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. An ardent Republican in politics, he was at one time elected a member of the Wilmington city council and served in this office with distinction.

Mr. Smith has not only been successful in business, but he has been successful without losing the confidence and esteem of his fellow townsmen, a distinction of no mean importance. Good natured, whole-hearted and generous, he is a popular resident of the city of Wilmington.

ARTHUR W. STARBUCK.

Among the enterprising and energetic merchants of the city of Wilmington, this county, few are better known or have a wider repute for the careful manner in which their several mercantile enterprises are conducted than has Arthur W. Starbuck, the popular book dealer, whose well-appointed book store is one of the well established concerns of that city. Mr. Starbuck practically "grew up" in the mercantile life of Wilmington, having taken his place in the commercial circles of the town upon reaching his majority, thirty-five years ago, since which time he has been continuously and actively identified with the business interests of the county seat, in that time having so thoroughly acquainted himself with the needs and the tastes of the people that he is able to cater to these tastes in the most competent possible manner. For fourteen years he was identified with the retail shoe trade of the city, after which he was engaged in the restaurant business for thirteen years, at the end of which time he became prominently connected with the local gas company's office, a position which he retained until 1909, in which year he engaged in the book and stationery business and has been thus successfully occupied since, his store being recognized as one of the most prominent establishments of the city.

Arthur W. Starbuck was born at Dover, in Union township, this county, on February 19, 1859, the son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Ellis) Starbuck, both natives of this county, the former of whom was born in Union township in the year 1834 and the latter of whom was born near the village of Port William in the year 1830, both being members of pioneer families of this county.

Thomas Starbuck, who now lives in California, is the son of Latham Starbuck, the latter of whom was the son of Hezekiah Starbuck, a native of North Carolina, who settled in this county about the year of 1812. Edward Starbuck, the first of the Starbucks to immigrate to this country was a native of Nantucket, England, who came to America about three hundred years ago and was one of the original purchasers of Nantucket Island from the Indians. He was the founder of a large and prominent family and his numerous descendants are found in many parts of the country, a vigorous progeny, all doing well their various parts in the grand social scheme of this nation. Hezekiah Starbuck was a sailor, but during the War of 1812 he found his occupation practically gone, as nearly all American commerce was swept off the seas during that stormy period. In consequence of this state of affairs he decided to try pioneering in the unsettled wilds of the great country to the west and he and his family immigrated to Ohio, locating in Clinton county, entering a farm from the government in the Dover neighborhood, where the family became permanently established.

Latham Starbuck, son of Hezekiah, was a grown boy when the family located in this county and he presently bought a farm of one hundred and fifty acres in Union township, on which he spent the rest of his life, becoming one of the most prominent and influential settlers of that section of the county. He and his wife were Quakers and their children were reared in accordance with the rigid tenets of their birthright faith, they, in turn becoming useful and influential members of the community. Thomas Starbuck, son of Latham, was reared on the home farm in Union township, remaining on the farm until some time after his marriage. He then engaged in the manufacture of tile at Bowersville, Ohio, and was thus successfully engaged until the year 1870. In 1895 he moved to Armada, California, where he immediately entered prominently into the public life of his new home town and for some years past has been postmaster of Armada. Thomas Starbuck is a Republican and is a member of and active worker in the Christian church, being widely recognized as a lay preacher of much power in that denomination.

In 1858 Thomas Starbuck was united in marriage to Elizabeth Ellis, who was born near Port William, this county, the daughter of James and Susannah Ellis, also natives of Clinton county, the former of whom was the son of a Pennsylvanian, a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War, who settled in this county early in the last century.

To Thomas and Elizabeth (Ellis) Starbuck were born five children, of whom the immediate subject of this sketch is the eldest, namely: Arthur W., a prominent merchant of Wilmington; Emma L., who married William Utter and died in 1904; Florence E., who lives with her parents in California; Granville E., a music teacher of San Bernardino, California, and Elmer E., a cabinet maker, who lives in the same city.

Arthur W. Starbuck was reared on the home farm in Union township, until two years of age and moved to near Bowersville, where he received his elementary education in the Palmer district school of that township, supplementing the same by a course in the public schools at New Antioch. He worked on the farm until he had attained his majority, after which he located in Wilmington, which ever since has been his home. Upon coming to Wilmington, Mr. Starbuck entered the employ of Harry Walker and for fourteen years was engaged as a clerk in th latter's retail shoe store. At the end of that time he formed a partnership with J. T. Carroll and for five years was engaged with the latter in the restaurant business. At the end of that time this partnership was dissolved and Mr. Starbuck conducted the restaurant alone for eight years. He then sold the business and was engaged as office man for the Wilmington Gas Company until 1909, in which year he bought Harry H. Walker's book store, a business which he has since conducted with much success and in a manner most gratifying to his extensive trade.

On November 15, 1883, Arthur W. Starbuck was united in marriage to Alberta Vandervort, who was born at New Antioch, this county, daughter of Richard and Catherine Vandervort, prominent farming people of that neighborhood, both of whom are now deceased. To this happy union two children have been born, Mabel, who was born in 1884, married Clifton T. Hazard, teacher of mathematics at Purdue University, and lives at West Lafayette, Indiana, and Charles R., born in 1889, who is a clerk in the Clinton County National Bank of Wilmington.

Mr. Starbuck is a Republican and takes such part in the political affairs of his home community as all good citizens owe to the commonwealth, being active in furthering such measures as are designed to promote the common good. He has given much and thoughtful attention to the affairs of the public schools of Wilmington and for six years was a very efficient members of the city school board. He is a member of the Wilmington lodge of the Knights of Pythias, in the affairs of which he takes a warm interest. Active in commercial, political and social circles of Wilmington, Mr. Starbuck has created for himself a very definite place in the life of the county seat and is one of the best-known men in Clinton county, enjoying the confidence and regard of all. He and his wife are diligent in promoting all good works and are held in the highest esteem by all who know them.

CHARLES PIERSON RICHARDSON.

Charles Pierson Richardson was widely known during his lifetime as one of the successful farmers of Clinton county, Ohio. He had a prominent part in the development of agriculture in this county and his well-directed energies in the practical affairs of life, his capable management of his own business and his sound judgment resulted in the acquisition and accumulation of a very large competence. He began life with one hundred acres of land, to which was later added three hundred and thirty-five acres, all of which was inherited by Mrs. Richardson, which tract was improved from time to time until at the time of his death he owned one of the finest farms in Vernon township. He was a prominent stockman and a highly respected citizen of this county.

The late Charles Pierson Richardson, farmer and stockman of Clinton county, was born on March 15, 1840, in Cincinnati, Ohio. He was the son of Pierson Jackson and Elizabeth (Schillinger) Richardson, the former of whom was born in 1815 in Genesee county, New York, and who died on December 17, 1902, and the latter of whom was born on April 27, 1814, in Cincinnati, Ohio, and who died on October 3, 1883. Her parents were natives of Germany. Charles Pierson Richardson died on July 30, 1894. His father, P. J. Richardson, was a son of James Richardson, who was a soldier in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War, having served as a first lieutenant in a regiment of the New York infantry. He built and owned a one-half interest in the first boat built in Cincinnati. His father grew up in New York state and when he was a young man emigrated to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he married, near which place he farmed until about 1855, when he removed to Clinton county with his family. Here he purchased his home, which he built at Newport in 1846, and which is still standing, well preserved. He died at Newport on February 6, 1848. He was a member of the Presbyterian church.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES VILLARS.

Pierson Jackson, a son of James and father of the subject, a farmer, born in Genesee county, New York, March 15, 1815, died in Cuba on December 17, 1902. He attended a private school and graduated in a Cincinnati college. He moved to Cuba, Clinton county, in 1855 and was married in Cincinnati on June 15, 1836, to Elizabeth Schillinger, daughter of Col. William Schillinger.

Charles Pierson Richardson was about fifteen years of age when his parents came to Clinton county, Ohio. Here he grew up on a farm and was married, and after his marriage he farmed in Vernon township on land which Mrs. Richardson inherited from her father and which amounted to four hundred and thirty-five acres. Mr. Richardson raised a great deal of thoroughbred live stock and kept registered trotting horses of the Wilkes and Hambletonian breeds. He also specialized in raising Shropshire sheep and Shorthorn cattle. He was killed in 1894 by the kick of a horse, having lived but a few hours after the accident. After his death, Mrs. Richardson remained on the farm until 1911 and then moved to Wilmington, where she now resides with her daughter, Bessie.

On October 3, 1865, the late Charles Pierson Richardson was married to Miss Jane Villars, who is the daughter of James and Frances (Gregg) Villars, the former of whom was born on October 20, 1800, in Jefferson township, Greene county, Pennsylvania, and who died on June 29, 1890, the latter of whom, her mother having died when she was a child, was reared by Mrs. Woodmansee. She was the daughter of George and Margaret (Wiley) Gregg.

James Villars was the son of James and Rebecca (Davidson) Villars. James, Jr., was reared on a farm and was six years old when his parents removed from Pennsylvania to Deerfield, Portage county, Ohio, where they remained one year. At the end of that period they removed to Washington township, Warren county, where they purchased fifty acres of land, and afterward one hundred acres nearby. In the summer of 1811 they purchased three hundred and sixty-four acres of land in Clinton county, adjoining the farm where James, Jr., later lived. They moved to this farm in the fall of 1813, after they had some land cleared, a house was built, the floors of which were laid with wide black walnut boards. This old log house still stands and is used for an outhouse, and some improvements made and the crops planted. They had ten children, six sons and four daughters. In August, 1823, James Villars, Sr., died and the care of the family and the charge of the farm fell to James, Jr., who purchased the interest of the other heirs in the homestead and who lived with his mother.

The first schooling of James Villars was obtained in 1807 in a small round log cabin, daubed with mud, with a stick and clay chimney and roofed with clapboards. It had a dirt floor and stood about thirty rods west of the iron bridge, north of the turnpike and about three-fourths of a mile west of Clarksville. When he was eight or nine years old, James Villars, Jr., attended school at another place, but in a building similar to the first. The third school he attended was in a log school house with a stick and clay chimney at each end and with a writing desk through the center. It stood between a quarter and a half mile south of where the Mt. Pleasant meeting house stood. His fourth experience was in a vacated log house two and one-half miles east of Clarksville, on the banks of Sewell's run. He had to walk three miles to this school, but finally he attended school in a building formerly used as a horse-mill, which was fitted up and used as a Methodist chapel in Wilmington, and as a matter of fact was the first Methodist chapel ever built there. It was also used for school purposes.

On June 15, 1830, James Villars, Jr., was married to Frances Gregg. They had ten children, as follow: Rebecca, John W., Mary D., Rachel, George W., James M., Jane F., Hiram J., Samuel H. and Alfred T. Rebecca died at the age of twenty-four; John W. died at the age of fifty-five, a farmer by occupation; Mary D. married Simeon Cast and they lived on a farm in Washington township, both of whom are now deceased; Rachel married Ed. Mulford, a resident of Warren county, Ohio, who is now deceased; George W. died at the age of twenty-one; James M. died at the age of nineteen; Jane F. is the widow of Mr. Richardson; Hiram J. lives in Montana, and Alfred T., who owned his father's home place, is deceased.

In 1837 James Villars, Jr., purchased the farm where he lived until his death, which consisted of three hundred and sixty-one acres. After buying this farm he did nothing more to it until the spring of 1848. He was an industrious man and a careful manager, accumulating a large amount of land. Before his death he was one of the heaviest landowners in Clinton county. He owned six hundred acres of land in Clark and Union counties, Illinois, beside twelve hundred acres, which he gave to his children. He built a fine brick chapel on part of his land, at a cost of fourteen thousand dollars and presented this to the Methodist Protestant church, of which he and his wife were members for a number of years, they having joined the church together in 1845. Before this they had been members of the Methodist Episcopal church, which Mr. Villars had joined in 1816. He also purchased the Baptist church of Clarksville, on which he expended about three thousand dollars. He was a local deacon and an ordained minister in the Methodist Protestant church and later an elder. He had been a trustee ever since he built the chapel, and held the office of township trustee and supervisor for several years. His beloved wife died on June 7, 1881, and he died, as heretofore stated, in June, 1890.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierson Richardson had nine children, six of whom are still living. The deceased children are Howard, the third born, who first saw the light of day, March 21, 1869, and who died at the age of six years; Horace, who died at the age of thirty-one, and Lillie, who died at the age of seven weeks. The living children are James Pierson, Charles Hinkle, Walter G., Frances, Herman and Bessie. James Pierson was born on July 12, 1866, and lives in Adrian, Michigan, where he is a piano maker. He was a missionary in Japan nine years; Charles Hinkle, December 20, 1867, and lives on the home place, is a farmer; Walter G. also lives on the home place; Frances married George Sewell, and they live in Vernon township; Herman lives on the home place, and Bessie, who is unmarried, lives with Mrs. Pierson.

Mrs. Pierson is an ardent member of the Methodist Protestant church and prominent in the religious life of this community. Mr. Richardson was not only an enterprising farmer, but he was a good citizen and a good man, one who was entitled to the esteem and confidence of his fellows and one who enjoyed this confidence and esteem in a large measure.

ROBERT LIVINGSTON OWENS.

One of the country's largest manufacturers, a man who has received more than passing note by reason of the methods he employs in securing ungrudging and efficient service on the part of his small army of employees, and whose close personal relations with the men who have helped to make the product of his factory a household word throughout the country is a matter of common knowledge, upon being asked: "What do you call a man?" quickly answered: "One who stands four square to the world in reference to the functions that should be absolutely right, with regard to himself, those who are dependent upon him, and society in general." Upon being asked to extend his definition so as to cover the process of "making a man," he declared that he made men "by the application of horse sense." This, of course, but emphasizes, by giving personal authority to the utterance, a truth that is not only self-evident, but widely accepted. It invariably is found that those men who really do stand four square to the world in all the relations of life are the men who are possessed of what has commonly come to be known as "horse sense," upon the proper exercise of which they base the success which, without exception, follows their efforts. Happily, there are many such men in Clinton county, among the best known of whom perhaps is Robert L. Owens, the enterprising and progressive bridge man, of Wilmington, this county, general manager and treasurer of the Champion Bridge Company.

Robert Livingston Owens was born at Mainsville, Warren county, Ohio, on August 21, 1866, the only son of George W. and Margaret (Irwin) Owens, the former of whom was born in Bedford county, Virginia, on August 26, 1832, and died at his home in Wilmington, this county, on January 4, 1896, and the latter of whom was born in Warren county, this state, on March 22, 1833, and died on September 26, 1898, to whom were born but two children, the other child being a daughter, Mrs. Jessie T. Arebaugh, of Wilmington. George W. Owens was the son of Talliaferro and Pamelia (Tucker) Owens, both natives of Virginia, of good old colonial families, the fathers of both of whom took valiant parts in the struggle of the American patriots during the Revolutionary War, other representatives of these families also having done well their various parts during the War of 1812. Margaret Irwin was the daughter of Robert and Lydia (Cox) Irwin, pioneers of Warren county, this state and prominent and influential residents therein.

Robert L. Owens was but four years of age when his parents came from Virginia to this county, locating in Wilmington, and consequently has lived the most of his life in Clinton county, there now being few men in the county better known than he. He received his education in the Wilmington schools and was graduated from the high school there in the year 1884, following which he spent four years as a student in the Cincinnati Art Academy, becoming thoroughly grounded in the art of drawing and its correlative science. Upon leaving school he was engaged by the Champion Bridge Company of Wilmington in the capacity of traveling salesman, with headquarters at Cincinnati. He later transferred his services to the Queen City Bridge Company, of Cincinnati, as a traveling salesman, still later going to the Brackett Bridge Company, of Cincinnati, serving that company in the capacity of secretary, remaining in Cincinnati until 1898, in which year he returned to Wilmington, becoming a director in the Champion Bridge Company and resuming his original position as traveling representative of that company, continuing in that capacity until he was elected general manager and treasurer of the company in 1904, a position which he still holds. Mr. Owens also is a director of the Memphis Bridge Company, of Memphis, Tennessee, and is one of the best-known bridge men in the country. In addition to his official duties in connection with these two prominent bridge companies, Mr. Owens also is the secretary of the National Safety Snap Company, of Wilmington, and likewise gives his intelligent attention to the general business welfare of his home city, being actively concerned in all movements having to do with the promotion of Wilmington's best interests, few business men in the city having a higher reputation for enterprise and energy when it comes to "boosting" things hereabout.

In January, 1892, Robert L. Owens was united in marriage to Hannah Cherrington, who was born in Gallipolis, Ohio, daughter of William and Lucy H. Cherrington, who were the parents of five children, the others being Samuel M., Leida, Lucy M. and Mrs. E. S. Culbertson. Mr. and Mrs. Owens are members of the Episcopal church at Wilmington, Mr. Owens serving the congregation of that communion as a member of the vestry, or executive body of the church. Mr. Owens is a Democrat and gives a good citizen's attention to the political affairs of his home county, though he never has been included in the office-seeking class of politicians. He is deeply interested in good government and his influence in civic matters ever is on the side of economical and efficient administration of the affairs of the people. Mr. Owens is a master Mason, his connection with that order being with blue lodge No. 52; Royal Arch Masons, Chapter No. 63 and Wilmington Commandery No. 37, Knights Templar.

Robert L. Owens is a typical, up-to-date, hustling American citizen, who is doing well his part in life, bringing to all his relations in life that admirable quality known commonly as "horse sense," so aptly referred to in the introduction of this biographical narrative, and he very properly enjoys the highest confidence and esteem of his business associates and friends, not only in Wilmington and Clinton county, but throughout the state, his acquaintance extending far beyond the mere confines of his home county.

ROBERT R. DOAN.

Robert R. Doan, who is one of the most brilliant young men in Clinton county, and who perhaps, is one of the best-informed men, young or old, is not only a descendant of one of the earliest pioneers of this county, but a member of a family which has distinguished itself in the political life of this state. That Robert R. Doan is possessed of wide vision, initiative and executive ability is proved by his success in an enterprise in which the people of Clinton county have good reason to take great pride. A short time ago he organized a company to publish the first daily newspaper ever launched in Clinton county.

Robert R. Doan was born on March 10, 1889, in Wilmington, Ohio, and is a son of Albert W. and Jennie (Rutherford) Doan, the former of whom is also a native of Wilmington, the deputy probate judge of this county, who resides at Wilmington. Albert W. Doan was born on August 25, 1860. His wife, who was a native of Wilmington, Ohio, was born on January 27, 1864. Mr. Doan's mother is also living.

The paternal grandparents of Robert R. Doan were Robert E. and Maria (McMillan) Doan, the former of whom, although eighty-four years old, is engaged in the practice of law at Washington, D. C., where he has lived since 1890. Robert E. Doan was born in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on June 23, 1834, and his wife, who was born on August 8, 1836, is also still living. Robert E. Doan is a son of William Doan, who, in 1804, came with his parents, Joseph and Jemima Doan, from Chatham county, North Carolina. They settled near what is now the city of Wilmington, where they purchased nearly one thousand acres of land, and it may be said here that Mr. Doan is the owner of twenty-six thousand acres of land in the state of Sonora, Mexico. William Doan was a Whig in politics, and a leading member of the Friends church. He was a farmer most of his life, and he and his wife were the parents of three children, Robert E., Joseph, who died unmarried, and Maria, deceased, who was the wife of Thomas Waltham, also deceased.

The Doan family in Clinton county dates from the coming of Joseph Doan, who arrived here on November 4, 1804, in company with John Stout, from Chatham county, North Carolina, by the Flower Gap. John Vestal, who was his wife's brother, died before they arrived at Todd's Fork. On January 22, 1805, Joseph Doan purchased two hundred and thirty-eight acres of land in Posey's survey at one dollar and a half an acre, paying altogether three hundred and fifty-seven dollars, three hundred dollars to Posey and fifty-seven dollars to Nathan Linton. On November 27, 1806, he paid on his land one hundred dollars, and on December 4, 1807, he paid another hundred dollars. Joseph Doan was born on October 23, 1759, and died on May 28, 1838. His wife was born on May 8, 1762. They were the parents of twelve children, Thomas, John, Ruth, the wife of Joseph Haines; William, Elizabeth, Joseph, Jesse, Jonathan, Jacob, Rachel, the wife of Isaac Hines, Elisha and Mary.

The Hon. Robert E. Doan was a very ambitious young man, who desired to study law, and was accustomed to take law books to the field and studied while he plowed. With his own earnings he attended the Cincinnati law school and became an attorney at Wilmington, Ohio. His mother, who, before her marriage, was Betsy Eachus, a native of Winchester, Virginia, died in 1864. Five years later his father, William Doan, passed away.

Robert E. Doan served as prosecuting attorney and was finally elected to Congress during President Harrison's administration. After serving one term in this office he became a partner of Major Anderson, of Washington, D. C., and when Major Anderson was appointed judge of the United States District Court, Mr. Doan continued the practice of his profession alone, and is still engaged in the practice. He is now president of the National Biographical Society of Washington and is also a charter member and historian of the Ohio Historical Society at Washington.

It is Robert Doan's original conception which launched and founded, in Washington, D. C., in 1910, the International Law Association of the United States. Mexico and the Dominion of Canada, which received the endorsement of the highest judicial tribunal in the world, the supreme court of the United States. Mr. Doan served one year as secretary of the Steele-Evans Manufacturing Company and as secretary-treasurer of the Clinton Publishing Company. His literary efforts have been published in the Frank A. Munsey's publications and a syndicate of eastern newspapers. He is acquainted and corresponds with Colonel Roosevelt, which pleasant relations were also maintained with the late Elbert Hubbard and wife.

To return to his early history, it may be said that both of Robert E. Doan's parents were members of the Friends church; that he attended an academy at Harveysburg, Warren county, Ohio, and afterward taught school in Warren, Greene and Clinton counties, in this way earning money to pay for his law course. He finished the course in the Cincinnati law school and received his diploma with the degree of Bachelor of Laws on April 19, 1857. For some time he was in partnership with his cousin, A. W. Doan, in the practice of law, the firm having been dissolved fifteen years later, when A. W. Doan was elected judge of the court of common pleas. In 1880 he made seventy-seven speeches in favor of James A. Garfield's election to the Presidency in the state of Ohio, in which year he was a Presidential elector from the Clinton county district, and named by acclamation. He was a candidate for Congress in that year, but was defeated for the nomination, receiving, however, only thirteen votes less than the nominee. In 1857 he was married to Maria McMillan, a native of Clinton county, and to this union were born six children, Clinton, who was a farmer, is deceased. He was a specialist in raising thoroughbred horses; Albert W. is the father of Robert R., the immediate subject of this review; Charles died at the age of fifteen; Burritt died at the age of fourteen; Willie died at the age of six; Frank M. died in Arizona. He was collector of customs in that state, having been appointed to this position by President McKinley. The commission of Frank M. Doan was the last which President McKinley ever signed before his death.

In addition to his law practice, Robert E. Doan has large interests in copper mines, and is also heavily interested in a publishing company at Washington, D. C. For many years he maintained his large residence in the city of Wilmington, where his grandson, Robert R., now lives.

Albert W. Doan attended the public schools of Wilmington, and later was a student during 1878-79-80 at the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. Upon returning to Wilmington from school he was elected mayor of Wilmington, in which office he served four terms of two years each. For several years he was engaged in traveling, but in 1913 was appointed deputy probate judge of Clinton county, an office which he is now holding. He is a Republican in politics, and fraternally, a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He was married on February 6, 1887, and Robert R. is the only child.

Robert R. Doan received his early education in the public schools of Wilmington, Ohio, and later became a student of Wilmington College for four years. Still later he was a student at Ohio Wesleyan University for a year, where he pursued a literary course. After this he was a student at Georgetown University, near Washington, D. C., where he was a law student. In 1913 Mr. Doan returned to Wilmington and engaged in the printing and publishing business. On November 1, 1914, he started the Clinton Review, a monthly magazine, and in April, 1915, organized the company to publish the first daily newspaper ever issued in Clinton county. Mr. Doan's firm does job printing and local publishing.

On January 5, 1915, Mr. Doan was married to Mabel Compton, a native of Champaign, Illinois, and a daughter of L. L. Compton and wife, the former of whom is an architect of Wilmington, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Doan are members of the Friends church at Wilmington. He is a Republican in politics and a very ambitious young man, one entirely worthy of the splendid career of many of the Doan family in this county. He and his wife are popular socially in this city, and, of course, are well known.

FRANK L. MILLER.

The life history of him whose name heads this sketch is closely identified with the history of Wilmington and Clinton county, Ohio. His life has been one of untiring activity and has been crowned with a degree of success attained by only those who devote themselves indefatigably to the work before them. He is of a high type of business man and none more than he deserves a fitting recognition among the men whose genius and abilities have achieved results that are commendable.

The subject of this sketch is descended from a sterling line of ancestors, the family on the paternal side having orginated in Wales, where the subject's great-great-grandfather, Peter Miller, was born in 1740. In young manhood he came to America, settling near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he married Catherine Rhodes, who was of Dutch descent and a Lutheran in her religious faith. To them were born five children, John, Jacob, Abraham, Isaac and Elizabeth. Of these, Isaac, Sr., was the subject's great-grandfather, and was born on February 5, 1777. Peter, the father of these children moved with his family to Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and cleared land ready for farming. From here he enlisted in behalf of the colonies against the British during the war for independence, but was wounded and sent to a hospital, where he died during the war, his burial place being unknown. He left his widow in severe financial straits, and she was compelled to bind out the children in order to secure for them a living. Isaac Miller, Sr., one of these children, was adopted at the age of nine months by John McKibben, who in about 1786 removed to Bourbon county, Kentucky. When Isaac Miller, Sr., was about twenty years of age he was sent to the Northwest Territory with a company of surveyors who John McKibben had employed to survey a twelve-hundred-acre tract of land which he had purchased. That tract, then in the "Throckmorton survey," lies near Farmer's Station on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad in Clinton county, Ohio. Isaac Miller's duty was to supply this party of surveyors with fresh meat. In 1801 Mr. McKibben gave Isaac Miller, Sr., two hundred acres of this tract in recognition of his faithful services. Thus Isaac Miller, Sr., became the first of the family to permanently locate in Clinton county. On January 1, 1804, he married Mary Stewart, a native of Warren county, Ohio, and together they established their home in Clinton county. There they spent the remainder of their days; their deaths occurred in the same month, the father dying on January 5, 1857, and the mother on January 27, 1857. To them were born twelve children, namely: William, Elizabeth, Mary, Isaac, Jr., Jane, Catherine, Hannah, Fletcher, Rebecca, James, Milton and Margaret. Isaac Miller, Sr., who was the subject's great-grandfather, became a soldier in the War of 1812, serving under Gen. Allen Tremble at Ft. Wayne.

Isaac Miller, Jr., the grandfather of Frank L. Miller, was born on July 30, 1812, and remained on the home farm until twenty-four years of age. On September 17, 1835, he married Margaret Hildebrant, who was born on February 26, 1820, in Hunterton county, New Jersey. In 1821 he bought a hundred and eighty-six acres of land near New Antioch, Ohio, but in 1838 sold this land and went overland to Stephenson county, Illinois, where he bought a farm of two hundred and forty acres. On this he remained about twelve years. In 1850 the family visited Ohio and while there Mr. Miller traded his Illinois farm for one in Washington township, Clinton county. For his second wife Isaac Miller married Mrs. Martha E. Meeker. Isaac Miller became the father of the following children: Columbus; Ralph; Isaac N.; William; Mary E., who married John M. Vandewart; Lydia, the wife of Joseph Hunter; Camelia, the wife of Joel Johnson; Charles; Eva L., the wife of Frederick Johnson; and Alice, the wife of William Doke.

William Miller, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born at the town of Oswego, Stephenson county, Illinois, on November 17, 1842. He was about seven years of age when the family returned to Clinton county, Ohio, and here he was reared to manhood. He attended the district schools and received a fair education. In June, 1862, William Miller enlisted in Company C, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, but after seven months service he was honorably discharged because of ill health. On his return to civil life, Mr. Miller married on December 25, 1863, Rachel Louise Moore, who was born in Washington township, Clinton county, on December 29, 1845. Thereafter Mr. Miller farmed his father's place until his father gave him fifty acres of land on which he lived for four years. Then he moved to Sabina, Ohio, and engaged in the manufacture of tile, under the name of the Sabina Tile Works, which occupied his attention for seven years, at the end of which period he sold out, and started a butcher shop to which he devoted himself for fourteen years. He then moved to Springfield, Ohio, but a year later moved to Bowersville, Greene county, where he lived for four years, following the meat business. He then bought a hundred acres of land in Washington township, Clinton county, where he lived until 1900, when he moved to Wilmington, where he now resides. William Miller became a specialist in the raising of strawberries in which he became widely known throughout central Ohio. He had a large patch of strawberry plants on his farm, the cultivation of which required thirty hands during the fruit season. Mr. Miller is known familiarly as "Strawberry" Miller because of his reputation as a successful grower of this luscious fruit. He has also raised considerable other small fruit on his place and has been very successful as a horticulturist. He took a deep interest in public affairs, being a Republican in his political views, and in 1896 was elected county commissioner of Clinton county, and served with credit to himself and to the advantage of his constituents, who were so well pleased with the discharge of his official duties that they re-elected him to serve a second term. He and his wife were members of the Christian church.

To William and Rachel Louise (Moore) Miller were born six children, namely: Clara, now deceased, was the wife of L. E. Kretzer, of Lebanon, Ohio; Ed C. is a traveling salesman of Sabina; Isaac, who lives in Wilmington, Ohio, is a salesman in the store of Frank Gallup; Harry is a farmer at Westboro, Ohio; Frank L. is the subject of this sketch; Nellie, a twin sister of Frank L., is the wife of J. E. Briggs, of Morrisville, Ohio. The mother of these children, Rachel Louise Miller, is a daughter of Samuel and Christiana (Rhonemus) Moore, both of whom were born in Washington township, Clinton county, the former in 1820, and the latter in 1819. Both are now deceased, the father dying in 1900, and the mother in July, 1884. Samuel Moore was the son of McCagy and Rebecca (McGee) Moore, who were of Irish descent and who came from Pennsylvania to Clinton county, being numbered among the early settlers of this locality. Samuel Moore was a farmer throughout his active life, owning one hundred acres of land in Washingon township. The family all belonged to the Christian church. Samuel and Christina Moore were the parents of ten children.

Frank L. Miller was born at Sabina, Clinton county, Ohio, on October 26, 1875. He secured his elementary education in the country schools near Martinsville and in the public schools of Wilmington after the family moved to this city. At the age of twenty years he applied himself to learn the trade of jeweler under Ed Devoss at Wilmington, with whom he remained ten years, becoming a proficient workman and fully qualified for any department of that trade. In 1905 Mr. Miller went to New Vienna and started a store on his own account, but in 1908 he came to Wilmington and bought a store which he has since conducted. He is very successful in his conduct of the business and has met the public approval to such an extent that he is in the enjoyment of his full share of the local trade. He carries a splendid up-to-date stock of goods and his courteous treatment and evident desire to please his customers has gained for him a well deserved popularity.

Mr. Miller is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, belonging to the blue lodge and chapter at Wilmington, and is a member and a trustee of the Baptist church of this city. His family also belong to this same church. He is a member of the Commercial Club of Wilmington, and in many ways has evinced his personal interest in the local public welfare.

On September 1, 1904, Frank L. Miller was married to Sarah Walker, who was born on a farm near Wilmington, the daughter of Abel and Mary Walker. Her mother is living, but her father, who was one of the founders of the Clinton County National Bank, is now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Miller have been born one child, Mary Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Miller move in the best social circles of Wilmington, and are deservedly popular with the people of this section.

LAWRENCE EGAN.

Lawrence Egan, a well-known business man of Wilmington, Ohio, during the past eleven years, has been engaged in the coal, building supply and sewer-pipe business in this city, with an office and yard on Sugar Tree street. Today he holds a distinctive position of prestige among the successful business men of Clinton county and has had much to do with advancing the material interests of the city of Wilmington and in helping to make it one of the most important commercial centers of this section of the state. Such a man cannot fail to interest, for he is not only a representative citizen in his sphere of endeavor, but here he has established a reputation for honor and integrity.

Lawrence Egan, who was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, January 11, 1851, is the son of Lawrence and Margaret (Maher) Egan, the former of whom was born in County Tipperary in 1821 and who died in 1895, and the latter of whom, likewise, was born in County Tipperary in 1830, and who died in 1892. Mr. Egan's paternal grandparents were Lawrence and Catherine (Butler) Egan, the latter of whom was Lord Butler's sister, but who, nevertheless, married a man without rank or title. The Butlers owned a big estate and Lord Butler's sister, the grandmother of Mr. Egan, had a life estate, and as long as there was a son named Lawrence in the family, he was entitled to the fruits of the estate. The Egans had a large amount of property in an early day in Ireland, but during an insurrection the Catholics had all of their property confiscated. The Egans, who were good Catholics and who wanted to avoid confiscation, deeded their land to old Captain Butler, a lord, and the great-grandfather of Lawrence Egan. The Butlers refused to return the land, but instead gave them positions as overseers on the estate so they would not cause so much trouble. Mr. Egan's grandparents lived and died in Ireland and were good Catholics. His maternal grandparents also lived and died in that country.

Lawrence Egan, Sr., was a gardener and served an apprenticeship of seven years in learning his trade. In 1851 he came to New York state and later emigrated to Kentucky, where he worked on the railroad. Within a few months he emigrated to Clarksville, Warren county, Ohio, and worked for John Hadley, a railroad contractor. In 1852 his family joined him and when the family emigrated to Ohio they were accompanied by Lawrence, Jr., the subject of this sketch. The family was sixteen weeks in the trip across the ocean from Liverpool to New Orleans, and six weeks in the trip up the river. In 1857 the Egan family came to Wilmington, Ohio, where the father worked on the Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville railroad as a section boss for many years. Eventually, however, he purchased a farm in Clinton county and there died. He and his wife and family were good Catholics. They had seven children, of whom Lawrence was the eldest; Richard is a policeman in Wilmington; Thomas is a druggist in Wilmington; Patrick is a resident of Anderson, Indiana; John is a druggist in Wilmington; Mary is the wife of Thomas Maher, of Kokomo, Indiana, and Margaret, who is single, lives in Wilmington.

Lawrence Egan attended the public schools and after finishing his education worked in a grocery for some time. He had been compelled to go to work at the age of nine years. After reaching maturity he rented land for several years, and was finally married in Clinton county, Ohio. After his marriage, he engaged in the grocery business in Wilmington for a short time, and then sold out and started a retail coal business. Here he has been engaged in business for the past eleven years, with his office and yard on Sugar Tree street.

In 1888 Mr. Egan was married to Jennie Spinks, a native of Kentucky and the daughter of William Spinks, now deceased, who was a farmer in Washington township, near Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Egan have had three children, Catherine, Lawrence W. and Mary Ellen. Lawrence W. assists his father in the coal business.

J. TURNER DARNELL.

The subject of this interesting biographical sketch is one of the best-known horse fanciers and trainers in Ohio, a man who loves horses and has a singular and widely-recognized facility for bringing out the best there is in a horse in the matter of speed. J. Turner Darnell, of Wilmington, this county, has been engaged as a trainer for years, and has the credit of having developed some of the best "steppers" that ever performed in the Ohio circuit. As an owner, also, he is widely known, and during his career has been the possessor of some mighty fast horseflesh, including the famous "Kate Phelps," pacer, two-seventeen and one-quarter; "Minnie Burns," pacer, two-twelve and one-quarter; "Belmont Lady," trotter, two-thirteen and one-quarter, besides others of more than merely local fame; and at present is the owner of "Ebony Todd," a phenomenal three-year-old that done a furlong in seventeen seconds; "Crystal Wall," four-year-old trotter, with a record of a furlong in eighteen seconds; "Minnie Pointer," a four-year-old pacer, and "Lady Commodore," a promising two-year-old, both of which have plenty of speed. He also is a trainer of race horses for other owners and has a wide reputation for his ability to "deliver the goods" in this connection.

J. Turner Darnell was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, near the city of Salem, on April 17, 1864, the son of Jacob and Rhoda (Brooks) Darnell, both of whom were born on the same plantation in Guilford county, the former in 1812 and the latter in 1817. In March of 1872, some years after emancipation, Jacob Darnell and his wife and children left North Carolina and came to Ohio, locating at Wilmington, this county, where Jacob and wife spent the rest of their lives, his death occurring in 1883 and her death occurring in 1885. For fifteen years Jacob Darnell served as janitor of the school building in Wilmington, a trust to which he ever was faithful, and he and his wife possessed the respect and confidence of the community. They were the parents of four children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the youngest, the others being Albert, Alice and Susan, the latter two of whom died in young womanhood.

J. Turner Darnell attended the public schools of Wilmington and received an excellent grammar-school education. For several years he worked as a clerk in Hames' grocery store, after which he opened a restaurant, which he successfully conducted until 1914, at which time he began giving his whole attention to the development of his training stables, he having for nearly fifteen years before that time been actively engaged in developing the speed strains in promising colts of his own or such others as were brought to him by other owners, and he has had an unusual degree of success in this enterprise, Darnell's horses having a wide reputation over the racing circuits.

In October, 1882, J. Turner Darnell was united in marriage to Eliza Jane Thompson, who was born in Rochester, Warren county, this state, and to this union three children have been born, William T., Ethel May and Vernon. Dr. William T. Darnell is a practicing physician at Xenia, this state, where he has built up an excellent practice. He received his medical education at Chicago and for a time occupied the post of interne at Booker T. Washington's hospital, later going to the republic of Mexico, where he practiced his profession for a year, but finding things too warm for comfort in that unhappy and revolution-ridden republic, returned to his native state and located at Xenia, where he is doing well. Ethel May married George Steward; upon whose death she married, secondly, Arthur Fisher, of Cincinnati, and is living in that city. Vernon is still at home, an invaluable assistant to his father.

J. T. Darnell is a Republican and for years has been an active worker in the ranks of that party and on several occasions was sent as a delegate to district conventions of the party, and he served one term as constable, having been elected on the Republican ticket. He is a good business man and is financially independent. Horsemen throughout this part of the state repose much confidence in his ability to judge the qualities of a prospective racer and his training stables are kept busy developing promising strains. He is a prominent member of the colored Masonic, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias lodges at Wilmington and takes a warm interest in the affairs of those useful fraternal organizations, being regarded as a leader of the people of his race hereabout.

J. LESTER SPAHR.

It may truthfully be said that he who creates beauty is a public benefactor no less than he who creates the more material forms of wealth. The artist, no matter in what field he may labor, turns the attention for the moment from the common, sordid scenes of life, and directs it to that which is perhaps more worth while, though less valued and less honored. He whose name forms the theme of this biography spent his boyhood amid scenes of natural beauty, for he was a farmer's son, and there he received those early impressions which determined in after years the direction which his energies should take J. Lester Spahr, one of the leading photographers of this county, was born in Greene county, Ohio, on August 4, 1877, his parents, Robert S. and Martha A. (Saville) Spahr, both being natives of the same county.

The parents were people of moderate means, and it took hard work and careful planning to provide shelter, food and clothing for the ten children that came to this home. But although theirs were busy lives, neither father nor mother neglected those higher duties having for their object the training of the minds of their children which should result in strong, useful character. The fact that all of the subject's brothers and sisters are living is tribute to the care and wisdom of their mother who also is still living. The children of Robert S. and Martha A. Spahr were as follow: Albert G. of Xenia, Ohio; R. O., a farmer of Greene county; J. Lester, our subject; Howard S., of Xenia; Fanny, wife of Lee Ledbetter, of Xenia; Sherwin G.; F. B., Emma Spahr, Homer C. and Earl R., all of Xenia.

With so many to provide for, it was necessary that the elder children remain on the farm to help their father and mother, the latter's life being as strenuous and as useful as that of her worthy husband. Thus it was that Lester did not leave the home place until he was twenty-one, receiving his education in the public schools. Leaving the farm when he reached his majority, he became a clerk and was employed by a number of merchants in Xenia, giving satisfactory service in this occupation. Being ambitious to have a business of his own, when he was twenty-six years old, he took up photography in the town in which he and some of his family were then living, and in 1906, he came to Wilmington to live, buying the studio where his present business is located.

J. Lester Spahr was married on January 1, 1914, to Zella Hayes, a daughter of Capt. Mellville Hayes, of Wilmington.

Mr. Spahr, while busy with matters relating to his own profession has identified himself with commercial organizations, and in thus doing, has not only contributed to his own success but also to the commercial interests of his home town. He is a prominent member of the Commercial Club, and is secretary and treasurer of the Ohio Society of Photographers, as well as a member of the National Association of Photographers. Mr. Spahr is known as one of the active, energetic, public-spirited business men of this community. Besides the above business affiliations, Mr. Spahr is interested in fraternal orders, and is a Mason. He and his wife are communicants of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they are among the most active and useful members.

Mr. Spahr is numbered among those men in the community who can always be depended upon to be kind in his judgments, considerate of the rights and welfare of others, and genial and trustworthy to a high degree.

GEORGE M. AUSTIN, M. D.

Few families of pioneer descent are better known in Clinton county than the Austins and the Smiths, families which, from the very beginning of the social order in this favored community, have played a prominent part in the affairs of the county. By the marriage of Benjamin N. Austin and Mary Smith, a happy union of these two families was effected and Dr. George M. Austin, of Wilmington, one of the best-known and most prominent physicians in the county, thus traces his ancestry to these two lines of dominant pioneer stock. The Austins came to this county in 1808, the Smiths locating here eight years later, and both families exerted a powerful influence for good in the formative period of the now well-established commonwealth, ever being found on the side of the right in all movements designed to promote the general welfare.

George M. Austin was born on a farm near the Mt. Pleasant church, in Vernon township, Clinton county, Ohio, August 23, 1856, son of Benjamin N. and Mary (Smith) Austin, the former of whom was born in Surrey county, North Carolina, in 1810, and died in 1879, and the latter of whom was born in Vernon township, this county, in 1821, and died in 1901.

Benjamin N. Austin was a son of William and Elizabeth (Austin) Austin, first cousins, the former of whom was a native of Prince George's county, Maryland, and the latter of whom was a native of Albemarle county, Virginia. The Austin family in America dates to about the close of the seventeenth century, at which time the first of that name to locate in this country settled in Maryland. This colonial Austin was a member of the English gentry and maintained a proper display of his coat-of-arms after coming to this side. The Austins are of Norman descent, the family being directly traced back to a noted thirteenth-century crusader.

William Austin was bereft of his father by death when a young child and upon reaching a proper age was apprenticed to the carpenter trade, at which he became quite proficient. He assisted in the construction of the first locks in the Potomac river at the time Washington City was built. At Charlottesville, Virginia, he married his cousin, Elizabeth Austin, and located in Surrey county, North Carolina, where, for eight years, he was engaged in farming. At the end of that time, in 1911, attracted by the glowing reports sent back by his brother, Thomas Austin, who had located in this county three years before and wishing to avoid slave territory he decided to come to Clinton county. With his family and belongings transported in two wagons, drawn by oxen, he made the toilsome journey to this county in six weeks, hailing the stopping places in Vernon township with joy. For three years he lived on a farm near the confluence of Todd's creek and Cowan's creek, near which place his brother, Thomas, had located in 1808, and three years later bought three hundred and twenty acres of land in the eastern part of the same township; later enlarging his holdings by buying four hundred acres nearby, and there he spent the remainder of his life. On this farm the Austin family established a private burial ground, which, years later, was extended to include the bounds of the present Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

Though the Austins originally were members of the Church of England, William Austin became a devout Wesleyan Methodist and performed a very active part in the organization of the Methodist church in this county. Soon after arriving in this county he founded the Mt. Pleasant Methodist church and all his life was one of the most liberal supporters of the same. He also founded the first Methodist church in the then comparatively insignificant hamlet of Wilmington, this church having thus had a continuous existence of more than one hundred years, it having been organized in the year 1813. William Austin was a man of unusual vigor, both bodily and mentally, and easily ranked among the foremost pioneers of that section. He was a capable and forceful speaker and was wont to fill the pulpits of his two churches during the absence of the "circuit" preacher, whose visits to this county then were made but once in six weeks, and thus became known far and wide as a local preacher of much power, his influence extending far beyond the confines of Clinton county, no man in this section of the state being held in higher regard than he. His son, Benjamin N. Austin, surrounded by such wholesome influences, grew up to useful and influential manhood. He was not yet one year old when his parents made the toilsome journey from North Carolina to this county, therefore practically all his life was spent here. His youth and young manhood were spent in assisting his father to reclaim his large estate from the forest wilderness and later he cleared a small farm of his own, to which he later added further purchases, receiving also a tract by inheritance, until he became the owner of three hundred acres of excellent land in Vernon township. He also owned a half section of land in Indiana and was counted as one of the most substantial residents of this county. He, following in the footsteps of his devout parents, was an earnest member of the Methodist church, ever active in promoting the interests of that communion, and three of his brothers became Methodist ministers.

Benjamin N. Austin was twice married. By the union with his first wife eight children were born, namely: William Harrison, who died during the Civil War, while serving in the ranks of the One Hundred and First Regiment, Indiana Volunteer Infantry; Mrs. Catherine Billers, deceased; Thomas, who died in infancy; Mrs. Mary Bogus, deceased; Francis Bogus, died in infancy; Mrs. Sarah E. Cogall, who lives in Alabama; James Fletcher, a farmer, who lives in Illinois, and Ruth, now deceased, who married Philip Sherwin, a merchant of Cleveland, Ohio.

Upon the death of the mother of the above children, Benjamin N. Austin married, secondly, Mary Smith, daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (Higgins) Smith, the latter of whom was a daughter of Matthew Higgins, a soldier in the patriot army from New Jersey during the Revolutionary War. Ephraim Smith was the son of Simon Smith, a New Jersey blacksmith, whose grandfather was an English sailor who settled in Long Island and later moved with his family to New Jersey. Ephraim Smith came to Ohio in the year 1816, locating in this county, where he settled on a farm in Vernon township, where he spent the rest of his life. This farm was situated on the main highway of travel in the pioneer days and Ephraim Smith operated a tavern at that point called Union Inn (near Villars chapel), which had high renown in those days for the excellent character of entertainment which it provided for both man and beast. The Smiths were members of the Baptist church and were substantial and influential citizens of their day; there being a large family of children, whose progeny today are honorably represented in various sections of this county, further information regarding whom is set out in the biographical sketch relating to S. G. Smith, presented elsewhere in this volume.

To Benjamin N. and Mary (Smith) Austin were born six children, as follow: Charles T., who died in childhood; George M., of Wilmington; Alpheus, a Methodist minister, stationed at Madisonville, Ohio, one of the leading ministers of the Cincinnati conference; Louis E., who died at the age of seventeen; Florence, who lives at Wilmington, and Emma, who died in childhood.

George M. Austin was reared on the home farm in Vernon township, attending the district school nearby, later attending Wilmington high school, from which he was graduated in 1880. He then entered the Medical College of Ohio at Cincinnati, from which excellent old institution he was graduated in 1883. Upon receiving his diploma he immediately located in Wilmington and has been very successfully engaged in the practice of his chosen profession in that city since that time. Doctor Austin is one of the foremost physicians of this part of the state, and his practice extends far beyond the borders of the county. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the Ohio State Medical Society and the Clinton County Medical Society, in all of which organizations he takes an interested part. Since his boyhood, Doctor Austin has been interested in geology and archeology, particularly in local geological formations, and he has perhaps the finest collection of geological specimens relating to this section to be found in the state. His thoughtful research in this connection has caused him to be recognized as an authority on the subject and he is in wide demand on the part of geological societies and journals devoted to that subject for papers relating to his discoveries, while the United States governent geological survey recognizes him as an authority in this section, he frequently being called on to supply the government with accredited specimens from his choice collection.

On December 30, 1890, George M. Austin was united in marriage to Elma C. Watson, who was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, daughter of Rev. John M. and Eliza (Negus) Watson, the former of whom, for many years a missionary in the west, is now making his home with Doctor and Mrs. Austin, his wife having died some years ago. Elma C. Watson was a former teacher in Wilmington College and was thus engaged when Doctor Austin formed her acquaintance. She is a woman of most admirable qualifications for the difficult role of a physician's wife and has proved a devoted helpmeet to her earnest husband. Doctor and Mrs. Austin are the parents of four children, Faith, a teacher in the Philadelphia public schools, and Mary E., John B. and Elizabeth, who are still at home.

ISAAC NEWTON LAIR.

That "there is no honor not founded on worth, and no respect not founded on accomplishment," can be applied fittingly to the subject of this biography, who is widely and favorably known in this county. He has been endowed with energy, foresight and absolute integrity, and in business, as in private life, has possessed the confidence of his associates as well as that of the public in general. Isaac Newton Lair, cashier of the Citizens' National Bank of Wilmington, Ohio, is a scion of one of Kentucky's old and honored families.

Charles Lair, the father of our subject, still lives with his son. The mother, Sarah (Winston) Lair, passed away when Isaac was only twelve years of age, misfortune thus depriving the boy of a source of strength and inspiration that life can nowhere else supply.

The birth-place of Isaac Lair was Lair, Kentucky, one of the historic landmarks of the state, and a town named in honor of Isaac Newton Lair, Sr., grandfather of the subject of this sketch. Isaac Newton Lair, Sr., was born on March 12, 1871. Both parents were natives of Kentucky. The paternal grandfather, because of his genial nature and conspicuous business ability, was known throughout the section where he was born. There was no enterprise looking toward the general good or the interests of that section of the state in which he was not directly or indirectly concerned. Before he had reached the usual age for prominence in the business or agricultural world, he was widely known as a farmer and distiller, and in politics as a leading Democrat. The grandson has many of the admirable traits of the distinguished ancestor, the predominating one being, perhaps, power of organization. In both, this ability has meant a furthering of the industrial and economic life of their respective communities.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lair, Sr., other than the subject of this sketch, were: C. B., cashier of the Peoples' National Bank, Greenfield, Ohio; C. P., druggist at Cynthiana, Kentucky; and J. F., farmer of the latter place.

In the midst of fresh air, wholesome surroundings and the hard work of farm life, the younger Isaac grew up, taking advantage, meantime, of the educational facilities afforded by the public schools and also attending the private school of W. H. Lockhart at Cynthiana. Work on a farm did not seem to offer the opportunity he desired, but there was no open door elsewhere at first. Realizing that "there is never an open door to fame or prosperity, except we open it for ourselves," he started out at the age of twenty-one to find employment more in harmony with his tastes, and first became a messenger in the Farmers' National Bank at Cynthiana. So energetic and capable was the young man that his employers were not slow to see in him qualifications that go to make the good business man, and it was not long until he was promoted. Here, too, he proved his proficiency, and subsequently went through a series of promotions until he reached the position of assistant cashier, which he resigned in 1904 when he moved to Clarksville, Ohio. There he organized the Farmers' National Bank, and was its cashier for twenty-two months, relinquishing this place when in 1906, a better opening seemed available in Wilmington, Ohio, and together with J. W. Sparks and others, he organized the Citizens National Bank. At the time of its organization, Mr. Lair was asked to become its cashier, and has served in that capacity ever since. So efficient has been both the policy and management of this business institution, that it is now the second largest bank in the county. There is no doubt that much of the bank's success has been due to the energy, honesty and executive ability of the young man who helped to found it. Square dealing has been the motto of the institution as well as of its individual promoters ever since its inception.

On October 12, 1899, Isaac Newton Lair was united in marriage to Alice Ammerman, who was born and reared at Cynthiana. Mrs. Lair has taken much interest in her husband's work, and their home is one of the popular ones in the community. Their son, an only child, is named Isaac Newton Lair, Jr. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lair are loyal members of the Presbyterian church, in which the former is "ruling elder," clerk of the session and superintendent of the Sunday school. Time has become such a precious commodity in modern life that it is rather rare to find a business man interested enough in his church to give it the amount of attention which Mr. Lair has given. He has spared neither time nor means to advance its welfare, and has been ably assisted in his duties by his good and faithful wife, to whom church membership means church activity.

Mr. Lair, like his father, has always been an independent Democrat. The standing that he has enjoyed in the party is indicated by the fact that in 1896, he was elected treasurer of Harrison county, re-elected four consecutive times, and was compelled to resign when he moved to Clarksville eight years later.

Mr. Lair believes in organization in social life, as well as in business affairs, and is prominent in the fraternities of Masons and Knights Templar.

In private life, as in positions of public service, Mr. Lair has performed the duties assigned conscientiously and well, and thus has formed not only a reputation, but a character which has secured for him both the confidence and the esteem of the public whom he is always willing to serve. The best interests of any community are advanced by the lives of such men as have here been sincerely described.

GEORGE MERRILL RICE.

Ruskin, the great apostle of work, has said "those who will work faithfully, will put themselves in possession of a glorious and enlarging happiness." In the lives of those successful men whose early childhood and youth were surrounded by hardship and privation, there has been work of the most unrelenting, uncompromising kind. But true to adage and precept, that discipline has often been translated into prosperity, and much of the sorrow forgotten when passed. The hardships common to the lot of the pioneer preacher, especially when his family was large, are so well known as to become proverbial. These conditions were present in the life of George Merrill Rice, now one of the most prominent furniture dealers in the county, who was one of ten children in the family of a pioneer Methodist minister.

George Merrill Rice was born in Vinton county, Ohio, on January 5, 1884, a son of Rev. M. H. and Mary E. (Rose) Rice, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky, and the latter of whom was a native of Lawrence county, Ohio. Reverend Rice is now living in Wellston, Ohio, retired after forty-five years of faithful service in his denomination, and is still blessed with the companionship of his loyal wife. The seven children living are: Mrs. Waldo Clark, of Jackson, Ohio; F. L., J. P., and Paul Rice, all residents of Wellston; Mrs. John Scott of Waverly, Ohio; Mrs. J. O. Knox of Gallipolis; and George Merrill, the subject of this sketch.

The boyhood of Merrill Rice was like that of other boys reared in the home of a minister. They moved about rather more frequently than the average family of that time. In spite of the heavy drain upon the resources of the family purse, Reverend and Mrs. Rice were able to educate their children. The subject of this biography went to the public schools and then had two years in the Rio Grande College at Rio Grande in Gallia county, Ohio. This period of intellectual training was cut short by the necessity to earn his daily bread, and at the age of seventeen, George left school and went to clerking in a general store at New Martinsburg, Ohio, where he remained for two years. It was here that he learned those principles of business which afterwards made him the successful man that he is. When nineteen, he worked for the Midland (wholesale) Grocery Company at Washington C. H., Ohio, and was there until he was employed by the Welton Grocery Company in 1907, in the same town, and he soon became its secretary and one of the board of directors. Two years later, he came to Wilmington and engaged in the furniture business, establishing the firm of Campbell & Rice. The store was located in the Jacob Hurst room on South street. On January 1, 1911, Mr. Rice bought out the interests of Mr. Campbell and continued the business at the above address until July, 1914, when he removed to his present quarters in the Walker Memorial building. Here Mr. Rice has continued to build up his business until he now has the largest store room in the county. His display rooms are remarkable for their beauty in stock and equipment, and are one of the interesting places to visit in the down-town district. A large basement is utilized in the business handled by the store. This beautiful building is modern in every way and is fire-proof.

On September 6, 1903, George Merrill Rice was united in marriage with Jennie Campbell, of Gallipolis, Ohio. Two children have been born to this union, Samuel B. and Mary Elizabeth.

Mr. Rice is one of the most energetic members of the Commercial Club. In politics, he is a Republican. He is a member of the Methodist church. In fraternal affiliation he is a Mason, being a member of the blue lodge and chapter.

One born and reared in a household whose atmosphere was impregnated with piety, idealism and unselfishness, would be expected to have these virtues inculcated in his character. Mr. Rice is a man of sterling worth. While a business man, he has not allowed his vision to become obscured by commercial pursuits, for he is gentle and kindly in bearing, true in his friendships, loyal in his citizenship, stanch in principle, and a worthy exponent of his splendid early training.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT.

In the largest and best sense, the Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant, of Wilmington, Ohio, is distinctively one of the notable men of his day and generation in public life in the state of Ohio and as such his life work is entitled to conspicuous consideration in the annals of Clinton county, where he was born and where he has spent practically all of his life, with the exception of the time he has been absent at distant capitals in the service of his country. As a merchant in the city of Wilmington, he is a pre-eminent success; as a citizen of Clinton county, he was honored in three successive elections as clerk of the Clinton county court, and as a man of larger capacities and abilities, he was nominated and triumphantly elected to the United States Congress from the Sixth Ohio district and served two terms with credit and distinction. Several years later, in 1914, he was called upon by his party to lead it in the state campaign as the candidate for secretary of state, to which he also was elected. Charles Q. Hildebrant is typical of the man who has made a pre-eminent success in public life; pleasant and agreeable personally, honest and upright in his daily life, he is possessed of capacity for large and permanent service.

The Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant was born on October 17, 1864, at Wilmington, Ohio, and is the son of Jefferson and Margaret M. (Quinn) Hildebrant. The father, during his lifetime, was one of the most successful merchants of Wilmington and known throughout the length and breadth of Clinton county. He was born on February 10, 1831, near Snow Hill, in Greene township, the son of Christopher Hildebrant, a native of New Jersey, who came to Ohio about 1820, where he became a pioneer farmer in Greene township. The mother of Jefferson Hildebrant was Elizabeth Cripisteen, also a native of New Jersey, who passed away several years ago.

The late Jefferson Hildebrant, who died on August 9, 1910, was reared on a farm and when fifteen years of age, entered the Newberry Academy of the Society of Friends in Martinsville. Subsequently, he taught school and later became a teacher at Freeport, Illinois, and while an instructor there, had for one of his pupils Charles J. Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield. Upon his return to Clinton county, in partnership with his brother, he operated the first thresher and separator ever owned in Greene township, after which he entered Farmers' College, at College Hill, Ohio, where he remained for two years, graduating in June, 1853, in a class of twelve. After farming for five years, following his graduation from college, he was elected county surveyor and served for three years. He was married on October 9, 1861, to Margaret M. Quinn, the daughter of the Hon. D. P. Quinn, a pioneer settler of Clinton county, who died in 1867. After his marriage, Jefferson Hildebrant moved to a farm on Rattlesnake creek, in Fayette county, but in 1863 purchased the B. R. Whitcomb book store at Wilmington and was continually engaged in that business until his death. He was the first man to introduce Jersey cattle into Clinton county and exhibited, throughout his life, an intense interest in live stock and agriculture. He owned sixty acres of land within the corporate limits of Wilmington and was an active member of the state horticultural society, a Republican in politics and liberal in his religious views. His beloved wife died on November 15, 1880. Her mother, before her marriage, was Mary Woodmansee. Her father, in pioneer times, had operated a general store at Quinn's Mill, in Clinton township, and was the leading man of the community for many years. He owned sixteen hundred acres of rich black soil in that community and was an extensive live stock buyer. As a Republican, he served in the Ohio Legislature in Clinton county.

It was the late Jefferson Hildebrant who built the splendid brick house on South street in 1872 and who developed the pretty grounds which surround this magnificent home. It is the present home of Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant and comprises sixty acres of land. The father planted practically all of the trees now on the place. "Hildebrant's book store" became a family expression in the domestic life of Wilmington and its location was a landmark. Although the store is now owned and operated by others, it still retains the old name.

Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant was the only child born to his parents. He was a student in the Wilmington public schools during his boyhood and youth and later entered Wilmington College, where he was a student for some time. Subsequently, however, he became a student at Ohio State University at Columbus and upon his return from college, associated with his father in the management of the book store in Wilmington until 1890, when he was elected clerk of the Clinton county court, as a candidate of the Republican party. After serving three successive terms, Mr. Hildebrant was nominated and elected in 1900 to the United States Congress from the Sixth Ohio district, serving two terms, from March, 1901, until March, 1905.

After retiring from Congress, Mr. Hildebrant was engaged as a traveling salesman for three years, or until 1909, when he took charge of the book store in Wilmington. The father having died in 1910, in January, 1914, he sold the book store to Joel Walker. In August, of that year, he was nominated in a state-wide primary as a Republican candidate for secretary of state and in November was triumphantly elected to the office.

Few men living in this section of Ohio have been as active in political work as the Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant, who has served his party as county chairman and has been a delegate to two Republican national conventions, as well as a representative of his party of the state committee for several terms.

On October 14, 1886, Mr. Hildebrant was married to Ada J. Hains, in Wilmington, Ohio. She is the daughter of Augustus H. and Nancy (Johnson) Hains, and was born in Ohio. Her parents are now living retired in Wilmington. Her father has been a prominent man in the official life of Clinton county and is a former county auditor. Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrant have had three children, Margaret, Virginia and Richard.

For many years Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant has been prominent in the fraternal circles of this state. As a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Knights Templar, he is a past worshipful master, past high priest and past eminent commander. He is also a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In a business way, Mr. Hildebrant is treasurer of the Clinton County Telephone Company, of Wilmington.

Charles Q. Hildebrant has contributed in no small degree to the reputation and fame of Clinton county, yet he is no more popular in Clinton county than he is throughout the state of Ohio as a whole. Conscientious and capable in the performance of public duties, he is likewise earnest and cordial in the private relations of life.

THURMAN MILLER.

As the press is the greatest modern agency for molding public opinion, its representatives are a real power in the life of any community. He who can control the sentiment and editorial policy of a newspaper has a weapon for good or evil, which is incalculable. When, therefore, a member of this profession, who has risen to prominence through sheer force of character and innate ability, uses his great influence for constructive purposes and right principles, he may be considered one of society's most valued and valuable members. Estimated upon this premise, the man whose name appears above is one of Wilmington's foremost citizens. As editor of the Journal-

Republican, not only is he widely known, but his editorial writings are being extensively quoted.

Harold Thurman Miller was born on a farm in Highland county, Ohio, December 28, 1881. His father, James Fenton, and his mother, Luella (Martin) Miller were born and reared in the county of his birth, but they are now residing on a farm near Blanchester, Clinton county, Ohio.

With the exception of one year in which he traveled, Mr. Miller has had but one occupation other than newspaper business, and that is school-teaching. Thurman Miller's early life, while in strong contrast with his present work and environment, was an excellent preparation for the latter, for while it furnished the means for strenuous work, it also afforded leisure for the indulgence in reading and study necessary to every literary career. Farm work while pleasant for him, did not hold out the prospect for advancement to his liking, and he did not wait to become of age before other fields of labor were sought by him. Thurman Miller was an only child, and as a boy he took advantage of the training afforded by the country schools, remaining on the farm until he was twenty. Then while continuing his individual studies, he taught school for the following six years, a third of this time as a teacher in the country schools of Highland county, another third in the graded schools of Clinton county, and the remaining two years in the high school, being principal of the Blanchester high school and teacher of English and history in Wilmington high school. Mr. Miller has the distinction of being the only graduate of the Wilmington College having two bachelor's degrees, having graduated in 1907 with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and two years later, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

After traveling for one year, Mr. Miller took up literary work, and in the spring of 1911 joined the staff of the Clinton Republican. Two years later, the Republican and the Journal consolidated, and on January 1, 1913, the young writer took up his duties as managing editor of the paper thus formed. He is a brilliant writer, and his energy and literary ability have done much to build up the fortunes of the paper with which he is identified.

On August 7, 1907, Thurman Miller married Grace Robuck, the bride being a college class-mate, and a native of Clinton county. Their two children are named Eugene James and Harold Thurman, Jr. Mr. Miller is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Martinsville, Ohio, but is affiliated with his wife in her membership of the Friends church in Wilmington.

Besides being its editor, Mr. Miller is secretary-treasurer of the Journal-Republican, and in this way he has much to do with the policy and management of the paper. Although a young man, Mr. Miller already is well known in the newspaper world, and his articles are frequently quoted because of their originality in thought and their good literary style.

Both as a newspaper man, and as a man interested in life from its broad view point, this young editor takes keen pleasure in what is going on in the world, is a wide and well-informed reader, and above all, he is public spirited in the broadest sense of the word. Mr. Miller has been a member of the Knights of Pythias at Martinsville since his twenty-first year. He is a Republican.

The interesting fact in this sketch is that what might have been considered by others as insurmountable obstacles were turned into stepping stones, and by the action of a strong, determined will, were used to further the very career which they seemed at first to defeat. Our subject belonged to that admirable class of young men who, though in isolated localities, and without the inspiration of numbers, decide early in life upon an education. He had to teach school and attend college alternately in order to defray the expenses of his own education, but this experience seems only to have strengthened his abilities, for he emerged strong and self-reliant, ready to take up the struggles of life.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN HAIR.

After thirteen years of faithful and devoted service as a teacher in the public schools of Clinton county, William Franklin Hair, better known among his intimate friends as "Frank" Hair, entered upon the life of a farmer and has found much pleasure and satisfaction in tilling his well-kept place in Washington township. Studious in his habits, attentive to the latest developments in agricultural science, Mr. Hair has conducted his farming operations with a high measure of intelligence and, though his place is not as extensive as some of the farms in his neighborhood, he has prospered and has no fear of the wolf howling at his door. He has a delightful home in Washington township, in which he takes much pleasure and where he and his good wife greet their friends with the most cordial hospitality.

William Franklin Hair was born on a farm near the village of Westboro, in Jefferson township, Clinton county, Ohio, on January 28, 1857, son of George W. and Permelia (Garrett) Hair, the former a native of Brown county, this state, and the latter a native of Jefferson township, this county.

George W. Hair was the son of Titus and Nancy (Sapp) Hair, the former of whom was born in Washington county, Virginia, and the latter in Clermont county, this state, daughter of George Sapp, a pioneer of that county. Titus Hair came to Ohio from Virginia with his parents in the year 1808, the family locating in Clermont county, where Titus Hair grew up as a cabinetmaker, later becoming a farmer. About the year 1855 he moved to this county, buying a farm of about one hundred acres near the village of Westboro. He also continued to work at his trade of cabinetmaking and became one of the best-known citizens in that neighborhood. Later he moved to Clark township, buying a farm near the village of Lynchburg, where he spent the remainder of his life. His son, George W. Hair, married Parmelia Garrett, of this county, a daughter of Henry and Nancy (Johns) Garrett, the former of whom was born in Virginia, the son of William Garrett, who came, with his wife and children on horseback from Virginia to this county and located on a farm in the southwest portion of the county, where he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1864. Henry Garrett grew up on his father's farm and married Nancy Johns, member of one of the pioneer families of the neighborhood, and it was the daughter of this union who was the mother of Frank Hair. Henry Garrett died in 1849, before reaching middle age. George W. Hair became one of Clinton county's well-known farmers, his operations mostly being carried on in Clark township. He was exempted from service during the Civil War on account of ill health and his death occurred in 1876. He and his wife were members of the New Light church and their three children were reared in the faith of that communion. These three children were Frank, the immediate subject of this sketch, Hay W., and Nancy E.

William Franklin Hair received his education in the public schools of this county and when twenty-three years of age began teaching school, continuing this close personal service in behalf of the public for a period of thirteen years, 1880-93, becoming one of the best-known teachers in Clinton county. He then decided to become a farmer and following out this design bought the farm of eighty-three acres in Washington township on which he is now living, and where he confidently expects to spend the remainder of his days. He is successfully engaged in general farming and is regarded as one of the substantial men of his community.

In 1890 Frank Hair was united in marriage to Mary E. Vandervort, who was born in Green township, this county, daughter of T. H. Vandervort, a well-known resident of that township. Mr. and Mrs. Hair are members of the Church of the Disciples at New Antioch and take an active interest in all the good works of their neighborhood, being regarded as among the leaders in the community life thereabout. This amiable couple are in a position to look on the bright side of life and they bring to their relations with their neighbors a wholesome kindliness of spirit that makes them prime favorites with all thereabout, the two being held in the very highest regard throughout the entire countryside.

Mr. Hair did well his duty to the public during his long service as a teacher, many former youngsters in this county, now grown to useful manhood and womanhood, acknowledging with gratitude the great debt they owe to the early instructions of this conscientious teacher; and in his later years he is doing equally well his duty toward the body politic by continually advocating all measures designed to promote the welfare of all the people, his sage counsels receiving the most respectful consideration on the part of his neighbors, who repose the utmost confidence in his judgment in matters relating to the common welfare.

PROF. EDWIN P. WEST.

Edwin P. West was born in Martinsville, Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, February 2, 1851. He is the second son of James H. and Helena (Jackson) West.

James H. West was a man of strong intelligence and fair education, first a teacher and then a farmer, distinguished for firmness of conviction and integrity of character. His father, Peyton West, was a man of affairs in the early history of the county, was county surveyor from 1840 to 1846, county treasurer for a period, and had a large share in the larger land transactions of that period in his part of the county. Peyton West had learned the surveyor's art from his father, Owen West, a cousin of Benjamin, the artist, who had emigrated from eastern Pennsylvania into Pittsylvania county, Virginia, and thence to Ohio about 1805 and settled on the East fork of the Miami river a few miles southeast of Martinsville. James H., when a boy of eighteen, was one of the chain carriers for his father when he surveyed Jefferson township in the winter of 1839. James H. West died on June 28, 1903.

Helena Jackson, mother of Professor West, was a daughter of Josiah and Ruth (Hiatt) Jackson, and was born near Martinsville on October 4, 1825, and died on October 19, 1864. Josiah Jackson was a son of Jacob Jackson, the first minister of Clark township, whose brother, John Jackson, was the first settler in Wayne township, this county, in 1802. Another brother, Samuel Jackson, built the first cabin in Jefferson township in 1812. Samuel was a famous hunter in his day and was characterized as a second Daniel Boone. He was a typical frontiersman and finally found his way to Cass county, Texas, where he died about a quarter of a century ago, at the age of one hundred years. These brothers are said by Judge Harlan, in his excellent sketches of Clinton county history, to be probably first cousins and intimate friends of President Andrew Jackson, whose father in 1765 came from the same locality in north Ireland, as did their ancestor, Isaac Jackson, a few years earlier. These brothers were sons of Samuel Jackson, a son of the aforesaid Isaac Jackson, who was a descendant of Ralph Jackson, who was burned at the stake as a martyr at Stratford, England, in 1556. Isaac's father and uncle, Anthony and Richard Jackson, had gone with Cromwell from England into Ireland, had become followers of George Fox, and founded the first Friends church in Ireland, with which Andrew's progenitors were evidently not affiliated.

Professor West considers himself fortunate in having an ancestry, a childhood home and community in which education was accorded a supreme value. Martinsville was noted for its educational spirit and the excellence of its schools before other communities of the county had achieved this distinction. Milton Hollingsworth, of Richmond, Indiana; Amos Hockett, Professor Adams and his wife, from Oberlin College; Charles and Sattie Oren, fresh from Antioch College and the inspiring influence of Horace Mann, Thomas J. Moon and others established and fostered an educational regime there that made it an intellectual Mecca for able and ambitious young men and women of this and adjoining counties.

Professor West received all his early education in those schools, and after completing the course there, attended the National Normal University at Lebanon, when its students numbered a thousand and more. After teaching four terms in the rural schools of the county he entered Wilmington College during the presidency of Benjamin Trueblood, and was graduated in the class of 1878, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. However, he ascribes his education more to a lifelong habit of reading the books of the world's intellectual masters in the lines of literature, history, science and philosophy.

Probably no other person in the history of the county has served its educational interests for so long a period or aided more in the development and efficiency of its schools than has Professor West. He began teaching in September, 1871, in the Nauvoo district, south of Clarksville, and has taught continuously since that time, with the omission of three years spent in Wilmington College. He taught his second rural school at Beech Grove, two miles east of Martinsville, his third at Hale's Branch, near Westborn, and the fourth at Sharp's, south of Sabina. In one of those schools the enrollment reached eighty-three, and in none did it fall below forty-eight. He was superintendent of the Martinsville schools for seven years, including the entire township for one year, and was the first to establish a modern high school there. He was superintendent at New Vienna for fourteen years, at Dayton, Kentucky, for four years and has had charge of the Wilmington schools for the past eleven years and has just been re-employed for three years more.

The Wilmington schools now require twenty-eight teachers and enroll nine hundred pupils. The high school has grown under his administration from about one hundred pupils to more than two hundred and is accredited by the North Central College Association of the United States and recently by Pennsylvania University. Professor West has graduated more than five hundred young men and women and, so far as he knows, practically all have turned out to be useful and successful citizens.

For a dozen years Professor West conducted summer schools for teachers, was many times president of the County Teachers' Association, taught and lectured in the annual institutes of Clinton and other counties, made numerous educational and some political addresses and was for some years a member of the American Economic Association. He obtained a professional life certificate from the state board of examiners in 1886. He has served for twenty-four years and six months as a member of the Clinton county board of school examiners and was secretary for one year of the Ohio association of county and city examiners. He was a member of the first school book board of Ohio, by appointment of Governor Campbell, who was its chairman, and although not a candidate, received the vote of his congressional district for state school commissioner, at one of the state conventions. He is now a member of the Clinton County Teachers' Association, the Central Ohio Teachers' Association, the state and national associations.

Professor West is a clear and forcible writer and an efficient public speaker and enjoys the confidence of his constituents and fellow workers in his city, county and state. Professor West is a Republican. He is a Mason, an Elk and a Knight of Pythias. In church affiliation, he is a member of the society of Friends.

On April 17, 1884, Edwin P. West was married to Josephine Walker, daughter of W. W. and Mary Hackney Walker, of Martinsville, member of old and respected families of the county. Mrs. West taught for three years before her marriage and two years after. They have two daughters, Vivien and Mary, both born in New Vienna, Vivien on August 25, 1887, and Mary on March 20, 1890.

Vivien, after graduating from the Dayton, Kentucky, high school, attended Cincinnati University for a year and is a graduate of the Oxford College for Women, in the class of 1907. In 1911 she was married to Floyd C. Williams, a son of Captain Williams, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and a graduate of Miami University. They have one son, William West Williams, who was born on April 23, 1913. They reside in Hyde Park, a beautiful suburb of Cincinnati, in which city Mr. Williams is engaged in the practice of law.

Mary, the youngest daughter, is a graduate of the Wilmington high school, Wilmington College and of Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts, the largest and one of the best girls' schools in the world, graduating from last named institution in the class of 1910, soon after her twentieth birthday.

J. W. B. CROUSE.

Among the members of that considerable army which the impoverished Duke of Hesse sold to the government of George III of England, for use against the American colonists during the long struggle of the latter for independence, was one John Crouse, who, following the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, declined, along with hundreds of others of the Hessians, to return to his native land, preferring to put in his lot with those valiant patriots against whom his reluctant arms had been turned. John Crouse settled in Virginia and soon became a person of substance. There he married and reared a family, his descendants today being numbered among the most patriotic and loyal citizens of this great republic. One of John Crouse's sons, John, married Rhoda Matson, of Virginia, member of an old colonial family, and, about the year 1818, emigrated with his family to Ohio, locating in the neighborhood of Cuba, in this county, where he soon became one of the most substantial and influential citizens of that vicinity. John Crouse, Jr., was an energetic and forceful man, full of enterprise and push, and presently was known as one of the large landowners of Clinton county, he being the possessor of approximately six hundred acres of excellent land, which he brought to a fine state of cultivation. He lived to a ripe old age and in 1851 erected the fine old home which still stands on the Crouse farm. He and his wife reared a large family, only one of whom is now living, the venerable Mrs. Nancy Thatcher, of Wilmington, this county.

Henry Crouse, one of the sons of John and Rhoda (Matson) Crouse, received a limited education in the schools of his home neighborhood, being trained in the ways of successful agriculture by his energetic father, on whose place he remained until 1867, in which year he bought a small farm of ninety acres in the eastern part of Washington township, where he spent the rest of his life. This farm is now owned and occupied by one of Henry Crouse's sons, Isaac T. Crouse. Henry Crouse married Elizabeth Pennington, who was born in Washington township, this county, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Burk) Pennington, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Clinton county in an early day in the settlement of the county, locating in the Cuba neighborhood. Isaac Pennington was a thrifty man, possessed of keen business sense, and in his day was regarded as one of the wealthy men of the county, his extensive intersts in this county not being confined wholly to his fine farm of two hundred acres in Washington township. To the union of Henry Crouse and Elizabeth Pennington seven children were born, five sons and two daughters. Henry Crouse and his wife were members of the Christian church and did well their part in the development of the best interests of their community, rearing their children in the Christian faith, from which they have not departed. Henry Crouse was an excellent citizen, upright and honorable in his dealings with his fellowmen, and was held in high regard throughout that community, a regard to which his neighbors gave ample expression when they elected him to the important position of township trustee, an office which he held for some years, during which time he was able to exert a fine influence in the way of advancing the public welfare.

J. W. Crouse, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Pennington) Crouse, was born on the old Crouse farm in Washington township and received his education in the district schools of that vicinity. Reared to the life of the farm, he has continued farming all his life and his industry and enterprise have been properly rewarded, he now being very well circumstanced as regards the goods of this world, his fine farm of two hundred and three acres, twenty-seven acres of which is in his wife's name, being regarded as one of the most productive farms in the neighborhood. Mr. Crouse has given much attention to stock raising and has been particularly successful as a feeder of hogs. In 1901 he erected a fine new barn, at the same time remodeling the old barn, and is well equipped for carrying on his farming operations according to the most approved system of modern agriculture.

On December 21, 1876, J. W. B. Crouse was united in marriage to Clarinda Baker, who was born on the farm where she and her husband now live, daughter of William Baker and wife, Kentuckians, who settled on this farm in 1835. To J. W. B. and Clarinda (Baker) Crouse, two children have been born, namely: Bruce B., who lives on the home place, married Jennie Rhodes and has one child, a son, Burdette R.; and Mabel V., who married Guynn Shelton and died, leaving one child, a daughter, Mabel V.

Mr. and Mrs. Crouse are members of the Christian church and are warmly concerned in the various beneficences of the congregation to which they are attached, being prominent in all good works thereabout, and are highly esteemed by all. Mr. Crouse is an Odd Fellow and is much interested in the affairs of that popular order.

MATTHEW IRVIN.

Born in Ireland, a descendant of one of those zealous Scots colonists whom Cromwell hurled across the Irish sea with the avowed purpose of Protestantizing Ireland, the subject of this brief biographical review has lived in Clinton county since he was eleven years of age and has done well his part in the affairs of his community. Prospering with the years, he now is in a position to take his ease in "the sunset time" of his life, he now being well past the three-score-and-ten stage of his existence, and is living quietly and contentedly in his pleasant home in Union township, enjoying the confidence and regard of his neighbors and the entire community.

Matthew Irvin was born in County Down, Ireland, on August 15, 1842, son of Henry and Mary (Wiley) Irvin, both natives of the same county, members of old Scotch families therein, the former of whom was born in 1788 and died at his home in this county on October 18, 1869, and the latter of whom was born in 1798 and died on November 13, 1869.

Henry Irvin was the son of William Irvin, a stanch Presbyterian of County Down, member of a family that had been represented in that county since the time of the Cromwellian colonization of that section of Ireland, who was a shoemaker by trade. He was a large, strong man and he and his wife reared a considerable family. Henry Irvin grew up in County Down, working on a farm. He married Mary Wiley, a neighbor girl, daughter of Matthew Wiley, a member of another of the many Presbyterian families in that section, to which union were born four children, all of whom are now dead, all having died at their respective homes in this county, save the subject of this sketch, the youngest of the family, namely: William, who died in 1915 at his home in Sabina, this county; Mary, now deceased, who married George Gumley, a well-known farmer of this county; James, who died at the age of eighteen, and Matthew, the immediate subject of this sketch.

In 1849 William Irvin, eldest of the children above named, emigrated to America, coming at once to Ohio and locating in Chester township, this county. The letters he wrote home inspired his parents to follow him and in 1853 they and their other children came to this county, remaining here the rest of their lives. Henry Irvin became a tenant farmer and he and his family associated themselves with the United Presbyterian church. In their later years Henry Irvin and his wife made their home with their son, Matthew, and there their last days were spent.

Matthew Irvin was eleven years of age when he accompanied his parents to their new home in this county. The journey across the water was made in the sailing vessel, "Gilbert," the voyage requiring five weeks and three days. During his early youth, Matthew Irvin aided his father in his work on the farm, later working for other farmers

"by the day." He was industrious and frugal and in 1867 found himself in a position to buy a farm of his own. This farm of one hundred and one acres in Union township was covered with virgin forest, with the exception of twenty acres. He cleared off the timber, drained the soil and brought the place to an excellent state of cultivation. He married in 1872 and continued to live on this farm until 1884, in which year he bought a farm of seventy acres near Bartonville, moving onto the same, and has since lived there, though still owning the original farm. From the very start of his agricultural operations, Matthew Irvin recognized the possibility of profit in raising hogs and early became a large feeder of hogs, his money being made in this manner, all the grain he raised being fed to his hogs. For some time past Mr. Irvin has been practically retired from the active work of the farm, having turned the management of his two farms over to his sons, though he still takes a personal interest in the farm operations, and is taking things easy in his later years.

On December 24, 1872, Matthew Irvin was united in marriage to Sarah Ann Fife, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of William N. and Jane (Fife) Fife, both natives of County Tyrone, Ireland, who were early settlers in this county, and to this union six children were born, as follow: Henry, born on January 2, 1874, lives on one of his father's farms; Minnie, October 11, 1876, married John Stephens, upon whose death she married, secondly, J. C. Clevenger and lives in Washington township, this county; Dr. James Irvin, December 4, 1880, a prominent practicing physician, of Durant, Iowa; William M., August 21, 1883, who died at the age of one year and five days; Frank, July 20, 1886, a well-known farmer of Union township, and Fred, September 3, 1889, who lives on the home farm, married L. Dora McMillan and has one child, a daughter, Cleo, aged three years. The mother of these children died on November 13, 1914.

Mr. Irvin is a member of the Central Christian church at Wilmington and ever has been interested in good works and largely influential therein. He is a Democrat and while giving a good citizen's attention to political matters, never has been regarded as an active worker in politics, though his influence ever has been exerted on the side of good government and right morals. He has many friends in the neighborhood in which he has lived so long and in and about Wilmington and is held in the highest regard by all who know him.

HON. FRANK M. CLEVENGER.

The force of heredity is not always so easily traced in the lives of public men as in the career of the Hon. Frank M. Clevenger, one of Wilmington's best known attorneys and a man of interesting and forceful personality. The fact that his grandfather was justice of the peace for many years, and his father postmaster, at least shows a predisposition in the family for public service, as well as the possession of those personal qualities which are necessary to merit the public confidence. For three generations, this noted family have won the respect of their fellow-countrymen, evidenced by honors which, perhaps, reached their culmination in the election of Frank Clevenger to the state Senate to represent two districts. Mr. Clevenger is now associated with Simeon G. Smith in one of the best-known law firms in this section of the state. He is the son of William and Martha (Compton) Clevenger, and was born on a farm in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 8, 1865.

Enos Clevenger, grandfather of our subject, was the type of pioneer who leaves his impress upon his times. Born and reared in Frederick county, Virginia, he remained there until after his marriage to Christina Crouse at Winchester, Virginia, in 1824. Soon after this event, they packed their scant household goods on horses, and started northward, penetrating the forests of the new country. The young wife, being of German extraction, had the racial qualifications of the helpmeet of a pioneer, for she had love of home, courage, contentment and faith, all of which were needed in the trying years that followed. Traversing miles of attractive country, the horses of these early settlers were not stopped except temporarily, until they reached Clinton county, Ohio, which became the future home of the family. Here Enos Clevenger became one of the influential men of the community, and was justice of the peace during nearly all of his residence in the county. He died near Wilmington in 1867, his widow passing away three years later. Both the subject of this sketch and his father were born on the farm on which the old pioneer settled.

William Clevenger, although seventy-nine winters have passed over his head, is now, and has been for the past twenty-three years connected with the Irwin Auger Bit Company of Wilmington. From 1885 until 1890, he was postmaster of the town, and served with satisfaction to both his own and the opposing political party. During these years, the devotion of his faithful wife, who was a native of Indiana, was no small element in either his happiness or his success. Their five children are all boys. The eldest, George, is now living near North Yakima, Washington; Frank was the second-born; William W. resides in Santa Anna, California; the two youngest died at the ages of four and seven, respectively.

The career of Frank M. Clevenger is of more than ordinary interest, because it records activity in the great world of affairs; it registers the thoughts and deeds of a man who has helped to mold public opinion, as well as the laws effected thereby. Although born on a farm, he did not remain there after his eighteenth year, when, with an ambition which presaged well for his future, he took up his residence in Wilmington in order to attend school. Graduating with honors from the high school in 1886, he began the study of law the following year, was admitted to the bar in 1890, and has been in active practice since that time. For six years, he had his own law office, then establishing the firm of Slone, Martin & Clevenger, he practiced with them until 1899. In November, of that year, he went into partnership with Simeon G. Smith, and together, these noted lawyers have made their firm one of the strongest and best known in this part of the state.

Mr. Clevenger, while attending to professional duties, has always been an active politician, and as such, has made his influence in the community felt. From 1909 to 1911 he represented the fifth and sixth districts in the Ohio state Senate, these districts comprising the counties of Clinton, Fayette, Greene, Ross and Highland. While serving his constituents in this capacity, he was the author of a number of important bills, and was chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate the subject of taxation in Ohio, which investigation resulted in the present law. Although Mr. Clevenger filled the office of state senator with credit both to himself and to the Republican party, under the present system of "rotation of office," now existing, he was not a candidate for re-election.

Notwithstanding his busy professional life, and his public services, Mr. Clevenger has been true to the religious training of his God-fearing parents, and both he and Mrs. Clevenger have been active in the work and worship of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which the former is a trustee. Realizing, too, the benefits to be derived from organization on the social side of life, Mr. Clevenger has allied himself with a number of fraternal organizations, these including the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Elks lodge. In all of these, affiliation has meant to the noted lawyer not merely membership, but helpful co-operation.

Mary H. Robinson, a native of Frederick county, Virginia, became the wife of Mr. Clevenger in August, 1890, the ceremony having been performed at her home in Winchester, Virginia. In their home two children have been born, Agnes Virginia and Russell Robinson. Mrs. Clevenger has been a devoted wife and mother, and the circle of friends and acquaintances gained through her husband's prominence in public life, has only added to the number of those who respect and admire her.

Mr. Clevenger is considered one of the ablest lawyers in the state of Ohio. His keen insight, his ability to strike the correct theory of a case, his power of logical thought, and of facile expression, all go to make up what is known as "the legal mind." And the crowning tribute to such a man as he, is that his gifts have not been limited to the furthering of personal desires and interests, but have been considered by him in the nature of a trust to be used for the common good. With what success this ideal has been attained may be judged by his usefulness and prominence in the community in which the name of Clevenger has been honored in the past, as well as in the present generation.

Mr. Clevenger was appointed by Governor Frank B. Willis, on June 21, 1915, a member of the Ohio state board on uniform state laws, for the term ending June 5, 1918. The object is the outgrowth of a movement made by the bar association about ten years ago. The object is for each state to provide a board which will formulate plans to bring about uniformity of laws throughout the United States. They shall collect data as to the prevailing law in the United States and other countries, upon special subjects where uniformity is important, and especially on the following subjects: Conveyances—form and exeecution; commercial law, including bills of lading; corporations; insurance, fire and life; negotiable instruments; partnerships; trade-marks; unfair competition; warehouse receipts; labor, uniform hours of; marriage and divorce; wills, execution and probate.

CHARLES BOTTS.

After three years' experience with the German military service, as a soldier in Baden's standing army, Henry Botts "jumped" his furlough one day and came to America, making his way to Cincinnati. That was in the year 1844. Two years later, when the call for volunteers to serve in the war against Mexico was made, Henry Botts enlisted in the First Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was with that regiment until the close of the Mexican War. Henry Botts had three brothers and one sister, all of whom also came to America, and became so widely separated that they never were reunited, except in one instance, which hinged on an astonishing chance. Thirteen years after their separation, long after Henry Botts had settled in Highland county, this state, he made a trip over into the adjoining county of Brown in quest of seed wheat and there encountered his brother, Frederick, the two brothers having, unknown to each other, settled within a few miles of each other's homes.

Henry Botts returned to Cincinnati at the close of the Mexican War, later moving to Highland county, this state, locating in the Webbertown neighborhood, where he spent the remainder of his life. After arriving in Highland county he married Elizabeth Gerard, of that county, who was born in Alsace-Lorraine, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Gerard, who emigrated to America about the year 1838, coming to Ohio, where they located in Highland county, buying a farm on which they erected a log cabin and there they spent the rest of their lives. To this union seven children were born, four sons and three daughters, five of whom are still living.

Charles Botts, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Gerard) Botts, was born on the home farm in Highland county, not far from the village of Lynchburg, near the Clinton county line, on January 6, 1863, and was reared there, receiving his early education in the district schools of that neighborhood. When about twenty-two years of age he came to this county to work on the Ward farm in Washington township and ever since has resided there, for on November 7, 1886, the year after his arrival at the Ward home, he married Anne Maria Ward, the youngest daughter of the house, who became proprietor of the farm upon the death of her father. To this union six children have been born, Fay, John, Margaret, Israel, Alice and Elon.

This latter child was named in honor of his venerable grandfather, the late Elon

Bramble Ward, who for many years was one of the best-known and most influential residents of that part of Clinton county. Elon B. Ward was born near the village of Madisonville, this state, on September 27, 1822, and lived to be nearly ninety years of age. He was one of the eleven children of Morris and Mary (Bramble) Ward, the former of whom was born in New Jersey on October 19, 1790, and the latter of whom was born in Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh, on July 25, 1795. Morris Ward was one of the six children of Israel and Sarah (Cook) Ward, the former of whom was a soldier of the Revolutionary War, who followed his father from New Jersey to Ohio, locating in October, 1811, in the Madisonville neighborhood, where the rest of his life was spent. Israel Ward was one of the seven sons of Joseph Ward, who was born in New Jersey in the year 1734, his other sons being Jeremiah, Amos, Usual, Stephen, Isaac and Aaron.

Joseph Ward and his three eldest sons, Jeremiah, Amos and Israel, were soldiers in the patriot army during the Revolutionary War, the three sons living to draw pensions from the government for such service, these pensions being granted about the year 1832. Israel Ward went into the service at the age of sixteen and he brought with him, upon coming to Ohio, the musket he carried during the war. This ancient musket stood in his room, with bayonet fixed for hand-to-hand charge, until his death, in June, 1846.

In the year 1797 Joseph Ward emigrated from New Jersey to Ohio and entered from the government a section of land nine miles from Cincinnati, in Hamilton county, where the town of Madisonville now is situated. He built a log house in the wilderness and there spent the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1828, he then being ninety-four years of age. Joseph Ward's wife was killed by the Indians and he married, secondly, a woman of the name of Muchmore, continuing to live in the pioneer cabin until his death. Joseph Ward's sons all followed him, one by one, from New Jersey to Ohio, all settling on the same section of land, Israel being the last to come.

Morris Ward, son of Israel and Sarah (Cook) Ward, was about twenty-one years of age when he accompanied his parents from New Jersey to Ohio in the fall of 1811. On February 10, 1814, he married Mary Bramble, whose father, Elon Bramble, had brought his family from Pennsylvania to Ohio in the fall of 1801, floating down the Ohio river in a small flatboat. Elon Bramble and his wife were the parents of six children, three sons and three daughters, Laban, Major, Ayres, Fannie, Lavina and Mary, the last named of whom was the great-grandmother of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Botts. To Morris and Mary (Bramble) Ward were born eleven children, namely: Abigail, who married Martin Varner and died without issue; Elizabeth, who married Solomon Waybright, and had two children, Benjamin A. and Henrietta W.; Marietta, who married William Ereheart, and had one daughter, Eveline; Elon B., father of Mrs. Botts; Benjamin C., who married Sarah Holt, upon whose death, four years later, he married, secondly, Matilda Chew, to which latter union two children were born, Morris and Frank; Ayres B., who married Elizabeth Pearson, upon whose death he married, secondly, Margaret Rutlege, to neither of which unions was there issue; Harriet C., who married David Stites, and had four children, Mary, Priscilla, Phoebe and George; Frances, who married John Giffin; Danforth B., who remained unmarried, and Isaac and Edgar, who died in infancy.

Elon B. Ward was united in marriage on November 26, 1845, to Anne Marie Vanmiddlesworth, to which union were born six children, Marietta, Sarah Ellen, Catherine W., Jane V., Alfred B. and Elon B. The mother of these children died on January 24, 1864, and Elon B. Ward married, secondly, Sarah M. Vanmiddlesworth, sister of his first wife, to which latter union two children were born, Jefferson and Anne Maria, the former of whom died at the age of six months. Of the above named children, Marietta married Watkins J. Farren, Sarah Ellen married George King, Catherine W. married Elisha T. Custis, Jane V. married James Williams, Alfred B. married Ida May Hoskins, Elon B. married Mary Shaffer and Anne Maria married Charles Botts.

Mr. and Mrs. Botts are members of the Baptist church, to which all their children also are attached, and all take a warm interest in the affairs of the church, as well as in all good works in their neighborhood, this family being regarded as one of the leaders in affairs generally in their community. Mr. Botts has taken much interest in public affairs and is keenly concerned in all measures looking to the advancement of the common welfare. For nearly twenty years he served his township in the capacity of supervisor of highways and made an excellent reputation in that direction. He is held in high repute in his community and enjoys the confidence of all.

BENJAMIN DUNHAM ASHCRAFT NOSCAR.

The founder of the Noscar family in America spelled his name Noftzgar, but this presently was stripped of some of its superfluous letters, for the sake of convenience, and later generations of the family have been quite well contented with the more simplified form of the spelling noted in the caption of this brief biographical sketch. The first of the name to come to America was John Noftzgar, who came from Germany, locating in Maryland, where for some time he was connected with the military service. He later married and he and his wife emigrated to Ohio, coming down the Ohio river on a flatboat. They brought with them a favorite cat. Some time after their arrival at their new home, in the Madisonville section of Hamilton county, where they located, they missed the cat. Much to their astonishment, they later learned that the cat, following that marvelous sense of direction for which cats are so particularly noted, had returned to its old home in Maryland. The Noftzgars settled in Hamilton county, at about the point where the Longworth property, in Cincinnati, now is situated, and there they reared their family and spent the rest of their lives.

William Noftzgar, son of John and Jane Noftzgar, was reared on the pioneer farm in the Cincinnati neighborhood and married Elizabeth Ashcraft, daughter of Dunham Ashcraft and wife, natives of the north of Ireland, of Scottish descent, who emigrated to America and also settled in the Madisonville neighborhood near Cincinnati, where the rest of their lives were spent. Dunham Ashcraft was a shoemaker and became one of the best-known and most popular residents of that section in his day. For some years before his death, John Noftzgar gave much time trying to make a machine that would work by "perpetual motion."

Upon reaching manhood, William Noftzgar, or Noscar, as he later became known, became a fireman on the railroad out of Cincinnati, and for some years was engaged in the railway service. He then became head sawyer in Crane's mills, a position he also held for years, after which he went to Missouri, where he was engaged for some time in operating a saw-mill. He then returned to Cincinnati and upon the breaking out of the Civil War enlisted for the ninety-day service, at the end of which he moved to Pleasantplain (now Winsor), in Warren county, this state, where for some years he operated a saw-mill. To William and Elizabeth (Ashcraft) Noscar were born two children. Upon the death of the mother of these children, William Noscar married, secondly, Sybil Ann Loose, member of a pioneer family of the Pleasantplain neighborhood, to which union three children were born. Mrs. Noscar's grandfather, Alfred Scudder, was the owner of five hundred acres of land in that vicinity and he leased to his granddaughter's husband fifty acres, which Mr. Noscar later bought, at the same time adding thereto twelve acres, and on this farm he spent the remainder of his days. His widow is still living.

Benjamin Dunham Ashcraft Noscar, son of William and Elizabeth (Ashcraft) Noscar, was born in Hamilton county, this state, in the year 1855. His parents moved to Warren county during his youth and he was reared there. He spent three years at Lynchburg, in this county, learning the shoemaker trade, but never worked at the same. He concluded this apprenticeship when he was about twenty-one years of age and immediately began working on farms in the neighborhood of Lynchburg, continuing this form of occupation until his marriage in 1880, in which year he and his wife moved to Cincinnati, where for more than four years he was engaged at work in a coal yard. He then returned to this county and in 1899 bought the farm on which he now lives, in Washington township. This farm of fifty acres is well improved, Mr. Noscar having made all the improvements on the same with the exception of the frame of the barn.

In 1880 Benjamin Noscar was united in marriage to Mary Winston, who was born at Loveland, in Hamilton county, this state, a daughter of George and Mary (Sears) Winston, both of English descent. George Winston came to America as a young man and lived to be ninety-four years old. To this union three children have been born, Leuelda, Mary Elizabeth and Howard William. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Noscar spent one year in Warren county, five years in Clinton county, then moved to Selma, Clark county, for one year, then to Cincinnati for about five years, then moved to Clinton county, where they are now situated.

Mr. and Mrs. Noscar are members of the Methodist church, to the affairs of which they are devoted, and their children have been reared in this faith. Mr. Noscar is held in high repute in his neighborhood and has served his district in the capacity of school director and his township in the capacity of supervisor, in both of which positions of trust and responsibility he acquitted himself in such manner as to win the commendations of his neighborhood.

LINDLEY MURRAY MOON.

After an honorable, faithful and efficient service of twenty-eight years as a member of the able teaching corps of the Clinton county public schools, Lindley Murray Moon retired from that form of service and engaged in farming, since 1905 having devoted his attention to agriculture in Washington township, where he has a well-kept farm of more than two hundred acres, upon which he is living in comfort, enjoying the confidence and respect of the whole countryside. The same diligent attention to the duties in hand which made Mr. Moon's service as a teacher so successful has been given to the operation of his farm and during the ten years he has followed this vocation he has prospered, being now numbered among the substantial residents of that section of the county. He has been honored by his neighbors and is now serving his second term as township trustee, having been for three years president of the township school board.

Lindley Murray Moon was born on a farm east of Martinsville, in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 21, 1857, son of Pleasant and Huldah (Pike) Moon, the former of whom was born in this county on May 20, 1819, and the latter of whom was born in Highland county, this state, on June 16, 1817, daughter of William and Lucy (Butler) Pike, pioneers of that county.

Pleasant Moon was born in Clark township, this county, son of Joseph and Rachel (Hockett) Moon, members of the celebrated Moon colony that came from Sevier county, Tennessee, and settled in Clark township in the year 1809, the year before Clinton county was organized as a civic unit. Pleasant Moon was reared in the forest wilderness surrounding his boyhood home, receiving such education as was provided in the "backwoods" school of that neighborhood. Upon reaching manhood's estate he married and moved to Washington township and for twenty-six years lived on a rented farm west of where his son, the subject of this sketch, now lives. Following the death of his wife, in 1863, Mr. Moon returned to Clark township, taking a farm near Lynchburg, where he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1885.

To Pleasant and Huldah (Pike) Moon were born sixteen children, twelve sons and four daughters, namely: Lucy, Parker, Rachel, Sarah E., Mary A., Samuel, James A.,

Lindley M., Daniel, Carey, Joseph P., William, Harvey, Stephen R., Elwood and Manary (or Manara). The mother of these children died on May 25, 1863, and in April, 1868, Pleasant Moon married, secondly, Mrs. Susan Boyd, widow of Samuel Boyd and daughter of John and Jane Terrell, who was the mother of five children by her former husband, Jane M., Sylvester W., John T., James and Suzana.

Lindley M. Moon was reared on the home farm in Washington township and attended the district schools of that township until he was nineteen years of age, at which time he entered the training school for teachers at Martinsville and equipped himself for teaching, engaging in this profession the following winter, the pay for his first term's service being at the rate of thirty-five dollars the month. The next winter he was engaged as teacher at the Brown school, near his home, at a somewhat better wage and continued as teacher in that school for four years, working for his father for his board. He then was engaged as a teacher at Macedonia for two years, at a further advance of wages, and then for five years served as principal of the graded schools at Cuba, this county. Following this service he was engaged for two years as teacher at Farmers Station. At this period of his career he moved to Wilmington, where he made his home, and for two years was engaged as teacher at Burtonville, after which he went back to the Brown school in Washington township, teaching there for four years, at the end of which time he was engaged to serve as principal of the central school building at Wilmington, a position which he filled for five years, after which he returned to Cuba, where he concluded his service as a teacher three years later, having for twenty-eight years been engaged in instructing the youth of Clinton county, a service of inestimable value. During that time Professor Moon made many enduring friendships, his students, now men and women of affairs in this county, entertaining for him to this day feelings of the most sincere esteem and deepest gratitude.

While thus engaged in teaching, Professor Moon was looking ahead to the future and made some judicious investments in land. In 1892 he bought a small farm of sixty-one acres in Washington township, later adding an adjoining small farm of fifty-three acres, this being the tract on which he now lives; to this latter adding another tract sixty-five acres in extent, to which seven acres later were added and still later a tract of seventy acres, all adjoining, which gives Mr. Moon a fine farm, all of which is under an excellent state of cultivation and to which he has given his personal attention since the year 1905. This farm has three dwelling houses on it, and Mr. Moon rents the larger part of his land to responsible tenants, giving his chief attention to the tract on which his home is situated. In connection with his general farming, Mr. Moon is engaged extensively in the dairy business and has derived considerable profit from his fine herd of dairy cows. He also is much interested in poultry raising, giving particular attention to Black Langshans, and has found this department of his agricultural operations quite profitable.

On May 22, 1890, Lindley M. Moon was united in marriage to Alice B. Brown (one of his former pupils), who was born in this county, daughter of Isaiah and Elizabeth (Anson) Brown, and to this union two children have been born, Vivian, who died in infancy, and Vira Alice. Mr. and Mrs. Moon have a very pleasant home and entertain their friends with the most cordial hospitality. They are interested in all measures designed to advance the common welfare of their community and are held in the highest regard by all. They are members of the Christian church and Mr. Moon is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being looked upon as one of the leaders in the lodge to which he is attached. For years he has given close attention to public affairs in his neighborhood and is now serving his second term as a township trustee. He has been a member of the Cuba Special District board since 1907 and has been president of that board since 1912, in both of these official positions having given faithful and valuable service to the public.

HARRY L. CONNER.

The Conner family has been represented in Clinton county since 1831, in which year Jacob Conner, born in Maryland in 1801, and his wife, who was Susan White, also a native of Maryland, came to this county and located in Union township, where they became established as among the best-known and most influential residents of that section of the county. Jacob Conner was the son of Patrick and Mary (Lannem) Conner, also natives of Maryland. Patrick Conner was a blacksmith, held a captain's rank in the army of the United States during the War of 1812 and at the close of that war did not return home, the presumption being created that he was numbered with the unknown dead. His widow accompanied her son to this county and spent her last days here. Susan White's father, also a blacksmith, was a soldier during the War of 1812, and he, too, was reported among the missing. His widow spent her last days in Maryland.

Joseph Conner, father of the immediate subject of this sketch, a son of Jacob and Susan (White) Conner, was born in Union township, this county, receiving his education in the district schools of that township. He always has been a farmer and has been quite successful, most of his life having been spent in Washington township, where he now resides. He has given much attention to public affairs and is regarded as one of the most public-spirited men in the township, his services as ditch commissioner and road supervisor for years having given an impetus to highway improvements and drainage in his community that has resulted in vast improvements in this direction. He is now, and for some time past has been, commissioner of drainage in Washington township and his effective administration of the affairs of that office has met with the approval of all concerned, he being generally recognized as a man of large usefulness in the community. Two of Mr. Conner's brothers, Jesse and Charles, performed valiant service in behalf of the nation during the Civil War, as soldiers in an Ohio regiment, and survived that dreadful struggle between the states.

Joseph Conner married Eliza Ireland, who was born in Warren county, this state, a member of one of the old families of that county, and to this union two children were born, both sons, Harry L., the immediate subject of this sketch, and Walter S. Mr. and Mrs. Conner are members of the Christian church and their sons were reared in that faith, the family long having been active in the good works of the community, their influence ever having been exerted in behalf of all movements designed to elevate the standards of living thereabout.

Harry L. Conner, son of Joseph and Eliza (Ireland) Conner, was born on the home farm in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, and his entire life has been spent in that township. He received his education in the neighboring district school and was reared as a farmer, to which vocation he early gave his serious attention. In 1898 he bought the farm of one hundred and two acres in Washington township, on which he since has made his home, and has prospered, being regarded as one of the most substantial farmers of his neighborhood. Energetic, industrious and enterprising, he has done well those things which his hand found to do, and is now very well circumstanced, approaching middle life with a fair competence, well fortified against the future chances of fortune.

On February 3, 1888, Harry L. Conner was united in marriage to Minnie May Stephens, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of Frank and Sarah Drusilla (Gallaher) Stephens, the former a native of Warren county, this state, and the latter a native of Washington township, this county.

Frank Stephens was the son of Obadiah and Susan (Ireland) Stephens, the former of whom was a native of New Jersey and the latter a native of Warren county, this state. Obadiah Stephens came to Ohio when a lad about seventeen years of age, locating in Warren county, becoming a farmer and later operating a distillery in that county.

About the year 1830 he came over into Clinton county and bought three hundred acres of land in Union township, becoming one of the most substantial farmers in that section of the county, and there spent the remainder of his days. His son, Frank Stephens, married Sarah Drusilla Gallaher, of Washington township, this county, daughter of Harvey and Ann (Williams) Gallaher, the former of whom was the first white child born in Warren county, who later became a resident of Washington township, this county, where both he and his wife spent their last days. One of their sons, James Gallaher, served the Union as a soldier in one of the Ohio regiments during the dark days of the Civil War and survived that great conflict.

To Harry L. and Minnie May (Stephens) Conner thirteen children have been born, namely: Armeda Emaline, Eva Eliza, Edwin Leslie, Leo Ray (deceased), Otto Neal, Bessie Lillian, Stacey M. (deceased), James Espy (deceased), Susan (deceased), Ruth (deceased), Harold Joseph, Herbert Franklin and Ruby Rotensis. Mr. and Mrs. Conner are members of the Universalist church and their children have been reared in that faith. They ever have taken an active interest in the general welfare of the community in which they reside and are held in the highest regard throughout that whole section of the county.

FRANK L. GALLUP.

Adapting a sentiment once expressed concerning the writing of history, it is appropriate to quote: "Writing history is like making a bouquet in a garden of rare and beautiful flowers—there is such an array of material, so much to choose from, so little that can be chosen, and so much to be left untouched." The same might be said of the biography of a self-made man, such as the subject of this sketch, for in such a life, it is possible only to portray the external events and final results, though their influence may go down to posterity. There is something in the American heart which makes it respond to the word "self-made," as a soldier responds to a drumbeat. When that term is applied to one of our acquaintance, our respect immediately mounts higher, but the hardships encountered on the journey to success fortunately remain in the memory only of the man himself. One of the best-known and most influential merchants is Frank L. Gallup, dealer in carpets and wall paper, who was born in Wilmington on January 27, 1872, the son of Horace and Frances (Crary) Gallup, both natives of Connecticut.

Whatever of success Frank L. Gallup has attained, has been largely through his own efforts, for the father was a man of moderate means, and in those days a college education was indeed a luxury. But the father left his son something far more priceless than means, and that was an honest name.

Horace Gallup came to Wilmington in the pioneer days of 1848, his journey from the East apparently being made in the desire to find full scope for his adventurous nature. Together with his parents and their family, he started a sash and blind factory with his brothers, Alpha and Henry, which they operated successfully, for many years. He was a man of high standing in the community, and was a Mason. His widow, who still survives him, is living in Wilmington. Mr. Gallup was twice married, his first wife being Emily Clevenger by whom he had two daughters, Nettie, the wife of A. E. Caudel, deceased, and whose home was in Westerville, Ohio, and Emma, now Mrs. Charles Hadley of Wilmington.

The children of the second marriage were three in number, of which the subject of this sketch is the eldest. Anna, the eldest daughter, is the wife of H. T. Cartwright, a prominent attorney of Wilmington; Mary, the youngest, is Mrs. P. F. Dixon of Chilicothe, Ohio, her husband being a dentist in that city.

As before stated, the boyhood home of Frank Gallup was at Wilmington, in its schools of which he was educated, this including a course in the Wilmington college. As it was necessary for him early to assume the responsibilities of life, he first sought and obtained employment from H. G. Cartwright, taking charge of the carpet department of his carpet and dry-goods establishment. Some time after this, Mr. Gallup was employed by Cook & Linton until the death of the former, at which time, Mr. Gallup, who had now become a valuable salesman, took over the carpet department of this business. He first started in business on May 14, 1898, and has grown from a modest beginning to be the largest merchant in his line in the county.

That Mr. Gallup is a good business man by nature as well as by training may be perceived by the fact that starting with a small stock and store, he now has a stock four times as large as that of any other town of the size of Wilmington in the state. The store has a floor space of ten thousand five hundred square feet, and the stock and fixtures occupy two floors and the basement. Mr. Gallup carries a large line of carpets, draperies, wall paper, china, vacuum cleaners, and gives especial attention to the work of home decorating.

On January 21, 1900, Mr. Gallup and Maude Anderson of Leesburg, Ohio, were married, the bride being a daughter of Thomas J. and Jennie (Chew) Anderson. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gallup are Helen, Mildred and Chester.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallup's church affiliation has been with the Presbyterians of which denomination, the former is now a trustee. Both he and his wife have been valuable members of the church, active and zealous in all of its work, and sincere in their desire to make their lives count for good.

Mr. Gallup is a loyal and energetic member of various organizations. Besides taking his place among the merchants of the city, Mr. Gallup is a prominent Mason, being up to the commandery; is a member of the Elks lodge; the Knights of Pythias, and is a Republican.

One of the honors which has come to Mr. Gallup recently is an office connected with the Commercial Club. Since he has become its treasurer, the financial affairs of this important business organization have been well looked after. In "boosting" its interests, he has also "boosted" the business conditions in Wilmington. He is a "live wire," and is popular both as a business man and in the social and religious circles in which he and Mrs. Gallup move.

In closing this sketch, it is fitting to note that high moral standards have always actuated Frank L. Gallup, both in his public, business and private life. With honesty and integrity as the key-note to his career, it is not surprising that he has built up a large business, his geniality and kindliness being no small factor in his success.

OTTO GRADY BROWN.

Dating from the very beginning of the social order hereabout, the Brown family has been prominently and influentially identified with the best interests of Clinton county, particularly in the Washington township neighborhood. James Brown was one of the very earliest settlers of that section, having come here from Kentucky upon the opening of the Carrington survey and establishing himself as one of the most forceful and energetic pioneers of this region. His son, David Brown, inherited many of the same forceful characteristics and in his generation was regarded as one of the most influential factors in the community life of that part of the county in which his life was spent, he having remained on the paternal acres which were wrested from the forest wilderness by his pioneer father. David Brown's son, William Riley Brown, in his generation, brought to his labors a similar degree of energy and was accounted a man of substance and quality. He was public spirited and enterprising and for eighteen years served his township as trustee, being the incumbent of that office at the time of his death.

William Riley Brown's son, Otto Grady Brown, in the fourth generation of this forceful family in this county, is carrying on, in his own life, the work bequeathed to him by three generations of energetic forbears and has done equally well, bringing to bear the same talents and energy which placed his father, his grandfather and his great-grandfather in the forefront of the earnest citizenship of their respective fields, and is now serving the township as trustee, following his father's faithful example of devotion to the common welfare of the people of his home township.

Otto Grady Brown has the first tax receipts issued to his grandfather, David Brown, for the sum of one dollar and twenty-five cents, this being the taxes on fifty acres of land and his personal property. Mr. Brown also has the first tax receipts of his father on his land.

Otto Grady Brown was born on a farm near Farmers Station, in Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, on July 22, 1872, son of William Riley and Martha Ann (McKibben) Brown, the latter of whom was a sister of W. J. McKibben, to the biographical sketch of whom, presented elsewhere in this volume, the reader is respectfully referred for details regarding this interesting family in Clinton county. William Riley Brown was the son of David and Rebecca (Lieurance) Brown, the former of whom was born in Washington township, this county, and the latter of whom was born in Ash county, North Carolina, a daughter of George and Mary (Baker) Lieurance, she having come to this county on horseback, with her uncle, at the age of twelve years, locating in the neighborhood of Brown's school in Washington township. Rebecca Lieurance was one of the nineteen children born to her parents, none of whom she ever saw again after coming to this county.

David Brown was a son of James and Mary Elizabeth (Baker) Brown, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky and the latter of whom was one of the very earliest settlers in what is now Clinton county, having come here with her parents shortly after the opening of this settlement and locating in the vicinity of Morrisville. When James Brown came to this section from Kentucky, he crossed the Ohio river at Cincinnati (then called Ft. Washington), where he was offered the pick of land at the rate of one dollar the acre. He passed this flattering offer by, however, and came on north, buying six hundred acres of timber land in the Carrington survey, much of which still is in the possession of the Brown family, Otto G. Brown's farm being a part of this original tract. James Brown erected a log cabin, of the most primitive type, on this purchase and proceeded to clear his land of the dense forest which covered it. He married Mary Elizabeth Baker, daughter of one of the hardy pioneer couples who had settled near by, and presently supplanted his cabin by a residence of more pretentious appearance, this later to give way to the fine brick house in which his last days were spent, this old brick mansion still standing and in use, being now occupied by the family of William Baker. At the time of James Brown's settlement in this county the wolves still were plentiful hereabout and at times he found difficulty in guarding his homely cabin from the nocturnal incursions of these voracious maurading "varmints." He had to go to Miami mills to have his grain ground, a tiresome trip requiring three days, during which time his wife and little children were compelled to remain alone.

It was amid these conditions of pioneer life that David Brown was reared. A log school house was early erected on the Brown place, near the spot where Otto G. Brown now lives, and there David Brown received his education under the primitive system that then prevailed. Upon reaching his majority he received from his father fifty acres of timber land, which he cleared and brought to a state of cultivation. Upon his marriage to Rebecca Lieurance he erected a humble home in the forest and there he reared his family. By energy and industry he prospered and presently became known as one of the solid and substantial men of the county, his land holdings increasing until he owned three hundred acres of choice land. He and the members of his family were adherents of the Baptist faith and earnest workers in the church of that denomination.

During the Civil War David Brown served as a member of the home guards, or "squirrel hunters," as they locally were known throughout this part of the state. For some time he served as township assessor and took an active part in all public affairs.

William Riley Brown, son of David and Rebecca (Lieurance) Brown received his education in the Brown district school and upon reaching manhood's estate entered upon the life of a farmer, buying one hundred and sixty acres of the old home farm, and there he spent the remainder of his life. At the age of sixteen William R. Brown began to engage in the business of shipping stock, and followed this business with much success all his life, being one of the best-known stock dealers in that part of the county. He married Martha Ann McKibben, member of one of the old families in this county, and later erected the fine home in which his son, Otto, now lives. He and his wife were members of Bethel Christian church, of which he was one of the "main stays," and their children were reared in that faith. William R. Brown was a Democrat and ever took a prominent part in the political affairs of the county, his sound judgment and thorough acquaintance with local conditions giving much weight to his counsels in the deliberations of the party managers. For eighteen years he served his township faithfully in the important office of township trustee and was the incumbent of that office at the time of his death. William R. Brown and wife were the parents of four children, Otto, the immediate subject of this biographical sketch, Oceus, Ohm and Maude.

Otto G. Brown was reared on the paternal farm, receiving his education in the Brown school, and, with the exception of nine years, has spent his whole life on this place, having been located on the old home farm ever since he started farming for himself. He operates one hundred and twenty acres of the original tract purchased by his great-grandfather, James Brown, and has prospered, being accounted quite well circumstanced in world's goods. Mr. Brown has given close attention to political affairs and is prominently identified with the civic life of the county. Six years ago he was elected township trustee, on the Democratic ticket, and is still serving the people of his township in that important capacity, his efforts in behalf of the public welfare having been indorsed by successive re-elections.

On October 11, 1891, Otto G. Brown was united in marriage to Mary Pond, of Washington township, this county, a daughter of Riley and Jemimah (Lieurance) Pond, to which union two children were born, Reba and Riley. Mr. Brown married, secondly, on March 5, 1913, Vesta Bond, of Greene township, this county, a daughter of Thomas and Katie (Smingley) Bond, descendants of early settlers of this county. Mr. and Mrs. Brown take an active part in the social affairs of their neighborhood and are held in the highest regard throughout that part of the county. Mr. Brown is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge and of the Order of Eagles and is very popular with the members of both of these orders.

C. M. NOFTSGER.

One of the most highly-treasured relics of a day long gone that is possessed in Clinton county is a Bible four hundred and sixty years old. This truly venerable volume of Holy Writ was brought to America by John Noftsger, grandfather of the gentleman whose name the reader notes above, when he came to this country from Germany back in the early days of the last century. John Noftsger for some time after his arrival in this country was located in Maryland, where he married. He then emigrated to Ohio, locating in Hamilton county, and later moved to Clinton county, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. Grandfather Noftsger was a great Bible student, being widely noted for the careful manner in which he searched the scriptures and the old Bible which he brought with him from Germany, and which, even then, was a prized heirloom in the Noftsger family, is now owned by his grandson, C. M. Noftsger, the immediate subject of this sketch. As noted above, this venerable volume is four hundred and sixty years old and has been examined by many persons in the neighborhood of the Noftsger home.

Namond Noftsger, son of John and Mary Jane Noftsger, was born in Hamilton county, near the town of Madisonville, and was reared as a farmer. Upon reaching manhood's estate he moved to Butler county, this state, where he married Mary Jane Gerard, daughter of John and Martha Gerard, members of old families in that part of the state, and later came to Clinton county, where, in 1855, he bought the farm in Washington township, where his son, the subject of this sketch, now lives. This farm of eighty acres was brought to an excellent state of cultivation and Namond Noftsger made on it a good living, rearing his family of ten children in comfort. During the Civil War Namond Noftsger enlisted in the Union army in response to the call for ninety-day men and performed good service. He and his wife were devoted members of the Seventh Day Adventists church and their children were reared in that faith.

C. M. Noftsger, one of the ten children of Namond and Mary Jane (Gerard) Noftsger, was born in Butler county, Ohio, on December 24, 1853, and consequently was but two years of age when his parents moved to this county, practically all of his life, therefore, having been spent on the farm on which he is now living. With the exception of two years he spent in the medicine business at Lancaster, Ohio, C. M. Noftsger has been a farmer all his life. In his early manhood he spent three years engaged in farming in Illinois. He owns thirty-one acres of the old home place, the buildings of which he has remodeled, and is living there very comfortably.

On February 28, 1878, C. M. Noftsger was united in marriage to Mary Eliza Bloom, who was born in this county on August 10, 1858, daughter of William and Miranda (Roberts) Bloom. To this union four children have been born, namely: Maude married William Chambers, living in Washington township; Garri is a painter at Burtonville, Ohio; Harley and Marion. Harley is in Orofino, Idaho, in business with his father-in-law in a department store. Marion is in Moscow, Idaho, manager second floor of the largest department store in the state of Idaho. Mr. and Mrs. Noftsger are members of the Seventh Day Adventists church and are warmly concerned in the affairs of that church, being among the leaders in the local congregation, in which both are held in the very highest esteem.

SIMEON G. SMITH.

For one hundred years the family of Ephraim Smith, an English sailor who settled on American shores and became the founder of an extensive family, has been represented in Clinton county, the first of that line of Smiths to come here having been another Ephraim, who came from New Jersey in the year 1816 and located on a farm in Vernon township, on which he conducted a roadside tavern which was famed far and wide in that day for the hospitable character of the entertainment it afforded for the weary traveler. This pioneer tavern was situated on the main east and west highway through this section at that time, over which there was a constant stream of travel, and Ephraim Smith's reputation as a boniface extended far beyond the mere confines of this county. Ephraim Smith was twice married and had a large family of children, the numerous descendants of whom, in this generation, are widely scattered throughout this section of Ohio and many of whom have wandered into other states. Of this numerous family probably the best-known member in Clinton county is the gentleman whose name forms the caption for this interesting biographical review, Simeon G. Smith, a well-known lawyer of Wilmington, who for years has been recognized as one of the leaders of the bar of the Clinton circuit court.

Simeon G. Smith was born on a farm situated on the line separating Washington and Clark townships, in Clinton county, Ohio, on August 13, 1846, son of Amos and Hester A. (Morris) Smith, the former of whom was born on the old Smith homestead in this county, in April, 1824, and died in April, 1879, and the latter of whom was born at Huntsville, Alabama, in 1822 and died in 1898.

The family of Smiths from which Simeon G. Smith is descended had its origin in this country early in the second quarter of the eighteenth century, when Ephraim Smith, an English sailor, weary of sailing the seven seas, located in Long Island, later moving with his family to New Jersey, where he spent the remainder of his days. Ephraim Smith was born in England in 1691 and died on March 27, 1750, at the age of fifty-nine years, three months and two days. He and his wife, Hannah, the latter of whom died on February 5, 1736, were the parents of four children, namely: Ephraim, born on December 15, 1727; Simeon, great-grandfather of the immediate subject of this sketch, born on Friday, January 16, 1730, and died on November 27, 1807; Hannah, born on January 4, 1732, and Daniel, born on June 21, 1734, and died on September 27, 1749.

Simeon Smith, after whom the subject of this sketch was named, was reared to the blacksmith trade and became a man of substance in his home community in New Jersey. On Thursday, June 9, 1768, he was united in marriage to Catherine Servis, daughter of Uri and Elizabeth Servis, and to this union six children were born, as follow: Elizabeth, born on August 29, 1771; Sarah, November 7, 1773; Anna, December 6, 1775; Ephraim, grandfather of Simeon G., born on April 7, 1778, died on October 14, 1838; Cornelius, October 12, 1780, died on January 15, 1859, and Rebekah, October 13, 1783, died on January 7, 1866.

Ephraim Smith, in the third generation from Ephraim, the English sailor, was the first of the line to locate in Clinton county, as set out above. He was twice married, his first wife, Sarah Higgins, grandmother of Simeon G. Smith, having been a daughter of Matthew Higgins, a soldier in the patriot army from New Jersey during the Revolutionary War. Upon her death he married, secondly, Rebecca Dolby, and by both unions had issue, the children of the first union numbering six, namely: Ephraim, a farmer of the Clarksville neighborhood, now deceased; Jonathan, also a former well-known farmer of this county, now deceased; Amos, father of the subject of this sketch; Mary, who married Benjamin N. Austin; Mrs. Eliza Batson and Mrs. Fordyce. To the second union four children were born, as follow: Mrs. Lois Austin, Mrs. Rebecca Osborne, Samuel (deceased) and George, who is living in Iowa.

Amos Smith was reared on the farm in Vernon township and was a farmer practically his whole life. During the period of the Civil War he conducted a general store in the village of Morrisville and then bought a farm in Highland county, this state, on which he spent the remainder of his life. He married Hester A. Morris, member of one of the well-known pioneer families of Highland county and he and his wife early became recognized as among the most influential members of the community in which they resided. Hester A. Morris was the daughter of William and Dephsey (Bales) Morris, the former a Virginian and the latter a native of Alabama. William Morris left Virginia during his early manhood, going to Alabama, where he engaged in farming. There he married Dephsey Bales and about the year 1835 came to Ohio, locating in Highland county, where he became a substantial farmer, spending the rest of his life there, living to the great age of ninety-eight years. His wife died at the age of eighty-three and William Morris married, secondly, at the age of eighty-four. He was a prominent member of the Disciples church and took an active part in the affairs of his community, being an influential factor in both the civic and religious life of the county. Amos Smith and his wife also were members of the Disciples church and were active in all good works thereabout. Amos Smith was an ardent Whig and upon the organization of the Republican party transferred his allegiance to that party, for many years being recognized as one of their leaders in his neighborhood. For years he served his community as a magistrate and the soundness of his judgments in such local disputes as required adjudication in his court, secured to him wide fame as a just judge.

To Amos and Hester A. (Morris) Smith were born six children, namely: Samantha, now deceased, who married S. J. Brown; Simeon G., the immediate subject of this sketch; Mary E., who died in the year 1868, at the age of seventeen; Hiram P., a substantial farmer, of Hillsboro, this state; Sophronia, wife of Judge Savage, of Wilmington, this county, and Almeda, who also lives in Wilmington.

Simeon G. Smith's youth was spent at Morrisville, his elementary education being received in the schools of that pleasant village. He supplemented this instruction by a course in Grear's Commercial College at Dayton, this state, after which he entered the law office of Governor McBurney, at Lebanon, Ohio, as a student. So effectively did he apply himself to the study of law under his excellent preceptor that at the end of two years, in 1874, he was admitted to the bar at Lebanon. After thus qualifying for the practice of law, Mr. Smith returned to his native county, locating at Wilmington, where he since has been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. Upon locating in Wilmington, Mr. Smith formed a partnership with the Hon. John S. Savage, former congressman from this district, a mutually satisfactory arrangement which continued until the death of the latter in 1884. Mr. Smith then formed a partnership with W. W. Savage, and this connection continued until the latter's elevation to the bench of the Clinton circuit court in 1900, whereupon Mr. Smith entered into a partnership with F. M. Clevenger, a happy combination of talents, which still exists, to the mutual satisfaction of both. Mr. Smith's success as a lawyer was assured from the very start and he rapidly rose to a commanding position at the bar of the Clinton circuit court, quickly achieving a reputation for prudent and sagacious practice which extended far throughout this section of the state. Few legal firms in this part of Ohio are better established than that of Smith & Clevenger, that firm's clientele including many important connections hereabout.

On August 27, 1879, Simeon G. Smith was united in marriage to Althea B. Moore, who was born in Missouri, near the city of Cairo, Illinois. She was a daughter of William and Sarah Moore, both of whom now are deceased, and to this union six children have been born, as follows: Wella M., who is a teacher of domestic sceince in the public schools of Covington, Kentucky; Allan, who was graduated from Wilmington College and the law school of Columbia University and is now engaged in the practice of law at Cincinnati; Anna, a teacher in the Wilmington schools; Jessie, also a teacher in the Wilmington schools; Helen, who also occupies a position as teacher in the Wilmington schools, and Kathryn, a student in the Arnold School of Physical Culture, at New Haven, Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Disciples church and their children were reared in the faith of that communion. Mr. Smith is a Republican and takes a keen interest in the political affairs of his home county, being deeply concerned in all matters having to do with the betterment of conditions in the community to which, for years, he has given devoted efforts. He has served the public acceptably in the capacity of city councilman at Wilmington and as a member of the city school board, to both of which important trusts he gave his most intelligent attention. He also is alertly attentive to the rapidly-growing business interests of his home city, ever being found among the leaders in movements designed to promote the city's advancement, and, as a director and vice-president of the First National Bank of Wilmington, and formerly a director of the Clinton County National Bank, occupies a prominent position in the financial circles of this region.

Mr. Smith is a prominent member of the Masonic order at Wilmington, having attained to the commandery, and is a past master and a past high priest in the order. He has prospered in the matter of the world's goods, and owns a handsome home on Lincoln avenue, Wilmington, which he built in 1909, and which is the scene of much cordial hospitality, he and his family being regarded as among the leaders in the social affairs of the city. Genial, affable, a thorough lawyer and a gentleman, Mr. Smith is exceedingly popular, not only among his associates at the bar, but among all classes in this county.

WALTER H. HOSKINS.

Approximately one hundred million people come under the influence of the American educational system, and millions are yet to come under the influence of this system. A few realize their maximum potentialities as citizens of the republic, as workers in the home, in the fields and in the marts of trade. An almost unbelievable majority of the people never rise above the plane of superficial thinking and lackadaisical effort. Far too many fail to attain a higher state of culture because they are unwilling to take modest beginnings. A few men have profited in a large degree by our educational system, and Walter H. Hoskins, a splendid young farmer of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, owes his success in a large measure, no doubt, to the careful and scientific training he received in the public schools of Clinton county and at Wilmington College.

Walter H. Hoskins was born on his father's farm on the Port William pike in the Dover neighborhood of Union township, November 28, 1882, a son of Rev. Josephus and Emily (Gallimore) Hoskins.

Rev. Josephus Hoskins who is a native of Green township, in this county, was born three miles north of New Vienna on April 26, 1841. He is a son of Isaac and Rachel Hoskins, the former of whom was born in 1811, in Guilford county, North Carolina, and died in March, 1897, and the latter of whom was born in 1809, in Guilford county, North Carolina, and died in May, 1854. The parents of Isaac Hoskins, John and Hannah (Hockett) Hoskins, were natives of North Carolina, of Welsh descent. The first members of the Hoskins family to settle in America came about 1750. There were three brothers, one of whom settled in Philadelphia and two in North Carolina. During the War of the Revolution the brothers who located in North Carolina operated a blacksmith shop. All were members of the Quaker church. John Hoskins was the eldest son of Moses Hoskins, he was reared in North Carolina, and was married there. The Hoskins family came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1813, and settled in Green township in the Fairview neighborhood of Friends.

Walter H. Hoskins attended the Dover district school near his home and later became a student at Wilmington College. He worked with his father on the farm until his marriage, and then rented a farm for a few years, and in 1907, purchased seventy-four acres of the old General Denver farm in the Dover neighborhood of Union township. At the time he purchased the land, it was nearly all covered with timber and there were no fences. Mr. Hoskins has built a new house and barn, and has since erected a garage. He cleared the land of its timber and erected fences and improved the place generally. Here he carries on general farming and makes a specialty of raising early lambs, which are dressed and shipped to New York for "baby mutton," and for which fancy prices are received. He also feeds a large number of hogs, being very successful in his live stock business. He has been the local agent for the Regal Automobile Company for some time and has sold a large number of these machines. Mr. Hoskins is considered a very successful young farmer, and has a beautiful farm with neat and attractive grounds.

On September 7, 1904, Walter H. Hoskins was married to Florence Peelle, a native of Wilson township, Clinton county, Ohio, a daughter of Elias and Armetha (Creamer) Peelle, and to this union one child has been born, Robert, who was born on February 11, 1909.

Mrs. Hoskins' father, Elias Hicks Peelle, was born April 5, 1843, in Wilson township, Clinton county, Ohio, and is a son of Reuben and Emily (Corcoran) Peelle, the former of whom was born in Wilson township, and who gave each of his four sons one hundred acres of land, and each of his daughters an equal value in money. The family were all members of the Friends church. Elias Hicks Peelle married Armetha Creamer, who was born in 1847, in Fayette county, Ohio, and who died in 1909. She was a daughter of Simon and Anna (Johnson) Creamer, the former a native of Fayette county, Ohio, where he was a prominent farmer and an influential member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Hoskins' father is a retired farmer, and for two years has been a resident of Whittier, California. He formerly lived near the corner of Fayette, Clinton and Green counties, Ohio, where he had a farm of one hundred and eighty-five acres of land. He is a member of the Friends church and retired from active farm life in 1904, removing at that time to Wilmington, and in 1913 to California. Mrs. Hoskins, who was the fourth child born to her parents, is one of five children, the others being: Dr. F. A. Peelle, of Wilmington; Delaware C., a farmer living in Union township; May, who is a trained nurse living with her father; and Pearl T., who is the wife of Burritt Hiatt, of Wilmington.

Mr. Hoskins has a birthright membership in the Dover meeting of the Friends church. He is a Republican and is well known and popular in Clinton county.

SULLIVAN D. CHANCELLOR.

It may prove a bit of interesting information to the many friends of Sullivan D. Chancellor, proprietor of the well-known Chancellor saw-mill at Wilmington, this county, to learn from the following biographical sketch of that popular manufacturer, that he is a lineal descendant of William the Conqueror's first chancellor. Though Mr. Chancellor is not much given to vaunting his descent, his family having been so long established in this country as to lose that high measure of consideration for distinguished ancestry which marks social relations in Europe, the fact of this distinguished descent is so interesting from a genealogical point of view that the biographer is taking the liberty to make reference to the same here, regarding it as a very proper point to be brought out in a historical and biographical work of this character.

The founder of the well-known Chancellor family was M. Gaultier, a distinguished French law officer of the crown, who accompanied William of Normandy on the Conqueror's historic invasion of England in the year 1066. Chancellor Gaultier was wont to affix his name to crown documents as "M. Gaultier le Chancelleur," indicative of his official position. His descendants gradually dropped the "Gaultier," writing the name "Le Chancelleur." Time gradually made further changes, until in the fourteenth century we find the "le" dropped and the French form of spelling changed to the Anglo-Saxon "Chancellor," which form since has been retained by the family. The founder of the family in this country was Richard Chancellor, who married Catherine FitzGerald, an Irish girl, and came to America in 1682, the descendants of this pair now being found in practically every state in the Union and in many cases have been persons of power and influence in their respective communities.

Sullivan D. Chancellor was born on a farm in Chester township, Clinton county, Ohio, on September 16, 1855, the son of William and Abigail J. (Colvin) Chancellor, the former of whom was born in Virginia in the year 1825 and the latter of whom was born in Warren county, this state, in the year 1827. William Chancellor was the son of Hyrocelus and Rebecca (Rowe) Chancellor, both natives of Virginia, who, in 1843, emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, locating in this county, where for about twelve years Hyrocelus Chancellor taught school, engaging in farming during the periods of the summer vacations. In the winter of 1855-56 the Chancellor family moved from this county to Oxford, Indiana, where Hyrocelus Chancellor and his wife spent the remainder of their days.

William Chancellor was eighteen years of age when his parents emigrated from Virginia to this county. He taught school for several years and was married in this county to Abigail J. Colvin, daughter of John and Margaret (Neil) Colvin, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky and the latter a native of Philadelphia. John Colvin was a wagon-maker, who settled in Hamilton county, this state, where he worked at his trade, becoming well-to-do; among his holdings being a number of lots that are now very valuable, the growth of the city of Cincinnati having brought that tract within the corporate limits. He became surety on a note of a friend, who defaulted, and in discharging the obligation John Colvin was rendered a bankrupt, being compelled to start all over again. Following this ill stroke of fortune, Mr. Colvin and his family moved to Canbytown, in Warren county, this state, where they remained for a few years, at the end of which time they came to this county, settling in Chester township, buying a small piece of land on Buck run, on which Mr. Colvin erected a wagon-making shop and continued to follow his trade. He and his family were active in all the good works of the community. William Chancellor and his wife accompanied the parents of the former to their new home in Oxford, Indiana, where he engaged quite successfully in the live-stock business. He and his wife were the parents of but two children, sons, Sullivan D., the subject of this sketch, and Leonidas M.; the latter died in Wilmington in 1910, having for years been associated with his brother in business. William Chancellor died in January, 1865, in the very zenith of his business career, of what probably was appendicitis, though at that time this malady was known merely as an inflammation of the bowels. His widow returned to this county and married John G. McIntyre, a farmer, spending the rest of her life here, her death occurring in 1889. There was no issue of this second marriage.

Sullivan D. Chancellor was but three months old when his parents moved to Indiana, he having been born in September and their move being made in December, and his early years were spent in the town of Oxford, where he received his primary education. He was ten years of age when his father died and his mother returned to this county with her two sons. The next year his mother remarried and he remained with his mother and stepfather until he was eighteen years of age, diligently pursuing his studies in the district school in the neighborhood of his home. When fifteen years of age, he began looking after himself, "working out" on farms by the month. In 1872 he learned the blacksmith trade under J. R. Littler, remaining with the latter for five years, at the end of which time he set up a blacksmith shop for himself at Starbuck town on prairie road, three miles east of Wilmington, where he remained six months and then returned to Chester township and bought out the man from whom he learned his trade. He taught his brother the trade and took him as a partner in the venture. For several years the brothers maintained this shop and then started a saw-mill nearby, operating the two industries in conjunction. They dissolved the partnership, Leonidas retaining the saw-mill and Sullivan taking the smithy. Five years later, Sullivan Chancellor closed the smithy and resumed the partnership with his brother in the milling business, continuing to operate the mill in Chester township until 1900, in which year they moved the plant to Wilmington, where it ever since has been in successful operation. Leonidas Chancellor died in 1910 and Sullivan D. purchased the decedent's interest in the mill, remaining since that time sole owner of this important and growing industry. He handles all kinds of native lumber, retail, beside which the mill has a quite extensive trade in all kinds of custom sawing.

On January 4, 1882, Sullivan D. Chancellor was united in marriage to Emma S. Dakin, who was born in Warren county, this state, daughter of Hiram Dakin. Both of Mrs. Chancellor's parents are dead, her mother having died when she was an infant. To this union two children have been born, Anna May, who died when sixteen months of age, and Mrs. Lena B. Toops, who, with her two children, Benonia and Anna May, makes her home with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Chancellor are members of the Methodist church and are earnestly concerned in the good works of the community, taking an active interest in measures designed to promote the common welfare. Mr. Chancellor is one of Wilmington's most prominent Masons. He has attained to the royal arch chapter in that order and is president of the board of trustees of the Masonic Temple Association of Wilmington. Few citizens of Wilmington display a more active public spirit than does Mr. Chancellor, and he is held in the highest regard in business and industrial circles throughout this section of the state, being regarded very properly as one of the substantial leaders hereabout.

JOHN LEININGER.

To America, the "melting pot" of all the nations, every country has contributed its quota to make the truly wonderful cosmopolitan character at once the marvel and the puzzle of other nations. Here in the sifting that has come from the struggle with wild stubborn Nature and new obstacles to be met and overcome, and the increasingly accentuated splendid qualities of the mother country. A new character has been developed, retaining the best of the old, added to, and developed by the unequalled conditions of a vast new country. The picturesque little principality of Alsace-Lorraine added its contribution, born of the struggle and emerging into splendid young manhood, in the person of John Leininger, the subject of this sketch.

John Leininger was born fifty miles from the noted city of Strasburg, in the quaint little town of Mietesheim, in Alsace-Lorraine, now a part of Germany, on April 17, 1856. He was the son of John Leininger, who was born in the same place. The paternal grandfather of John Leininger was Jacob Leininger, a well-known blacksmith, who plied his trade all of his life in the place of his birth, dying in Alsace-Lorraine. John Leininger, the son of Jacob Leininger, and the father of the subject of this sketch, learned the blacksmith trade from his father, continuing his labors in Germany in a blacksmith shop of his own. He was a very large sturdy man, a splendid physical type. He belonged to the Lutheran church, following with manly zeal and steadfastness of purpose the early ideals set forth and followed assiduously by the founder of this sect.

In his early manhood days, he met, and later, in 1834, married Kate Root, who was born and reared in the same town with him.

John Leininger, responding to the law of change and the love of the wanderlust, emigrated to this country in 1873. While it is true that in recent years, the emigrant coming to our shores is not the "flower of his native soil," yet in the days when John Leininger left a sure thing for an uncertainty and came to this country, unknown and strange, to cast his lot among new peoples and new conditions, it was a mark of the highest courage and fortitude. His patient and steadfast companion, his wife, had died in 1870. Starting in February with his son, John Leininger, after a stormy voyage lasting almost a month, he arrived in America and traveled to Highland county, Ohio in March, 1873.

For a year, he worked on a farm in Highland county, Ohio. At the end of that time, he moved to Clinton county. True to the steady industry and frugality of his race, although a stranger in a strange land, he had saved sufficient money to enable him to send to Germany for his children. Later, he opened up a blacksmith shop in Burtonville, Ohio, in which he worked and prospered until his death. On account of the training of his father and his own early work, he returned to his trade as naturally as the tiller to the soil.

The children born to John and Kate Leininger were: John Leininger, the subject of this sketch; Margaret, deceased, who married John Emory; Sarah, who married George Riehl and now resides in Wilmington; Maggie, who married Stanley McKenzie, a farmer of Greene township; Kate, who married Isaac Mobley and now lives in Burtonville; Jacob, who is a farmer residing in Union township, and Michael, who is a farmer residing in Washington township.

As a boy John Leininger, the eldest of this family and the subject of this sketch, attended the government schools of Germany, and into his youthful mind were inculcated many of the finest ideals and traditions of his people; but out of school hours, John Leininger was always to be found in the blacksmith shop of his father, literally growing up in the atmosphere where he was to spend the most of his life. We find him in his early youth attracted to the fiery forge and the fine, physical expression exhibited in the work; watching the splendid figure of his father achieving results easily discernable at hand. His youthful imagination and alert understanding were stirred deeply by the horrors of the Franco-Prussian War in 1871, witnessing part of a battle, in and around his home.

The trade of the blacksmith has always been held in good repute among the earliest peoples and even until this day, for it is truly an exacting trade, and a very necessary one. The blacksmith produces through honest sweat before the eyes of his customers and he can truly look the whole world in the face—and proudly. When John Leininger emigrated with his father to this country he entered the blacksmith shop of his father in Burtonville, where he toiled for many years.

On September 27, 1887, John Leininger was married to Mary Babb, who was born in Union township, Clinton county. To this happy union were born the following children: Elva, who is living at home; Charles, who married Leona Murphy and is living in Dayton, Ohio; they have one child, Velma C., born on June 25, 1909; and George, who married Edith Summers, and is a farmer living in Washington township.

At the time of his marriage, John Leininger became a partner in his father's business. In 1889 his father died and for a time John Leininger ran the shop alone, but later entered into a partnership with his brother, Jacob. Feeling the "call of the soil," in 1886, he turned the shop over to his brother and engaged in farming. He bought a farm consisting of eighty-seven acres of fine land on the New Vienna pike in Union township, and here he settled and still lives, carrying on general farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Leininger have so improved this tract of land, clearing it and ditching it, that, today, it is one of the finest farms in Clinton county. In addition, in 1905, they built their present, fine, roomy, country home in keeping with its splendid surroundings.

John Leininger, by his honesty and quiet persistency, has won and enjoys the confidence and respect of his neighbors and his many friends. He is a stanch Republican in politics, not seeking office but choosing rather to add the weight of his opinion in a quiet way, influencing his friends by daily deeds well done. His opinion is due to be relied upon, backed by years of well-poised and quiet deliberation. He belongs to that vast array of people who silently but surely mold the opinion and work out the destinies of this nation.

CHARLES E. DWIGGINS.

Charles E. Dwiggins, a well-known farmer of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, is descended on his paternal side as well as on his maternal side from the very earliest settlers of Clinton county. The family has long been prominent in this county as members of the Society of Friends.

Charles E. Dwiggins was born on December 13, 1856, on the farm where he now lives in Union township, the son of Robert J. and Rebecca B. (Kinsey) Dwiggins, the former of whom was born on February 1, 1832, on the farm where his son, Charles E., now lives, and who died on October 11, 1895, and the latter of whom was born in Union township, on March 31, 1834, and who died on March 14, 1913.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Dwiggins were Robert and Sarah (Dillon) Dwiggins, the former of whom was a native of North Carolina, born in 1781, and who died in 1839, and the latter of whom was born in 1785, the daughter of Jesse Dillon and who died in 1861.

Daniel Dillon was a cousin to Susannah Haworth, the progenitor of the Haworth family in Clinton county and the brother of Jesse Dillon. He came to Todd's fork in 1804, settling on a hundred acres of land, which he sold to Samuel Stanton. Later he bought three hundred acres from George Haworth and his son James. The land was the Brackney farm on Todd's fork. His son, Jesse, owned the Levi Smith farm and sold it to Smith. His son, Walter, owned the home place of Elijah Haworth; Thomas, the John Peebles' farm; Nathan, who married a Haskins, was justice of the peace in Greene township, and after his removal to Illinois served as justice there; William Dillon bought land in the Haskins neighborhood and lived there in early times; he, too, moved to Illinois; Absalom and Joseph went west; one of his daughters married Daniel Hodgson; Jane was the first wife of James Fife and the mother of his children; Ann married Michael Bennett. Jesse Dillon, who was Daniel's brother and the father of Sarah (Dillon) Dwiggins, settled on and improved the Denver farm. He bought the whole of the Heath survey on Todd's fork, containing twelve hundred and ninety-two acres. The land was surveyed for him by Nathan Linton, September 28, 1815. His eldest daughter, Achsah, married Hur Holgson; Susanah married Gayer Starbuck; Martha married Dora Fisher, who owned the William Rannell's farm; he sold that and afterwards owned the David Bailey farm and removed to Illinois; Sarah married Robert Dwiggins, Sr.; Hannah married William Wright, who owned a part of the Jacob Jenkins place, which he sold to Joseph Oren, and Oren, in turn, sold it to Isaac Wright, William's brother, both sons of James Wright; Abigail married Isaac Wright; Jonathan Dillon owned the farm known as the Zimri Whinery farm near Gurneyville; there were about two hundred and ninety acres in the farm; Luke obtained the Denver farm and sold it to George D. Haworth; his wife, Charity Wright, was a sister of Isaac Wright; they removed later to Illinois.

When a young man the late Robert Dwiggins, Sr., came to Clinton county, Ohio, and settled on a farm of a hundred and two acres in Union township, where his grandson, Charles E., now lives. He belonged to the Christian church, but his wife was a member of the Society of Friends. A Whig in politics, he served several terms as school director. During his life he went to Grant county, Indiana, and purchased a quarter section of land for each of his elder children. The first seven children in the family settled in Grant county and their descendants still live there. Robert Dwiggins' wife's father and mother, Jesse and Hannah Dillon, came from Nantucket Island about 1800 to the Dover neighborhood in Clinton county, or a little earlier than Jesse's brother, Daniel. Jesse and Hannah Dillon purchased the farm from the government and gave it to their children. The Dillon family were members of the Friends church, and had been whalers, or seafaring people before the Revolutionary War, which drove their boats off the seas.

Robert and Sarah (Dillon) Dwiggins had ten children, born as follow: Daniel, 1807; Elizabeth, 1809; Susannah, 1810; Lydia, 1812; Hannah, 1814; Sarah, 1817; Isaiah, 1820; Nancy, 1822; Martha, 1825; and Robert J., the father of Charles E., in 1832. The last three of the children lived and died in Clinton county.

Mr. Dwiggins' maternal grandparents were Edmund and Matilda (Ballard) Kinsey, the latter of whom was the daughter of Enoch and Rebecca Ballard, and was born in Clinton county. Edmund Kinsey was the son of Christopher and Mary Kinsey, who were among the earliest settlers in this county. He and his wife lived on a farm in Union township for some time, but later removed to Marshall county, Iowa, where they lived until their death.

Robert J. Dwiggins purchased the interest of his brothers and sisters in the home place and lived and died on his father's farm in Union township. He was a Republican in politics and served as school director. He was also a very strong temperance man, and during the later years of his life voted the Prohibition ticket. He was instrumental in the founding of Wilmington College, and was an elder and overseer in the Dover meeting of Friends. His wife was also an elder in the church. Robert Dwiggins, Sr., built the brick house in which Charles E. now lives in 1828. There were five children born to Robert J. and Rebecca B. (Kinsey) Dwiggins, of whom Charles E. is the eldest; Sallie M., who married Allen Brackney, was born in 1862 and is now deceased; Emma, 1866, married Joseph McMillan, and they live near Waynesville, Ohio; Clara Anna, 1868, died in 1871; Mata lives with her brother, Charles E.

Charles E. Dwiggins attended the public and subscription schools of Union township, and later Wilmington College. During the time his father was living he remained on the farm and operated it. In 1880, he and A. L. Starbuck purchased a portable sawmill and engaged in custom work for several years. Subsequently, he operated a threshing machine in the neighborhood for twenty years. He and his sister, Mata, operated the home place.

On October 29, 1885, Charles E. Dwiggins was married to Clara E. Hilling, a native of Union township, Clinton county, the daughter of John and Mary (Postlewaite) Hilling, the former of whom died in 1867, and the latter in 1868, when Mrs. Dwiggins was two years old. She grew up with the family of Jesse G. Starbuck. Mr. and Mrs. Dwiggins have had one son, Arthur, who was born on June 11, 1886. He married Anna Carman, and they have two children, Howard C., born on March 24, 1908, and Edith Lucile, September 3, 1910.

Mr. Dwiggins has served as road supervisor of Union township ever since the law creating this office was passed. He is a Republican in politics. At present he is one of the overseers of the Dover meeting of Friends. All of the members of the family belong to the Dover meeting.

Charles E. Dwiggins is a good citizen and an upright, honorable man in all the relations of life. He is popular in the community where he lives and enjoys the confidence of all his neighbors.

ARTHUR D. ANTRAM.

No event has occurred in recent years in Union township which cast a deeper gloom over the hearts of the people of this township than the unfortunate accident which resulted in the death of Arthur D. Antram on August 10, 1911. He was a well-to-do and popular farmer of Union township and a man who had a host of friends in this section of Clinton county and prominent in the political and civic life. He was devoted to his family and their interests and was admired by all with whom he had come in contact.

The late Arthur D. Antram was born on the farm where his widow now lives in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, March 27, 1855, and died on August 10, 1911, as a result of injuries sustained when his horses ran away in the woods. He died three hours after the accident. He was a son of John M. and Catherine (Babb) Antram, the former of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, one mile west of Wilmington, June 19, 1825, and who is still living at the homes of her son, Frank William, and his daughter, Mrs. Arthur A. Antram, the latter of whom was born on July 21, 1827, on a farm in Union township, where Frank Antram now lives, and died on June 24, 1898. John M. Antram is the son of Hiram and Sarah L. (Whitson) Antram, the former of whom was born on January 29, 1798, in Frederick county, Virginia, and the latter of whom was born in 1800 in Center county, Pennsylvania, and who died in 1872. In 1817 Hiram Antram came to Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, with his parents, John and Ann (Hackney) Antram, who were among the first families to settle in Clinton county. Sarah L. Whitson came from Pennsylvania to Madison county, Ohio, in 1816 and to Clinton county in 1817. They were married in Clinton county. John Antram was a farmer and kept a hotel and store at Harveysburg in Warren county for a number of years. Sarah L. Whitson was the daughter of John Whitson, who married a Miss Moore.

The Antram family have been members of the Friends church for many generations.

Hiram Antram's family came from Ireland to Virginia in an early day and the family is of Scotch-Irish descent. Hiram Antram owned a farm of two hundred and thirty-six acres one mile west of Wilmington. He and his wife had nine children, of whom five are deceased. The living children are: James W., who is living at Monticello, Missouri, and who is ninety-two years of age; John M., who is living with his son, Frank William, and is ninety years old; Calvin H., who lives in California; and Priscilla, who married Frank Larzelere. The deceased children are: Emily, who died unmarried; Amanda Louisa, who died in infancy; Joseph, who died in Warren county, Ohio, in 1912; Maria, who married Alfred Haines; and Mary, who died at the age of twenty.

The Antram family is noted for its longevity and John M., who is now ninety years old, has spent all of his life with the exception of six years, when he lived in Warren county, in Clinton county. He grew up on his father's farm and in 1861 was married, after which he purchased seventy-seven and three-quarter acres of land and added to it until he owned one hundred and forty acres at what is now known as Antram Corners. He lived there for thirty-seven years, or until 1888, when he retired and moved to Wilmington. Since 1903 he has made his home with his son. He was trustee of Union township for four years and an ardent Republican in politics. In 1870 all the members of the Antram family joined the Friends church and John M. Antram was an elder in the church for some time. He was not only a farmer during his active life but was engaged in buying and selling stock. He kept a tavern at Antrams Corners for several years. He had only two children by his marriage in 1851 to Catherine Babb: Arthur D., the subject of this sketch, and Frank William.

Catherine Babb was the daughter of Azel and Hannah (Hollingsworth) Babb, the former of whom was the son of Henry and Elizabeth (Walker) Babb. Henry Babb came to Ohio in 1806 from Frederick county, Virginia, and settled about a mile and one-half north of the court house in Wilmington. His wife's father, Mordecai Walker, in 1805, purchased a thousand acres of land from Thomas Posey, the owner of the survey on which Wilmington was laid out, and divided the same into four equal parts, giving each of his four children, two sons and two daughters, one of these parts. Elizabeth Walker received her portion in the northeast corner of the one thousand-acre purchase, including the land on which Mr. Babb had settled. At the first election of county officers, Henry Babb was elected county commissioner and served two years. He was the father of five sons and six daughters. His sons were Peter, Thomas, Henry Azel and Samson. His daughters were Mary, who married Thomas Babb; Rebecca, who married William Crumley; Rachel, who married John Walters; Hannah, who married Joseph Smith; Lydia, who married a Mr. Smith; and Betsy, who married a Mr. Wall.

Arthur D. Antram attended the district school at Antram's Corners and later Wilmington College. After leaving college, he was married and purchased a farm at the edge of Liberty, in Union township, comprising one hundred and fifty acres, in partnership with his brother, Frank W. Later he sold his share to Frank W., and lived with his parents, operating the home farm. In 1888, when his parents moved to Wilmington, he purchased a part of the home farm and later bought the entire tract of one hundred and twenty acres. Subsequently, he bought sixty acres of the Curl farm and added it to his land which he already held. In 1910 he remodeled his house.

On February 2, 1878, Arthur D. Antram was married to Margaret Welch, who was born in Ireland and came to the United States with her parents when a baby. She was born on December 25, 1850, and was reared by George and Lydia Bailey, now deceased, who lived on a farm in Liberty township. Mrs. Antram had a half-sister, Catherine, who married Samuel Brann, of Wilmington, but more than that she is not acquainted with her family history. Mr. and Mrs. Antram had three children: John, Ralph and Mary C. John was born on September 1, 1879, and lives on a part of the Antram farm which he purchased. He married Maud South. Ralph, who was born on March 7, 1881, is unmarried and operates the home farm for his mother. Mary C., who was born on December 27, 1883, lives at home. She attended Wilmington College and has taught school for five years. Mrs. Antram has also taken a boy to rear. His name is Orville A. Paris and was born on March 21, 1904.

Arthur D. Antram was prominent in the political life of Union township, having served as township assessor and as road supervisor for a third of the township. He was identified with the Republican party. The family are members of the Dover meeting of the Friends church.

FRED STOLTZ.

In the history of agriculture in Clinton county, Ohio, Fred Stoltz, who owns one hundred and ninety-two acres of land in Union township, occupies a conspicuous place. During several decades he has been one of the representative farmers of the county, progressive, enterprising and persevering. Such qualities always win success sooner or later, and to Mr. Stoltz they have brought a satisfactory reward for his well-directed efforts. While he has benefited himself and the community in a material way, he has also been influential in the educational, political and moral advancement of the community where he has lived so long.

Fred Stoltz was born six miles from Stutgart, in the province of Wurttemberg, Germany, March 28, 1846, the son of John and Fransine (Stoltz) Stoltz, who were second-cousins. John Stoltz was born near Stutgart, December 25, 1823, and died in February, 1903, and his wife was born at Stutgart in 1821 and died in 1872. They came to America in 1851 and located in Adams county, Ohio.

The paternal grandparents of Fred Stoltz lived and died in Germany, as did also his maternal grandparents. They were all members of the Lutheran church. John Stoltz, before coming to America, owned fourteen acres of land in Germany, and this was considered no small amount in that country. After coming to America they purchased a farm in Adams county, and later he purchased another farm. In 1870 he sold out and moved to Clinton county and purchased one hundred and fifty acres in Union township. John and Fransine Stoltz had eleven children: Rachel, who is the deceased wife of James Keach; Dora, who died unmarried at the age of fifty-two; Fred, the subject of this sketch; John, who is a retired farmer of Highland county, Ohio; Jacob, who is a retired farmer of Sabina, Ohio; Fannie, who is unmarried and lives in Wilmington; Mary, who died in 1912; William, who lives in Greene township; Christian, who lives on a farm in Washington township; Callie, who is the deceased wife of Joe Sherman; and Lizzie, who married R. M. McCoy and lives in Wilmington.

Fred Stoltz was three years old when the Stoltz family immigrated to the United States. The voyage to America required forty-two days. After the family settled in Adams county, he attended the public schools in a German settlement. He was twenty-four years old when the family came to Clinton county and shortly afterwards he purchased seventy-two and one-half acres on the New Vienna pike in Union township. Since 1884 he has added eighty-six acre in one tract and thirty-three acres in another and now owns one hundred and ninety-two acres altogether. In 1885 Mr. Stoltz built a new house and in 1910 he remodeled and enlarged this house. One year before building the house, he built a splendid barn. He makes a specialty of purebred Jersey cattle and has been very successful as a farmer and dairyman.

On September 4, 1884, Fred Stoltz was married to Mary J. O'Niel, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, the daughter of William and Mary Ann (Miskelly) O'Niel, the former of whom was born in South Carolina, and is now deceased, and the latter of whom was born near Philadelphia in 1810 and died in 1893. Mary J. O'Niel has lived all her life thus far in Clinton county and was a teacher in the public schools for eight years before her marriage.

To Mr. and Mrs. Stoltz have been born five children, namely: Charles William, who was born on January 3, 1886, and who travels for the International Harvester Company; Mary, June, 1887, died at the age of seven years in 1894; Cora O., who is a school teacher at Batavia, Ohio; Viola, who is attending Wilmington College; and Winifred, who was born in January, 1893, and died in June, 1894, of scarlet fever. Cora O. received the scholarship for excellence in her senior year at Wilmington high school and used her scholarship at Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, from which she was graduated in 1913 and is now a teacher of languages in high school at Batavia.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoltz and family are all members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Stoltz is a Republican.

DARIUS J. MILLER.

Darius J. Miller, a successful farmer of Union township, Clinton county, was born on the farm where he now lives on April 21, 1852, the son of John D. and Jane (McKenzie) Miller, the former of whom was born in Center county, Pennsylvania, June 29, 1817, and died on March 18, 1892, and the latter of whom was born in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1816, and died on April 27, 1883.

John D. Miller was a son of David and Tamzen (Whitson) Miller, natives of Pennsylvania and of German descent. The latter was born on June 23, 1792, and was married to David Miller on December 30, 1815. David Miller came to Clinton county, Ohio, from Pennsylvania, in 1819. He died on April 15, 1869. A brother of his, John, served in the War of 1812, in a company from Center county, Pennsylvania. After his removal to Clinton county, Ohio, he owned two different farms in Union township.

David and Tamsen (Whitson) Miller were the parents of eight children: Emmeline, born on April 10, 1815, married John McCool, of Wilmington; Mary Ann, April 12, 1821, married Samuel Collins, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Almina Margaret, January 10, 1823, married Charles Jones, of Wilmington; Priscilla, October 7, 1824, died July 3, 1837; Angeline, June 5, 1828; Alfred Adams, May 5, 1826, was a farmer in Iowa where he died; John D., the father of Darius J., was the seventh born; Louisa Ellen, January 1, 1832, became the wife of Nathaniel Hale.

John D. Miller was married on October 31, 1841, to Jane McKenzie, a daughter of John McKenzie, a native of Kentucky, who emigrated to Warren county, Ohio. The settlement in the southeast part of Union township was made in 1804 and 1805, John McKenzie and the Spencer family being the first to locate here, building their cabins on Cowan's creek. Although the families of McKenzie and Spencer were unfriendly, it became a necessity for them to assist each other in raising cabins and at log rollings. At this period a number of Indian camps still remained along the brow of the hill facing the creek, where Mr. McKenzie and the Spencers were making their improvements, but they were friendly to the whites, whose children often visited the Indian wigwams. Hunting parties of the Shawnee tribe made annual visits to their old camping ground on Allen's creek until 1811, when, on account of the approaching trouble with the whites, their hunting expeditions ceased.

When John D. Miller was brought to Clinton county, Ohio, by his parents in 1819, he was only two years old. He grew up on the farm, married and rented land. His wife inherited seventy acres of land in Union township from her father, to which she and her husband moved, and here they lived the remainder of their lives. John D. and Jane (McKenzie) Miller had the following children: Isabel, the eldest, who married William Carver, is deceased; Miles D. is a farmer living in Union township on a farm adjoining the one on which Darius J. is living, who is the youngest of the family.

Darius J. Miller attended the Sugar Grove district school, and grew up on the farm, living at home with his father until the latter's death in 1892. Afterwards Darius J.

Miller purchased the interest of his sister in the farm and now owns fifty acres. In 1886 the house burned, and Mr. Miller built a new house, in which he now lives.

On August 17, 1883, Darius J. Miller was married to Anna M. Gumley, who was born on July 14, 1865, in Union township, the daughter of George and Mary (Irvin) Gumley, both now deceased. Mrs. Miller's parents were both natives of County Tyrone, Ireland, who came to America in their younger days, he being eighteen years of age at the time of his arrival in this country, and was married after coming to this county. George Gumley died on April 27, 1911, at the age of eighty acres, and his wife died on April 30, 1913, in her eightieth year. They were the parents of five sons and three daughters, who are still living, and two sons who died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of four children: Ennie, born on May 4, 1885, married Nell Elliott, has one daughter, Josephine, and lives on a farm in Adams township; Pearl, April 28, 1888, married Russell Crouse, of Wilmington, and they have one daughter, Evelyn May, born May 18, 1912; May, October 19, 1890, lives at home with her parents; and Lloyd, March 13, 1904, also lives at home.

In politics, Darius J. Miller is independent and casts his vote regardless of parties and party emblems for the man he believes to be the best fitted to fill the office sought. Mrs. Miller is an earnest and consistent member of the Central Christian church, of Wilmington.

LORIN A. VANDERVORT.

It is an axiom demonstrated by human experience that a man gets out of this life what he puts into it with a reasonable interest on his investment. The individual who inherits a large estate and adds nothing to his fortune cannot be called a successful man. The man who starts in the world unaided and by sheer force of his will, forges ahead and at length attains a position of honor among his fellow citizens, is a success which can hardly be appreciated. To a considerable extent Lorin A. Vandervort is a creditable example of the man who has succeeded by his own unaided efforts.

Lorin A. Vandervort was born on December 14, 1860, in Greene township, Clinton county, Ohio, and is the son of Thaddeus H. and Minerva (Noble) Vandervort, the former of whom was born on October 30, 1830, in Greene township, near New Antioch, and died on July 5, 1900, and the latter of whom was born in 1836, in Greene township, and died in June, 1911. Thaddeus H. Vandervort was the son of Nicholas and Nancy Vandervort. Nicholas Vandervort was born at Columbia, near Cincinnati, in 1803, and his wife was born in Warren county, Ohio. Nicholas Vandervort was six years of age when brought to Clinton county, Ohio, where he grew to manhood and married. He was an earnest worker in the Christian church and lived a most useful life, at his death having been a resident of Clinton county for sixty-four years. He passed away on June 23, 1876, and his wife on January 11, 1873. They had seven children besides Thaddeus H., the father of Lorin A., as follow: James M., John M., Nicholas W., Jonah S., Paul C., William V. and one unnamed. Paul C. and William V. were soldiers in the Civil War, having been members of the Company B, Fortieth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. The former died of typhoid fever at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, February 8, 1862. The latter became a drummer boy and served throughout the war, being discharged at Atlanta, Georgia, in December, 1864. He came home, was married and died on April 14, 1880.

The ancestry of the Vandervort family goes back to Michael Paulus Van Der Voort, who came from East Flanders, the region of Deudermonde, prior to 1640 and located in New Amsterdam, now New York. The records show that Michael Paulus Van Der Voort was married to Marie Rapalye on November 18, 1640, and their marriage is the fifth recorded in New Amsterdam. Among their children is one son, Paul, who was baptized on January 3, 1649. He married Lysbeth Paulus Deickson and they had one son, who was called Paul and who was born at Bedford, Long Island, and baptized in 1681. He married Nultze Staats and they had a son, Nicholas, born at Bedford, Long Island. Subsequently, the family moved to Orange county, New York, where Nicholas married Abigail Halstead and they had six children: John, Martha, Paul, Peter, William and Jonah.

Jonah settled in Clinton county and sat on the first jury impaneled in Clinton county in 1810. He was born at Shepherdstown, Virginia, May 30, 1765, was married to Jane Tibbs, March 29, 1796, and moved to the Northwest Territory in 1800, locating at Columbia, now within the city limits of Cincinnati. He died at New Antioch in 1842 and she died in 1845. Jonah had eleven children, six sons and five daughters, among whom was Nicholas, the father of Thaddeus and grandfather of Lorin A. The descendants of Jonah now number about four hundred souls scattered over eight different states.

Mr. Vandervort's maternal grandfather, Elisha Noble, who married a Miss Matthews, was one of the contractors who assisted in the erection of the present court house at Wilmington, about 1838. He lived on a farm near New Vienna, in Green township. Minerva Noble was one of eight children born to her parents: Elisha and John M., the two eldest, now deceased; Mrs. Vandervort; Mrs. Melinda Elliot; Mrs. Emily Slocum; Mrs. Spear; Mrs. Williams, and Mrs. Bowers. When a child Minerva Noble made her home with Doctor Runnells at New Antioch and was living with them at the time of her marriage to Thaddeus H. Vandervort.

Thaddeus H. Vandervort grew up on a farm in Green township and attended the public schools at New Antioch. After his marriage he drove a huckster wagon for Wilson's store at New Antioch, but subsequently rented a farm at Snow Hill. Later he purchased a farm two and one-half miles north of New Antioch in Green township, where he lived until his death. He added to his farm from time to time until he owned two hundred acres. He was a Republican and served several years as township trustee. He was well known in Clinton county as a hog raiser. Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus H. Vandervort belonged to the Christian church at New Antioch. They had eight children: Andrew R., who married Alice Devers and lives on a farm in Washington township; William, who lives in Trumbull county, Ohio, where he is a farmer; Lorin A., the subject of this sketch; Nannie J., who married B. B. Vandervort, a distant cousin, and lives near Jamestown, Ohio, where he is a fruit grower; Mary E., who married Frank Hare, and lives on a farm in Jefferson township; E. Bert, who lives on his father's place, in Green township; James S., who is a farmer in Trumbull county, Ohio; and Nettie, who married Samuel Traum, a minister in the Christian church at Meadville, Pennsylvania.

Lorin A. Vandervort was educated in the public schools of Green township, assisting his father on the farm until he was twenty-one years old, at which time he was married. After his marriage he lived on his father-in-law's farm in Union township for ten years, and, in 1892, purchased one hundred acres of land from the Catherine Glass farm. Since that time he has added fifty-one acres, the farm now consisting of one hundred and fifty-one acres altogether. The house in which Mr. and Mrs. Vandervort live was built in 1891.

On December 29, 1882, Lorin A. Vandervort was married to Alice C. Wilson, a native of Union township, daughter of James and Mary (Custis) Wilson, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Vandervort have had two children, Lloyd and Augusta. Lloyd, who was born in September, 1883, died on April 25, 1899. Augusta, who was born in October, 1890, married M. R. Snyder and lives on the James Wilson homestead in Union township.

Mr. and Mrs. Vandervort belong to the Walnut Street Christian church in Wilmington, where Mr. Vandervort has served as a deacon. Mr. Vandervort is a Republican.

JOHN STEPHENS.

A celebrated moralist once remarked that "there has scarcely passed a life of which a judicious and faithful narrative would not have been useful." There can be no doubt of the truth of this opinion when expressed by one of the greatest and best of men and it is particularly fitting to present the salient facts in the life of the late John Stephens, of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio. He was an industrious and successful farmer, an enterprising and public-spirited citizen, who, as a consequence of his industry, perseverance, temperance and integrity, rose to a position of prominence among the hundreds of eminent farmers of this county. During his long and useful life he was highly esteemed in the locality where he resided.

John Stephens was born on March 31, 1846, near Waynesville, Ohio, and died on May 2, 1914. He was the son of Obadiah and Susannah (Ireland) Stephens.

Obadiah Stephens was a well-known farmer and stock raiser of Clinton county, who was born in Morris county, New Jersey, April 22, 1813. He was the son of Ebenezer and Maria (Phoenix) Stephens, natives of New Jersey and of English and German descent. His maternal grandfather was a soldier in the War of the Revolution and his father in the War of 1812. Ebenezer Stephens was a millwright by trade and also a farmer. His son was a farmer and later a distiller. At the time of his death, he owned about four hundred and fifty acres in Clinton county. Obadiah Stephens came to Clinton county in 1847. On April 13, 1837, he was married in Warren county to Susanna Ireland. She was a native of Frederick county, Virginia, the daughter of Francis and Sarah (Curl) Ireland, the former of whom was a farmer by occupation and who located in Warren county in 1815, on a farm of sixty acres, where he lived until his death in November, 1817, and the latter of whom was also a native of the Old Dominion. Francis and Sarah (Curl) Ireland had six children: Thomas J., Lucinda, Susannah, John C., Artimesia and James M.

Obadiah and Susannah Stephens were the parents of four children: Ann, Eliza, Emmeline, Francis I., and John, the subject of this sketch. Obadiah Stephens was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was a Democrat. His paternal grandmother, who was a native of Wales and who lived to be ninety-seven years old, left one hundred and forty-four descendants at her death, including in all five generations. Some years before his death, Obadiah Stephens built a large frame house which still stands. Of the children born to him and his wife, Ann Eliza married Henry Lewis and they are both deceased; Emmeline is a resident of Wilmington, Ohio, and lives on Rhombach avenue; Francis I., who was born on June 30, 1842, married Sarah Gallaher and died on September 12, 1912. He was a farmer. The father of these children died in October, 1897, at the age of seventy-three and the mother, March 9, 1895, at the age of seventy-one.

John Stephens received the rudiments of an education in the public schools of Union township at Burtonville. He lived with his father and mother until his marriage, and in 1876 his father built another house for his son on the same farm and near the public highway. There he lived and assisted in the operations of the farm until his parents' deaths. Afterwards he moved into the large old homestead where he lived until his death. At the death of his father and mother, he received as his inheritance the homestead farm in partnership with his unmarried sister, Emmeline. Mrs. John Stephens still lives on the farm and continues its management. Altogether the farm now comprises two hundred and thirty-one acres of land.

On March 2, 1876, John Stephens was married to Alwilda McKenzie, who was born in Henry county, Iowa, the daughter of William and Elizabeth (Morton) McKenzie, both of whom were natives of Clinton county, born near New Antioch, the former of whom died in 1866 at the age of thirty-three and the latter of whom is still living at the age of seventy-seven. Soon after their marriage William and Elizabeth McKenzie moved to Iowa, where they took up a claim. Later Mr. McKenzie kept a hotel in Nebraska City, where he died in 1866. His widow and children returned to Clinton county, Ohio, and she afterwards married Eli Carson. They now live near Martinsville in Clinton county.

To the marriage of William and Elizabeth McKenzie there were born five children, of whom Mrs. Stephens was the eldest. The others are: Perry, who lives at Martinsville, Ohio, where he is a carpenter; Stanley, who is a farmer and lives near New Vienna; Geneva, who married Samuel Skimming, a farmer living in Wilmington; and Keith, who died young. Eli and Elizabeth Carson were the parents of three children: Stella, who married Benson Wert; Bert, who lives at Dayton, Ohio; and Carey, who is a resident of Logan, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stephens had no children but they reared one child, Lola Clevenger, although she was not legally adopted. She married Matthew Ewbanks, a farmer of Union township.

Mr. Stephens was a Democrat but one who never aspired to office and one who was never especially active in political matters. He was a man of quiet and unassuming manners, modest in his claim to greatness but gentle and kind to his wife and to those with whom he was most closely associated. He was a good man and a good citizen.

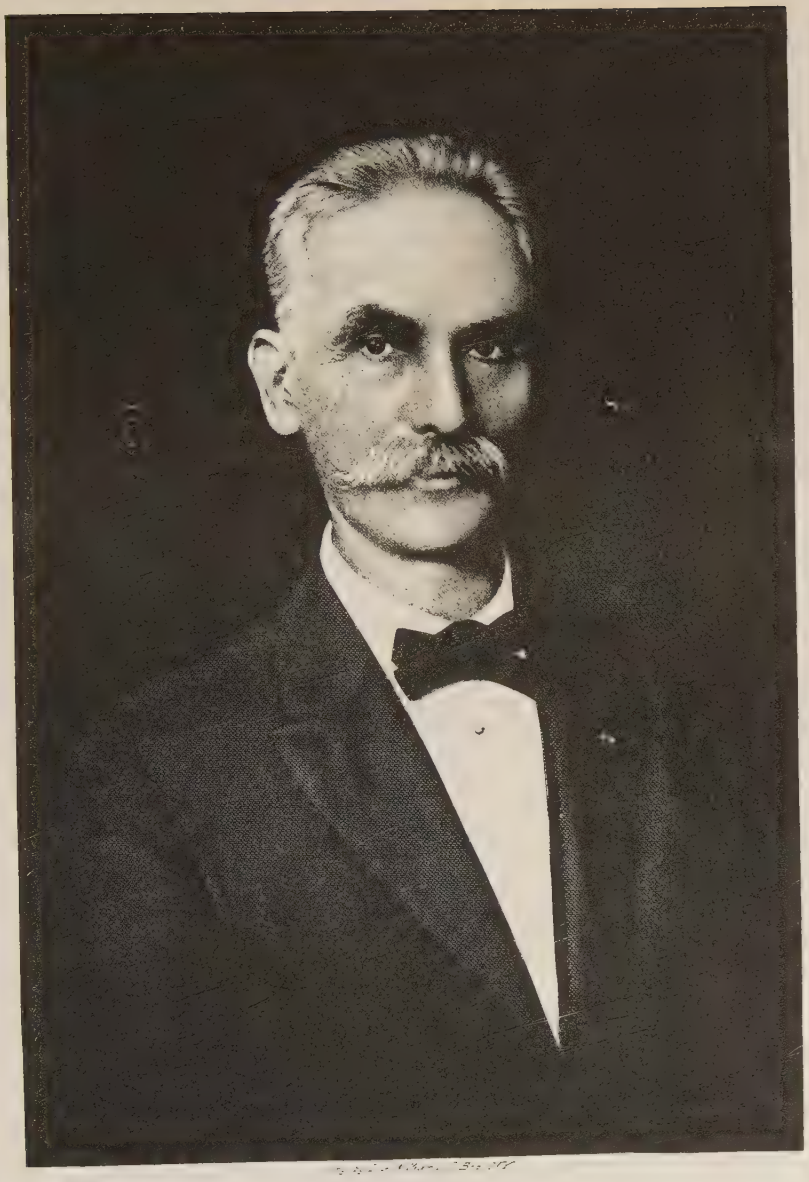
ELDORADO BRIGGS, M. D.

Dr. Eldorado Briggs is entitled to classification among those whose names add distinction to the medical profession, not only in Wilmington, this county, although that city is his headquarters, but throughout a locality comprising a much larger area. As an able and skillful practitioner, Doctor Briggs is worthy of due consideration in a publication such as the present one, in which one of the functions is to record the chief events in the lives of those who have been especially useful to their community. It has been largely through his own efforts that the subject of this brief review has risen to a position of prominence and popularity in the medical profession, as well as in business circles of the city in which he lives.

Eldorado Briggs was born on a farm near Wilmington, this county, on October 6, 1853, son of Capt. Samuel and Catherine (Clevenger) Briggs, the former of whom was a native of New Jersey, and the latter, of Ohio. When Abel Briggs, paternal grandfather of Dr. Eldorado Briggs first came to Ohio, he settled in Warren county, and later finding the county of Clinton more to his liking, in 1828 he moved his family here, where he spent the rest of his life. Dr. Eldorado Briggs was the third of five children, born to his parents, the others being Alonzo, Romeo, Abel and Sarah, the only survivors now being Prof. Abel Briggs, of Wilmington, and Doctor Briggs. Capt. Samuel Briggs died on the old home farm in this county, when the subject of this sketch was seventeen years of age. His widow continued to make a home for her children and survived until 1910.

The early life of Eldorado Briggs was not widely different from that of other farmer boys. He finished his common-school education at Martinsville, Ohio, and began teaching school in 1874, continuing thus engaged for four years, at the end of which time he began the medical studies which were to make of him a prominent physician. In 1879 he entered the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati and was graduated from that institution in 1881. He then practiced medicine for the seven years at Cuba, this county, at the end of which time, he took a post-graduate course at the Polyclinic school in New York City. Upon returning from the East, he began to practice in Columbus, Ohio, but remained there only a year when he settled permanently in Wilmington, and engaged in the general practice of his profession.

Doctor Briggs has been twice married. His first wife was Eva Cast of this county, to whom he was married in 1885. In 1903, Mrs. Briggs passed away. The following year he married Carrie Elder, and since that time their home is one of the most attractive and popular centers of social life in the city.



Eldorado Briggs, M. D.

Professionally, Doctor Briggs is a man of more than local reputation, his association with many important organizations professional and otherwise, being the result of his personality as a man, and his success as a physician. As an indication of the latter, especially might be mentioned the fact that he is local medical examiner for Clinton county with the Industrial Commission of Ohio; he is also surgeon for the Pennsylvania railroad and United States Examining Surgeon for pensions; is medical examiner for many insurance companies; he is a fellow of the American Medical Association, and a member of the Ohio State Medical Association, and the Clinton County Medical Society. Besides those activities directly concerned with the medical profession, Doctor Briggs has been and is connected with several of the largest business enterprises of the city. He is a director of the Citizens' Bank, and also a director of the Champion Bridge Company, as well as a member of the Commercial Club. Notwithstanding all of the above pursuits which go to make up a busy life, the doctor finds time to look after his farm in Vernon township of this county. During his residence in Cuba, Ohio, Doctor Briggs participated actively in politics, and was from 1885 until 1889 postmaster of that town, under a Democratic administration; this being the party with which he has always cast his vote.

Doctor Briggs is a member of the Presbyterian church and has been liberal in both time and means in building up the strength of his church of which he is at present a trustee. Doctor Briggs is also a prominent member of the Masonic lodge, in which he takes a very deep interest.

As the lives of many physicians have shown, much of their success is due to the kindly and sympathetic co-operation of their wives, and it would be difficult indeed to close the present sketch without acknowledging the service which Mrs. Briggs has rendered not only to her husband in his practice, but to the community, by her interest in his work and her practical helpfulness. In this respect, the physician's wife no less than the preacher's, is called upon to make personal sacrifices, and she too merits grateful recognition.

It is quite evident from the facts here set forth, that both Doctor and Mrs. Briggs are useful as well as conspicuous members of the social group called a city, in which they have for some years made their home. They belong to that class of citizenship, which by its adherence to high ideals, and a strict sense of obligation, contribute largely to the prosperity and the good of the body politic, and their influence is thus very strongly felt by a very large circle of friends and associates.

SAMUEL HORACE HODGIN.

The final causes which determine the fortunes of individual men and the destinies of states are often the same. They are usually remote and obscure; their influence is wholly unexpected until exposed by result. When they inspire men to the exercise of courage, self-denial and industry, call into play the higher moral elements and lead men to risk all upon conviction, such causes lead to the turning of great states, great peoples and great movements. The country is the greatest which produces the greatest and most manly men. The intrinsic safety depends not so much upon measures and methods as upon that true manhood from whose deep sources all that is precious and permanent in life must at last proceed. Pursuing each his personal good by exalted means, they work this out as a logical result, having wrought on the lines of the greatest good. What Samuel Horace Hodgin, president of Wilmington College, is doing for his fellowmen and the community in general, might be told in words, but in its far-reaching influence his work cannot be measured by any finite gauge of value. A well-educated, symmetrically developed man, his work as an educator has brought him prominently before the public, and today he stands in the front ranks of educators in the Middle West. Because of his earnest life, high attainments, well-rounded character and large influence, he is eminently entitled to specific mention in a work of the province of the one at hand. He is too well known to the people of Ohio to need any introduction through this history, and is by nature averse to any notice savoring of adulation, but in the belief that honor should be accorded to whom honor is due, the following lines are devoted to a brief review of his career.

Samuel Horace Hodgin was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, on September 11, 1872, his home being near the famous old battle-ground of Guilford court house, where on March 15, 1781, Cornwallis was outgeneraled and forced to abandon the Carolinas. The subject's parents were David and Martha (Blair) Hodgin, both natives of North Carolina, the father of Guilford county, and the mother of Randolph county. David Hodgin came of good old Whig stock and was in religious belief, an ardent Quaker, as were the generations before him. The progenitor of the family in this country, Robert Hodgin, was a Quaker preacher, who in 1657, came from England to America and located in Pennsylvania. Samuel Hodgin's father was a man of splendid qualities, a gentleman farmer and schoolmaster. During the war between the states, he gave splendid service as collector for the eastern district, and later was a member of the North Carolina state Legislature. A leading citizen of his county, he exerted large influence and was held in high repute. David Hodgin died in 1898, and the mother of Samuel Hodgin is still living in North Carolina. Her great-grandmother was a first cousin of Lord Cornwallis, who commanded the British forces in America during the War for Independence. To David and Martha (Blair) Hodgin were born thirteen children, of whom eleven are now living.

Samuel H. Hodgin received the ground work of his education in a log school house, known as the Concord school in Guilford county, North Carolina. His father was the master of the school and to his training and discipline the subject gives a large share of credit for his mental training. Mr. Hodgin entered Guilford College, where he was graduated in 1895, following which he taught in the same college for two years. He went to Haverford College, Pennsylvania, where he was graduated in 1898, and then returned to Guilford College as head of the department of English literature and history. He entered Harvard University in September, 1901, where he was graduated in 1902. During the following year, he was superintendent of the city schools of Oxford, North Carolina, and then accepted the position of head master of Oakwood Seminary, over which he presided for two years. This is the educational institution of the Society of Friends in New York state, and is counted among the best schools in that section of the country. In the autumn of 1905, he returned to Guilford College as head of the department of English language and literature. In 1912 he was offered and accepted the presidency of Wilmington College and at once entered upon his official duties. What he has done here is a matter of record.

As president of Wilmington College, Mr. Hodgin has earned the commendation of all who are well acquainted with the splendid work he has done. From a purely business standpoint, he has exhibited ability of the highest order, and during the few years in which he has been at the head of the college, the finances of the institution have been so handled and the policy of the school so wisely formulated and carried out that never in its history has it been in better condition to carry on the great work before it than it is today. It was under Mr. Hodgin's direction and largely through the stimulus of his own personal effort that the reorganization of management of the college was effected. When he came to the presidency, the college was under the control of two different boards —one a board of trustees of nine members, and the other, a board of managers of eighteen members, all appointed by the quarterly meetings. Mr. Hodgin secured a change in the charter of the college so that it is now under the management of a board of trustees of nine members, and the affairs of the institution are managed with more ease and confidence and with less cause for friction. Along with this improvement in the management of the institution has come a substantial increase in the attendance, the student body having increased about fifty per cent during Mr. Hodgin's administration. The growth of Wilmington College since Mr. Hodgin became president is the highest testimonial that could possibly be paid to his ability and foresight as an executive and to his eminent standing as a broad-minded, scholarly and enterprising educator. He has always stood for the highest grade of work in the class room, exercises the greatest care over the buildings and grounds, looks after the comfort and welfare of the students, and, being proud of the college and jealous of its good name and honorable reputation, it is easily understood why he enjoys such great popularity with all connected with the institution. He has proved himself equal to every emergency in which he has been placed and to every position with which honored, and, as a ripe scholar and gentleman of cultivated taste and high ideals, fills a large place in the public view and enjoys to a marked degree the esteem and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact.

Samuel H. Hodgin was married in August, 1906, to Olive L. Jenkins, of Richmond, Indiana, the daughter of Amasa and Mary Ann Jenkins, and to this union have been born two children, Olive Marian, born in 1909, and Samuel H., Jr., born in 1913.

Mr. Hodgin is a member of the Friends church, and takes a deep interest in spiritual matters. He is keenly alive to the interests of the locality with which he is identified and, as a member of the Commercial Club, exerts a marked influence among the business men with whom he is associated. He is a man of fine and forceful personality—the best type of young manhood. Genial and companionable and a splendid conversationalist, he is a welcome guest in any circle which he chooses to enter, for he carries with him the spirit of optimism and good cheer, while his life is a constant source of inspiration to those who come under his influence.

PERRY M. CHAMPLIN.

One of the enterprising and highly-respected farmers of Clinton county, who has succeeded in his chosen vocation, largely as the consequence of his own courage, persistency and good management, is Perry M. Champlin, who owns a farm of two hundred and thirty-one acres in Washington township. He is a man who believes in taking a part in public affairs but he has never permitted outside interests and influences to interfere with his success as a farmer.

Perry M. Champlin was born on August 28, 1866, on the old home farm in Washington township, the son of Edward M. and Sarah (Bates) Champlin, the former of whom was born on December 8, 1836, and the latter of whom was born on August 30, 1841.

Edward M. Champlin, the son of Joshua and Hannah E. Champlin, was reared on a farm and lived there until seventeen years of age. Joshua Champlin was a retired sea captain and settled in Washington township, Clinton county. He bought one hundred seventy-nine and three-quarters acres of land in 1830 and remained here the balance of his life. Beginning at the age of seventeen, Edward M. Champlin served an apprenticeship of three years learning the printer's trade in the office of the Cincinnati Commercial, at the end of which period, he engaged in the retail grocery business with his brother, John M., at Cincinnati, where they lived for four years. At the end of that time, they returned to Clinton county, where, after living a year, an additional year was spent in the west. Upon returning to Clinton county, Edward M. Champlin enlisted on September 15, 1861, in Company F, Seventeenth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving under General Thomas. He participated in the battles of Wild Cat, Somerset, the siege of Corinth, Perryville, Hoover's Gap, Stone's River, Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge. Still later he enlisted as a veteran under Sherman and was engaged at Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Jonesboro and Atlanta. He participated in the famous march from Atlanta to the sea and was discharged with worthy honors at Camp Chase, Ohio, July 17, 1865. On July 25, 1864, he was appointed first lieutenant and was finally promoted to adjutant, with which rank he was discharged. At the end of the war, he returned home and engaged in farming.

Edward M. Champlin was married to Sarah E. Bates, October 5, 1865. She was a native of Warren county and died on February 20, 1873. To this union were born four children: Perry M., the subject of this sketch; Minnie A.; and George and Edward B., both deceased. Mr. Champlin was married, secondly, June 18, 1874, to Mary E. Ireland, the daughter of John C. Ireland, of Wilmington. She was born in Warren county, October 20, 1842, and bore her husband two children, Emma B. and Lena. Edward M. Champlin was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was a Republican and served two terms as township trustee.

Perry M. Champlin, whose paternal grandparents were Joshua and Hannah E. Champlin, natives of Rhode Island, was educated in the common schools of Washington township and, when a young man, began farming on his father's farm. This vocation he has followed ever since. He owns two hundred and thirty-one acres of land in Washington township.

Perry M. Champlin was married to Florence E. Purdy, who was born in 1870 and died on October 2, 1910. To this union were born four children: Edward L. (deceased), who married Iva Sprinkle and had one child, Frances; May, who married George Irvin; Orval, who died young; and Burdette. On August 27, 1911, Mr. Champlin was married, secondly, to Elizabeth Armbrewster, who was born on August 14, 1872, in Highland county, Ohio, the daughter of Dominic and Hannah Mary (McLaughlin) Armbrewster. No children have been born to this second marriage.

As a Republican, Mr. Champlin has served in various minor capacities, especially as a member of the school board. He is a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

ALFRED J. WILLIAMS.

In the wonderful progress humanity has been making along so many scientific lines in recent years, no more significant step has been taken in any direction than that which marks the improvement in the methods of caring for the physical ailments of mankind. All "schools" of medicine have been effected by the irresistible demand of humanity for something that will actually touch at the roots of disease and provide correctives for the manifold bodily sufferings of humanity. In all of these "schools" there no doubt has been marked advance, due to this insistent demand, but in the field so rapidly being filled by the progressive school of osteopathy, there has been an advance in the last few years that has been remarkable and which is being taken note of by thoughtful persons everywhere.

Among the practicing osteopathic physicians of Ohio, there is none who enjoys a better reputation for keeping abreast of all the latest knowledge which the unceasing research of science daily is bringing to light relating to the treatment of humanity's ailments, than Dr. Alfred J. Williams, who, since March, 1900, has been very successfully engaged in practice at Wilmington, this county, where he has well-equipped offices. During the time Doctor Williams has been located in Wilmington he has made many warm friends, not only in the county seat, but in all parts of Clinton county, where the practice of his profession has called him. He undoubtedly has succeeded in proving to even the most doubting ones, who, not very many years ago, were inclined to look askance at the claims set up by the osteopathic school of treating human ills, the actual and unmistakable benefits growing out of the methods of this school of practice.

Alfred J. Williams was born in Gallia county, Ohio, on January 7, 1853, son of William and Lucinda (Allison) Williams, the former of whom was born in Greenbriar county, Virginia, and the latter of whom was born in Gallia county, this state.

DR. ALFRED J. WILLIAMS.

William Williams was the son of William and Mary (Watts) Williams, the former of whom was a Virginian, a native of Fairfax county, Virginia and later moved to Greenbriar county, and the latter of whom was born in Maryland, who emigrated from Virginia to Ohio when William, Jr., was eight years of age, settling in Gallia county. The elder William Williams was a soldier in the Continental army during the War of Independence, serving for a period of eighteen months in that historic struggle, for which service he never received a penny in payment. He was an earnest Methodist and lived to be seventy-eight years of age. The younger William Williams, father of the immediate subject of this biographical narrative, was reared on the paternal farm in Gallia county and became a personage of much prominence in his community, being a man of large influence therein. He was one of the leaders of the Republican party in that neighborhood after the formation of that party and served his community ably as a justice of the peace for many years. He was united in marriage to Lucinda Allison, daughter of John and Rebecca (Carter) Allison, natives of Ohio, and pioneer farmers of Gallia county, the former of whom was a soldier in the American army during the War of 1812, and to this union were born seven children, namely: John H., deceased; James K., deceased; William Harvey, deceased; David Y., a prominent fruit grower living at Redlands, California; Dr. Alfred J., the subject of this sketch; Salathiel W., a well-known physician, living in Gallia county, Ohio, and Rebecca Harriet, deceased.

Alfred J. Williams received his preliminary education in the public schools of his native county, which he supplemented by a course in the National Normal School at Lebanon, Ohio, after which for two years he taught school in Gallia county, at the end of which time he moved to Livonia, Putnam county, Missouri, where for four years he was engaged in teaching. During this term of service he made many friends in that section and was elected clerk of Putnam county on the Republican ticket, giving such excellent service in that office that he was re-elected for a second term, serving eight years in that capacity, after which, for five years, he served as deputy clerk in the office of his successor. His mind then turning in the direction of further professional occupation, he entered the American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Missouri; following a course of instruction at this institution, he practiced for one year at Wellsville, Missouri, and in 1900 came to this county, locating at Wilmington, where he ever since has been successfully engaged in the practice of his chosen profession.

On April 9, 1876, Dr. Alfred J. Williams was united in marriage to Eliza E. Minear, who was born in Schuyler county, Missouri, daughter of the Rev. Alpheus and Margaret J. (Brown) Minear, the former of whom was a minister of the United Brethren church, and both of whom are now dead. To this union five children have been born, as follow: Dr. William E., a practicing osteopathic physician, of Massilon, Ohio; Dove, who married J. A. Campbell and lives at Akron, Ohio; Lucille, who married G. A. Steen and also lives at Akron; Dale, who married Z. Underwood and died at the age of twenty-three years, and Cleta, who remains with her parents.

Doctor and Mrs. Williams are members of the Methodist church and their children were reared in this faith, to which they also gave their active adherence. Doctor Williams is a Mason and is a member of the American Osteopathic Association and the Ohio Osteopathic Society, in the deliberations of both of which organizations he takes an active part. Doctor Williams is entitled to all the commendation which has been bestowed upon him by the people of Wilmington and surrounding country, since taking up his residence in Clinton county's capital. He has made a fine reputation in the practice of his chosen profession, and his earnestness and painstaking efforts to apply the practical proofs of the osteopath's principles, are doing very much to make that school of treatment really popular in the community in which his influence is being so widely manifested.

ALLEN M. WEST.

The great state of Ohio has been honored by the careers of its professional men, its industrial managers, its commercial magnates and especially by its farmers and stockmen. In every section are to be found men born to leadership, men who have dominated because of their superior intelligence, natural endowment and force of character. It is always profitable to present the salient facts in the lives of such men, seek out their ancestral origin, weigh their motives and examine their achievements. These reflections are suggested by the career of Allen M. West, farmer, stockman and public-spirited man of affairs, of Cuba, Clinton county, Ohio. No citizen in this part of Clinton county has achieved a more honorable position or occupied a more conspicuous place in public affairs than Allen M. West. He owns and operates a large farm of three hundred acres near Cuba and is perhaps the largest individual live stock dealer in Clinton county, but he has always taken a commendable interest in public affairs, especially in educational development and to him, perhaps more than to any other man, is due the splendid school system which now prevails at Cuba. He is related collaterally to the great Benjamin West, the artist who gained lasting fame, not only for himself and the West family, but for his native land.

Allen M. West was born on October 1, 1869, in Washington township, near Cuba, and is the son of Allen L. and Martha J. (Maxfield) West, the former of whom was a native of Clark township, Clinton county, and the latter of whom was a native of Clermont county and the daughter of James Maxfield. The paternal grandparents were James and Elizabeth West.

About the year 1716 John W. West, who had married Sarah Pearson, came from England and settled in Pitts county, Pennsylvania, where they reared a family of seven children: Joseph, Mary, William, Sarah, Samuel, Rachel and Benjamin. Benjamin, the youngest child in this family, was an artist, whose work came to be well-known on two continents. Joseph, the eldest child in the family, married Jane Owen, the daughter of John Owen. To them were born nine children: Isaac, Facy, Owen, John, Sarah, Joseph, Hannah, George and Benjamin. About 1750 Owen West, the third child of this family, was born. He married Elizabeth Martin and moved to Virginia from Pennsylvania and later from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio. Owen and Elizabeth (Martin) West had thirteen children: Nancy, Jane, William, Mary, Susan, Owen, Thomas, James, Plyton, Elizabeth, Emily, Rebecca and John. Of this family, James, the eighth child, whose wife was Elizabeth West, was the father of Allen L. West and the grandfather of Allen M. The great-grandfather, Owen West and his wife, Elizabeth (Martin) West, came to Ohio from Virginia and located in the valley of the east fork of the Little Miami river, where they purchased nineteen hundred acres of government land all in Clinton county and nearly all in Clark township, where he and his wife died. James West was a farmer, who remained on the old estate and added to his inheritance until he owned one thousand acres of the original nineteen hundred. He and his wife died on the old home estate. For nine years he was a justice of the peace in Clinton county.

Allen L. West was educated in the common schools of Clark township and when a young man began farming in the township of his birth. About 1865 he moved to Washington township, where he farmed the remainder of his life, owning, at the time of his death, three hundred acres of land in that township. He was an extensive stock breeder. To Allen L. and Martha J. (Maxfield) West were born nine children, of whom Allen M., the subject of this sketch, was the seventh. The other children were Silas B., Susannah, Elizabeth, James, George, Jennie, Martha H. and Mary J. The parents were members of the Methodist church and Allen L. West was a trustee in the church for many years. He was a brother of Col. Owen West, farmer, manufacturer, inventor and soldier, of Clark township, and a distinguished citizen of this county.

Born and reared in Washington township near Cuba, Allen M. West was educated in the schools of Cuba, Ohio. When a young man, he began farming in Washington township. After farming here for fifteen years or until September, 1903, he moved to Cuba, where he has since lived. Mr. West owns two farms near Cuba, comprising three hundred acres, and oversees them personally. For the last fifteen years he has dealt in hay, grain and live stock and is probably the most extensive individual stock buyer in the whole county.

On December 25, 1890, Allen M. West was married to Rhoda S. Biggs, the daughter of George and Ruth (Wright) Biggs. She was born on June 4, 1865. George Biggs, the son of William B. and Rhoda Biggs, was born in Washington township, December 23, 1824, and reared on a farm. After 1847 he was engaged in lumbering and, at this time, built the first steam saw-mill in Washington township, at Cuba. He was married in January, 1849, to Ruth Wright, the daughter of Daniel and Teresa Wright, and they had seven children, three of whom died early in life. At the time of his death, Mr. Biggs owned a farm of one hundred and five acres in Clinton county.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen M. West are the parents of five children: Hazel May, who is now a teacher of music and art in the Wilmington high school and is a graduate of Miami University; Mabel Edna, who is a student at Miami University; Ruth Ellen, Alma Martha and Allen Biggs, all of whom are at home.

Mr. and Mrs. West and family are members of the Christian church. Mr. West is a Democrat and for sixteen years he has been a member of the school board. He is possessed with a natural interest in education and deserves much credit for the high standard of the schools in this community.. Mr. West was township clerk for twelve years.

ALFRED S. PENQUITE.

Alfred S. Penquite is a thrifty farmer of Washington township, Clinton county, and a man not only of strong character but of pleasing personality and who is exceedingly popular with the people of this township.

Born on February 8, 1867, in Marion township, Clinton county, Ohio, Alfred S. Penquite is the son of Alexander and Susannah (Vandoren) Penquite. The father was born in Clarksville in Warren county and the mother also was born near Clarksville. She was the daughter of William and Athlina Vandoren.

The paternal grandfather of Alfred S., William Penquite, was a sea captain along the Atlantic coast and was lost at sea. His children were William, John, Alexander, Nancy and Elizabeth.

Alexander Penquite received a good education in the schools of Warren county and farmed in that county until about 1865, when he moved to Clinton county and located in Washington township. He remained in that township only one year, however, when he moved to Marion township in Clinton county. There he spent the remainder of his life on a farm of one hundred acres which he owned. Alexander and Susannah Penquite had four children, of whom Alfred S., the subject of this sketch, was the youngest. The three elder children were: Louisa, who married J. H. Pennington; Amanda, who became the wife of J. E. Mitchell; and Lucian, who married Lizzie Hallstead. The father's family were members of the Free-will Baptist church. He was a Republican in politics.

Educated in the common schools of Marion township, Alfred S. Penquite began farming in that township. In 1892 he moved to Washington township, where he rented the farm which he purchased in 1897, and which consists of one hundred acres. He is a general farmer and stock raiser, but his standing as a citizen consists not so much in his success as a farmer as in his natural powers of leadership, his wide information and his cordial relations with his neighbors.

In 1892 Alfred S. Penquite was married to Jennie M. Mitchell, the daughter of G. R. and Mary (Clevenger) Mitchell. Mr. and Mrs. Penquite have no children. Mr. Penquite is a Republican and served a term of six years as trustee of Washington township, a very important office and one which he filled with credit to himself and to the community he served. Mr. Penquite is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Penquite enjoy the comforts of a modern home and pleasant surroundings.

CHARLES W. SEWELL.

Among the younger farmers of Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, who are making rapid strides in farming, is Charles W. Sewell, who belongs to one of the oldest of the old families of Clinton county and who is one of the most active citizens and farmers of Washington township. His paternal great-grandfather was, for several years, judge of the Clinton county court and built the first grist and saw-mill in the county as well as the first stone house. The Sewells are from Virginia originally, the first emigrant having been Charles W. Sewell's great-grandfather, Judge Aaron Sewell, who came about 1798 to Lebanon and two years later, accompanied by many other members of the family, to Vernon township, Clinton county.

Charles W. Sewell is a native of Vernon township, born on April 28, 1872, the son of Amos T. and Amanda N. (Flora) Sewell, the former of whom was a native of Vernon township and the latter of whom was born near Martinsville. He was educated in the common schools of Vernon township and began farming, when a young man, in his native township. Amos T. enlisted in the Union army in 1861, and served until the close of the Civil War in the Eleventh Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, participating in many battles, especially the battle of Gettysburg. Shortly after the war, he began farming in Vernon township on the farm which Charles W., subject, now owns. In 1914, he moved to Clarksville, where he now lives retired. By his marriage to Amanda N. Flora, there were born three children: Rose, Charles W. and Amanda, the latter of whom is deceased. The mother of these children died in 1874 and later Amos T. Sewell was married to Patience Green. To them were born ten children: Gladys, Mary, Roy, Cyrus, Carrie, Edwin, Cecil, Frederick, Irene and Mabel. Amos T. Sewell is a Democrat in politics and a well-known and prominent citizen of this county.

The paternal grandfather, Aaron R. Sewell, a native of Clinton county, Ohio, was one of five children born to his parents, Aaron and Catherine Sewell. The others were Ezra, David, Elizabeth and Mary. Aaron R. Sewell was a justice of the peace at Clarksville for many years and he also served early in the history of the county as county commissioner for several years. He was a miller, farmer and surveyor and in his early days also taught school. His first wife was Lydia Stansbury, the daughter of Recompense and Catherine Stansbury, the former of whom was one of the old settlers of Clarksville, Vernon township. By this marriage there were four children: John G., Mary E., Cyrus L. and Amos T. Mrs. Lydia Sewell died and after her death, Aaron R. Sewell married Mary M. Lazenby, who bore him six children: Celestia Ella, who died at the age of fourteen; Ruth Caroline, Oscar L., Edgar Newton, Elmer A. and Florence M.

The old Sewell mill was located on the East Fort on what is known today as the David Pond place and, for many years, was a landmark in this section of Clinton county.

Charles W. Sewell was educated in the common schools of Vernon township and, early in life, began farming in this township. In 1898 he rented a farm in Washington township of ninety-seven acres, where he now lives. About 1908 he purchased a half interest in the farm. He now owns two hundred and fifty acres which of itself speaks volumes with regard to his enterprise and thrift. He is a stock dealer and does a large business in buying and selling hogs, cattle, horses and sheep.

On March 10, 1907, Charles W. Sewell was married to Vinnia Wisbey, the daughter of Louis and Agnes (Clark) Wisbey. Louis Wisbey was a well-known citizen for more than a half century in the city of Cincinnati. His father was a hero of the War of 1812 and his grandfather was a valiant and courageous soldier in the Revolutionary War.

In 1841 Louis Wisbey became a volunteer fireman in the Cincinnati fire department and rose by virtue of sheer merit to chief of the fire department in 1884 and filled this office for many years. As a matter of fact, he filled every office in the fire department of Cincinnati with the exception of that of secretary. He served thirty-eight years continuously in some capacity or other. He died on April 23, 1902, one of the best beloved and most widely known citizens of the Queen City.

To Mr. and Mrs. Sewell have been born two children, Charles R. and Louis J. The former was born in January, 1898, and the latter in December, 1903.

Mr. Sewell is a justice of the peace and was road superintendent of Clinton county for fifteen years. He was the chief road officer in his township for three years and for nine years served on the school board. He was treasurer of the board for six years. Mr. Sewell is an ardent Democrat. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Cuba, and the Knights of Pythias at Clarksville, Ohio.

AMOS W. LIEURANCE.

Amos W. Lieurance, a retired farmer of Clark township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on January 25, 1840, the son of Alexander and Sallie Ann (Morris) Lieurance, the former of whom was born in Ashe county, North Carolina, June 16, 1816, and the latter of whom was born on February 10, 1807, in North Carolina.

Alexander Lieurance was the son of Peter, Jr., and Hannah (Philips) Lieurance, the former of whom was a native of Ashe county, North Carolina, born on January 9, 1795, and the latter of whom was born on November 4, 1794. They were married in North Carolina and came to Clinton county, Ohio, with their one son, Alexander, who was then six months old, in November, 1816, making the entire trip on horseback. They settled near Cuba and in 1824 Peter Lieurance, Jr., bought one hundred acres of land. He died on November 9, 1829, and his wife died on January 15, 1873.

Alexander Lieurance took the responsibility of clearing the farm and became a farmer and stock raiser. By his earnest and untiring industry he accumulated considerable property. Besides the home farm, he owned one hundred and eighty-seven acres elsewhere in Washington township, which he cleared and improved. He was a well-known stock breeder and made a specialty of raising Poland China hogs. On June 16, 1836, Alexander Lieurance married Mrs. Sarah A. Morris, widow of William Morris and the daughter of Eldridge and Sallie (Burnett) Bales. She had two children by her former marriage, John and Avery P. By her marriage to Mr. Lieurance, six children were born, of whom only three, Amos W., Wyatt H. and Jemima F., are living. The deceased children are Peter, Emma and Ann. Jemima F. married Riley Pond, Emma married J. M. Whinnery, Ann was the wife of Rev. Edward McHugh. Peter died at the age of eleven years. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Lieurance were devoted members of the Baptist church. Mr. Lieurance voted the Republican ticket. He died in June, 1898, and his wife died on October 26, of the same year.

Amos W. Lieurance followed farming from the time of his young manhood until about twelve years ago, when he retired. His son-in-law now manages the home place. In 1862 Mr. Lieurance purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty acres and, after clearing seventy acres, sold it. In 1869 he bought a farm of one hundred and seventy-two acres, upon which he paid five thousand dollars and for which he gave his note for ten thousand dollars. During his active life, he dealt extensively in hogs and horses and was accustomed to sell from fifteen hundred to twenty-five hundred dollars worth of hogs every year, as long ago as 1863. He paid sixty dollars for two Poland China pigs and in 1865 he sold two hogs for one hundred and sixty dollars. One weighed eight hundred and the other weighed eight hundred and five pounds.

On October 16, 1862, Amos W. Lieurance was married to Ann Baker, the daughter of William and Sarah Baker, a native of Washington township, born on December 24, 1840.

Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance have been the parents of four children, namely: Chloe I., who was born on September 18, 1863; Frank W., March 29, 1866; Olive Estella, January 28, 1874; and Silas W., December 23, 1864, died on September 23, 1881.

Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Lieurance is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons. He is a Republican.

On March 25, 1893, Olive Estella Lieurance married James A. Graham, who was born in Vernon township, Clinton county, Ohio, in 1875, the son of Samuel and Margaret A. (Hunter) Graham, natives of Westboro and Martinsville, respectively. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Graham was Jonathan Graham and his maternal grandfather was James Hunter, who married Harriet A. Neal. Samuel Graham was educated in the public schools of Vernon township, where he owned one hundred and forty-four acres of land. He was a member of the "squirrel hunters" during the Civil War. The Grahams were originally members of the Friends church but James A. Graham is not a member of this church. Among the children born to Samuel and Margaret A. Graham were: Mary and Martha, twins; Charles, who died at the age of nineteen; Alice, deceased; B. Frank, of Herman, Illinois; James A.; and William R., who lives on the old home place.

James A. Graham was educated in Vernon township and has always followed farming. Mr. Graham now manages his father-in-law's farm of one hundred and seventy-four acres. He is an extensive breeder of hogs and horses, specializing in draft horses and Duroc-Jersey hogs. Mr. and Mrs. Graham are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mr. Graham is a member of the Martinsville Lodge, No. 391, Free and Accepted Masons.

One of the remarkable members of the Lieurance family, of whom mention may be made was Peter Lieurance, not, however, the Peter Lieurance heretofore mentioned. He was a man of great physical power and lived to be one hundred and four years old. At one time he owned a farm in Washington township, upon which was located one of the early public cemeteries. Peter Lieurance died in the state of Illinois.

REZIN J. LAZENBY.

The Lazenby family is one of the fine old families of Washington township and was established in Clinton county by Joshua Lazenby, a native of the Old Dominion state. It was his father who served in the Revolutionary War and it is his musket which has been handed down from generation to generation and is still in possession of the family. Rezin J. Lazenby, a representative of the third generation of the family in this county, is not only descended on his paternal side from a soldier in the Revolutionary War, but his father, Rezin Lazenby, Sr., was a soldier in the Mexican War. For several generations, the family have been farmers, and very successful ones.

Rezin J. Lazenby, Jr., a native of Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on September 11, 1856. His father, Rezin Lazenby, Sr., was a native of Highland county, Ohio, born on January 22, 1817. He was married on October 12, 1843, to Jerusha Kibby, who was born on April 3, 1823, and who was the daughter of Ephraim and Nancy (Vandervort) Kibby.

The paternal grandparents of Rezin J. Lazenby, Jr., Joshua and Ruth (Guthrie) Lazenby, moved from Highland county, Ohio, to Washington township, Clinton county, in 1818. Joshua Lazenby was born on September 11, 1775, in Virginia, and died on January 13, 1867. His father, Robert Lazenby, served as a teamster in the Revolutionary War, and the old flint-lock musket, which he carried, is still owned by the family. Joshua Lazenby's wife was born in 1781 in Maryland and died on February 13, 1868. They moved from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio, in 1817 and in 1818 to Clinton county. Here they lived on a farm the remainder of their lives and owned, at the time of their death, five hundred acres of land in this county. Joshua and Ruth Lazenby had nine children, of whom Rezin, Sr., the father of Rezin J., was the seventh. The names of the children in the order of their births are: Henry, Robert, John C., Benjamin I., Penelope, Christopher, Rezin, Polly Margery and Joshua, Jr. The family were members of the Baptist church.

Educated in the common schools of Washington township, Clinton county, Rezin Lazenby, Sr., engaged in farming early in life and followed this occupation all of his life, owning, at the time of his death, four hundred acres of land. He and his wife had five children: John E., who was a soldier in the Seventy-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry during the Civil War and died with measles while serving in the army; Henry, who died in infancy; Virginia A.; Laura L., and Rezin, Jr. The father of these children was a Republican in politics and a prominent and influential member of the Christian church, in which he served for a long period as trustee.

Born and reared in Clinton county, Rezin J. Lazenby received a good education in the public schools of Washington township and took up farming early in life. At the present time he owns two hundred and ten acres, comprising a splendid farm in Washington township.

Rezin J. Lazenby was married on November 15, 1877, to Laurabel Z. Smith, the daughter of John and Jane E. Smith, of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby are the parents of three children, Alta May, Ethel J. and Herman N. Alta May died after becoming a young woman. Herman N. married Olive Moore and lives on a part of Mr. Lazenby's farm. Ethel J. lives at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby are members of the Christian church and he is a deacon and trustee in this church. He is a Republican.

LEWIS P. WHINERY.

Lewis P. Whinery, a native of Clark township, Clinton county, and a farmer by occupation, was born on the farm where he lives, March 1, 1854. He is a son of John V. and Nancy (Shields) Whinery, the latter of whom was a daughter of George and Ann (McDaniel) Shields. George Shields was a native of Virginia, and he and his wife were the parents of six children, Ann, Jane, Nancy, Harriett, Rebecca and John.

Mr. Whinery's maternal grandparents, George Shields and wife, came to Clinton county, Ohio, from the Old Dominion among the first families to settle here and located near Clarksville. They owned land near that village, but subsequently removed to the farm now owned by Lewis P. Whinery, their grandson, near Morrisville. George Shields was the owner of over five hundred acres of land, all of which was covered with virgin forest. Much of this land he cleared, and upon this farm he lived until his death.

John V. Whinery, the father of Lewis P. Whinery, was married three times, the subject of this review being a son by the third marriage. He was a school teacher, merchant and farmer, and at one time conducted a general store in Morrisville. He died on the farm where his son, Lewis P., now lives. He was a director of the Clinton county infirmary, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. By his third marriage there were three children.

Lewis P. Whinery received his elementary education in the common schools of Clinton county, Ohio, and also attended the high school at Martinsville, under the preceptorship of Prof. Thomas J. Moon. After finishing school he took up farming on the old home place and has always lived there. He owns eighty-five acres of land in Clark township.

On February 22, 1883, Mr. Whinery was married to Clora Peale, a native of Highland county, Ohio, and a daughter of Alexander Peale. To this union has been born one daughter, Verna. Mr. Whinery and his daughter are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, while Mrs. Whinery is identified with the Christian church. Mr. Whinery is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons at Martinsville, Ohio.

WILLIAM KELLEY HALE, M. D.

"Blessed is the man who has found his work." So says the sage. When this can be aptly applied to the life of a physician, it is eloquent of meaning, perhaps more so than of any other professional man. It may well be doubted whether any other profession affords more opportunity for genuine service to humanity than does the daily life of the doctor, and yet, so accustomed have we become to his unselfish ministry that it is taken as a matter of course. It is with grateful recognition of such service that the biographer includes in the history of Clinton county a brief record of the life of Dr. William Kelley Hale, who stands high in his profession. Doctor Hale spent his boyhood on a farm in Vernon township, having been born on June 30, 1884, and is, therefore, a native of this county.

Although one of the youngest of Clinton county's professional men, Doctor Hale is one of its most successful and best equipped physicians and surgeons. He has been absorbed in the study of materia medica ever since his introduction to the science and is making a brilliant success in its practical application, as well as in the science of surgery.

The subject of this sketch is the son of Frank E. and Ann (Kelley) Hale, both of whom are natives of this county, the father being a well-known farmer, and locally famous as a fox-hunter. Among the early pioneers from North Carolina to this county in 1803 was Jacob Hale, the son of the progenitor of the family in America. The parental grandfather of our subject was William Hale, also an early settler in the county. As evidence of his prominence, as well as of his popularity, it may be stated that he was an extensive landowner and at one time was county commissioner. Possessed of an active mind, he was a successful farmer and trader. This interesting man is now living in Wilmington at the age of eighty. Doctor Hale has a brother named Layton Hale, who is a well-known farmer and a skilled mechanician.

Dr. William Kelley Hale began his education in the local schools, graduating from the Wilmington high school in 1904. Four years later he graduated with honors from the medical department of the St. Louis University. In order to further perfect himself in his profession, after the regular college course, he spent one year practicing in the St. Louis Obstetric Dispensary, and another year in the city hospital, of the same city.

Returning to his native locality, Doctor Hale began his professional life in Wilmington, specializing in general surgery, in which he has become eminently skillful, his repute in this science being more than local. He maintains a private hospital, finely equipped with all the modern apparatus required by science, and so successful has he become that patients come for treatment from many parts of the state.

Doctor Hale, whose well-trained mind has always been attracted to science, proposes to make a life study of research work. His laboratory is equipped with special mechanical apparatus that enables him to delve into the mysteries of organic function and to work out original ideas. He is also a student of biology, a science closely allied to the study of medicine. He has a remarkable collection of moths and butterflies, which he has arranged with originality and care. Each specimen is preserved upon an individual glass plate, and the whole collection housed in a closed cabinet especially constructed for the purpose. Doctor Hale also possesses a rare and interesting collection of snails.

Doctor Hale's beautiful home is one of the interesting landmarks of the city, and his equally attractive garage was erected by the hands of its owner during his leisure moments. Doctor Hale has a wife of unusual helpfulness in his important work of healing the sick. Mrs. Hale was formerly the assistant superintendent of nurses at the St. Louis city hospital. Before her marriage Mrs. Hale was Dessa C. Raydure, of Conneaut Lake, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Hale's knowledge of medical subjects, as well as her ready sympathy and womanly nature, has made her an invaluable aid to her busy husband, and it is only fair to say that some, at least, of his success is due to this fact. Doctor

WILLIAM KELLEY HALE, M. D.

Hale is a member of the Christian church and his wife is attached to the Dutch Reformed church.

Doctor Hale is a member of the Medical Association of the state of Ohio, of the Clinton County Medical Society and of the St. Louis City Hospital Alumni Association, and a fellow of the American Medical Association of Chicago, in all of which organizations he is held in high regard and esteem.

The greatness of the physician consists in his proper blending of sympathy and skill, for it is certain that both are necessary. A doctor without sympathy is like a rose without perfume. It is thus in the uniting of heart and brain in his daily work that the social ministry of the physician consists. To this high type does Doctor Hale belong.

LEVI H. CUSTIS.

Everyone who lives in a state and enjoys its protection, must contribute through his work, directly or indirectly, to further the objects of the state as a community for the purposes of justice and civilization. Levi H. Custis, of Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio, who is a kind and generous citizen now living retired, worthily fulfilled his obligations and duties, not only to the members of his family, but to the state as well. He is one of those men of honorable and humane impulses who have had so much to do with the agricultural development of Clinton county.

Levi H. Curtis was born in Union township, Clinton county, December 26, 1845, and is the son of Douglas W. and Penniah (Gustin) Custis, the former of whom was born in Scioto county, Ohio, December 20, 1811, and the latter of whom was the daughter of Elkany Gustin. They were married on November 19, 1835, and after their marriage, settled on land now owned by Alfred Sprague and daughter. Mrs. Douglas W. Custis died on September 27, 1881.

Seven children were born to Douglas W. and Penniah Custis: William, Isaiah, Anna M., Hannah J., Levi, Rhoda and Mary M. Of these children, Isaiah enlisted in 1862 in Captain Giffin's company of the Seventy-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry and, after serving a short time, became disabled and was discharged. Douglas W. Custis was a member of the Protestant Methodist church as was also his wife.

Douglas W. Custis was the son of William and Elizabeth (Savage) Custis, who settled in Scioto county, Ohio, shortly before 1811. William Custis was twice married. By his first marriage to Elizabeth Savage, there were five children: Sallie, John, William, Harriet and Douglas W. The mother of these children died in 1812 and he married again, by which marriage there were three children: Nancy, Margaret and Littleton, who came to Clinton county with their mother. William Custis died in Scioto county about 1828 and Mrs. Custis, his second wife, died in 1863, at the age of ninety-seven years. During the Civil War, William Custis was what was called a "squirrel hunter."

The late Douglas W. Custis was educated in the common schools, and throughout his life was engaged in farming. He came to Clinton county on horseback and settled in Richland township on one hundred and eighteen acres. He was a man of honorable and humane impulses, a member of the Methodist Protestant church and of strong domestic inclination. He passed away in 1897.

Of the children born to Douglas and Penniah Custis, William, who was born on September 8, 1836, married Susan Drake and they had eight children, Charles, Franklin, Ida B., Anna, Lulu, Grace, James and Levi Dorcy. Isaiah was born on November 2, 1838, and married Eliza J. Acher and had two children, Oscar W. and Etta; Myra, March 18, 1840, married James Thompson and had four children, Sadie, Elva, Ora and Cora; Hannah, July 21, 1843, married A. J. Wilson and has no children; Rhoda, October 23, 1848, died young; Mary, who was born on February 13, 1851, married Thomas L. Huffman and had three children living, Lawrence, Leo and Mamie. Mary is dead.

Levi H. Custis was educated in the common schools, which he attended until the age of fifteen years, when he was taken ill. From the time he was eighteen until the time he was twenty-five, he was engaged in clerking in a store with his brother, William. In fact, he was associated with him altogether seven years in the mercantile business at New Antioch and Sabina. On June 8, 1871, he engaged in farming and the stock business and remained on the farm until 1910, when he retired and moved to Sabina, where he now lives.

Mr. Custis now owns one hundred and fourteen acres of land, but at one time he gave to his children nearly five hundred acres. Aside from his interest in the farm property he is a heavy holder of securities in several industrial enterprises, especially in the Geiger-Jones Company of Canton, Ohio, the Ralston steel car works and other companies.

Mrs. Levi H. Custis, before her marriage, was Elizabeth Jane Vanniman, born in Greene county, Ohio, February 8, 1850, and who is the daughter of Elias and Eva (Early) Vanniman, who were farmers in Greene county until 1865, when they came to Clinton county. Here they became large landowners, owning approximately between five and six hundred acres in this county. They were prominent people in the community where they lived and active in the Methodist Protestant church.

Mr. and Mrs. Custis have been the parents of five children: Lillian, Edna, Dwight L., Heber W. and Maude. Of these children, Lillian married Clark Haines, of Warren county, Ohio, and has six children, Lloyd, Mildred, Ruth, Harold and Donald, twins, and Raymond, deceased. Edna married Irving Peelle, of Wilmington, and has one son, Miles. Dwight married Nettie Hughes and has one child, Miriam. They reside at Richwood, Ohio, where he is a minister in the Methodist Protestant church. Heber W., who lives on the home place, married Hazel Reed and they have two children, Jean nad Freda Ellen.

Mr. and Mrs. Custis are members of the Methodist Protestant church and are especially interested in the Sunday school. Mr. Curtis has been superintendent of the Sunday school and class leader in the church. In fact, the entire family are interested in religious work. Fraternally, Levi H. Custis is a member of the Masonic Lodge No. 324, Sabina, Ohio.

HOY MOORE WOODMANSEE.

The sedulous cultivation of a "sweet tooth" on the part of the present generation has created a distinct industry, an industry that no doubt would have seemed an amazing outcropping of civilization to our pioneer forefathers, but which to the present generation has become one of the essential factors of life, being taken as much for granted as are the modern developments of those earlier industries which had to do with providing for the mere primitive necessities of mankind. The confectioner and the ice-cream manufacturer have come to be recognized as very necessary cogs in the complex machinery of modern life, and as such occupy a quite important position in the industrial life of the nation. In this section of the state the development of the ice-cream trade has been very rapid in recent years, and no one factor has contributed more largely to this rapid development than the gentleman whose name the reader noted above, H. M. Woodmansee, the popular purveyor and manufacturer of ice cream at Wilmington, this county.

Hoy Moore Woodmansee was born in the pleasant village of New Antioch, Clinton county, Ohio, on March 26, 1870, son of Joseph and Sarah Elizabeth (Moore) Woodmansee, the former of whom was born on a farm in Green township, this county, in 1841, and died in 1903, and the latter of whom was born in Highland county, this state, in 1851.

Joseph Woodmansee was the son of Reuben Woodmansee, who also was born in Green township, this county, son of one of the earliest settlers in that section of the county, a native of Scotland, who located in the Snow Hill neighborhood and became one of the most influential of the early settlers of Green township. Reuben Woodmansee became a substantial farmer in that neighborhood, being the owner of about three hundred acres of choice land, and was regarded as one of the leaders of the community. He and his wife, the latter of whom was a Spears, were members of the Christian church, devoutly rearing their children in the faith of that communion, and were active in all good works thereabout. Their son, Joseph, father of the immediate subject of this biographical sketch, was reared on the home farm, receiving such education as the schools of that period provided. He was but twenty years of age when the Civil War broke out, but he enlisted in the Union army and served his country valiantly for a period of three years. Upon returning from the service, he opened a general store in the village of New Antioch, which he conducted for seven years, at the end of which time he sold his store and became a locomotive engineer in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, later transferring his services to the Norfolk & Western Railroad, making his home in Columbus, Ohio, from the year 1884 until the time of his death. Joseph Woodmansee, as a boy, learned surveying in Cincinnati, and during the years in which he was engaged in business at New Antioch often was called on to run the lines in connection with property divisions in this county.

Shortly after returning from the war, Joseph Woodmansee was united in marriage to Sarah Elizabeth Moore, who was born in Highland county, this state, daughter, of the Rev. William D. and Sarah Moore, both of whom were born near Brushcreek, in Adams county, this state. Rev. William D. Moore was for many years one of the best-known ministers of the Christian church in this section of the state. He was a man of liberal education and came to this county in his young manhood to serve as principal of the schools of New Vienna. During this form of service, his Sundays were devoted to the preaching of the Word to the local congregation of the people of his faith, and he presently gave up teaching, thereafter devoting his whole time to the ministry, becoming a man of large influence in his neighborhood. Rev. William D. Moore was a tall man, of dignified and courtly bearing, known widely throughout this whole region. He lived to the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. His wife died in 1900, at the age of seventy-two years.

To Joseph and Sarah Elizabeth (Moore) Woodmansee were born four children, all sons, and all of whom are still living, namely: William B., who is a railway telegrapher at Greenfield, Ohio; Hoy Moore, the immediate subject of this biographical sketch; Oren, a confectioner and wholesale dealer in ice cream, living at Hillsboro, Ohio, and Charles D., who occupies an important position with the Standard Oil Company, with headquarters at Des Moines, Iowa.

Hoy Moore Woodmansee was reared at New Antioch, this county, receiving his early education in the public schools of that village, completing his common-school education in the schools of Columbus, supplementing the same by a course in a business college in the latter city. Upon leaving school he entered the employ of an extensive dealer in confectionery at Columbus, and for ten years was thus engaged, during which time he thoroughly familiarized himself with all departments of the business. In 1893 Mr. Woodmansee returned to Clinton county, locating at Wilmington, where he was given charge of the confectionery department of the J. P. Cole restaurant. For the next six years he was thus employed, and then he went to Sabina, this county, where, for one year, he conducted a restaurant. In 1901 he sold this business and returned to Wilmington, where he erected a plant for the manufacture of ice cream and has ever since that time been thus engaged, the business having proved very successful, the fame of the Woodmansee ice creams having extended far beyond the confines of this county. In 1912, Mr. Woodmansee was compelled to enlarge his plant, on account of the rapidly growing demand for his products, and he erected a more extensive factory, changing his location to a pleasant spot in the Northwood addition of Wilmington, at the same time erecting a fine dwelling house there, and is meeting with much success.

On December 19, 1897, Hoy Moore Woodmansee was united in marriage to Mary A. Starbuck, who was born in Wilmington, this county, daughter of Arden and Louise (Pigeon) Starbuck, the former of whom is a native of this county and the latter of whom was born in North Carolina, daughter of Charles and Catherine Pigeon, who came to this county years ago and settled in Union township, where they became influential citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck both are still living on the old Starbuck place in Union township.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodmansee are members of the Christian church at Wilmington, and take an active part in the good works of that congregation. They have hosts of friends in and about Wilmington and are very popular in the circle of their acquaintances.

JOHN SHERMAN ANTRAM.

John Sherman Antram, who is descended from an old family of this county and who is a prominent farmer and dairyman of Union township, was born on September 1, 1879, in Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Arthur D. and Margaret (Welsh) Antram, the former of whom, born on the farm where his widow now lives in Union township, March 27, 1855, was accidentally killed on August 10, 1911, in a runaway. He was the son of John M. and Catherine (Babb) Antram, the former of whom, born in Clinton county, June 19, 1825, is still living at the home of his son, Frank William, and the latter of whom, born on a farm in Union township, July 21, 1827, died on June 24, 1898. John M. Antram was the son of Hiram and Sarah L. (Whitson) Antram, the former born on January 29, 1798, in Frederick county, Virginia, and the latter, born in 1800, in Center county, Pennsylvania, died in 1872. In 1817 Hiram Antram came to Clinton county with his parents, John and Ann (Hackney) Antram, who settled in Union township. Sarah L. Whitson came to Ohio in 1816, first locating in Madison county, and came to Clinton county in 1817. Hiram Antram's family came from Ireland to Virginia, the family being of Scotch-Irish descent. Catherine Babb was the daughter of Azel and Hannah (Hollingsworth) Babb, the former of whom was the son of Henry and Elizabeth (Walker) Babb. Henry Babb came to this county in 1806 from Frederick county, Virginia, and settled north of the court house at Wilmington. His wife's father, Mordecai Walker, purchased one thousand acres of land from Thomas Posey in 1805 and had given each of his four children portions of that estate. Henry Babb was one of the early commissioners of this county.

The late Arthur D. Antram, father of John Sherman Antram, received a good education from the public school at Antrams Corners and at Wilmington College and became a well-known farmer of this county. On February 2, 1878, he was married to Margaret Welsh, who was probably born in Ireland and who came to the United States with her parents when a baby. She was born on December 25, 1850, and was reared by George and Lydia Bailey, now both deceased, who lived in Liberty township, this county. Mrs. Antram had a half-sister, Catherine, who married Samuel Brann, of Wilmington. To Arthur D. Antram and wife three children were born, namely: John Sherman, the subject of this sketch; Ralph, born on March 7, 1881, who operates the home farm for his mother, and Mary C., December 27, 1883, who attended Wilmington College and has taught school for five years.

John Sherman Antram was a mere lad when his parents moved from Liberty township to Union township. He attended the public school at Antrams Corners, on the Xenia pike, in Union township, and later was a student at Wilmington College. Being the eldest son in the family, he was his father's mainstay on the farm and after he grew up, he and his brother and father all worked together on the farm and shared in its profits. Some time before his death, the father purchased the Anthony Curl place of fifty-four and one-quarter acres, where John S. Antram now lives. It is situated on the Xenia pike in Union township and it was this farm which Mr. Antram received as his share of the estate at the time of his father's death. Mr. Antram keeps a large herd of registered Jersey cattle and sells milk in wholesale quantities.

On October 3, 1907, John S. Antram was married to Maud South, who was born at Watseka, Illinois, the daughter of Alexander and Martha South, the former of whom died in December, 1906, and the latter of whom lives at Watseka, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Antram have no children.

John S. Antram is a Republican and has served as school director and is especially interested in educational affairs. He holds a birthright in the Dover meeting of the Society of Friends and takes a more or less active part in the affairs of that congregation. He is a good farmer and a good citizen.

JOHN P. LANGDON.

John P. Langdon, who has served in various official capacities in the political life of Clinton county, as county commissioner, township trustee and a member of the board of education, is one of the most public-spirited citizens of Richland township.

John P. Langdon was born on February 6, 1859, at Pleasant Ridge, Hamilton county, Ohio, the son of Samuel and Martha J. (Lyon) Langdon, the former of whom was born on April 16, 1823, on Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, and the latter born on January 25, 1829, at the same place. Martha J. Lyon was the daughter of James C. and Maria (Carder) Lyon, the former of whom, a native of Virginia, was pastor of the old Duck Creek Baptist church of Cincinnati for forty years. His father located on Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, buying the land there for seventeen and one-half cents an acre. This land remained in the family until the bulk of it was sold for five hundred dollars an acre. The last eight acres sold for thirty thousand dollars. James C. and Maria Lyon had four children, Joanna, James, Mary and Martha, the mother of John P. Langdon.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Langdon was Mark Langdon, a native of England, who came to America in 1816, locating on what is now East Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, where he lived the remainder of his life. He and his wife had five children, Joseph, Samuel, William, John and Elizabeth, all of whom are deceased.

Samuel Langdon, the father of John P., was educated in the common schools. He and his wife had four children, Frank, Mary, John P. and Fannie. Frank resides at Riverside, California. Mary and Fannie are living with their mother on Norwood Heights, Cincinnati. Samuel Langdon took a great interest in politics and was a well-known farmer of Pleasant Ridge, Hamilton county. He owned one hundred acres of land, which had been given to him and which sold on March 27, 1912, to the LaSantiville Country Club, of Cincinnati.

John P. Langdon was educated in the common schools of Cincinnati and also in the Cincinnati high school, where he spent two years. After completing his education, he returned to the farm and helped his father until the latter's death, which occurred on January 9, 1882. On March 7, 1887, Mr. Langdon moved to Clinton county and purchased one hundred and twenty-nine acres at the edge of Sabina, where he is living at the present time. He makes a specialty of raising Percheron horses and Duroc-Jersey hogs.

John P. Langdon was married on December 30, 1880, to Florence Cole, the daughter of Dr. P. C. Cole, of Sabina, who was a sergeant in the Union army during the Civil War. Mr. and Mrs. Langdon have been the parents of five children, Elmer C., Gordon P., Edith May, Morris C. and Clara E.

From 1909 until 1913, Mr. Langdon, as a Republican, was a commissioner of Clinton county. He was trustee for nine years, from 1890 until 1899. He has also been a member of the Sabina board of education for some time. The Langdon family live on their farm in Richland township just at the east edge of Sabina.

GEORGE W. WIRE, M. D.

Who can estimate properly, or convincingly, the influence for good upon the life of a community wielded by the thoughtful, conscientious practicing physician? What record, save that of the great Recording Angel, ever will contain a complete transcript of the unselfish labors of the healer who goes about his business in behalf of ailing humanity, all uncomplainingly, patiently, devotedly and sincerely giving himself; the strength of his hand, of his mind and of his heart, to all who call for such relief of bodily suffering. A mere formal historical and biographical work, of this character, is highly informative and instructive, and to future generations of this county this volume will be held as a priceless heritage of the past; but there is very much the future generations ought to know of the doings of their forbears that cannot be put down in cold letters and figures on a printed page. Among these phases of commercial life that only can be recorded in the hearts of men here below, that relating to the unselfish labors of the earnestly consecrated physician properly may be considered as of paramount importance. While no attempt shall be made to convey a further message of sentiment in that connection on this page, it is but proper that, in a work of this nature, something of the life's record of the well-known and popular physician whose name forms the caption of this sketch, shall here be presented for the information of those generations yet to come who will want to know all that is obtainable of the history of the devoted men and women who wrought, giving the best that was in them, in order that richer material blessings, than they have ever known, might descend upon those who were to follow.

George W. Wire was born on a farm near the city of Princeton, in Gibson county, Indiana, on October 9, 1852, son of John and Lieuvica (Pond) Wire, the former of whom was a native of Maryland, born in 1801, who died in 1870, and the latter of whom was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1807, and died in 1857.

John Wire, whose parents were of German descent, was reared on a farm in Maryland and upon reaching manhood's estate emigrated to Ohio, locating for a time in this county, where he married Lieuvica Pond, whose parents were among the very earliest settlers of this part of the state, and moved by wagon to Gibson county, Indiana, where he bought a farm near the city of Princeton, on which he spent the remainder of his life, becoming a prosperous and influential resident of that community.

To John and Lieuvica (Pond) Wire were born eleven children, namely: Peter, a lieutenant in the Union army during the Civil War, was shot and slain while attempting to escape after having been captured by the enemy; John, deceased; Elizabeth, who married William McCleary, both of whom now are dead; Mahala, with her husband, also is dead; Matilda, deceased; Andrew, a school teacher, who enlisted in the Union army for service during the Civil War and was killed during the storming of Ft. Donelson; Sarah, deceased; Lieuvica, deceased; William B., a former prominent lumber dealer, now deceased; Thomas, who also was engaged in the lumber business, deceased; and George W., the subject of this sketch, he being not only the youngest of this notable family, but now the sole survivor.

George W. Wire was bereaved of his mother when eight years of age. His father married again, but to this second union there was no issue. Upon completing the course in the public schools of Gibson county, young Wire entered DePauw University at Greencastle, Indiana, where he remained two years, at the end of which time he entered the office of Dr. S. E. Munford, at Princeton, Indiana, for the purpose of studying medicine. After two years spent under this admirable preceptor, he entered Miami Medical College at Cincinnati, from which excellent old institution he was graduated in 1876, with the full honors of his degree. Upon receiving his diploma, Doctor Wire immediately located in Wilmington, this county, where he ever since has been successfully engaged in the practice of his chosen profession, having gained in that time a reputation as a physician that extends far beyond the confines of this county.

Upon locating in Wilmington, Doctor Wire formed a partnership with Dr. J. R. Walker, which continued most harmoniously and effectively until the latter's death in May, 1877. Not only has Doctor Wire been one of the most active practicing physicians in this part of the state, but he has been active in public affairs and during the past ten years has served in the Wilmington city council, being elected to his seat therein on the Republican ticket, his services in that connection having been of large value to the community. In matters affecting the public health, Doctor Wire's services in his official capacity have been of particular value, and for the past four years he has carried the additional official obligation of serving in the capacity of public health officer of the city of Wilmington. In a business way, he has not been inactive, and for years has been a member of the directorate of the Clinton County National Bank at Wilmington. In his professional capacity, Doctor Wire is widely known throughout this part of Ohio. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the Ohio State Medical Society and the Clinton County Medical Society, in all of which bodies he takes an active and prominent part.

On January 2, 1879, Dr. George W. Wire was united in marriage to Mary E. Lacy, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of Elijah and Sarah Jane Lacy, the former of whom was also a native of this county, who lived to the age of seventy-two. Mrs. Wire died on February 25, 1914, and was widely mourned, for her life had been full of good works, she having in all things been a competent helpmeet to her husband, the position of a physician's wife often carrying trying duties, to all of which she ever proved equal.

To Dr. George W. and Mary E. (Lacy) Wire but one child was born, a son, George L., who was born on March 29, 1881, who now is engaged in the practice of law in Chicago. George L. Wire was graduated from Harvard University in 1904, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1907 was graduated from the Harvard Law School, after which he entered practice in Chicago and has been very successful. He married Alma L. Biklen, of Burlington, Iowa, a graduate of Wellesley College, to which union one child has been born, a daughter, Louise.

Doctor Wire was married, secondly, June 23, 1915, to Jennie Ethel Brown, a native of Union township and a graduate of Wilmington College, a daughter of Jasper and Dora Brown, an old family of this county, a teacher in the Wilmington schools.

HENRY VENNEMAN.

Henry Venneman, who is one of the most prosperous farmers of Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio, is one of the most widely-read and best-informed men of this township. Although he never attended an American school, he speaks the English language without accent. He is today one of the wealthiest men of his community.

Henry Venneman was born on January 12, 1839, in Hanover, Germany, the son of John Henry and Mary (Wellinghoof) Venneman, the former of whom died about twelve years ago. They were farmers by occupation and members of the Catholic church. They spent their entire lives in their native land. They were the parents of four children, Herman, Ferdinand, Henry and Frank. Of these children, Herman came to America, served in the Civil War about three years and died in Cincinnati. Ferdinand died in Germany. Frank also spent his life in Germany and was able to escape military service.

The subject of this sketch, received a good education in the schools of his native land, which he attended until fifteen years old. At the age of fifteen, Henry Venneman landed in Baltimore, having come to America on a sailing vessel, which took forty-nine days to make the trip. After stopping a brief time in Baltimore, he went on to Cincinnati to visit a cousin, with whom he remained for six months. Later he moved to Fayette county, Ohio.

Henry Venneman has been twice married, first to Jane Clifton, and after her death, he was married, secondly, to Sophia Pavey, who was born on July 17, 1842, the daughter of William and Anna (Johnson) Pavey. The latter was the first wife of William Pavey.

William Pavey was a native of Highland county, Ohio, and a farmer in that county, where he owned about eight hundred acres of land. By his first wife he had ten children, namely: Isaac; William; Mary, deceased; George; John, deceased; Henry, who served in the Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War; Sophia; Elizabeth; James, who was a soldier in the Second Ohio Regiment, Heavy Artillery; and Eliza. The second wife of William Pavey, who was Jerdena Kirby, bore him four children, Charles, Thomas, Kitora and Gilbert. Isaac Pavey, who was Mrs. Venneman's paternal grandfather, was a farmer and minister in the Methodist Episcopal church.

After his marriage, Henry Venneman moved to Clinton county, Ohio, and lived on a farm in Richland township. He owned in all three hundred and eighty-eight acres of land, situated in Highland and Clinton counties. In 1906 Mr. and Mrs. Venneman moved to Sabina, where they have since lived retired. Mr. Venneman was a soldier in the Civil War, having served in Company B, Second Ohio Regiment, Heavy Artillery, for a period of two years, one and one-half months. He and his good wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Venneman owns stock in the First National Bank, in the Geiger & Jones Company, which operates the rolling-mill at Kenton, Ohio, and also heavy holdings in school and municipal bonds, issued prior to 1913.

Mr. Venneman is a man of democratic tastes and has long been popular in the community where he has lived and where he is so well known. Possessed of honorable and humane impulses, his large success in life is due primarily, to his native, German thrift.

JOHN S. HUMMEL.

John S. Hummel, who is a well-known publisher and now postmaster of Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, was born on March 28, 1854, at Strasburg, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He is the son of Joshua and Harriett (Hess) Hummel, both natives of Pennsylvania.

Joshua Hummel worked on a railroad until 1860, when he came to Athens county, Ohio, and took up farming. He remained here for six years, and then moved to Lancaster, Ohio, where he died in 1867. He and his wife were the parents of six children, Ashmore P., of Toledo, Ohio; Anna T., deceased; Salome Louise, deceased; John S., the subject of this sketch; Charles F., deceased, and Carrie V., of Lancaster, Ohio.

John S. Hummel received his education in the common and parochial schools of Lancaster, Ohio, and, when fourteen years of age, went into the office of the Lancaster Gazette to learn the trade of a printer. He completed his apprenticeship in four years, and then went to Middletown, Ohio, where he worked for one and one-half years for the Brock Brothers, who had the only printing office in the town. Obtaining a position on the Crescent, of Frankfort, Indiana, he remained here for seven months, going from there to Columbus, Ohio, where he was employed as a compositor on the State Journal. In the spring of 1879 he went to Delaware, Ohio, where he took up his duties as foreman in the composing room on the Herald, of which paper he later became business manager and associate editor. Here he remained for five years, when he went to Urbana, Ohio, being associated with James K. Newcomer in the publication of the Champaign County Democrat, a prominent weekly. Three years were spent at this work, when he went to Columbus and remained one winter, and spent the following summer in Hillsboro. In October, 1883, he came to Wilmington and purchased the Democrat from James K. Newcomer, the same man with whom he had been associated at Urbana. At the time of the purchase of the newspaper plant it was necessary for him to buy on credit, but by hard work he soon had the debt paid off, and placed the business on a substantial basis.

On September 15, 1886, Mr. Hummel was married to Alice Brockman, a native of Clinton county, and to them have been born two children, Anna M., who assists her father in the newspaper office and Karl B., who is a graduate of Wilmington College.

Politically, Mr. Hummel is a Democrat, and on July 4, 1914, was appointed by President Wilson to the position of postmaster of Wilmington, the first public office he has ever held. Mr. and Mrs. Hummel are members of the Presbyterian church and have brought up their children in that faith.

JOHN M. CHAMPLIN.

Among the many enterprising commercial establishments at Wilmington, the county seat of Clinton county, few have a wider or better sustained reputation for fair-dealing and up-to-date business methods than the popular clothing store of Champlin & Mitchell. Though this firm has been in business, as a firm, but four years, it has established itself firmly in the commercial life of the county seat and the members of the firm are known far and wide throughout this section of the state as gentlemen of push and energy, eminently entitled to the favor they have received at the hands of a discriminating and critical public.

John M. Champlin was born on a farm near the pleasant village of Westboro, Jefferson township, Clinton county, Ohio, on November 7, 1868, son of Joshua and Lucy (Michaels) Champlin, the former of whom was born in Rhode Island in 1829 and died at his home in this county in 1899, and the latter of whom was born in Washington township, this county, in 1829, and died in 1911.

Joshua Champlin was a son of Capt. Joshua and Elizabeth (Warren) Champlin, both natives of Rhode Island, of old colonial stock, who emigrated to Ohio about the year 1835, locating on a farm near the village of Cuba, in this county, where both spent the remainder of their lives, living to ripe old ages and attaining positions of prominence and influence in that community. Capt. Joshua Champlin for years previous to his settlement in this county had been engaged as a captain on ocean-going steamers and had done valiant service during the Mexican War. The younger Joshua Champlin was a small boy when his parents emigrated to this county and he was reared amid conditions familiar to pioneer days. He became a farmer, remaining on the home farm until 1855, in which year he moved to the state of Missouri, locating on a farm in that state. He was living there when the Civil War broke out and he enlisted in a Missouri regiment, serving for three years as a valiant soldier in the Union army. At the close of the war he returned to this county and opened a general store in the village of Cuba, which he continued for a short time. He then retired from the store, buying a farm near by, on which he passed the remainder of his life. He and his wife were the parents of three children, of whom John M., the subject of this sketch, is the youngest. John M. Champlin has two sisters, Anna and Mary, both of whom also reside in Wilmington.

John M. Champlin, following the completion of the course in the public schools at Cuba, this county, began his mercantile career as a clerk in the general store of G. R. Kearans, in that village, a position which he retained for three years, at the end of which time he went to Wilmington to clerk in the dry-goods store of F. S. Broomhall. Following a short service in that store he was engaged by Rannells Brothers, and for five years served as a clerk in their clothing store, during which time he gained a thorough acquaintance with the clothing business, as well as a comprehensive familiarity with the needs of the patrons of clothing stores in this section of the state, an experience which later was to prove valuable when he entered the clothing business for himself.

He terminated his connection with the store of Rannells Brothers to enter the employ of the Courticelli Silk Company as traveling salesman and for thirteen years "covered" Ohio territory in the interests of that firm, becoming, in this period, one of the best-known and most popular traveling men in the state of Ohio. Tiring of "the road," Mr. Champlin, in 1911, formed a partenrship with Harley E. Mitchell, one of the best-known clothing men in Wilmington, and bought the Rannells clothing store; Mr. Champlin thus entering as proprietor the establishment in which many years before he had served in the capacity of a clerk. The firm was organized under the title of Champlin & Mitchell, and from the very start has been a great success. The store is well stocked and admirably equipped to supply all the clothing needs of the community which it serves. In addition to a full and complete line of general clothing and men's furnishings, a completely-stocked shoe department is operated by the firm, the store being one of the largest establishments of its kind in this part of the state.

On February 10, 1899, John M. Champlin was united in marriage to Estella Braughart, who was born in Covington, Kentucky, daughter of Jack and Amanda (Taylor) Braughart, and to this union three children have been born, Robert, born in 1901; Earl, 1903, and Harold, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Champlin are earnest members of the Christian church, in the various beneficences of which they take an active interest, and in the faith of which their children are being reared. Mr. Champlin is a member of the Masonic order and a member of the Elks lodge at Wilmington and is a prominent factor in the affairs of both of those popular fraternal organizations. Enterprising and energetic in business, popular socially, public-spirited and up-to-date, few men in this part of the state have a wider acquaintance than John M. Champlin or are held in higher esteem. His thorough acquaintance with business methods and his manner of acquitting himself in all his relations with his fellow men have given Mr. Champlin a high place in business and commercial circles hereabout and he possesses the full confidence of all with whom he is brought into contact in a business way; the same measure of confidence being extended to his partner, Mr. Mitchell, giving this firm a high standing in and about the city of Wilmington.

GERARD B. NOFTSGER.

Gerard B. Noftsger is a successful farmer of Washington township, who was born in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, September 13, 1858, the son of Naaman and Jane (Gerard) Noftsger, both of whom were born near Hamilton, Ohio.

Mr. Noftsger's paternal grandparents were John and Mary Noftsger, natives of the Keystone state, and of German descent. Early in the history of Hamilton, Ohio, they located near there, when the city was a mere straggling village. John Noftsger was a farmer and spent all his life on his farm near Hamilton, but died at the home of his son, Naaman, in Washington township, this county, where his wife also passed away. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Noftsger were also early settlers in Hamilton county, where they were farmers.

Naaman Noftsger received his education in the schools of Hamilton county, Ohio, and later became a farmer in the Mill Creek bottoms. In 1855 he removed to Clinton county and bought the farm where Gerard B. was born. He bought eighty acres of land and cleared seventy acres of this and made many improvements upon the farm. Here he and his wife lived the remainder of their lives, and reared a family of ten children, seven sons and three daughters, Emily, Charles, Clinton, Milton, Gerard, Anna, Butler, Wellington, William and Laura. Naaman Noftsger was identified with the Seventh-Day Adventist church, while his wife was a member of the Baptist church.

Gerard B. Noftsger received an education in the common schools of Clinton county, and became a farmer early in life. In 1881 he removed to the farm where he now resides, consisting of eighty-seven acres. Mr. Noftsger has erected excellent buildings on this farm, and has been engaged in general farming.

In 1881 Gerard B. Noftsger was married to Ida A. Whinery, the daughter of John V. Whinery. Mrs. Noftsger's family history is contained in the sketch of L. P. Whinery, recorded elsewhere in this volume. She died on May 16, 1896, leaving three children, one of whom, Mazy, the eldest, died in infancy. The other children are Edna and Ada. Mr. Noftsger was married, secondly, May 26, 1899, to Chloe Lieurance, the daughter of Amos Lieurance, whose family history is also given elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Noftsger are earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and are active workers in the affairs of this communion.

FRANK FARQUHAR.

As we perceive the shadow to have moved along the dial, but did not perceive it moving; and it appears that the grass has grown, though nobody ever saw it grow; so the advances we make in knowledge, as they consist of such insensible steps, are only perceived by the distance. The same truly may be said of the progress of communities in a civic, social and industrial way. The present generation is conscious of the countless advantages shared by all the members of the community, but rarely is thought given as to how these advantages were secured, it requiring the perspective of the historian to bring into view the insensible steps by which the present lofty height was reached. It is this perspective which volumes of this character design to lend to the view.

A rigid comparison of the days of the pioneers in this community with those of the present generation is as startling as it is illuminating, and if this historical and biographical work shall do no more than to create within the breasts of the younger generation of readers a vivid and comprehensive appreciation of the blessings they so readily accept as common gifts, the labor of its compilation shall have been well requited. There are still a few of the pioneers remaining in this section, who have seen these commonly-accepted blessings slowly bud and blossom and fructify, and it is of one of these that this brief biography shall treat, the venerable Frank Farquhar, of Wilmington, one of the best-known and most highly-regarded citizens of Clinton county, a man to whom this whole community owes much for the active part he has taken in the development of the same. Though now past eighty years of age, Mr. Farquhar continues actively in charge of the industry he has built up and takes as firm an interest in current affairs as does many a man of half his years. Born in this county, he has been a witness of the marvelous development of the community along all lines and possesses a fund of reminiscence regarding the past that, in his hours of ease, makes him a most entertaining and instructive companion.

Frank Farquhar was born on a farm about five miles west of what then was the struggling village of Wilmington, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on April 10, 1835, son of Josiah and Abi (Linton) Farquhar, the former of whom was born in the state of Maryland in the year 1894, and the latter of whom was born in this county in the year 1808, and died in the year 1896.

Josiah Farquhar was one of the earliest settlers of this county, he having been but a baby when his parents emigrated to this section from Maryland and located in Union township, where they spent the rest of their lives. His father, Benjamin Farquhar, was a man of substance in his day, owning a fine farm of three hundred acres, which he brought to a high state of cultivation after clearing it and rendering it fit for agricultural purposes. Benjamin Farquhar and his wife were earnest Quakers and performed a fine service in aiding to bring about proper social and moral conditions in the community to which they give their most intelligent and conscientious efforts. Under exemplary home conditions, even though that home was but a rude pioneer dwelling, Josiah Farquhar was reared to useful manhood on the Union township farm. In connection with his work as a farmer he also operated an oil mill for the manufacture of castor oil and flax-seed oil. His wife, Abi Linton, was the daughter of Nathan and Rachel Linton, pioneers of this county, the former of whom was the first county surveyor of Clinton county, a position which he held for thirty-six years. His original plats, still preserved in the court house, are models of careful penmanship and were drawn with quill pens. Both Nathan Linton and his wife were natives of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. They emigrated to this county about the year 1805, settling on a farm about three miles from Wilmington and were among the most influential pioneers of that neighborhood. In the year 1828 they erected a fine dwelling house, which, after weathering the storms of nearly a century, was but recently destroyed by fire.

Josiah Farquhar's useful life was cut short at the age of thirty-five years, his death occurring on April 9, 1838, his son, Frank, the immediate subject of this sketch, being then but three years of age. There was another son, Benjamin, the elder of the two, who for many years was a prominent merchant in Wilmington, his grocery store at the county seat town having long been a "land-mark" there. Benjamin Farquhar was a good man and a useful, honorable citizen, whose death some years ago was widely mourned. In 1842 Josiah Farquhar's widow married, secondly, Dr. Joseph K. Sparks, a substantial resident of that neighborhood, and to this union two sons were born, Stephen L., who was a Union soldier during the Civil War, now deceased, and Josiah W., a prominent hardware merchant and banker, of Wilmington, this county. In 1848 Doctor Sparks erected a new house on the old Farquhar farm on the Waynesville road. Though he was an active member of the Baptist church and his wife a very devout Quaker, the two never permitted their religious differences to create a barrier in their home life, they for many years participating in the services of their respective communions without thought of personal dissension.

Frank Farquhar was reared on the old home farm in Union township, receiving his elementary education in the district school near his home, supplementing the same by a course of one year at Dennison College. He cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. In 1856 and 1857, Mr. Farquhar traveled extensively through the west, with a view to locating in one of the territories that then gave promise of the wonderful development realized within the next few decades, and went so far as to pre-empt a claim for a tract of farm land in Kansas, and while there voted to make Kansas a free state. Giving up thought of locating permanently in the west, however, he returned to this county and in 1858 was united in marriage to Hanna A. McMillan, who was born in this county, daughter of Milton and Elizabeth (Kirk) McMillan, pioneer farmers of Chester township, Clinton county, to which union three children were born, Milton J., one of Wilmington's prominent business men, a director of the Farquhar Furnace Company; Harriet, who married E. M. Nordyke and lives in California, and Henry, also identified with the furnace company. Mr. and Mrs. Farquhar also had an adopted daughter, Nellie R. The mother of these children died in 1913 and was widely mourned throughout the county, for she was a noble woman, her life ever having been devoted to all good works.

Frank Farquhar, early in life, gained the reputation among his friends of being a "natural mechanic." Following his natural bent he left the farm in 1866 and entered the manufacturing business. He resided in Richmond, Indiana, engaged in the manufacture of feed cookers and evaporators of his own design. In 1872 he met with a serious accident that necessitated the amputation of one of his limbs. Feeling this to be a handicap, he sold his interests in Richmond and returned to Ohio and engaged in the hardware and roofing business at Wilmington, in partnership with his half-brother, J. W. Sparks. Later, Mr. Farquhar and his sons re-entered the manufacturing business and organized a company for the manufacture of the Farquhar house-heating furnaces. He served a number of years as president of the Farquhar Heating Company, of Chicago; but in 1897 retired, and returning to his home in Wilmington, engaged in the coal business. In his activities this octogenarian has not yet experienced any "declining years," but each year has seen an appreciable increase in his business and acquaintance, and improvement in his business plant. His unique equipment for handling coal economically has attracted the attention of coal men, has been illustrated in the trade journals, and draws visitors from many parts of the country.

Mr. Farquhar is one of those energetic men who believe that the greatest happiness and contentment is found in the greatest activity, it being his firm conviction that a man will far more easily "rust out" than wear out.

Mr. Farquhar is a devoted member of the Friends church, to which he came by birthright, and from the days of his early manhood has been one of the most earnest workers in that sturdy communion. No man in Wilmington is actuated by a broader public spirit than he and it is undoubted that the town, and this entire community, owes him much. He ever has been interested in educational affairs and is gratefully recalled as one of that faithful band of earnest subscribers who helped support Wilmington College during the first five precarious years of its existence. Mr. Farquhar's interest in the development of the resources of Clinton county has been unflagging throughout all the years of his life and no man in the county possesses in a higher degree the confidence and respect of the people than he, a respect marked by the utmost esteem.

B. J. DARBYSHIRE.

B. J. Darbyshire, a venerable citizen of Sabina, Ohio, who is now almost ninety-two years old, was born on November 7, 1823, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, the son of John and Elizabeth (Jennings) Darbyshire, the latter of whom was the daughter of Benjamin Jennings, of the Keystone state.

Mr. Darbyshire's paternal grandparents were Thomas and Anna (Covert) Darbyshire, of Pennsylvania, who had seven children, John, Thomas, Samuel, Morris, Jessie, Martha and Ann. Thomas Darbyshire was a furniture maker by occupation, who came to Guernsey county, Ohio, and from there immigrated to Wilmington, where he spent the remainder of his life.

John A. Darbyshire, who was educated in the common schools of his native county, owned land near Wilmington, consisting of eighty-three acres, where the ice plant is now situated. He married Elizabeth Jennings, the daughter of Benjamin Jennings, of Pennsylvania. John Darbyshire was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, B. J., Anna, who died at the age of twelve years, and a twin sister who died in infancy; Thomas, Samuel, John and James. Thomas, Samuel and John are deceased. After the death of his wife, John Darbyshire was married to Elizabeth Hoblet, and to them were born six children, Joshua, Morris, Zenephen, Maggie, Mary Ann and Letitia. Maggie and Mary Ann are deceased.

B. J. Darbyshire was reared on a farm and lived at home with his parents until of age. He was married on April 6, 1851, to Maria Moore, who was the daughter of John P. and Margaret (Large) Moore, farmers of Fayette county, Ohio, where they owned one hundred and twenty acres of land. Mrs. Maria Darbyshire died on August 17, 1905.

For many years Mr. Darbyshire was a brick contractor, but this was in the days when brick was made by hand. He built, with Robert McMillan, the college at Wilmington and also the school house at the same place. Until nine years ago, he lived on the farm, but at that time moved to Sabina, having deeded his land, comprising two hundred and seventy-six acres, to his children. In 1880 and 1881 he was engaged in the hardware business at Sabina. Near the close of the Civil War, Mr. Darbyshire was in the Union service and was a soldier for four months.

Mr. and Mrs. Darbyshire were the parents of seven children, Maggie, who died at the age of twenty-three; James died when five months old, A. J., Frank, Oliver M.,

Lydia and Oma. Mr. Darbyshire served as township clerk of Richland township for five years. He was also trustee of the township. For many years he was a school director in the township also. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, No. 501, and of Encampment, No. 183. He is a charter member of Sabina lodge of Encampment.

CHARLES A. WARD.

In compiling a history of the movements of the present generation in Clinton county, the future historian will, perforce, be compelled to take into account the enormous influence for good exerted by that earnest band of conscientious educators which today is doing such a noble work in this community. Among these enthusiastic and zealous educators few have brought a better equipment to their labors than has Prof. Charles A. Ward, principal of the Smith Place school at Wilmington, the county seat, and the biographer finds pleasure in here setting out the salient points in the brief though highly useful career of this cultivated gentleman. Though young in years, Professor Ward has had a wide experience as an educator and is accounted one of the leading factors in the excellent educational system of this county, the prediction being freely made that he is destined to a much wider field of usefulness than that which he now so creditably occupies.

Charles A. Ward was born on a farm near the pleasant village of New Antioch, Clinton county, Ohio, on January 20, 1883, son of J. Wesley and Emma (Pond) Ward, the former of whom was born at Madisonville, Hamilton county, this state, on August 1, 1858, and the latter of whom was born in Greene township, this county, on October 6, 1860; both of whom are still living, being very comfortably situated in a delightful farm home near New Antioch, where they have lived since their marriage.

J. Wesley Ward is the son of William and Mehala (Noftzger) Ward, natives of Hamilton county, this state, both having been born near the town of Madisonville. William Ward, who recently died at New Antioch, at the ripe old age of eighty-six, was a son of George Ward, who was born in New Jersey and upon reaching manhood emigrated to this state, locating in Hamilton county, where he married, entered a farm from the government and reared his family in the Baptist faith; the various members of this family becoming largely influential in the affairs of that community.

At the age of twelve years, J. Wesley Ward came to this county with his parents and grew to manhood on the Greene township farm, he still owning one of the farms which his father bought upon coming to Clinton county.

On September 24, 1879, J. Wesley Ward was united in marriage to Emma Pond, who was born in this county, daughter of John and Mary (Frost) Pond, both of whom are still living, making their home in comfortable retirement at Columbus, Ohio. John Pond is a native of this county, being a son of William and Polly Pond, North Carolinians, who emigrated to Ohio in the early days of the settlement of this section of the state and located on a farm in Green township, this county, where they spent the rest of their lives, being regarded in their day as among the most substantial pioneers of that section. Mr. and Mrs. Ward are among the best-known and most influential people of the New Antioch neighborhood, and are held in the highest regard by all who know them. They are members of the Disciples church at New Antioch and for years have been active in all the good works of that fine community. Mr. Ward is an ardent Republican and has given intelligent and thoughtful attention to the political affairs of Clinton county, ever displaying his interest in all measures designed to promote the common good; his sound judgment and close acquaintance with local affairs in that neighborhood giving value to his counsels in the deliberations of the party managers.

To J. Wesley and Emma (Pond) Ward three children were born, of whom Charles A., the immediate subject of this sketch, is the eldest, the others being Thomas Frank Ward, general manager of a large manufacturing concern at Columbus, Ohio, and May Elizabeth, who married Edward Brining, of Dayton, this state.

Charles A. Ward was reared on the home farm in Green township, receiving his elementary education in the public schools at New Antioch, following which he took a course of instruction in Wilmington College, later supplementing this by a course in the normal school at Oxford, Ohio. In the year 1903 he entered upon his career as a teacher, for three years his activities in the educational field being confined to the district schools of this county. At the end of that time, his excellent record as a teacher in the district schools having attracted the attention of the school authorities, he was made principal of the New Antioch schools, a position which he filled with the utmost satisfaction to the patrons of the schools in that village for a period of six years. The excellence of his methods as a teacher having been proved so convincingly during this period of service, Professor Ward, in 1912, was elevated to the position of principal of the Smith Place school at Wilmington, a post which he still retains and in the discharge of the duties of which he has further demonstrated his admirable qualities as an instructor of the youth.

On July 19, 1911, Charles A. Ward was united in marriage to Anna Reynolds, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of William and Jennie (Brown) Reynolds, prominent residents of that community, both of whom still are living on their farm in Union township. To this union one child has been born, a daughter, Marjorie, born on March 24, 1913.

Professor and Mrs. Ward are members of the Disciples church, to the affairs of which they give their close and unselfish attention, taking a warm interest in all good movements in the community of which they are so valuable a part. Professor Ward is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is an active worker therein. His work as an educator has demonstrated his eminent fitness for the noble work to which he has devoted his life, and he has received many expressions of the entire confidence reposed in him by the city school authorities, as well as of the high esteem in which he is held by the grateful patrons of the school over which he presides so successfully.

MARTIN J. SPINKS.

Occupying a position of trust and of high responsibility in the industrial affairs of the community, with the affairs of which, both past and present, this history treats, Martin J. Spinks, mechanical engineer for the Champion Bridge Company, of Wilmington, this county, enjoys the unbounded confidence of the company in whose interests his talents are actively engaged and the esteem of all with whom he is brought in contact. A fine native energy and the posession of a valuable sense of initiative, together with an inherent talent for the work which he is so ably performing, have brought Mr. Spinks to his present position, and it is but proper that a record should here be preserved of the steps by which he has attained to that position, a position requiring a special ability of a high order.

Martin J. Williams was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, and when quite young was bereft by death of both of his parents. At the age of nine years he was formally adopted by William and Kate Spinks, prominent residents of the neighborhood of the pleasant village of Cuba, this county, the order of adoption legally conferring upon him the name of Spinks, by which he, of course, ever since has been known. He was the only child of his parents.

Growing up on the farm of his foster parents near Cuba, Martin J. Spinks was given an excellent home, receiving from Mr. and Mrs. Spinks all the devotion and consideration they could have paid to a son of their own. They gave him a good education, keeping him in the public schools until he had completed the course there prescribed, and after that sent him to Wilmington College for a further course. Upon completing his college work, Mr. Spinks entered the ranks of Clinton county's excellent corps of school teachers, and for three years was very successfully engaged in teaching in the district schools of the county. At the end of that time he decided to improve his native talent for mechanical drawing, having long before discovered that this form of endeavor possessed for him an unusual attraction, and thoroughly grounded himself in the art of draftsmanship, after which, in 1896, he entered the service of the Champion Bridge Company, at Wilmington, as a draftsman, and has ever since been employed in the offices of that extensive concern. Displaying his aptitude for this form of work, Mr. Spinks rose rapidly in the ranks of that company's employes, and presently was promoted to the post of mechanical engineer and designer, a position which he still holds, the substantial and scientific character of his work being demonstrated on bridge construction throughout this entire section of the country.

On October 15, 1905, Martin J. Spinks was united in marriage to Ethel B. Williams, who was born at Lebanon, Ohio, daughter of Paul and Mary (Thompson) Williams, who now are living at Wilmington, this county, Mr. Williams, a well-known carpenter, being the constable of the township.

Mr. and Mrs. Spinks are members of the Methodist church and take a warm interest in the good works of their home community and are very popular in their wide circle of acquaintances. Mr. Spinks is a York rite Mason, belonging to the commandery at Wilmington, is past high priest of the chapter and past commander of the commandery. He also is a member of the Wilmington lodge of the Knights of Pythias, and in both of these popular orders takes a warm interest, being regarded with high favor by his lodge associates.

Martin J. Spinks is doing well those things his hands have found to do. Having cultivated his natural talent, he has turned it to useful advantage and very properly may be regarded as a prominent factor in the industrial development of this section of the state.

ULYSSES GRANT MURRELL, M. D.

Among the prominent physicians of Wilmington, Ohio, who have endeared themselves to the hearts of the people of this city, and who are recognized as pre-eminent in their profession, is Ulysses Grant Murrell, M. D., who was born near London, Madison county, Ohio, June 19, 1868, the son of John and Mary (Coberley) Murrell, the former of whom was born in Virginia in 1841 and who died in 1908, and the latter of whom was born in Madison county, Ohio, in 1847 and who died in 1912.

Doctor Murrell's paternal grandparents were Thomas and Sarah Murrell, who were early settlers in Clinton county, Ohio, and who owned and lived on a farm in Liberty township, where they died. They belonged to the Methodist Protestant church. His maternal grandparents were Thomas and Louisa Coberley, who were natives of Pennsylvania, and of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock. They were early settlers in Madison county, Ohio, and there lived on a farm at the edge of London.

The late John Murrell was a mere lad when the family came to Clinton county, Ohio. He grew up on the farm, and when nineteen years of age enlisted in the Union army as a soldier in Company D, Seventy-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He gave four years of his life to the service of his country, and during the war, while he was living in the barracks at Columbus, met the young woman, Mary Coberley, who afterwards became his wife. At the close of the war he returned to Columbus and was married, and thereafter lived in Madison county for four years, when he removed to Wilson township, Clinton county, and there lived until his death. When he had reached middle life he gave up active farming to devote his time to contract building in Wilson township and vicinity. He was a Republican in politics and a man of more than average prominence, having served on the board of education for thirteen years. He was also a very active worker in the Methodist Protestant church. John and Mary (Coberley) Murrell had four children, of whom Dr. Ulysses G. was the first born; Allen lives in Wilson township, near Bloomington, and is a cement contractor; William lives on a farm in Union township, near Beech Grove; Ora married James Klein, deceased, and she now lives in Springfield, Ohio.

Ulysses Grant Murrell, M. D., attended the public schools of Bloomington, Ohio, and after finishing his common school education, worked in a dry goods store owned by F. S. Broomhall, of Wilmington, for five years. After a time he entered Miami Medical College at Cincinnati, and was graduated with the class of 1896. Immediately after his graduation he located at New Burlington, in Chester township, Clinton county, and practiced medicine there for nine years, at the end of which time, or in 1905, he removed to Wilmington. He has been engaged in the practice of his profession here since that time and has built up a large and lucrative practice, and possesses the confidence of the people of this city. He belongs to the Clinton County Medical Society, to the Ohio State Medical Association and to the American Medical Association.

On July 11, 1894, two years before his graduation from the medical college, Doctor Murrell was married to Ora Hinshaw, who was born at Westboro, Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Garner and Maria Hinshaw, both of whom are deceased. The father was a dry goods merchant, first in Westboro, Ohio, and later in Wilmington. Doctor and Mrs. Murrell have had two children, Cordelia, born in December, 1898, and Mabel, born in February, 1901.

The Murrell family all belong to the Friends church. Doctor Murrell is a member of the Knights Templar, and also belongs to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

PHILIP EDWIN SNYDER.

Philip Edwin Snyder, the proprietor of one of the large hardware stores in southern Ohio, has made a worthy success in life because he was never willing to quit, and because, when the great test of his life came, he was unwilling to yield to misfortune or give up the battle he had previously begun. Stripped of practically all his property in 1895, when the fire swept over Blanchester, he undertook to build up the business he had entered as a partner with a very small investment, and the years which he had spent working for others, and the reputation he had established for honor and integrity gave him unlimited credit when it was necessary to start over again. He could have had fifty thousand dollars' credit had he asked it. There is certainly a lesson in this experience for all young men, as it shows conclusively the value of upright dealing.

Philip Edwin Snyder, who began the hardware business with D. H. Moon on a salary of fifty dollars a year, and who worked the second year for eighty dollars, the third for two hundred and forty dollars, was born on October 13, 1869, in Butlerville, Ohio, the son of Philip Augusta and Barbara Ellen (Fox) Snyder, the former a native of Rochester, Ohio, and the latter a native of Germany. Mr. Snyder's paternal grandparents were natives of Ohio, and his maternal grandparents were natives of Germany. His mother came to America with friends, who first located in Indiana. His father, who was educated in the schools of Ohio, was a harness maker, and operated a large harness shop at Butlerville. During the last twenty-five years of his life he became active in real estate and worked as an abstracter until his death, in 1903. His wife died in 1907. He was active in religious affairs and in temperance work, the first prayer meeting held in Blanchester under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church having occurred in his home. He was also active in the organization of the Methodist Episcopal church at Blanchester, and for many years served as steward and director in that denomination. He had enlisted for service in the Union army during the Civil War, but the regiment was sent back in four days. Philip A. Snyder and wife were the parents of the following children: Henry, Gilbert, Mary, Sarah Jane, Lewis, Nelson, Warren, Giffon, Anna and Philip Edwin.

Philip Edwin Snyder received his education in the schools of Blanchester. In 1887 he entered the drug and hardware business, working with D. H. Moon. When he entered the business he had invested twenty-five dollars. In a short time afterward a hardware business was formed. In 1895 the big fire swept over Blanchester, burned the store and stock, and having lost the entire stock and the results of his hard labor in this fire. Philip E. Snyder revived the business with his savings of three hundred dollars. He opened a store on the street opposite his present location in a small shed which he erected. One year later he removed to the First National Bank building, and since to his present location. He now utilizes over thirteen thousand square feet for his stock of hardware, paints, harness, buggies, china, ranges and five-and-ten-cent department. He now has one of the largest hardware stores in southern Ohio. When he undertook to revive the business which had been destroyed by the fire, he found to his great delight that his credit was unlimited, because he had always made it a point to be square in his dealings.

Philip E. Snyder was married in June, 1898, to Lucy Cooper, of Salisbury, Maryland, and to this marriage have been born three children, Clarence, Harry and Isabel. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are earnest and faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mr. Snyder has taken a prominent part in the active work of the church, having served as a director for many years. He is a director in the Ohio Hardware Association, and one of its original members. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

ALEX CROSSON.

Alex Crosson is one of the prosperous business men of Blanchester, Ohio, who is interested in the lumber business, in the operation of the Blanchester Flour Mill, and is president of the Merchants and Farmers Bank.

Mr. Crosson was born within one mile of Blanchester, Ohio, on Lick run, July 14, 1844, the son of George and Charlotte (Morrison) Crosson, both natives of Marion township. His paternal grandparents were early settlers in Clinton county, the paternal grandfather having emigrated from Ireland to this country. The maternal grandmother of Mr. Crosson was the first person buried in the cemetery at Blanchester. Both the paternal and maternal sides of the family were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and both families entered land in Clinton county, Ohio.

The late George H. Crosson, who received only a limited education, was a farmer by occupation and owned one hundred and thirteen acres of land near Blanchester. Eleven children were born to George and Charlotte (Morrison) Crosson, five sons and six daughters, of whom one son, Edward, served as a soldier in the Civil War in the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

Alex Crosson's early life was spent on the farm and he engaged in farming until five years after his marriage, when he moved to Blanchester, and entered the meat business. In the fall of 1870 he "salted" one hundred hogs in partnership with Squire Rice, but this business was continued only a year and one-half, when Mr. Crosson sold out and engaged in the retail lumber and implement business. In 1883 he established a flouring-mill at Blanchester, and still owns and operates this mill. He was one of fourteen men to organize the Merchants and Farmers Bank, of Blanchester, and some years later he became its president, and still holds this office. It is a private bank, and is now owned by Mr. Crosson and four others. He is also interested in the Starham Company, being president of it. He is also connected with a large mercantile store in Blanchester, and is acting as president of this business.

On January 1, 1866, Alex Crosson was married to Mary J. Leggett, and to this union two children were born, Emma and Lenna. In 1876, Mr. Crosson was married, secondly, to Mary E. Supinger, and to this union two children were born, Laura and G. R.

Mr. Crosson is prominent in the circles of Masonic lodge of Blanchester, being a member of both the blue lodge and the chapter.

ROBERT J. LACY.

The gentleman, whose life history is here given, is one of those strong, sturdy characters who have contributed largely to the welfare of the community where he lives, being a business man of more than ordinary sagacity and foresight, and as a citizen, progressive and public spirited in all that the term implies.

Robert J. Lacy is descended from sterling Virginian ancestry, his great-grandparents, John Johnson and Ruth (Clevenger) Lacy, both having been born in the Old Dominion, in which state also part of their children were born. In 1816 they drove through with wagons to Clinton county, Ohio, buying a tract of land near Cuba. He cleared and improved the place, but eventually claimants to the title of Mr. Lacy's land made their appearance and in court they defeated him and he died without much property. To him and his wife were born ten children, five sons and five daughters. Robert J. Lacy's paternal grandfather, Enos Lampkin Lacy, was born near Apple Pie ridge, Virginia, in 1806, and died on April 1, 1880, near Wilmington, Ohio. He always carried on farming and first bought one hundred acres of land near Burtonville, Ohio, which he sold one year later and bought two hundred acres of timber land in Union township. Of this he cleared up one hundred and fifty acres and sold the remainder to his brother. In 1860 he bought a tract of land just south of the city of Wilmington and lived there until his death, in 1880. He was prominent in the county and was an ardent supporter of the Democratic party, serving as county commissioner of Clinton county. He was interested in local affairs and served as a director of the First National Bank.

Enos L. Lacy married Sarah Wright, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1808 and died in 1862. She was the daughter of Abel and Sarah Wright, who were natives of Pennsylvania and became early settlers in Washington township, Clinton county, where the father followed farming. To Enos L. and Sarah Lacy were born the following children: Joshua, who is now eighty-seven years of age; Elijah, who is deceased and who was a prominent farmer in Clinton county and the father of Robert J., and Peter, who was a retired lumberman and lived in Knoxville, Illinois, where he died on July 26, 1915, at the age of eighty-four. Joshua now lives on the site of his father's old home on the south edge of the city of Wilmington. Joshua Lacy was married on March 12, 1850, to Ruth C. Bankston, who is still living. Joshua Lacy owns many acres of land and is numbered among the prosperous men of his locality.

The maternal grandparents of Robert J. Lacy were residents of and died in Indiana and there his mother, Sarah Jane Lea, was born on January 21, 1827. Her death occurred in Wilmington, Ohio, in 1894. On November 8, 1852, she was married to Elijah Lacy, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, on April 22, 1829, and who died on October 31, 1901, in Wilmington, Ohio. Elijah Lacy was reared and lived on the home farm until 1889, when he retired and moved to Wilmington. He was a stanch Democrat in his political affiliations and was a man of splendid personal character. To him and his wife were born four children: Augusta, who died in 1884, and who was the wife of Doctor Connard, of New Vienna, Ohio; A. Wulbur, a retired farmer, who lives in Wilmington; Mary E., who died on February 25, 1914, and who was the wife of Dr. George W. Wire, of Wilmington; and Robert J., who is the subject of this sketch.

Robert J. Lacy was reared on his father's farm and secured a good practical education in the public schools. He remained on the home farm until about thirty years of age and then moved to Wilmington and engaged in the livery business for several years. He had taken a deep interest in public affairs and his ability and interest were recognized in 1899, when he was elected sheriff of Clinton county. This was a marked evidence of his popularity, for, although a Democrat, he was elected in a county which has for many years been known as "rock-ribbed" Republican, he being the first Democrat to hold a county office for over thirty years. Mr. Lacy's residence is at 228 North South street. Since the expiration of his efficient term, he has been giving his attention to his private business affairs and the management of his farms. Mr. Lacy was one of the founders and has served as president since its organization of the Clinton County Mutual Insurance Company. A man of good business judgment and forceful personality, he has made his presence felt in local business circles and is numbered among the good business men of his community.

On May 13, 1890, Robert J. Lacy was married to Louie A. Evans, who was born in Greene county, Ohio, near Spring Valley, the daughter of Isaac and Matilda Catherine (Stump) Evans. Isaac Evans now lives retired in Xenia, Ohio, and his wife died in 1897, at the age of sixty-two years. Matilda Evans was the daughter of Jonas and Prudence (Smalley) Stump, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Clinton county, Ohio. Mrs. Stump's parents had come to this state from Pennsylvania, her father being one of the first settlers of Clinton county. Isaac Evans' parents were Robert and Sarah (Copic) Evans, both natives of Carolina, who came to Greene county, Ohio, in the early days. Here Mr. Evans had a mill on the Miami river. They were Quakers in religious belief.

CAREY A. HOLLADAY.

Men who begin the duties of life under serious handicap and without the patient and affectionate guidance of parents of their own flesh and blood are entitled to the profound respect of the community for whatever they accomplish in life. Carey A. Holladay, a prominent undertaker of Wilmington, Ohio, was adopted by a family without children when he was one and one-half years old, and, taking their name at that age, never knew any other than his foster-parents', who were Louis and Nancy (Cartwright) Holladay, both natives of Highland county, Ohio, and both now deceased. While his early life was protected, in so far as foster-parents are capable of guarding and protecting the interests of a child, yet from the time he was ten years old Carey A. Holladay was compelled to shift for himself. That he succeeded unaided in his personal efforts is a great tribute to his personal energy and worth.

Carey A. Holladay was born at Sabina, Clinton county, Ohio, September 7, 1865. His foster-father died on June 25, 1899, and his foster-mother died on July 4, 1910. The former was a farmer near Sabina and an ardent Republican politically, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He and his wife had no children of their own.

Educated in the public schools of Sabina, Ohio, in 1875, at the age of ten years, Carey A. Holladay came to Wilmington, and for the next eight years worked at whatever he could find to do. In 1883 he began working for C. A. Marble, a well-known undertaker, and learned the business from him. Subsequently, he attended a professional school at Columbus, Ohio, and on January 1, 1893, bought out Mr. Marble, and after that, until April 4, 1903, he was in partnership with Frank McDonald in the undertaking business. On the latter date he purchased the interest of Mr. McDonald and since that time has carried on the business alone. In 1897 Mr. Holladay and Mr. McDonald purchased the Thomas Carruthers corner in Wilmington and he still lives in that home.

In October, 1888, Mr. Holladay was married to Margaret Smith, a native of Clinton county, Ohio, and the daughter of Austin and Martha Smith, both of whom are now deceased. He was a farmer in Union township. Mrs. Holladay died on February 15, 1905, leaving only her husband in her immediate family.

Carey A. Holladay is a member of the Presbyterian church and a Republican in politics. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Mr. Holladay is a man of generous and humane impulses, charitable to a fault, honored and respected by his fellow townsmen, and worthy of their highest commendation and praise. Needless to say that he is the recipient of their respect and esteem, freely conferred upon him in bountiful measure.

WILLIAM H. CARNAHAN.

The earliest Carnahans known in America were two brothers, who came from Ireland, one of whom took a claim where Washington, D. C., now stands. The other located in Pennsylvania. It is from the brother who located on the site of the capital that William H. Carnahan is descended. Later he removed from Washington, D. C., to North Carolina, and became the father of Aaron Carnahan, the great-grandfather of William H. James, the brother who located in Pennsylvania, was either a captain or lieutenant in the War of 1812, and after the close of that war was drowned in the Susquehanna river.

William H. Carnahan, a well-known merchant of Blanchester, Ohio, and dealer in farm implements, was born near Cuba, Clinton county, January 17, 1849, the son of David and Deborah (Thornhill) Carnahan, the former a native of Somerset, Kentucky, and the latter a native of Tennessee.

David Carnahan carried a chain on the survey of the road from Goshen, Indiana, to Martinsville, Ohio. He was born in Kentucky in 1812, the son of Aaron and Alvira (Mitchell) Carnahan, who, in 1831, settled in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, where they acquired a farm and where they subsequently died. David Carnahan was educated in the pioneer schools of his home neighborhood, and after his marriage rented a farm in Washington township, receiving as his share all that he raised. After his father's death he lived with his mother for a time, and then removed to Marion township, where he purchased fifty acres of land. This tract had a double log house upon it, but in 1856 he built a two-story brick house, which is still standing. Subsequently, he added forty-six acres to his original holdings, and owned at the time of his death ninety-six acres of excellent land. Mr. Carnahan's wife, the mother of William H., was Deborah Thornhill, who was born in Ohio in 1814, the daughter of Barnett and Ruth (Jones) Thornhill, natives of Kentucky, and early settlers in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, where they engaged in farming. David Carnahan and wife were the parents of ten children, of whom four sons, John, Fergus, Barnett and Aaron, were soldiers in the Civil War. John was a member of Company C, Fifty-fourth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, a regiment of Zouaves. Fergus was a soldier in the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Barnett was a member of Company C, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and Aaron also served in the same company as his brother, Barnett. The latter was on the march from Atlanta to the sea with General Sherman, and when the regiment participated in the Grand Review at Washington, only twenty members of his company were left. Barnett, however, was not in a hospital nor an ambulance during his entire service. The other members of this family were Ruth, Harvey, William H., James, Mary and Louisa. Mrs. David Carnahan died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Trovilo, at Blanchester.

William H. Carnahan received the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Marion township, and in the village schools of Blanchester. During the early years of his life he was engaged in farming, a vocation which he followed for twenty-six years on the old home place. In 1877 he entered the farm-implement business, and has been continuously in this line since. He gives all his time and attention to it and has been very successful in his operations.

In 1883 Mr. Carnahan was married to Ella Wood, of Blanchester, and to this union have been born two children, Lula and Bessie.

Mr. Carnahan is a member of the time-honored order of Free and Accepted Masons. He is a well-known citizen of Blanchester, and one who enjoys the confidence and esteem of all the people of this community, where he has lived for so many years.

ODOS L. HAWORTH.

The late Odos L. Haworth was a well-known business man of Blanchester, this county, a prominent restaurant keeper of that town. He was born at Wilmington, this county, the son of Thomas and Mary (Drake) Haworth, and died on September 22, 1912. Thomas Haworth was born on June 19, 1844, and died on March 28, 1909. He was married on March 5, 1872, to Mary Drake, who was born on September 16, 1848, the daughter of Daniel and Ann (Messereu) Drake. Thomas Haworth was engaged in farming all of his life in Clinton county and owned seventy-three acres of land in Union township. He and his wife were the parents of four children, of whom Odos L. was the eldest, the others being Ralph W., Clarence L. and Edith D., wife of Orvall Wall. Thomas Haworth was the son of Richard M. and Elizabeth (West) Haworth, the former of whom was a native of Clinton county, born at Dover in 1824, and one of the early farmers of this county. He was the son of Mahlon and Phoebe (Frazier) Haworth, the former of whom was born in Frederick county, Virginia, on October 23, 1775, later emigrating to Tennessee and still later coming to this county, locating at Dover about 1803.

Odos L. Haworth entered the Star restaurant with his father in Sabina in 1896 and was in business tt that point for about two years, moving to Blanchester in 1898, where he continued in the same business the rest of his life. The business is now conducted by his widow. At the age of nineteen years, Odos L. Haworth took up the study of telegraphy at the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley railroad station at Wilmington and after having become proficient as a telegraph operator, worked at Roseville, Washington and Wilmington, becoming express agent, with William McMillan, at the latter point and was twenty-one years old when he entered into partnership with his father in the management of the Star restaurant.

On April 22, 1894, Odos L. Haworth was married to Ada R. Staubus, who was born at Wilmington, daughter of Louis J. and Mary J. (Clark) Staubus. Louis J. Staubus was born on March 2, 1849, in Augusta county, Virginia, and was married on December 22, 1870, to Mary J. Clark, who was born in Augusta county, Virginia, on June 19, 1849, daughter of William D. and Rachel R. (Miller) Clark. Louis J. Staubus was the son of Jacob Staubus, a native of Germany, who came to America with his parents at the age of four years, locating in Augusta county, Virginia, where he became a farmer and where he and his wife, Regina Swatzel, died. They were the parents of five children, John C., William, David, Louis J. and Ellen. Louis J. Staubus was educated in the common schools of Augusta county, Virginia, and came to Ohio when a young man. After living in this state for several years he returned to Virginia, where he was married, and about 1874 he and his wife moved from Highland county, Ohio, to Reevesville. He has been a contract plasterer all of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Staubus are the parents of nine children, namely: Cora, who married George Bernard; Ada R., who married Odos L. Haworth; Leona E., who died at the age of six years; Worthy, who married Olive West; Samuel P., who died in infancy; Lottie Lee, who became the wife of James Bernard; Anna L., who is the wife of Harry Brook; Emma, who married Granville Gano, and Royal D., who married Gayle Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Staubus are members of the Methodist church, and he votes the Democratic ticket.

To Odos L. and Ada R. (Staubus) Haworth were born two children, Leah Rannells and Dorothy Virginia.

Odos L. Haworth was a well-known citizen of Clinton county, a man who was honorable and upright in all of the relations of life, who was admired by his fellow townsmen and respected for his cordial and friendly attitude toward the public at large, and his death in 1912 was mourned by many friends.

MILTON L. HUNT.

The late Milton L. Hunt, a former well-known banker and merchant of Martinsville, this county, was born on February 2, 1836, in Clinton county, a son of Jesse and Anna (Moon) Hunt, the former a native of Grayson county, Virginia, and the latter a native of Clark township, this county.

Like most boys born and reared on the farm, Milton L. Hunt attended the country school, but pursued his education further in the high school at Martinsville and in the normal school of Lebanon, Ohio. After finishing his education, he was engaged for eight years in teaching school, during the last three years of which time he was principal of the Martinsville public school. He then became a book-keeper in the Clinton County National Bank of Wilmington, a position which he occupied until October, 1867, when he engaged in the mercantile business at Martinsville, with Larkin Cleland, under the firm name of Cleland & Hunt. About six years later this firm succeeded Moore & Hunter in the Farmers Bank, and Mr. Hunt was engaged in the banking business until his health failed, in 1896. After retiring from business, in that year, he continued to live at Martinsville until his death, in 1907.

Having begun life with very limited means, Milton L. Hunt succeeded in a large measure as a teacher, merchant and banker, and, at the time of his death, few men living in Clinton county were more widely known or more highly respected than he. For sixteen years he served as township treasurer of Clark township and as treasurer of the special school district and corporation for the same length of time. For five years he was a member of the board of school examiners.

On November 1, 1866, Milton L. Hunt was married to Sarah E. Wright, daughter of James and Mary Jane (West) Wright, who was born in Clark township, this county, on September 29, 1845. Mrs. Hunt's father, James Wright, was born in South Carolina in 1804, the son of John and Sarah (Haworth) Wright, prominent members of the Society of Friends in South Carolina. About 1808 John Wright entered land on the present site of Martinsville and eventually became the owner of a large tract of land, including a farm that Mrs. Hunt now owns. John Wright erected his first house where Mrs. Milton L. Hunt now lives in Martinsville, but in that time there were no neighbors for miles around and the land was a dense wilderness. He and his wife were descendants of good old Quaker stock and were devoted members of the Friends church. James Wright's wife, who, before her marriage, was Mary Jane West, was the daughter of James West, who was the son of Owen West, one of the pioneer settlers of Clinton county. James and Mary Jane (West) Wright had only two daughters, one of whom died early in life, the other being Sarah E., who is now the widow of Milton L. Hunt.

To Milton L. and Sarah E. (Wright) Hunt were born two sons, James Wright Hunt and Reid Hunt. The former was graduated from the Harvard Law School, and immediately after his graduation began the practice of his profession at Duluth, Minnesota, and has become one of the successful lawyers in the great northwest. He married Hildegard Pearl, a native of Texas, July, 1901. Reid Hunt, the other son, who is a well-known pharmacologist, was born on April 20, 1875, at Martinsville. The following account of him is condensed from "Who is Who in America:" "He received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Johns-Hopkins University in 1891, the Ph. D. degree in 1896. Later he was a student at the University of Bonn, Germany, and received the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore in 1896. On December 12, 1908, he married Mary Lillie, daughter of Hannis Taylor, minister to Spain during the two administrations of President Cleveland. He has successfully been a tutor in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, professor of pharmacology in Johns-Hopkins, chief of the division of pharmacology in the United States public health and marine hospital service; and is the author and joint author of a large number of technical works on medicine and pharmacology." Reid Hunt is now professor of pharmacology in Harvard Medical School.

The late Milton L. Hunt was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and his widow is also a member of the Friends church.

JAMES F. FITZHUGH.

Few men in Clinton county are better known or more generally popular than the gentleman whose name forms the caption of this biographical review. On both the paternal and maternal sides of his family James F. Fitzhugh is a scion of distinguished families in this section of Ohio, pioneers who exerted a powerful influence in the formative period of this favored region. His father was a second cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the leader of the Confederacy, and he was connected with the Washington family through his grandmother, Anne Ashton, who was a daughter of Augustine Washington, brother of George Washington; while his mother was the daughter of one of the foremost pioneers of southwestern Ohio, her father having been one of the first two lawyers who began practice in Xenia, and for many years was a prominent member of the Ohio General Assembly. It is a pleasure on the part of the biographer to here set out some of the salient points in the interesting career of Mr. Fitzhugh, who stands in the forefront among the citizens of the city of Wilmington.

James F. Fitzhugh is a native of Clinton county, having been born in Wilmington, the son of Lawrence and Clarissa (Elsberry) Fitzhugh, the former of whom was born in Alexandria, Virginia, in February, 1802, and died at his home in Wilmington, this county, in February, 1855, and the latter of whom was born at Xenia, this state, in 1816, and died on August 20, 1886.

Lawrence Fitzhugh, one of the most prominent of the pioneers of Clinton county, was the son of Nicholas and Sarah (Ashton) Fitzhugh, both natives of Virginia, and representatives of two influential old colonial families. Nicholas Fitzhugh was a distinguished lawyer in the Old Dominion and for many years was justice of the United States district court for that district, his entire life having been spent in the city of Alexandria. Anne Ashton, the mother of Sarah (Ashton) Fitzhugh, was a daughter of Augustine Washington, brother of George Washington, and inherited fourteen hundred and twenty-five acres of land in the adjustment of the Washington estate. The Fitzhughs were members of the Episcopal church and occupied high positions in the old Virginia aristocracy.

Lawrence Fitzhugh inherited from his parents six thousand acres of the Spottswood survey, in the southern part of Clinton county, and in 1824 came to Ohio to enter upon his inheritance. He first located at Chillicothe, where he remained about a year, at the end of which time he came to Clinton county, locating at Wilmington, where he spent the rest of his life, becoming one of the most influential citizens in the county. For two terms Lawrence Fitzhugh served the public as county clerk, in which position his services proved of incalculable value in the proper preservation of the county's early records, and, after that period of service, he served with equal efficiency and high regard for the welfare of the public for some years as county auditor. He was an ardent Democrat and for many years was regarded as one of the leaders of that party in this section of the state.

Lawrence Fitzhugh sold off his vast holdings in the Spottswood survey in tracts, as settlers sought homes in that part of the county, and became quite wealthy. In 1831 he erected a fine brick residence on Locust street, Wilmington, which at that time was regarded as one of the handsomest residences in southwestern Ohio. The imposing front of this old mansion is still standing, forming an attractive portion of the present home of James F. Fitzhugh and his sister, Catherine L. Lawrence Fitzhugh, in addition to being one of the most extensive real estate dealers in this section of Ohio, was largely interested in other enterprises of that day, and was a most public-spirited and energetic man. He was one of the organizers of first Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville, which later became the Cincinnati & Muskingum Valley Railroad Company, and which is now operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which line passes through Wilmington, and he was a director in that company until his death.

In 1831 Lawrence Fitzhugh was united in marriage to Clarissa Elsberry, of Xenia, Ohio, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Miller) Elsberry, prominent residents of Xenia. William Elsberry, a native of North Carolina, came to Ohio upon reaching man's estate and became one of the most influential members of society in the Xenia neighborhood. He engaged in the practice of law, being one of the first attorneys of Xenia. He rapidly attained a commanding position in that community and for years served his district most usefully in the General Assembly, acquiring a reputation as a wise and prudent legislator, which is not forgotten to this day. His wife, Elizabeth Miller, was a native of the Dayton neighborhood, a member of one of the first families to settle in that section. Both she and her husband were members of the old-school Presbyterian church and prominent in all good works thereabout. William Elsberry lived to be seventy-six years of age, having performed well his part in the affairs of his community.

To Lawrence and Clarissa (Elsberry) Fitzhugh were born ten children, namely: William E., Sarah A., Henry W., Elizabeth E., one who died in infancy, Jane, Mary, James F., Clarissa and Catharine. William E. Fitzhugh was born in 1832 and died on August 10, 1889, with the rank of commodore in the United States navy. At the age of fifteen, on November 20, 1848, he entered the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, being an appointee from Ohio, and was graduated with honor. William E. Fitzhugh's naval record, briefly epitomized, is as follows: 1849-51, attached to frigate "Cumberland," Mediterranean squadron; 1852-3, sloop "Cyane," home squadron; 1854, Naval Academy; June 15, 1854, promoted to and passed midshipman; 1854-55, sloop "John Adams," Pacific squadron; 1855, promoted to master; September 17, 1855, commissioned lieutenant; 1856-7, sloop "St. Mary," Pacific squadron; 1857-60, sloop "Vincennes," coast of Africa; 1861-62, steam sloop "Lancaster," Pacific squadron; July 16, 1862, commissioned lieutenant-commander; 1862-3, steam sloop "Iroquois," North Atlantic squadron; 1864, West gulf blockading squadron; August, 1864, at engagement with Ft. Morgan; 1864-5, commanded steamer "Quiachita," Mississippi squadron; received the surrender of Rebel forces on Red river; 1866-7, commanded steamer "Paul Jones," Gulf squadron; 1868-70, commanded reviewing ship "Norfolk"; 1870-1, commanded flag-ship "Severn," North Atlantic fleet; 1873-4, equipment duty, Mare Island; 1875-6, ordnance duty, Mare Island; November 25, 1876, commissioned captain; August 25, 1887, commissioned commodore. He then went on the court of inquiry at Yokohoma, Japan, in 1887. Later he was president of a board for the sea trial of the new cruiser "Yorktown," in March, 1889. He was then commanding officer at New London, Connecticut, from April 1, 1889, until his death. William E. Fitzhugh was a man of broad culture, and his naval service having carried him into all parts of the world, he thus gained a truly cosmopolitan refinement.

Sarah A. Fitzhugh died on May 8, 1860, at the age of twenty-six years. Henry W.

Fitzhugh died at the age of thirty. Elizabeth Fitzhugh married David Sanders, later moving to Cincinnati, where she died. Jane Fitzhugh died at the tender age of thirteen years. Mary Fitzhugh married J. H. McMillan, both she and her husband now being deceased. Clarissa Fitzhugh died in 1914 and Catharine L. Fitzhugh remains in the old home, presiding with charming dignity in the household maintained by herself and her brother, now the sole survivors of this interesting family.

James F. Fitzhugh received his elementary education in the public schools of Wilmington, supplementing the same by a course in Delaware University. Upon completing this course he entered the law office of Judge Harlan, at Wilmington, and, under the careful tutelage of this fine old preceptor, gained a thorough and comprehensive acquaintance with legal procedure. Though he was admitted to the bar of the Clinton circuit court, Mr. Fitzhugh never engaged actively in the practice of law, his time being fully occupied by other interests. For six years he was engaged in the mining business in Arizona, but after the death of his widowed mother, in 1886, he returned to Wilmington to take charge of the important interests involved in the settlement of the considerable Fitzhugh estate and ever since has continued to make that city his home. He and his sister are the proprietors of four hundred and seventy-five acres of fine land, situated in two farms in Union township, besides being interested in other enterprises, to which Mr. Fitzhugh is required to give his close personal attention.

Mr. Fitzhugh has been quite a traveler and is a most companionable man, possessing a large fund of reminiscences upon which to draw in the exercise of his admirable conversational powers. He and his sister are deeply concerned in all measures designed to secure the greatest advancement of the common interests locally and are held in the highest esteem by their large circle of friends and acquaintances in this and adjoining counties. Mr. Fitzhugh is a Democrat and gives a good citizen's attention to the political affairs of the county, being deeply interested in the elevation of political standards in administrative affairs in county, state and nation. A fitting expression of the public's confidence in his sagacity and sound judgment was conveyed in his recent appointment on the important commission named to locate and build a new court house in Wilmington.

ALFRED IRVIN McVEY.

Alfred Irvin McVey, former Clinton county educator, and now cashier of the First National Bank of Blanchester, was born on September 5, 1864, in Highland county, Ohio, the son of Isaac and Martha (Job) McVey, both natives of the same county.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. McVey was Noah McVey, who was a native of Virginia and a pioneer in Highland county, Ohio. Noah McVey was a farmer most of his life, but for some time was a merchant in Leesburg, Ohio.

Mr. McVey's maternal grandparents were natives of Virginia, and also early settlers in Highland county, Ohio, where they lived and died as farmers.

Isaac McVey was born at Leesburg, Highland county, Ohio, and died in the same county where he had followed the occupation of a farmer practically all of his life. He never aspired to political preferment, and his only military service was as a guard at the Monroe bridge when Morgan's army of invasion was expected in Ohio. At one time he was the owner of one hundred and seventy acres of land, and engaged in general farming. Isaac and Martha (Job) McVey were the parents of fourteen children, four of whom are deceased. The names of these children, in the order of their birth, are as follow: Mabel, Clara, Leslie, Turner (deceased), Alfred, Alvah, Newman, Minnie, Eunice, Burleigh, Stanley (deceased), Bertha (deceased), Anne, and Harry (deceased).

Alfred Irvin McVey, after receiving the rudiments of an education in the common schools of Highland county, Ohio, was graduated from the Leesburg high school in 1888. Immediately after his graduation he began teaching, although as a matter of fact, he really had begun in the teaching profession in the spring of 1887, before his graduation

He continued in educational work until 1907, in the meantime having taught in the district school of Highland county three years as instructor in the eighth grade at New Vienna, two years as the principal of the schools at Reisville, six years as superintendent of the schools at Martinsville, and two and one-half years as superintendent of the schools in Blanchester.

Upon the organization of the First National Bank of Blanchester, Mr. McVey was made cashier and assumed his duties on March 9, 1907. He has served continuously in this capacity ever since.

On August 18, 1887, Alfred I. McVey was married to Anna M. Terrell, of Highland county, and to this union two children were born, Bessie and Jessie. The former died at the age of seventeen years, and the latter is a teacher in the Blanchester schools. The mother of these children died on December 9, 1891, and on June 5, 1894, Mr. McVey was married, secondly, to Mintha M. Eaton, daughter of Joseph and Hattie Eaton, of New Vienna, Ohio.

Mr. McVey is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He served as county school examiner of Clinton county from 1901 until six months after he abandoned educational work and entered the Blanchester Bank. Mr. McVey is a member of the Friends church, and his daughter, Jessie, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

DAVID V. IRELAND, M. D.

David V. Ireland, a prominent physician of Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio, was born near Bellville, Richland county, Ohio, on August 15, 1855, the son of David and Susan (Hoke) Ireland. David Ireland was born near Mt. Vernon, in Knox county, Ohio, in 1812 and died in October, 1854, and his wife, Susan Hoke, was born in eastern Pennsylvania in 1816 and died in February, 1889. On the parental side, Doctor Ireland is descended from Scotch and Irish ancestry. His grandfather, John Ireland, was born near Glasgow, Scotland. After marrying an Irish girl, John Ireland immigrated to the United States, settling near Mt. Vernon, Knox county, this state, where he acquired possession of the farm on which he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. On the maternal side, Doctor Ireland inherits Dutch blood, his Grandfather Hoke having been born in Holland and, soon after his marriage, immigrated to eastern Pennsylvania, where he engaged in farming for a few years. Later he moved to Knox county, Ohio, and there spent the remainder of his days.

David Ireland was reared in Knox county and early in life learned the trade of a carpenter. He became proficient and had begun business as a contractor when the Mexican War broke out. He enlisted and served throughout that struggle, contracting a disease which later caused his death. After returning from the war, he bought a farm in Richland county, Ohio, but later located on a farm north of Fredericktown, in Knox county, where he spent the rest of his life. Though he managed his farm to advantage, he made most of his money by buying and selling farms, buying them at a reasonable figure and holding them until their value increased. He was an ardent Whig, but later joined the Republican party, in the advancement of which he took a deep interest. His wife was a member of the Christian church. Prior to her marriage to Mr. Ireland, she had been the wife of John Moree, who died leaving three sons, John, who was in the Union army during the Civil War and died of sickness at Knoxville, Tennessee, on the night of President Lincoln's assassination; Benjamin, a lawyer who lives in Fredericktown, Ohio; and Amos, a farmer in Kansas. To David and Susan Ireland were born the following children: George N., born in March, 1850, who died in 1900, was a physician for fifteen years in Wilmington, after which he took a special course in diseases of the eye, ear and nose, in which he became a specialist and located in Steubenville, where his death occurred a short time after; Levi, who is a carpenter in Fredericktown, and Dr. David V., who is the youngest.

David V. Ireland received his elementary education in the public schools of Fredericktown, graduating from the high school there and, during the following four years taught school in Knox and Highland counties. In 1878 he entered upon the study of medicine in the office of his brother, Dr. George N., at Wilmington, with whom he remained for three years and then attended the Cleveland Homeopathic College for one year. Later he matriculated in the Hanneman Medical College in Chicago, from which he was graduated, and then located and practiced his profession for three years at Jamestown, Ohio. He then practiced at London, Ohio, for a number of years and then moved to Dayton, where, for four years, he was engaged in sanitarium work. The following four years he practiced at Chillicothe, Ohio, and in the fall of 1913 located in Wilmington, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. His ability was quickly recognized and he is now in possession of a large and representative clientele there. Doctor Ireland is a member of the Southeastern Ohio Medical Society, and in 1914, at Chicago, was elected president of the American Society for the Study of Spondylotheropy, or the real science of diagnosis by examining the spinal column.

On January 1, 1883, Dr. David V. Ireland was married to Adda M. Weagley, who was born in Bellville, Richland county, Ohio, daughter of William H. and Eleanor (Whitford) Weagley, the former of whom is a high-school teacher, now retired from active service. To this union were born six children, Fred V., an artist in New York City; Jessie, who died at the age of nine years; Georgiana, a kindergarten teacher in Montana; Freda, a teacher of art and music in Michigan; George, a student in the Ohio State University and who is also taking second year's work in the Columbus Art School; and Lillian, who is a student in Wilmington College. Politically, Doctor Ireland is a Republican. The mother of these children died in February, 1899, and in September, 1914, Doctor Ireland married, secondly, Bess D. Umsted, a native of Ross county, Ohio.

WILLIAM HALE.

To write the personal records of men who have raised themselves from humble circumstances to positions of responsibility and trust in a community is no ordinary pleasure. Self-made men who have achieved success by reason of their personal qualities and who have impressed their individuality upon the business and civic and commercial life of their place of residence possess an unconscious power for good which can hardly be estimated. Unwittingly, perhaps, they build monuments more enduring than marble obelisk or granite shaft. The venerable William Hale, who is descended from a long line of illustrious ancestors and who has been prominent in the political and agricultural life of Clinton county for a half century, but who is now living retired in Wilmington, undoubtedly belongs to this class of men.

William Hale was born in what is now Adams township, but which was then called Vernon township, in Clinton county, Ohio, on November 11, 1835, the son of Jacob and Hannah (Andre) Hale, the former born in Guilford county, North Carolina, in 1800, and died in 1849, and the latter born in Adams township, this county, in 1812, and died in 1896.

Jacob Hale was the son of Jacob and Martha Hale. The senior Jacob Hale was the son of Joseph and Ruth (Harlan) Hale, and was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, on September 4, 1763, and died in Adams township, this county, on September 5, 1851. In 1786 he was married to Martha Harvey, who was born in Randolph county, North Carolina, on December 15, 1766, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Carter) Harvey, and who died on June 23, 1859, in Adams township, this county. Jacob Hale, Sr., grew up in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and about 1784 moved, with his brothers and sisters, to Randolph county, North Carolina, where he was married two years later. In 1808 he removed, with his family, to this county and settled on Todd's fork in Union township.

To Joseph and Margaret (Harvey) Hale were born eleven children, as follow: Samuel H., born on February 14, 1787, married Martha Ward; Elizabeth, February 26, 1789, married James D. Massey; William, September 27, 1791, married Mariah Sabin; Eli, December 29, 1794, married Anne Hadley; Ruth, March 3, 1797, married John Hadley; Lydia, March 29, 1799, married John Harlan; Jacob, July 7, 1801, the father of William, the subject of this sketch, married Hannah Andrew; Martha, July 7, 1803, married Hiram Mendenhall; Joseph, July 9, 1804, was twice married, the first time to Rowena Harlan, and the second time to Sarah Sewell; Armoni, September 21, 1806, married Elizabeth Ewards, and Mary, September 26, 1810, married Isaac Roseberry.

Before leaving Chester county, Pennsylvania, for North Carolina, Jacob Hale inherited a snug fortune and had a considerable amount of money when he arrived in North Carolina. In addition to owning a mill he also owned a five-hundred-acre tract of land on Brandywine creek in North Carolina. The battle of Cowpens was fought near his farm.

On September 3, 1808, Jacob Hale and family left North Carolina with their ten children for Ohio, and after forty-two days on the road arrived at John Hadley's cabin in Adams township, this county, Mrs. John Hadley being a sister of Mrs. Jacob Hale. The Hadleys had twelve children, and the two families, comprising twenty-six persons, spent a part of the winter in Hadley's one-room cabin, or until Jacob Hale could erect a cabin farther up the fork. Being a brick mason, in 1815 he built a brick house overlooking Todd's fork, where he lived until his death, in 1851, at the age of eighty-eight years. He also built the Clinton county court house in 1816, a building of brick which was about fifty feet square and for which he received one thousand dollars. The brick were made on the ground adjoining the court house. Both Jacob Hale and his wife were members of the Quaker church and in those early days in this county were prominent in the affairs of this church.

The maternal grandparents of William Hale were Samuel and Delilah Andrew, both of whom were born in North Carolina and who were married there. In 1810 they located in Adams township, this county, and purchased a farm. They also were Quakers and had two sons and two daughters.

Jacob Hale, Jr., grew up in what is now Adams township, this county, and throughout his entire life was a farmer. He owned a good farm and died at the age of forty-nine years, a Whig in politics and a member of the Friends church. His widow never remarried.

William Hale, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest of three children born to his parents, the others being Susanna, who married Alva Gallup, both of whom are deceased, and Alfred, who is deceased. William Hale was thirteen years old when his father died, and he was compelled to go to work with the responsibility of the head of the house, since he was the eldest child. He worked on his mother's farm until his marriage, and soon afterwards purchased one hundred and thirty acres of land in Vernon township, where he lived a few years and then purchased two hundred and twenty-eight acres in Adams township. At this latter place he lived until March, 1915, when he retired and removed to Wilmington, at which place he lives in a comfortable home, which he purchased, on North South street. Practically all of his active life Mr. Hale was engaged in buying and shipping stock by the train load. During his active career he served eight years on the Clinton county board of agriculture and six years as county commissioner. For a few years he maintained an office in Ogden, Ohio, where he purchased grain and wool.

On March 11, 1858, William Hale was married to Mary M. Ent, who was born in Frederick City, Maryland, the daughter of George and Lydia Ent, the former a carriage maker and trimmer, who died in Martinsville, Clinton county, Ohio, where he was in business for some years.

To Mr. and Mrs. William Hale have been born five children, all of whom are living. Orlando C. is a traveling salesman and lives in Cincinnati; Frank is a farmer in Vernon township; Flora married H. A. Coats and they live in Adams township on a farm; Charles is the mayor of Clarksville, Ohio; Harry is a resident of Wilmington, where he is a hardware salesman.

The venerable William Hale has lived a long and useful life in Clinton county. By his energy, foresight and wise management he has contributed to the progress of this section of the state. He is a worthy descendant of the far-seeing pioneer who sought a home in this great state.

JAMES EDWARD BERNARD.

To a great extent the prosperity of the agricultural sections of our country is due to the honest industry and the sturdy persistence and unswerving economy of the individual citizen. Among this class may be mentioned James Edward Bernard, who, by reason of his years of indefatigable labor and honest effort, not only has acquired a well-deserved competence, but has also won and retained the high esteem of all with whom he has ever been associated.

James E. Bernard was born near New Vienna, in Green township, Clinton county, Ohio, on April 11, 1868, a son of James K. and Keziah (McVay) Bernard, the former of whom was born in Green township, this county, in 1830, and died in September, 1907, and the latter of whom was born on January 18, 1838, and is still living.

James K. Bernard was a son of George W. and Harriet C. (McConnell) Bernard, both natives of Virginia, the former of whom was born in 1799 and came to Highland county, Ohio, with his parents, Thomas Bernard and wife, in 1805, the family being one of the first to settle in this region, George W. Bernard being six years old at that time. Later the family came to Clinton county, locating in Wayne township. They were members of the Friends church, and were excellent farmers and useful citizens. Mr. Bernard's maternal grandparents, Christopher and Martha McVay, also came from Virginia to Clinton county, where they located on a farm in Wayne township. The family were members of the Christian church, and took an active part in the affairs of that denomination.

The late James K. Bernard was born on a farm in Clinton county and became a very prosperous farmer, having been the owner of eighteen hundred and fifty acres of land in Clinton county, comprising twelve farms in all, which land, with the assistance of his sons, he accumulated by his own personal efforts. Late in life he retired from active farm life and moved to New Vienna, where his death occurred. His widow still lives in New Vienna. Before his death, James K. Bernard divided his land among his children, of whom there were nine, James Edward being the sixth in order of birth. John R. lives on a farm in Green township. George W. is also a farmer in Green township. Harriett C., who married James Carey, lives on a farm in Green township. Charles O. is a farmer in the same township. Mattie, who married Lon Hildebrand, is a resident of Wilmington, her husband being retired. Christopher C. lives at Sabina, Ohio, where he is a retired farmer. Cora, who married Charles Johnson, lives in Green township, and Oscar is retired and living in New Vienna, Ohio.

James Edward Bernard was educated in the district schools near his home; but his educational advantages were limited, since he was able to attend school only two months each year. At the age of twenty-three, Mr. Bernard was married, and began life for himself by renting land from his father for one year. The next year he purchased one hundred and seventy-five acres in Wayne township, where he lived for eighteen years, subsequently adding forty acres to the original tract. In 1908 he sold his farm and removed to Wilmington, purchasing a farm near Clarksville, in Vernon township. In 1913 he sold this latter farm and purchased the Starbuck hardware store. After conducting this business for two years, Mr. Bernard sold out, in the spring of 1915, and, with his family, moved to Wilmington, where he purchased a comfortable house at 504 Walnut street, and he and his family now make their home there.

On January 29, 1891, James E. Bernard was married to Emma Matthews, who was born in Clarksville, this county, the daughter of John W. and Olive Matthews, both of whom live at New Vienna, where the former is a retired farmer. To this union six children have been born, namely: Leone, born in December, 1893; Virgil, 1895; Stanley, 1897; George, 1899; Olive, 1901, and Harry, 1905.

James Edward Bernard is a Democrat in politics, but owing to his extensive farming and business interests, has not taken an active part in political affairs. The Bernard family are all members of the Christian church. Fraternally, Mr. Bernard is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

In Wilmington, where Mr. Bernard has lived for several years, he is recognized as an honorable and upright citizen and is quite popular among his fellow townsmen. He takes a commendable interest in worthy public movements, and is connected with all worthy public enterprises.

FRANK W. LIEURANCE.

Frank W. Lieurance, who is now living retired in Wilmington, formerly was engaged in farming in Washington township, this county, where for nineteen years he operated a farm owned by his father-in-law. During the past three years he has been an invalid, and during this period has suffered severely from rheumatism. He is a well-respected and highly honored citizen and is well known among his fellow townsmen.

Frank W. Lieurance was born on March 29, 1866, in Clark township, this county, the son of Amos W. and Anna (Baker) Lieurance, the former of whom was born in the same township, in 1841, and is still living. It is a remarkable fact that Amos W. Lieurance weighed sixteen pounds at the time of his birth. His wife was born in 1842, and is also still living. Mr. Lieurance's paternal grandparents were Alexander and Sallie (Bales) Lieurance, both of whom were born in North Carolina. Alexander Lieurance was three weeks old when his parents started from North Carolina to Ohio and he was carried on a pillow to their new home in Clark township, this county. After growing to maturity amidst pioneer surroundings, and receiving a meager education in the pioneer public schools, he became a farmer and lived to an advanced age in this county, rearing a family of two sons and three daughters, all of whom were members of the Baptist church. Mr. Lieurance's maternal grandparents were William and Sallie Baker, both of whom were born in this county, their parents having been among the very earliest settlers in Clark township, and members of the so-called Campbellite, or Christian church. William Baker owned two hundred acres of the home farm besides other land.

Amos W. Lieurance grew up on the farm in Clark township, and after his marriage purchased a farm of one hundred and seventy-two acres in the same township, where he and his wife yet live. As a farmer for many years he has been engaged in raising and handling fine horses and is well known as a breeder and stockman. He is a Republican in politics and his wife is an ardent member of the Christian church. To them were born four children, of whom William, the second born, died at the age of sixteen years; Cloe married John Noftsger; Frank W., the third born, and Stella, who married Alfred Graham.

Frank W. Lieurance grew up on his father's farm in Clark township and until he was twenty-eight years old lived with his parents. Afterwards he rented a farm from his father-in-law in Washington township and for nineteen years was engaged in farming. In 1914 Mr. Lieurance removed to Wilmington, and there he now lives in a pretty home at the corner of Walnut and Birdsall streets. Mr. Lieurance is identified with the Republican party and has taken more or less active interest in the affairs of that party.

In February, 1895, Frank W. Lieurance married Tude Skimmings, who was born in Washington township, this county, the daughter of John J. and Lucinda Skimmings, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lieurance have no children.

A successful farmer while he was engaged in that occupation, Frank W. Lieurance has always been rated as a first-class citizen, an honorable man, tolerant in his views and charitable to a fault. He is a man who, so far as he has been able, has lived strictly according to the precepts contained in the Golden Rule, and enjoys the respect and esteem of his many friends.

MISS ELLEN C. WRIGHT.

Descended on both the maternal and paternal sides from men and women who have been prominent in the history of this country, and especially in the history of the Friends church ever since the coming of William Penn to America, Miss Ellen C. Wright is a graduate of the first class which finished at Wilmington College, in 1875, and for forty years has been a teacher in Wilmington College. During this period she held the chair of Latin in this institution, and is now the librarian of the college. An ardent Friend, she is also a wonderful teacher, and is widely known as "Teacher Ellen." On her maternal side she is descended from Ellen Cowgill, a widow, who, with five children, was a passenger on the good ship "Welcome," which in 1682 brought William Penn to America. Ellen Cowgill was the great-great-great-great-grandmother of Miss Ellen C. Wright, her maternal grandfather, Henry Cowgill, having been the son of Henry II, who was the son of Henry I, who was the son of John, who was the son of the aforesaid Ellen Cowgill.

Miss Wright's father and mother were Joseph and Lydia (Cowgill) Wright, and on her paternal side she is also descended from substantial Quaker ancestry. Her father was born on November 24, 1812, and died on November 2, 1907. Her mother was born in Highland county, Ohio, on December 24, 1815, and died on February 10, 1892. Joseph Wright was the son of John and Hannah (Gilbert) Wright, the former of whom was born in Bedford county, Virginia, and who was the son of Joseph and Elizabeth Wright, who moved from Bedford county, Virginia, to Columbiana county, Ohio. The father of Joseph Wright, Sr., was a large slave owner, but remarked that Joseph had gone to Ohio and joined the Quakers and "would not want my property," so Joseph, Sr., got none from his will. Hannah (Gilbert) Wright, who was born in Louden county, Virginia, was the daughter of Joseph and Ann Gilbert, who removed from Louden county, Virginia, to Columbiana county, Ohio, after Hannah was grown. John and Hannah (Gilbert) Wright were farmers and early settlers in Highland county, Ohio. John died about 1821, and after his death his widow married Samuel Coffin, both of whom lived to a good old age.

Henry and Eleanor (Barrett) Cowgill, who were the parents of Miss Wright's mother, were both natives of Virginia, and married in 1794 in Franklin county. After their marriage they removed to Culpeper county, Virginia, and lived on a farm for thirteen years, after which they removed to Paint township, Highland county, Ohio. Miss Wright's mother was the youngest of ten children, all of the members of the family having been Friends.

John Wright, the grandfather of our subject, was a well educated and well informed man, who taught school and preached in the Quaker church. He was also a farmer by occupation. Joseph and Lydia (Cowgill) Wright were married on July 1, 1841, and celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on July 1, 1891. Joseph Wright was five years of age when his parents removed from Virginia to Highland county, Ohio. He received a good education, having attended the Harveysburg high school, after which he taught school eight years in Highland county, Ohio. A farmer later in life, he purchased a farm located near Clear Creek, Ohio, and paid for it gradually. He was a stanch Quaker, and in 1855 was recorded as a minister by the Clear Creek monthly meeting. Later hundreds of people were converted as the result of his labors. He preached many funerals and married many couples, and was one of the founders of Wilmington College, of which for twenty years he was one of its board of managers. He preached regularly at his own meetings and in early life drew no pay for it, since the Quakers believed that the Gospel ought to be free.

Joseph and Lydia (Cowgill) Wright were the parents of seven children: Lindley Murrey died at the age of five years and four months; Henry C., who is deceased, was a dealer in vehicles in Hillsboro, Ohio; Eleanor C., who is better known as Ellen, is the subject of this sketch; David S. lives at Cedar Falls, Iowa, where for forty years he has been a teacher of mathematics in the Iowa State Teachers College; Jonathan B. lives in Wilmington, and for twenty years taught in Wilmington College, and later for several years in the Wilmington high school; Elwood, who is deceased, was a farmer and owned a saw-mill; Emma married Alfred Hale, who died in November, 1914, and who was a farmer by occupation; his widow, Mrs. Emma Hale, lives with Miss Wright in her home on Fife avenue, which Miss Wright built in 1894.

Miss Ellen Wright attended the public schools of Highland county, Ohio, and later Earlham College at Richmond, Indiana, which is a well-known educational institution maintained by the Friends church. Subsequently, she entered Wilmington College, which had just been opened, and four years later was graduated with the first class. During 1887 and 1888 she was a student at Bryn Mawr College.

After Miss Wright's graduation from Wilmington College she began teaching in the college and has taught there ever since, a period of forty years. As heretofore noted, she occupied the chair of Latin, and is now the librarian of the college.

An ardent and faithful member of the Friends church, Miss Wright is also one of the most successful teachers who has ever figured in the educational life of Clinton county, and especially in the educational life of Wilmington College. Her good work during a period of almost a half century can scarcely be overestimated, yet there are scattered over this country thousands of young men and women who would gladly add their blessing to the beloved spirit which guided them in their younger days. Long popular with the faculty and the students, "Teacher Ellen," from standpoint of effective and useful service, is unsurpassed by any other person living in this county.

JONATHAN M. RICHARDSON.

Ohio has been especially honored in the character of her industrial managers and directors. In every section of the state men have lived who were born to leadership in industry; men who dominated because of their superior intelligence, natural endowment and force of character. It is always profitable to consider the careers of such persons, and to weigh their motives and to discover their intimate interests. The late Jonathan M. Richardson, a man who forged his way to the front ranks in the industrial life of Clinton county, was broad-minded and liberal and never permitted his business to interfere with his larger duties as a citizen. Successful in business as he was, he had other interests to which he devoted a considerable portion of his time. In this county he will long be remembered as one of the earnest and intelligent collectors of pre-historic relics.

Jonathan M. Richardson was born in Dayton, Ohio, in July, 1826, and died on June 6, 1907. He was a son of Dr. Jacob and Henrietta (Harwood) Richardson, the latter of whom was born in England, and who, when a child, was brought to America by her parents. She died in Dayton, Ohio, when Jonathan M. was a mere lad. Jacob Richardson was born in Fredericktown, Maryland, and was of English descent. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, but after his graduation left the naval service and studied medicine. He began the active practice of his profession at Chillicothe, Ohio, where he remained only a short time. He was a physical giant, six feet two inches tall in his stocking feet. After leaving Chillicothe Doctor Richardson practiced his profession at Dayton, Ohio, for several years, and after the death of his wife married, secondly, Jane Johnson, subsequently moving to Waterloo, Fayette county, Indiana. In this latter county he owned a large saw-mill, as well as a large farm. Later he moved to Wilmington, Ohio, and purchased a drug store on the site of what is now Farquhar's grocery, and divided his time between conducting the drug store and the practice of his profession. He also lived at Sabina, Ohio, for a short time, and later removed to Grant county, Indiana, where he purchased one hundred and eighty acres of land, continuing, however, the practice of medicine. He also practiced in Nashville, Tennessee, and later at Bainbridge, Ohio, near which city he owned a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. He died at Carrytown, Ohio, many years ago.

The late Jonathan M. Richardson studied medicine under his father's direction and assisted him in operating the drug store in Wilmington. He practiced medicine for a year, but did not like the practice and later attended an architectural school at Cincinnati, becoming a contractor and builder in Wilmington. He erected the main building of Wilmington College, the First National Bank building, the Catholic church, and practically every large dwelling erected in Wilmington while he was engaged in business. His home was in a magnificent brick house on West Locust street, built in 1865. He was the first man in southern Ohio to engage in the wholesale hardwood-lumber business and owned and operated at one time six portable saw-mills. He sawed timber throughout this country and had three lumber yards, in which he handled fancy timber and veneer goods. About 1894 he retired from active business life, being succeeded by his sons. Few men have hobbies in which they are able to accomplish so much as the late Jonathan M. Richardson accomplished as a collector of Indian and cave-dwellers' relics. He is said to have had the best collection of any person living in Ohio. With the assistance of his sons he explored many mounds throughout Ohio and obtained a wide variety of interesting relics. In 1879 Mr. Richardson, in collaboration with Dr. L. B. Welsh, published "An Illustrated Description of Pre-Historic Relics Found Near Wilmington, Ohio," a nine-page pamphlet, in which are described several tablets found in the Sparks mound, located on the road leading from Wilmington to Harveysburg. The various tablets found by Mr. Richardson, together with the charges of fraud made against similar discoveries, provoked him to say in this pamphlet: "We do unhesitatingly say that in these tablets the fact is well established that pre-historic man upon this continent possessed a written language; not a pictorial language, but a language composed of different distinct characters, well and plainly written."

Jonathan M. Richardson was one of a family of four children, and was the second in order of birth. His elder brother, John W., was a physician in Wilmington and other places. His sister, Clarinda, married Morris Green, a wagon-maker and painter, of Clinton, Illinois. Harwood was a farmer in Greene county, Ohio, where he died. He had lived in Wilmington for twenty-five or thirty years before moving to Greene county.

Jonathan M. Richardson was married to Mary Jane Davis, who was born near the Cumberland mountains in Tennessee in 1829, and died in 1898. She was a daughter of James Davis, a native of Tennessee and a farmer by occupation, who moved to this county, where he lived for a short time, and then located in Howard county, Indiana, where he owned and operated a farm. He and his wife were members of the Quaker church. At the age of eighty-two, he fell off a foot log over a slough and was drowned.

To Jonathan M. and Mary Jane (Davis) Richardson were born two sons, James E. and Frank.

James Richardson was born in what is now Wilmington, Ohio, but in a part of the city which was, at the time of his birth, outside the corporation limits, on the old plank road, on June 29, 1859. He attended the public schools of Wilmington and Wilmington College. When a young man he became a timber buyer for his father. Finally he and his brother, Frank, were taken into the lumber business with their father under the firm name of J. M. Richardson & Sons, and carried on a wholesale hardwood-lumber business, handling fancy lumber for a number of years. When the father retired from business the two sons continued under the old firm name. Jonathan M. Richardson owned two hundred acres of land at the edge of Wilmington, and his sons, who inherited the farm jointly, manage it together, as well as the lumber business.

In August, 1777, Frank Richardson was married to Jessie Crute, who was born at Waverley, Pike county, Ohio, daughter of James and Ruanna Crute, both of whom are deceased, and to this union two children have been born, Nellie, who married George Preston, and Mary, who is living at home with her parents. Frank Richardson is a Republican and served four years as a member of the Wilmington city council. Fraternally, he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

James E. Richardson, who was born on April 20, 1850, attended the public schools of Wilmington, and learned the carpenter's trade after finishing his education. He became a lumber buyer for his father under the firm of J. M. Richardson & Sons, and is now in joint partnership with his brother, Frank, in the management of the farm which they inherited from their father, on which they keep some splendid draft horses and also raise Wilkes-bred trotting horses, and are accustomed to sell the colts at a good profit. The Richardson brothers also raise Poland China hogs and registered Jersey cattle.

James E. Richardson was married on February 7, 1889, to Minnie Ferguson, who was born in Warren county, Ohio, daughter of James and Anne (Seaman) Ferguson, both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson have no children.

Frank Richardson lives in the brick house on West Locust street, in Wilmington, which his father built, and which is a splendid example of his wonderful workmanship. It is finished in fine cherry, mahogany and black walnut, all woods having been taken from Clinton county's forests. The Richardson family is rightly held in high esteem in Clinton county where the various members of the family are well known. For generations representatives of this family have been highly educated, cultured and refined people, men who have taken a commendable part in the development and progress of this great county.

J. WARREN GUSTIN.

It is a happy day when farm and city work in unison and produce lives of helpful service. J. Warren Gustin, the subject of this sketch, was a good farmer who came to the city and proved sufficiently his worth to the people that they elected him to their highest office, mayor of their city.

J. Warren Gustin was born in Warren county, Ohio, on September 28, 1847. He was the son of Samuel and Hettie (Freiberger) Gustin, both natives of Warren county. Samuel Gustin was born in Warren county in 1811, and died there in 1898 at the ripe age of eighty-seven years. He was the son of Abiel and Mary Gustin who were natives of Virginia but came as early pioneers to Warren county, Ohio, where they lived the rest of their lives. Hettie (Freiberger) Gustin was born in Warren county, Ohio, in 1817, and died in Blanchester, in Clinton county, in 1881. She was the daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Freiberger, early pioneers of Warren county, Ohio. Samuel Gustin was a Republican in politics, and an active member of the Free Will Baptist church. To him and Hettie (Freiberger) Gustin were born the following children: Sallie; Rebecca, deceased; J. Warren, the subject of this sketch; Carrie; Elma, deceased; Luella, and William S.

J. Warren Gustin was reared on his father's farm. He was educated in the public schools of that county but was not satisfied with only this amount of an education so he attended Goshen Seminary in Clermont county and afterwards the Nelson commercial school of Cincinnati, Ohio. His parents were strong advocates of education and J. Warren Gustin had one brother and three sisters who were teachers in the public schools, but he, after his education was secured, went back on the farm where he worked until in 1885. He then came to Blanchester to engage in the hardware business, in which business he continued until in 1907. He is now secretary of the building and loan association of Blanchester and still continues to own and conduct his farm in Warren county.

Mr. Gustin is a Republican and has been a member of the city council and city treasurer and was elected to the office of mayor of Blanchester and took this office, which he now holds, on January 1, 1914. He is a member of the Masonic order and is a Knight Templar.

J. Warren Gustin was married in 1875, to Ella Rice, of Clinton county, who was a daughter of John W. and Martha (Trickey) Rice, both of whom are now deceased. To this union were born two children: Harry, who is now with the Brownwell Brush and Wiregoods Company, at Baltimore, Maryland, and Lucy, who is the wife of Edward W. Hawk, who is assistant manager of the New Gibson House, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

ANDREW JACKSON WILSON.

Among the men who have been largely instrumental in bringing Clinton county to its present sound and substantial financial status few are better known throughout the county than the gentleman whose name is noted above. Mr. Wilson is not only a banker of rare judgment and discretion, but as a farmer he ranks among the best in the county, having for many years been regarded as one of the most substantial and progressive farmers in this part of the state. Though for some years practically retired from the active personal direction of his large agricultural interests, Mr. Wilson still is deeply concerned in all that affects the farmers of this county, and no one hereabout is better versed in the various problems confronting the modern agriculturist than is he. Mr. Wilson has been prominently identified with the banking and financial interests of Clinton county for many years and has a thorough and most comprehensive grasp of conditions affecting the welfare of the whole community. Beginning as a director of the First National Bank of Wilmington, in the year 1879, Mr. Wilson was advanced to the post of vice-president of that old financial institution in 1889, and in 1895 was made president of the same, a position which he since has filled with the utmost satisfaction, not only to the stockholders, but to the depositors, all of whom have the most implicit confidence in his judgment and sagacity.

Andrew Jackson Wilson was born on a farm one-half mile from the place where he now lives, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on April 15, 1842, son of Alexander and Sarah (Ireland) Wilson, the former of whom was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in the year 1803, and died at his home in this county in 1895, and the latter of whom was born in Georgetown, Kentucky, in 1802, and died in 1869.

Alexander Wilson was the son of Samuel Wilson, a native of Scotland, who emigrated to America in the days of his young manhood, locating in Pennsylvania, where for a time he was engaged in farming in Lancaster county. In the early twenties of the last century he came west, locating with his family in this county. He bought one hundred acres of land on the Prairie road, about five miles east of Wilmington, and there he spent the rest of his life, becoming, in his day, one of the most influential men in that neighborhood, living to the age of sixty years. Samuel Wilson and his wife, the latter of whom was a member of one of the earliest families in this county, were the parents of five children, three sons and two daughters.

Alexander Wilson was about twenty years of age when his parents moved to this county and he at once entered upon the life of a pioneer farmer. Beginning with nothing but a stout heart and sound resolution, he prospered beyond most of his neighbors. At first he was a tenant farmer in a small way, but presently bought a farm of his own, erecting on the same a store building on the Washington pike, five miles east of Wilmington. This store, which filled "a long-felt want" in that neighborhood, proved the foundation of the fortune which Alexander Wilson amassed. As he prospered in his commercial enterprise Mr. Wilson invested in lands in that neighborhood, and presently found himself the owner of about one thousand acres of land in Union township. He made his home on the site at present occupied by the fine residence of his son, A. J. Wilson. He and his wife were members of the Christian church, he having been very largely instrumental in the organization of the Christian church which was erected many years ago in the vicinity of his home, he having been for years one of the heaviest contributors to the same.

To Alexander and Sarah (Ireland) Wilson were born eight children, namely. William, for years a well-known farmer of this county, deceased; Catherine, deceased, who married John Glass; Sarah, deceased, who married Levi Bennett; John, of North Judson, Indiana; Alfred, deceased, a former well-known farmer of this county; George, who died at the age of twenty-two years; Jane, who married Wilson McFarland and lives in Wilmington, this county, and Andrew Jackson, the immediate subject of this sketch.

Andrew Jackson Wilson was reared on the home farm in Union township, receiving his education in the district school in the neighborhood of his home, and upon reaching manhood's estate began to take active management of the home farm of two hundred acres, the entire responsibility of his father's extensive operations falling upon his shoulders as his father grew older. Upon his father's death Mr. Wilson inherited a tidy bit of land, to which he later added by purchase, until now he is the possessor of eight hundred and twenty acres, all adjoining, in Union township. In 1870 Mr. Wilson erected a fine new home on the site of his birthplace and has lived there ever since. For years he continued in active personal management of his extensive farms, but gradually relinquished many of the arduous duties relating to these operations, and now all his land is tilled by responsible tenants. Mr. Wilson ever took an active interest in public affairs and early was recognized as a substantial factor in the financial affairs of the county. On January 14, 1879, he was made a director of the First National Bank of Wilmington, and on January 8, 1889, was elevated to the position of vice-president of the same, a position involving practically the active control of the bank, from the fact that the president of the same was a non-resident, his home being in Cincinnati. On January 8, 1895, Mr. Wilson was elected president of the bank, and since that time has been nominally as well as actually in charge of the bank's affairs, a position of trust and responsibility, for which he long had displayed the highest capacity, his sound judgment and thorough acquaintance with financial, commercial and industrial conditions in this part of the state giving him eminent qualifications for the important post.

On May 10, 1863, Andrew J. Wilson was united in marriage to Hannah J. Custis, who was born in Union township, this county, within one mile of where she now lives, daughter of Douglas and Pernina Custis, a prominent family of Clinton county, a detailed history of which is set out in a biographical sketch of Levi Custis, brother of Mrs. Wilson, presented elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are members of the Walnut Street Christian church at Wilmington, of which Mr. Wilson was a trustee for many years, and they are actively concerned in all good works hereabout, having been for years regarded as among the leaders in all movements designed to advance the common good. Mr. Wilson formerly was a Democrat, but in 1888 transferred his political allegiance to the Republican party, since which time he has taken an active part in the councils of that party in this county, his sound judgment being considered valuable by the party managers. During the Civil War, Mr. Wilson was enrolled among that patriotic band of home defenders known locally as "squirrel hunters," and played a prominent part in that organization during the period of its existence.

In 1898 Mr. Wilson conceived the idea of erecting at his own expense a steel tower on the court house corner, which should stand as a monument to his interest in the city of Wilmington. Work on the structure was begun on Friday, September 30, 1898, and it was dedicated with appropriate service. The tower is constructed of steel and rises to a height of one hundred and fifty feet. A striking feature is a cement platform built in the tower at a distance of ten feet from the ground. This is used for the weekly band concerts, which are given by the city band during the summer season. The tower is lighted from top to bottom with electric lights of varying colors and presents a brilliant appearance when lighted up, having a circle of lights at the extreme top. The people are justly proud of the Wilson tower and have the satisfaction of knowing that no other city in the country has such a structure. It is also used for a flag tower.

There are two clocks in the new time system at the First National Bank. One is a master clock that hangs on the north wall of the main banking-room and the other is the dial and frame that stand without. The inside clock controls the outside one, and together they work out a plan that insures perfect time for the employees of the bank, and the outside world as well. The outer clock bears the words, "The First National Bank, Established 1864." Day and night, the new clock tells the time accurately. It is placed so that from almost any direction it can be seen. With a clock striking the quarters and the hours by a series of four chimes, there is little use for other timepieces in the same neighborhood.

President A. J. Wilson, of the First National Bank, is responsible for the innovation; he presented the timepiece, the inside and outside clocks, to the bank and to the public.

Mr. Wilson has been appointed one of the board to locate and build the Clinton county new court house in conjunction with the commissioners of the county.

Though having passed the three-score-and-ten stage of his career, Mr. Wilson is alert and active, enterprising, progressive and energetic, and his influence in financial circles in this section continues as strong and effective as it was years ago. That he has been an invaluable factor in the financial and commercial life of this county is conceded on all sides, and he is held in the highest respect throughout this section of the state, the leaders in the business community having the utmost confidence in his judgment in financial matters.

HENRY GILROY CARTWRIGHT.

Henry Gilroy Cartwright, one of the well-known lawyers of Wilmington and Clinton county, who has been in partnership with Joe T. Doan for many years, is descended from pioneers of this section of Ohio who had a conspicuous part in its early history. Some of his ancestors were prominent Abolitionists, and before the Civil War assisted in the maintenance of the "underground railroad." Mr. Cartwright himself is a man who was well trained for the practice of his profession, and who, as one of the leading Republicans of Clinton county, has been active in the political and civic life of the county.

Henry G. Cartwright was born at New Burlington, in Chester township, this county, on September 24, 1873, a son of Henry G. and Mary L. (Harrison) Cartwright, the former of whom was born at Front Royal, Frederick county, Virginia, on March, 1837, and died on November 8, 1893. The latter was born at Springfield, Ohio, in February, 1839, and died on April 2, 1907. Mr. Cartwright's paternal grandparents were Lawrence W. and Lucinda (Tobin) Cartwright, both of whom were natives of Virginia and of English descent. Lawrence W. Cartwright learned the tailor's trade, and was engaged in that vocation at Front Royal, Virginia. In 1850 he and his family removed to New Burlington, Clinton county, Ohio, and there he conducted a general store and served as postmaster for many years. In the early days he had been a stanch Whig, and later became identified with the Republican party. His family were active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he was an officer in that church. He died at the age of seventy-nine, while his wife died in middle life. After her death he was again married, and his second wife died a few years later. There were three children by each marriage. Mr. Cartwright's maternal grandfather was Peter Harrison, a native of Yorkshire, England, whose wife was a native of Mississippi. He was a cabinetmaker, undertaker, and a lay Methodist Episcopal minister. He came to the United States at the age of eighteen and located in Waynesville, Ohio, later removing to Springfield, from which place he came to this county and lived at New Burlington for many years. He was a strong Abolitionist and was identified with the "underground railroad" movement in the years preceding the Civil War. At the age of seventy years he removed to Hall county, Nebraska, and Harrison township in that county, where he homesteaded a quarter section of land, was named for him, and there he died at the age of eighty years.

Henry G. Cartwright was thirteen years of age when his family came to this county and here he received a good education. When a lad he worked as a clerk in the John Grant general store at New Burlington, and at the beginning of the Civil War, enlisted for service in the Second Ohio Heavy Artillery, serving until his discharge for physical disability. In the spring of 1874 Henry G. Cartwright opened a dry goods and shoe store in partnership with John C. Cook, at Wilmington, and a few years later purchased the interests of Mr. Cook and operated the store alone, under the name of the "Eagle Store," continuing as proprietor of the store until his death in 1893. He was a Republican and took an active interest in all local public affairs. The family were all members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Of the four children born to Henry G. and Mary L. (Harrison) Cartwright, Harry died in infancy; Henry Gilroy is the subject of this sketch; Aurora C. is a resident of Wilmington, and Charles B., also is a resident of Wilmington, where he works in a dry goods store.

Henry G. Cartwright as a lad lived in Wilmington and there attended the public schools. He was graduated from the Wilmington high school in 1892, and subsequently entered Wilmington College. Still later he became a student at Ohio State University at Columbus and was graduated from the law department of that institution in 1895. For several years he practiced his profession alone, but in 1904, formed a partnership with Joe T. Doan, which still continues. Mr. Cartwright served as city solicitor of Wilmington for two years, and for twelve years has been a member of the Wilmington board of education. He has served as a delegate to many conventions of the Republican party, with which he has for years been prominently identified.

On November 25, 1896, Henry G. Cartwright was married to Anna G. Gallup, who was born in Wilmington, the daughter of Horace and Frances H. Gallup, the former of whom is deceased, but the latter of whom is still living. To this union one child has been born, a son, Herman G., born on March 19, 1898, who is now a student in the Wilmington high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Cartwright is a director and secretary of the Union Loan and Savings Company, of Wilmington, and is a member of the Masonic lodge, including the chapter, the council and the Order of the Eastern Star. He is also a member of the subordinate branch and uniform rank of the Knights of Pythias, besides the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Mr. Cartwright is a man well versed in the law and is familiar, not only with the fundamental principles upon which the law is based, but with all of the modern decisions of practically all the courts in which he practices, besides the higher courts. He is a wise and fair counsellor and a successful practitioner in court, his firm enjoying a large practice, which has been built upon honorable and fair dealing with the public. Personally, Mr. Cartwright is highly respected by his fellow citizens, and is popular among the people of Clinton county.

WILSON HUNNICUTT.

The farmers of this country are the backbone of its commercial life, and, as primary producers, are the class upon which, not only the industrial managers, the transporters, the merchants and the banks depend largely for the prosperity, but good farming is likewise the keel of our commercial life and happiness. Wilson Hunnicutt, a retired farmer who is now living in Wilmington, began with a moderate-sized farm, which he bought on credit, and during his active career was able to accumulate six hundred acres in Liberty and Union townships, a very commendable record, and one of which he has every reason to be very proud.

Wilson Hunnicutt was born on August 18, 1848, in Liberty township, two miles southwest of Port William, the son of Thomas and Susanna (Bailey) Hunnicut, the former of whom was born in Prince George county, Virginia, July 10, 1811, and who died on April 10, 1876, and the latter born near Dover, Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, February 9, 1810, and who died on October 15, 1896.

The paternal grandparents of Wilson Hunnicutt were Thomas, Sr., and Elizabeth Hunnicutt. The Hunnicutts were of Scotch-Irish descent and were natives of Prince George county, Virginia. He was a planter in Virginia and died in that state on February 15, 1823, a man well respected and widely known. His wife lived several years longer, passing away in 1845. They were prominent and influential members of the Friends church and were, therefore, opposed to slavery, although they lived in a region where slavery was common. Mr. Hunnicutt's maternal grandparents were Daniel and Mary (Haworth) Bailey, the former of whom was born in Prince George county, Virginia, and the latter of whom was a native of Union township, Clinton county. Daniel Bailey came to Clinton county in 1804, at a time when he was a young man. Here he purchased a farm four miles north of Wilmington and cultivated it until his death in 1844. He was a very tall, stoutly built and rugged man. The family of Daniel and Mary Bailey were stanch Quakers.

Thomas Hunnicutt, Jr., enjoyed only limited opportunities to obtain an education, but made good use of every opportunity presented to him, and became a well-informed man, largely by home study. When he was sixteen years of age he came to Clinton county, arriving on June 10, 1827, from Virginia, with his mother, brothers and sisters and a colony of others. His mother purchased a farm of one hundred acres in Liberty township, and, after Thomas, Jr., was a man, he purchased a tract of land located in what was in those days a swamp, one mile north of his mother's farm. He began with seventy acres of land, which he ditched thoroughly and improved, and later he owned six hundred acres. In 1835 he was married to Susanna Bailey and they had eight children. Thomas Hunnicutt, Jr., was well known as a stock raiser, and was appointed on many committees at fairs to judge hogs, he having been a successful feeder and well known in this county for his success. He and his wife were devout Christians and active in the work of the Quaker church. Early in life he had been appointed an elder in the Dover monthly meetings. Politically, he was identified with the Republican party.

The eight children born to Thomas, Jr., and Susanna Hunnicutt became widely separated. Four of the children, Catherine, David, John Oliver and Anna Eliza, are deceased. Catherine married William Underwood, also deceased, and lived in Liberty township. John Oliver died in 1874. Anna Eliza, who was the youngest, married Henry C. McPherson, who is also deceased. The living children are Daniel B., Mary Elizabeth, Wilson and Thomas E. Daniel B. lives in Douglas county, Kansas, where he is a retired farmer. He is a veteran of the Civil War. Mary Elizabeth is the widow of John F., Spear and lives at Dayton, Ohio. Thomas E. lives in Whittier, California; his wife died in 1898.

Wilson Hunnicutt attended the Liberty township public schools, and later in life the Martinsville high school. After attending the high school for some time he became a student at the Spiceland Academy, at Spiceland, Indiana, an institution maintained by the Friends. After finishing his education he lived at home until his marriage. His father sold him a farm on credit, comprising one hundred and twenty-two acres, and he added to this farm until he owned five hundred acres in Liberty and Union townships. In 1902 Mr. Hunnicutt retired from active farm work and moved to Wilmington, Ohio, where he is now living at 531 North South street.

On August 3, 1871, Mr. Hunnicutt was married to Mary M. Gallimore, who was born in Wilson township, Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Elisha and Eliza (Grear) Gallimore, both of whom are deceased. He was born in North Carolina and his wife was a native of Clinton county. They were members of the Friends church, and he was an excellent farmer, and at one time owned one thousand acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicutt have had three children: Franklin, who is referred to elsewhere in this volume; Nora H., who married Dennis Stephens and lives on the Hunnicutt home place; and Bertha May, who married Alton M. Haworth, and who died on May 28, 1912.

Politically, Mr. Hunnicutt is a Republican and served as a school director for fifteen years while living in the country. He is an elder of the Dover monthly meeting. Wilson Hunnicutt is a very worthy man and a good citizen, a man who has been industrious, honorable and fair in his relations with his fellows. Naturally, he is a highly respected citizen of Clinton county.

REV. JOSEPHUS HOSKINS.

No finer type of virile and useful manhood can be found in all Clinton county than the person of the Rev. Josephus Hoskins, of Wilmington, Ohio, who is a well-known real estate dealer of Wilmington and an acknowledged minister of the Friends church at Dover. He has served as evangelistic superintendent of the Wilmington yearly meeting of the Friends church for thirteen years. In 1872, he was acknowledged minister of the Friends church at Dover and was a minister in Dover for thirty-two years. He is still a member of that meeting and has held about every office within the gift of the yearly and quarterly meeting. He stands now as the recognized head of the Wilmington yearly meeting of Friends and is pastor of the churches at Cuba and Beech Grove, where he preaches on alternate Sundays. The ancestry of the Hoskins family in Clinton county were characterized by their loyalty and patriotism at a time when loyalty and patriotism meant perhaps far more than they mean now. The paternal great-grandfather of Rev. Josephus Hoskins, Moses Hoskins, was a native of North Carolina and a soldier in the War of the Revolution. He immigrated to Ohio, it is believed, about 1810, and subsequently moved to Illinois, where he died.

Rev. Josephus Hoskins is a native of Green township, born three miles north of New Vienna in Clinton county, April 26, 1841, and is the son of Isaac and Rachel (Hodson) Hoskins. His father was born in 1811 in Guilford county, North Carolina, and died in March, 1897. His mother was born in 1809 in Guilford county, North Carolina, and died in May, 1854.

The parents of Isaac Hoskins, John and Hannah (Hockette) Hoskins, both of whom were natives of North Carolina, were of Welsh descent. Their ancestors had come from Wales about 1750. There were originally three brothers of the Hoskins family who came to America. One settled in Philadelphia and two in North Carolina. During the Revolutionary War, they operated a blacksmith shop and on one occasion a cannon ball was fired through the shop. All of them were members of the Quaker church.

John Hoskins was the eldest son of Moses Hoskins. He was reared in North Carolina and was married there. In 1813 John Hoskins and his family accompanied the Hodson family and a colony of settlers to Clinton county, Ohio. They settled in Green township in the Fairview neighborhood of Friends. In those days there were no roads and the settlers were compelled to cut their way through a dense wilderness. Deer and turkeys were in abundance and occasionally a bear was killed. The nights were made hideous by the howling of wolves. Pioneers of these days, those noble men and women who are long since gone, endured many hardships of which the present and the future generations can have no intimate knowledge. John Hoskins purchased a survey of land consisting of nearly one thousand acres in Clinton county, for which he paid one and one-quarter dollars an acre. He later sold some of it at three dollars an acre and the same land is now worth one hundred and fifty dollars an acre. In the Clinton county wilderness he contracted the bilious fever, for which he was given calomel by a pioneer physician. This salivated him. He died at the age of fifty-five years, December 13, 1846. His wife died on September 18, 1876, at the age of ninety-one years. They were the parents of the following children: William, Isaac, John, Hannah, Mary Jane and Elizabeth. John Hoskins spent most of his life working at the blacksmith's trade, leaving his sons to operate the farm. He had a large blacksmith shop on the farm where he made edged tools, including axes. He also made nails and did general work. He was an elder in the East Fork meeting of the Friends church as was his wife also.

Isaac Hoskins was two years old when the Hoskins family came to Ohio. He grew up on the farm and learned the blacksmith's trade under his father's direction. His father gave him seventy-two acres of timber land in Green township and he cleared the land of the timber and built a log cabin, where he lived the life of a typical pioneer with wolves and panthers all about. Later he added twenty-two acres adjoining, living on the farm until 1858 when he sold out and moved to Highland, where he was a merchant for two years. He then moved to the Dover neighborhood in Union township. His first wife, who was Rachel Hodson, was the daughter of Solomon and Chloe Hodson, natives of North Carolina, who came to Clinton county in 1813 with the Hoskins family. Solomon Hodson bought several hundred acres of land in Green township and lived to be eighty-six years old. His wife died at the age of seventy-five. They were active in the East Fork meeting of the Friends church, he being an elder in the church and she an active minister. Mrs. Rachel Hoskins died and Isaac Hoskins was married, secondly, in 1875 to Anna Hunt, who died in 1885. Afterwards he made his home with his son, Rev. Josephus Hoskins. Both were prominent in the Friends church, he as an elder and his second wife as an overseer.

Seven children were born to Isaac Hoskins and wife, two of whom, Mary, the widow of John Davis, of Missouri, and Rev. Josephus Hoskins, the subject of this sketch, are living. The deceased children are: Joel and Josiah, twins, the former of whom died in Lewis county, Missouri, and the latter in Wilmington; Martha, who was the wife of Ezekiel Haworth, of Lynchburg, Ohio; Jane, who married Oliver Carl, of Liberty township; and Lydia, who married Daniel Henry, of Union township.

Rev. Josephus Hoskins grew up on his father's farm in Green township and lived at home with his parents until fifteen years of age, when he moved with them to Highland, Ohio, working in his father's store during their two years residence in that place. Afterwards he returned to a farm in Union township, buying eighty acres of land and caring for his father and stepmother. He sold the farm in 1878 and purchased one hundred and eighty acres on the Port William pike in Union township, which he farmed successfully until 1909, when he moved to Wilmington. Since 1909 Mr. Hoskins has been engaged in the real estate business.

On June 2, 1864, Josephus Hoskins was married to Emily J. Gallimore, who was a native of Wilson township, born on May 15, 1846, the daughter of Elisha and Eliza (Greer) Gallimore, both of whom were natives of County Down, Ireland. They were married in their native land and soon after their marriage immigrated to America and settled in Wilson township, Clinton county, Ohio, living to ripe old ages. She was over ninety years of age at the time of her death. They had a large family of children and were active in the Methodist church. Mrs. Emily J. Hoskins was quite prominent in church work and was an elder in the Friends church. She died on July 8, 1915.

Rev. and Mrs. Josephus Hoskins have had eight children, as follow: Clarence, married Nettie Kider and lives in Columbus, Ohio; Alma, married Jesse H. Starbuck and lives on a farm in the Dover neighborhood; Luella, deceased, married Albert Starbuck; Minnie, is the wife of Carry Spears and lives in the Dover neighborhood; Elvin, lives on a farm in Union township; Walter H., whose sketch is presented elsewhere in this volume; Dora became the wife of Grant Conklin, of Liberty township, and Della, who married George Thatcher and lives on the old Hoskins home farm near Dover.

Rev. Josephus Hoskins is one of the best and most favorably known residents of Wilmington and Clinton county. He is an earnest, ardent, Christian gentleman, who recognizes fully his obligation as a citizen of a free country and a minister of the Christian religion. Modest and unassuming, he is dearly loved by hundreds of people who have come under his benign and inspiring influence.

MARION AUGUSTUS BALDWIN.

The Baldwin family of Clinton county has been notable for its public service. It is a fact that the people of any community come to have established faith in certain characteristics that are found in certain families and that they always seek public servants from such characteristics. This has been notably true of the Baldwin family, and especially true of the subject of this sketch, Marion Augustus Baldwin, who is the present postmaster of Blanchester, Ohio.

Marion Augustus Baldwin was the son of Benjamin and Martha Ellen (Henry) Baldwin. Benjamin Baldwin was the son of Josiah Baldwin, who is mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Benjamin Baldwin was born in Blanchester on October 8, 1815, and died in 1897. He was a farmer of recognized ability, a Democrat in politics, and was elected to the position of justice of the peace by this party. He was a member of the Universalist church. His first marriage was contracted with Mrs. Hite, of Clinton county, Ohio, and to this marriage were born two children, William, who died in infancy, and Sarah L. After the death of his first wife he was married to Martha Ellen Henry, who was born at Pleasant Grove, in Warren county, on January 4, 1829, and who died in 1893. She was the daughter of John and Nancy (Doctor) Henry. John Henry was a native of Virginia, and his wife was also born in Virginia. They were early settlers in Warren county, where he died at the age of forty-seven. She died near New Vienna, Clinton county, at an advanced age. The following are the children of John and Nancy (Doctor) Henry: John Newton; Martha E., deceased; Amelia, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Jane, deceased; Joseph and Allie. The children of Benjamin and Martha Ellen (Henry) Baldwin were as follow: Lucius Henry, deceased; Nettie E. and Marion Augustus, the subject of this sketch.

Marion Augustus Baldwin was reared in Blanchester where he attended the public schools and high school. Here he read law while quite a young man and was admitted to practice but he never engaged in the profession. He was engaged in farming and sawmilling and was appointed postmaster of Blanchester in 1895 and served a term of four years, after which he engaged, for a short time, in the grocery business. He quit this to become manager of the Clinton Telephone Company, which position he held for thirteen years, until he was again, on March 31, 1914, appointed to the position of postmaster of Blanchester which position he still holds.

In politics he is a Democrat, and was elected on this ticket to the position of city clerk which office he resigned to become postmaster. He is an active member of the Knights of Pythias lodge. His wife attends the Methodist Episcopal church of which she is a member.

Marion Augustus Baldwin was married on March 7, 1881, to Addie Byard, of Clinton county, who was a daughter of Thomas and Louisa Byard. They have had no children.

Mr. Baldwin's interest is always with his community and one can scarcely tell whether he or his community has been most honored by his appointment to positions of service. These he has always filled with untiring zeal.

ROBERT CONARD, M. D.

Dr. Robert Conard, a well-known and successful physician of Blanchester, Ohio, is a graduate of the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati and attended Ohio State University for two years. During the Spanish-American War, he was attached to the hospital corps of the United States army, and afterwards served as house physician at St. Elizabeth's hospital, at Dayton, Ohio. Locating at Blanchester, Ohio, in July, 1906, he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession at this place.

Robert Conard was born in Clinton county, Ohio, April 11, 1877, the son of Dr. George R. and Martha (Good) Conard, the former of whom was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, born on January 5, 1842, and the latter of whom was born in Highland county, Ohio, the daughter of Charles and Belsey (Moore) Good, who came from Pennsylvania in 1854, and who spent their last days in New Vienna. She died at the age of ninety years and her husband at the age of eighty-eight. They were members of the Friends church and of the Hicksite branch. Dr. George R. Conard, who is a pioneer physician in New Vienna, is the son of Benjamin and Eliza (Roberts) Conard, the former of whom was born at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, September 14, 1810, and the latter of whom was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1810. Benjamin Conard was the son of Cornelius and Susannah (Chalfont) Conard, the former of whom was a native of Pennsylvania and descended from an immigrant who settled in Pennsylvania, in 1628, after coming to America from Holland. The latter was also a native of Pennsylvania, and spent her last days in the Keystone state. Cornelius Conard was a member of the Society of Friends, and lived at Valley Forge at the time Washington camped there. Eliza (Roberts) Conard was the daughter of George and Alice (Fell) Roberts, both of whom were natives of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The former was of Welsh descent. They were farmers by occupation, and when advanced in years removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where they died, he at the age of eighty-four and she at the age of eighty-six.

Benjamin Conard emigrated to Highland county, Ohio, in 1850, and in 1865 moved to Hillsboro, where he engaged in the mercantile business. He retired from business at the age of eighty years, and died in November, 1902, at the age of ninety-two years. Benjamin Conard was married three times, first to Mary Ann Moore; secondly to Eliza Roberts and thirdly to Mrs. Elizabeth (Hussey) Johnson. Mrs. Eliza (Roberts) Conard died in April, 1852.

George R. Conard attended the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio, and graduated from Miami University in 1863. He enlisted in Company A, Forty-eighth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, on September 9, 1861. On account of wounds received at Shiloh, April 6, 1862, he was discharged July 11, 1862. After completing the course at Miami University, he entered the Medical College of Ohio at Cincinnati and was graduated in 1865. During the latter part of the Civil War, he was an army surgeon attached to the hospital corps of the United States army. For some time he practiced medicine at Peru, Indiana, but in 1875 located at New Vienna, where he has practiced ever since. He was married to Martha Good, February 28, 1866, and they have had five children: Helen, who lives at home; Harvey E., professor of higher mathematics at the Columbus high school of commerce; Elma, who died at the age of twelve years; Robert and William, twins, the former of whom is the subject of this sketch, and the latter of whom died at the age of three months. Mrs. Martha (Good) Conard died on May 1, 1877.

On September 24, 1879, Dr. George Conard was married, secondly, to Augusta Lacey, by whom he had one child, Jane L., of New York City. Mrs. George Conard died on March 26, 1885. Dr. George R. Conard is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, a Republican in politics and a member of the Masonic lodge.

Robert Conard was educated at New Vienna and was graduated from the high school. From 1895 to 1897, he was a student at the Ohio State University, taking a preparatory course for medicine. He entered the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati, in 1897, and was graduated in 1905. In the meantime, he was assigned to the hospital corps of the United States army in the Spanish-American War until the spring of 1902. From 1905 to 1906, he was the house physician of St. Elizabeth's hospital, Dayton, Ohio, and later located at Blanchester, Ohio. He is a member of the Clinton County Medical Society, the Ohio State Medical Association and is also a Fellow of the American Medical Association.

In 1907, Robert Conard was married to Margaret E. Thompson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the daughter of Franklin P. and Catherine (Joyce) Thompson. Mrs. Conard was a teacher in the Cincinnati public schools. They have no children.

Doctor Conard is a member of Masonic Lodge No. 191, Free and Accepted Masons, of Chapter No. 153, Royal Arch Masons, and was formerly a commander of Company E., First Ohio Infantry. He is now first lieutenant in the medical corps, Ohio National Guard, with the First Ohio Infantry. Doctor Conard was reared in the Friends church, and Mrs. Conard is a member of the Episcopal church.

RAYMOND WATKINS, M. D.

Not only is Dr. Raymond Watkins a well-known young physician of Blanchester, Ohio, descended from a line of physicians who have occupied a conspicuous place in the history of the medical profession in southern Ohio, but he is likewise descended on his maternal side from one of the very oldest families of Clinton county. His father, who was a well-known practicing physician and teacher of medicine, was one of the pioneers in the Eclectic medical movement of the Ohio valley and his grandfather was also a physician.

Raymond Watkins was born in Blanchester, Ohio, on October 22, 1886, the son of Dr. Lyman and Lydia (Baldwin) Watkins, the former of whom was a native of Blanchester, born on May 1, 1854. The paternal grandparents of Doctor Watkins were Dr. Jonas and Anna (Hocket) Watkins, who were pioneers in Blanchester.

Raymond Watkins was educated in the public schools of Blanchester, Ohio, and, after graduating from the high school and the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati in 1911, engaged in the practice of medicine in this city. He is one of the young physicians practicing in this section of the state and has already built up a flourishing practice. A member of the Clinton County and Ohio State Medical Associations, Dr. Raymond Watkins is also a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, in which his father took high rank. He is a member of the Universalist church. He is unmarried.

Reverting to his paternal ancestry, Dr. Lyman Watkins, who died at Seton hospital, Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sunday, January 21, 1912, of diabetes, was the son of Dr.

Jonas and Anna (Hocket) Watkins. Dr. Jonas Watkins received his medical education at the Starling Medical College, Columbus, Ohio, but soon after his graduation, became a convert to Eclecticism and became one of the pioneers in that movement. The ancestral record of the Watkins family shows a large number of physicians.

Lyman Watkins was educated in the public schools of Blanchester, Ohio, and for some time was a telegrapher. In 1874 he entered Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, and from Ohio Wesleyan came to the Eclectic Medical Institute and was graduated in the spring of 1877. Upon his graduation, he entered into practice with his father, Dr. Jonas Watkins, at Blanchester. In 1888 he was elected secretary of the Ohio State Eclectic Medical Association and the following year was made president. He also at the same time was successively secretary and vice-president of the Cincinnati Eclectic Society. In 1890 he entered the faculty of his alma mater to teach histology and microscopy. In 1891 he was promoted to the chair of physiology and in 1898 was made professor of pathology as well as physiology. For about ten years of his early connection with the college, he practiced in Cincinnati, but subsequently returned to Blanchester, where he held an extensive practice. Until the end of the year 1911, he filled his chair regularly at the Eclectic Medical Collge. In 1895 Dr. Watkins wrote "A Compend of the Practice of Medicine." He was a member of the Universalist church, a member of the Knights of Pythias and a thirty-second degree Mason. He was also a valuable member of the National Eclectic Medical Association and a leader in that body.

On April 7, 1877, Dr. Lyman Watkins was married to Lida Baldwin, the daughter of Jonathan B. and Clorinda (Covalt) Baldwin, the former of whom was an agricultural implement dealer and a farmer of Blanchester, who was born on August 30, 1821, and the latter born in Brown county, Ohio. They were married in 1846 and to them were born the following children: Maria M., Lida C., Stephen B., Frank G., John A., Hugh, William J. W., and Mary I. Both Jonathan B. Baldwin and wife died in Blanchester, Ohio. Jonathan B. was the son of Jonathan, Sr., and Harriet (Blancett) Baldwin, the former of whom was the first settler in Marion township. It was a son of Jonathan and Harriett (Blancett) Baldwin, Benjamin by name, born on October 17, 1815, who was the first white child born in Marion township, Clinton county.

Dr. Lyman and Lida (Baldwin) Watkins were the parents of three children, namely: Anna C., who is now Mrs. J. M. Hudson; Baldwin, deceased; and Raymond, the subject of this sketch. Mrs. Watkins, the mother of these children, is still living in Blanchester, Ohio.

At the time of the death of Dr. Lyman Watkins, there was published the following tribute in the Eclectic Medical Journal under date of March, 1912: "Dr. Watkins was a companionable man, and was alike popular with students and doctors. He was of medium height, had gray hair and eyes, an erect carriage, and a countenance showing contentment and optimism. His happy disposition, especially in teaching, made his work unusually fruitful, and in medical convocations his humorous handling of topics gave decided pleasure to his fellow-members. He was quick at debate, always sound, and most generally carried his point by both philosophical reasoning and humorous delivery. He had a marvelously retentive memory, being able to recite pages verbatim upon a single reading. As a teacher he was thorough and exacting. His society papers were far above the average, and his contributions to journals, usually short, were models of direct thought in well-chosen words, and often elegant. Men past the meridian of life are usually wedded to the past, but Doctor Watkins was an exception, for while giving true value to what had been wrought in departed years, especially in Eclecticism, he was decidedly progressive. He was quick to see values and was not easily misled by the onrush of the new and novel, but weighing calmly and judiciously he kept abreast of the best in medical progress. Such a discriminating progressiveness made him a valued teacher and a force in Eclecticism."

WILLIAM B. GALLAHER.

It is the honorable reputation of the man of standing and affairs more than any other consideration, which gives character and stability to the body politic. While advancing his personal interests, William B. Gallaher has never lost sight of his obligations to the community at large, where for many years he has held a high place in the popular confidence and esteem as a cashier of the Sabina Bank. He entered this institution thirty-five years ago as a bookkeeper and ten years later was elected cashier, the position which he still holds.

William B. Gallaher was born on February 4, 1859, at Port William, Ohio, the son of James and Maria (Mills) Gallaher, the former of whom was born on December 5, 1829, near Sabina in Clinton county, and the latter of whom was born on July 12, 1827, the daughter of Daniel and Mary Mills. James Gallaher was the son of Charles and Elizabeth (Douglas) Gallaher, the former of whom was born in 1800 near Lebanon, Ohio, and the latter of whom was born in Columbiana county, Ohio. Charles P. Gallaher was the son of James Gallaher, who was born in Monmouth county, New Jersey, on the site of the battle ground of Monmouth, in 1764, and who had two brothers who took part in that battle. In 1875, just after reaching his majority, he immigrated to Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, where he lived until 1797, when he moved to Hamilton county, Ohio. There he remained for two years and then moved to Warren county, Ohio, and located near Lebanon. He assisted in building the first court house at Lebanon. In 1814 he moved to Richland township, Clinton county, where he remained until his death. He had a family of six daughters and two sons.

Charles P. and Elizabeth Gallaher were prominent in the life of Richland township. He was educated in the common schools of Lebanon, Ohio, and when a young man taught school in Richland township, Clinton county. He came with his parents to Richland township, in 1814, and later became a farmer, owning three hundred and sixty acres of land. He also practiced law for some time before justices of the peace and he became a justice of the peace in Richland township and served in this capacity for about twenty-five years. After coming to Sabina, Ohio, he served as mayor for two terms. It was about 1863 that he retired from the farm and moved to Sabina, where the remainder of his life was spent. He was an ardent Republican. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Protestant church. They had eight children: James, Mary, Leah, Martha, Thompson, Charles L., Elizabeth and Milo A.

Of these children, James was the father of William B. Gallaher. He was educated in the common schools of Clinton county and when a very young man, began farming in Liberty township. In 1863 he moved to a farm in Richland township and after the close of the Civil War, moved to Sabina. During the Civil War, he served as a member of Company B, One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was a second lieutenant. Although enlisted for only ninety days, he participated in the battle of Monocacy Junction.

Upon moving to Sabina, James Gallaher engaged in the clothing business for three years and then returned to his farm in Richland township. From 1869 to 1879 he lived on the farm and then returned to Sabina, where he lived until his death, December 24, 1912. He was a Republican in politics and a member of the Methodist Protestant church. James and Maria Gallaher had three children: Frank, who married Minnie Sass and lives in Iowa, where he is a farmer; Louie, who married Musgrove Daughters, now deceased, and lives in Idaho; and William B., the subject of this sketch. The mother of these children died on March 13, 1899.

William B. Gallaher was educated in the public schools of Sabina and when a young man, worked on the farm. On December 9, 1880, he entered the Sabina Bank as bookkeeper and ten years later, in 1890, was elected to the position of cashier in the same bank, which position he still holds. Mr. Gallaher also owns a farm in partnership with G. A. Pavey in Fayette county, Ohio. This farm consists of two hundred and sixty-two acres and is cultivated by a tenant.

On February 9, 1882, William B. Gallaher was married to Sallie Sylvester, who was born on December 26, 1858, the daughter of James Sylvester. Two children, Herman S. and Frederick, have been born to this union. The former married Martha Haines and lives at Sabina. The latter lives at home with his father.

As a Republican, William B. Gallaher has served as township treasurer and as a member of the school board and secretary for six years. He was also a member of the corporation council. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

MATTHEW ROMBACH.

No history of Clinton county would be complete without specific reference to the life and the services of the late Matthew Rombach in this community, a man who did much in the way of developing the wonderful resources of this favored section of the state. Coming to this county in 1834, Matthew Rombach at once threw the weight of his vigorous personality on the side of all good things hereabout and until the day of his death, held a position as one of the leading men of affairs in Clinton county. Possessed of indomitable will, boundless energy and a fine conception of public service he did well his part in the scheme of things and for many years was regarded as one of the foremost citizens of this section of the state. A man of temperate habits and of the utmost probity of conduct, energetic and persevering, conscientious and upright, the integrity of his motives was above suspicion, and at his death the community was unanimous in the declaration that his life had been a model for any American to follow.

Matthew Rombach was born at Neunkirchen, in the Schwarz Wald of Baden, Germany, on October 11, 1811, the youngest of four children born to Charles and Francesca Rombach. Charles Rombach was the son of a holder of large landed estates and in the earlier years of his manhood was employed in various offices of trust recognized by the German government, pertaining to the management of a German country seat. Following his marriage at the age of forty-two, Charles Rombach became a successful merchant and manufacturer and when his son Matthew was sixteen years of age the latter was placed in a clock factory, where he remained for two years, at the end of which time he and two or three companions decided to try their fortunes in the promising land across the sea. At the last moment Matthew Rombach's companions abandoned the venture and the young clockmaker's father withdrew the consent he previously had given for his son to go to America, declining his permission for the lad to make the trip alone. Having fully decided his course, however, Matthew Rombach was not to be daunted by paternal opposition, and thus gave a characteristic example of the energy and perseverance that dominated his entire life. Borrowing the sum of four hundred marks (one hundred dollars) from a friend, Matthew Rombach began his toilsome journey to America, walking from his home in Baden, through France to the English channel, a distance of six hundred miles; living on two meals a day and covering from thirty-six to fifty miles a day, constantly buoyed up by his determined resolution to make a place for himself in a country which seemed to offer boundless opportunities. Arriving at the coast, Matthew Rombach took passage on a sailing vessel, paying twenty-one dollars for his passage and an additional twenty-one dollars for the privilege of joining in the sailors' mess. For ninety days this vessel breasted tempestuous seas, but finally came safely into New York, from which city the young voyager proceeeded to Philadelpha, arriving in the latter city with but seven dollars in his pocket. He found work in Philadelphia in the shop of a German clockmaker, a former resident of Baden, to whom he had been recommended before his departure from home, and there he remained for six months. He then crossed the Alleghany mountains and stopped at Lancaster, Ohio, where for nine months he was employed in the shop of another clockmaker. In the fall of 1831 he went to Cincinnati, where he conducted a boarding house until the dreadful cholera epidemic of the next year disorganized all business in that city and compelled the closing of his modest hotel.

In July, 1832, Matthew Rombach was united in marriage, at Cincinnati, to Catherine Kautz, a native of Baden, Germany, and the devoted pair decided to leave the city and try their fortunes on the land. Going up river they settled in Brown county, this state, where they purchased a farm on which they were making a good start in life when, two years later, an offer of a good business opening in New Orleans caused Mr. Rombach to make preparations for removal to the latter city. Selling off his stock, he rented his farm to a responsible tenant and he and his wife departed for their prospective new home. Upon arriving at Cincinnnati, Mrs. Rombach interposed such effectual objections to the proposed change, that Mr. Rombach altered his business plans and the two turned their faces up state, bringing their household goods to this county and locating at Wilmington, where they ever after made their home. Mr. Rombach opened a hotel in Wilmington which he operated successfully for two years, at the end of which time he sold his Brown county farm and bought a farm in this county, not far from the county seat. At the same time he opened a confectionery shop and bakery in Wilmington, which he conducted for several years, meanwhile becoming one of the city's most active traders, soon being recognized as one of the shrewdest investors in Clinton county. He possessed an apparently intuitive knowledge of values and his investments were placed with rare judgment; bank stocks, lands and gilt-edged securities being his favorite forms of investment, with the result that he presently was acknowledged to be one of the leading men of affairs in this part of the state and remained a "captain of industry" to the time of his death. Matthew Rombach was one of the leading factors in the organization of the Clinton County National Bank of Wilmington in 1872, being the first vice-president of that old financial institution, and later was elected to the responsible position of president of the bank. His strong personal influence and high reputation for probity in this community were powerful factors in the rapid development of the interests of that bank, an institution which, with its surplus exceeding its capital, is recognized as one of the foremost banks in Ohio, and it stands as a fitting monument to the financial skill of its late president.

By the wise exercise of indomitable will power and unbounded energy, Matthew Rombach emerged from his "day of small things" to a position of power and influence in this community and the happy memories clustering about this grand old man long will be cherished hereabout. As was but fitting, his unusual aptitude and capacity for doing things were amply rewarded in a material way and he amassed a competence that placed him in the ranks of the foremost citizens of Clinton county, his ability having been generally recognized by his business associates, all of whom held him in the highest esteem. The broad acres of grain and woodland and meadow which were left as a valuable landed estate to his family, make a pleasing variation in the landscape and the fine live stock, in which he took so much delight, was second to none in the land.

Though never seeking political preferment, Matthew Rombach took a keen interest in local politics and was recognized as one of the leaders in the cause of good government in Clinton county. On national issues his political preferences were expressed in favor of the Democratic party. In his religious faith he was a Catholic, which was the faith of his fathers, but his broad charity and liberal views gave him a religious tolerance which caused him to be a generous contributor to the various causes of all the churches in his home city. Nor were his benefactions restricted to this line along, for all movements designed to promote the general good had his sanction and support, and he looked with pleasure on the rapid development of the best interests of his town and county.

To the union of Matthew Rombach and Catherine Kautz there was born but one child, a daughter, Louise C., who married Gen. J. W. Denver, of Wilmington, and who, with her children and grandchildren, survives to cherish the memory of a good father and a devoted grandfather, a man who had been proved true in all the relations of life.

ALFRED JOHNSON.

Among the well-known retired farmers of Sabina, this county, and numbered among the splendid citizens of that town is Alfred Johnson, who was born in Richland township, Clinton county, Ohio, on April 21, 1847.

Mr. Johnson's parents were Stephen R. and Jemima (Hoover) Johnson, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and died in 1862, and the latter of whom was born in New Jersey, the daughter of Jacob Hoover. John Johnson, father of Stephen R., came to Ohio from Pennsylvania about 1800. Stephen R. Johnson was educated in the public schools of Clinton county. He took up farming when a young man and pursued this vocation in this county all his life, having been actively engaged in general farming and stock raising. He was one of the pioneers of this section and owned eighty acres of land in Richland township at the time of his death.

Stephen R. and Jemima (Hoover) Johnson were the parents of seven children, namely: Louisa J., who married A. H. States; Lewis, who never married, was a member of Company G, Seventy-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War, having enlisted in 1862, and was killed in the battle of Peach Tree Creek on July 20, 1864; Amos, who married Elizabeth Waltmire, also was a soldier in the Civil War and served in the same company and regiment as his brother Lewis; Henry C., who married Amanda McGuire; George M., who never married, was a member of Company K, Sixtieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, was wounded at the battle of Cold Harbor in 1865, and died in a hospital at Philadelphia on April 12, 1865; Alfred, the subject of this sketch, and Mina, who married D. W. Terrell. For many years Stephen R. Johnson was an elder in the Christian church. Politically, he was a Republican.

More than a common-school education was considered unusual during the boyhood and youth of Alfred Johnson, but he not only was able to complete the common school course in Richland township, but attended the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio, for six months and later taught in the common schools of Clinton county for ten years, during this period of his life also being engaged in farming. In 1877 he quit teaching and after that devoted his entire attention to farming in Richland township. In 1882 he moved to Wayne township, in this county, and two years later returned to Richland township. In 1891 Mr. Johnson moved to Perry township, in Fayette county, and there engaged in farming and fruit raising. After living there for six years he returned to Richland township, this county, and settled on a farm, from 1897 to 1906 being actively engaged in farming there. He then moved to Sabina, where he engaged in the grocery business until 1909, since which time he has been living retired. He owns a farm of one hundred and sixty-seven acres of fertile land in Richland township, which is cultivated by tenants. He also owns two pieces of property in Sabina.

Alfred Johnson was united in marriage to Amelia B. Cline, who was born on June 11, 1856, the daughter of Edward and Elizabeth (Haines) Cline, and to this union three children were born, namely: Walter C., who died at the age of fifteen; Edward O., who married Creola B. Haines and has one child, Walter C., and Ethel Viola, who married J. W. Vanpelt and has one child, Eugene.

During almost all the time Mr. Johnson lived in Richland township he served as a school director. He is a Republican in politics and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the members of the family are indentified with the Methodist Protestant church.

LEWIS E. WHINERY.

It seems fair to judge the status of an individual in a community by the estimation in which he is held by his neighbors and fellow townsmen. They see him at his work, in his family circle, in his church at his devotion, hear his views on public questions and witness how he conducts himself in all the relations of life. They are therefore competent to judge his merits and demerits. Lewis E. Whinery, the cashier of the National Bank of Sabina, is a life-long resident of Clinton county. The people have had an opportunity to learn what manner of man he is. The responsible position which he holds is important evidence with regard to his standing as a business man and citizen.

Lewis E. Whinery was born at Morrisville, this county, on October 26, 1873, the son of Warren F. and Mary E. (Hunt) Whinery, the former of whom was born in 1837 in Cass county, Michigan, and died in 1863, and the latter of whom was born in this county, the daughter of Jacob Hunt. Warren F. Whinery' father, John V. Whinery, was married three times. During the early part of his life he taught school and later he became a merchant at Morrisville, and still later a successful farmer.

The late Warren F. Whinery had little opportunity to obtain an education, but supplemented the brief period which he spent in the public schools with home study and became a well-informed man. He came to Clinton county, Ohio, about 1852, when he was only fifteen years old. A little later he began teaching school and taught school off and on all his life in Clinton county. He was also a registered pharmacist at Sabina and postmaster of the town at the time of his death. Warren F. and Mary E. (Hunt) Whinery were the parents of three children, Eva, Lena L., and Lewis E., the subject of this sketch.

Warren F. Whinery was a valiant soldier in the Civil War, having served about a year as a first-lieutenant of Company D, One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and after the close of the war was a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Politically, he was a Republican and served as township assessor for several years. He was also corporation clerk of Sabina and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Lewis E. Whinery was educated in the public schools of Sabina, this county, and was graduated from the high school with the class of 1892, after which he attended a business college at Oswego, New York, for one year, and upon his return from business college accepted a position with a canning factory at Sabina, later being employed by W. H. Stanage & Company, of Cincinnati. Upon returning to Sabina from Cincinnati he became a partner of S. W. Doan in the clothing business and did business for three years under the firm name of Doan & Whinery. Mr. Whinery was assistant postmaster of Sabina, under W. B. Woodmansee, for three or four years, after which he was employed by the Sabina bank for four years. From the Sabina bank he went to Cedarville, Ohio, as assistant cashier of the Exchange Bank of that place, and upon the organization of the First National Bank of Sabina on November 1, 1906, became its cashier, a position which he has held ever since. Mr. Whinery is also a director in the Sabina Building and Loan Company.

On June 6, 1900, Lewis E. Whinery was married to Winona Harris, the daughter of George W. and Rose Harris, to which union one child has been born, a daughter, Rose Elizabeth, born in 1908.

Fraternally, Mr. Whinery is a member of the blue lodge of Masons at Sabina and of the chapter of that order at Wilmington. He is likewise a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Whinery are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and he is a Republican.

The First National Bank of Sabina has enjoyed a most satisfactory growth since its organization in 1906, and no man has had more to do with its growth than its cashier, Lewis E. Whinery, a man in whom the public places unqualified confidence and who is popular with the other officers, directors, stockholders and patrons of the bank.

MRS. MARY WALKER.

Among the women of Clinton county who have exerted a wide and beneficent influence upon the community, few are better known or held in higher esteem throughout the county than is Mrs. Mary J. (Patterson) Walker, widow of Abel Walker, in his day one of the best-known men in the county. Mrs. Walker's life has been full of good works and, in the beautiful evening of a ripe old age, she is living happily and comfortably in her pleasant home in the city of Wilmington, enjoying the confidence and esteem of her large circle of acquaintances, her home being the center of much genial hospitality.

Mary J. Patterson was born in Greene county, Ohio, in 1844, the daughter of Thomas and Rebecca (Hummer) Patterson, the former of whom was born in Greene county, this state, in 1815, and died in 1874, and the latter, born in Frederick county, Virginia, in 1812, and died in 1898.

Thomas Patterson was the son of John and Elizabeth (McFarland) Patterson, Pennsylvanians, who emigrated to Ohio shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War, settling near Jamestown, where they bought a farm and spent the remainder of their lives, becoming recognized as among the leading pioneers of that section. They were members of the United Presbyterian church and were active in promoting all good causes thereabout. John Patterson was a son of John Patterson, a soldier in the patriot army during the War for Independence and a man of much force of character. At the close of the war he, with his son, emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio, settling on a farm near Jamestown, in Greene county, where the rest of his life was spent.

Thomas Patterson was reared on the paternal farm near Jamestown and upon reaching manhood began the manufacture of brick, using the sun-drying process, and operated a large brick-yard on the edge of the city of Xenia. In 1854 he came to this county, locating in Wilmington, where for a year he operated the old hotel, known as the Hale House, after which he engaged in the livery business, also being incidentally engaged in farming. He married Rebecca Hummer, daughter of John and Eunice (Green) Hummer, pioneers of Greene county, this state, though both were born on Apple Pie ridge, Virginia. John Hummer was a soldier in the War of 1812. Thomas Patterson and his wife were members of the Baptist church, Mr. Patterson being one of the trustees of the church at Wilmington, and they were prominent in all good works in that community.

To Thomas and Rebecca (Hummer) Patterson were born eight children, namely: Nancy, who married C. P. Stryker and lives in Jamestown, Ohio; Abbie, who married Nathan Wood, and both are now deceased; Susan, deceased; John, deceased; Mary Jane, the immediate subject of this sketch, who married Abel Walker; Sarah, who married John Smith and lives in Xenia, Ohio; Thomas, now deceased, who for years was a prominent resident of Washington C. H., Ohio; and Rebecca, who died unmarried.

Mary Jane Patterson spent her girlhood in Xenia, receiving her early education in a select school. When she was ten years of age, her parents came to this county, locating at Wilmington, where she continued her education in the public schools. For several years she conducted a private school in Wilmington and during the Civil War period was the teacher of the school in district No. 11, in Union township.

On March 31, 1869, Mary Jane Patterson was united in marriage to Abel Walker, who was born near Wilmington, Ohio, on July 28, 1819, the son of Azel and Hannah (Jackson) Walker, natives of Frederick county, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Walker emigrated to Ohio in 1803, first locating in Waynesville, where they remained until 1804 in which year they came to Clinton county, settling on a farm in Union township, on the Port William pike, two miles from Wilmington, where they bought a quarter section of land. Azel Walker's brother, Mordecai, and two sisters settled in the same neighborhood at the same time, the Walkers becoming reckoned as among the most substantial and influential pioneers of that section of the county. They were Hicksite Friends and ever were found on the side of moral progress.

Azel and Hannah (Jackson) Walker were the parents of ten children, of whom Abel was the ninth born, the others being, in order of birth, William, Jackson, Louis, Joseph S., Rachel, Ruth, Elijah, Elizabeth Ann and Samuel. Abel Walker received his early education in the little log school house near Wilmington and was reared to become a farmer. When a young man, he bought a small farm of fifty acres and to this he gradually added, as prosperity attended his efforts, until he became the owner of a considerable farm, being recognized as one of the most substantial farmers of that part of the county. Not only was he an enterprising and progressive farmer, but he took a warm interest in several other enterprises. He was one of the founders and owners of a private bank, which was later merged into the Clinton County National Bank of Wilmington, which he helped organize and of which he was a director, his stock in that old financial institution still being retained by his widow. Mr. Walker's death, on February 20, 1897, was widely mourned throughout the county, for he long had been regarded as one of its most able men. He was a man of stanch integrity, sterling character and exemplary worth as a citizen; a true friend to his fellowmen, whose passing left a vacancy not only in his home, but in the hearts of many, which would not easily be filled. He was a member of the Hicksite Friends church. Mrs. Walker, her forefathers and her family were all life-long members of the Baptist church and in the building of their new church in Wilmington, she was one of the largest contributors and has always been an active worker in the church.

To Abel and Mary Jane (Patterson) Walker were born five children, namely: Hannah Mary, who died at the age of seventeen years; Tacy Patterson, who married Dr. Austin Robinson, of Baltimore, Maryland; Sarah Hummer, who married Frank L. Miller, of Wilmington, this county; Louise Denver, who remains with her mother, and Elizabeth Jackson, who died in 1910.

Mrs. Walker, though now journeying toward the sunset of her useful life—for she has passed the traditional three-score-and-ten-mark—retains the liveliest interest in current affairs and still is busily engaged in promoting such measures for the general good as may conveniently be given her personal attention. She is honored and respected by all who know her and occupies a firm place in the regard of the entire community.

DANIEL A. J. ROBINSON.

Daniel A. J. Robinson, the subject of this sketch, who is now deceased, was one of the highly-respected citizens of Clinton county. He was a man of exceptional character and sterling qualities, and is greatly mourned by a host of loyal friends.

Daniel A. J. Robinson was born in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, on December 22, 1828, and died in Clinton county on August 9, 1909. He was the son of John and Sarah (Rider) Robinson, who came to Brown county, Ohio, in 1833, and located on a farm in Perry township, and lived there until his death on October 27, 1858. His wife died on September 24, 1859. He was a Democrat in politics, and he and his wife were both members of the Baptist church. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, Martha, Briant, James, John, Joseph, Daniel A. J., who is the subject of this sketch, Sarah, Bley, Frances, Marcena and Levi Benjamin.

In 1856, Daniel A. J. Robinson, with his wife, went to Rochester, Illinois, and engaged in farming, which occupation he carried on until the Civil War broke out. On August 12, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in which he served with honor until the close of the war. After the war he returned to Clinton county, Ohio, where he remained until his death on August 9, 1909. He was first a member of the United Brethren church, but he and his wife later became Baptists and remained so. Most of his life, after the war, was spent near Blanchester.

On November 1, 1855, Daniel A. J. Robinson was married to Catherine Adair, who was born in Highland county, Ohio, on November 19, 1833, a daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Swadly) Adair. Samuel Adair was a native of Virginia and was born on July 5, 1793, and his wife was born on April 2, 1800. She was a daughter of Nicholas Swadly, a pioneer of Highland county, Ohio. Samuel Adair was a son of Samuel Adair, who was born on March 12, 1754, and died on September 19, 1826, and whose wife, Sarah Adair, was born on July 17, 1770, and died on September 15, 1843. Their children were as follow: Hugh, Hannah, Samuel, James, Sarah, John, Andrew, Phebe, Isibel, Alexander, Joseph and Harvey. Samuel and Catherine (Swadly) Adair were the parents of the following children: Sarah, Samuel, Andrew, Phoebe, Nicholas, Mary, Harvey, Catherine, Joseph, Jane and Margaret.

To Daniel A. J. and Catherine (Adair) Robinson were born the following children: Emma, Harvey (deceased), Frances, Arthur, Joseph, Charles, William (deceased), and Edna. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson lived together to enjoy their golden wedding, and Mrs. Robinson is still living at the age of eighty-two. She is in possession of considerable property in Blanchester, and lives with her youngest child, Edna, who has an excellent education and who for some years was a teacher in the public schools.

DARIUS H. MOON.

Ohio has been particularly fortunate in the character of her citizenship. In every county, there have been conspicuous men who by force of personality have naturally risen to leadership in vocational and professional life. A business man of superior ability, a man of prominence in military affairs, and a citizen of integrity and honor, Darius H. Moon has made an impression on the life of this state of which he is a distinguished son. He is a native of Martinsville, Clinton county, Ohio, having been born there on September 5, 1837, the son of Henry H. and Mary (Paxton) Moon, the former of whom was born in Tennessee on July 14, 1808, and the latter of whom was born in Champaign county, Ohio, on February 27, 1816.

The paternal grandparents, William and Mary (Hudson) Moon, traversed the wilderness on their way from Tennessee to their new home in this county during its early days, and lived here the remainder of their lives. The maternal grandparents, Dr. Reuben and Mary (Hoffman) Paxton, were natives of Virginia, but came from Champaign county, Ohio, to Greenfield, where after useful careers they died.

Henry H. and Mary (Paxton) Moon were well-known in their community. Henry H. Moon, who was a farmer, died in 1881, three years after the death of his wife, who passed away on July 3, 1879. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a Republican. Their family was large, according to present-day standards, consisting of eleven children, as follow: Reuben P., deceased; Jeptha Davis, deceased; Sylvester B., M. D., of Wilmington, eighty years of age; Darius Hoffman, the subject of this sketch; Frances Marion; Milton W.; Lydia M.; William, deceased; Lawson P., and two who died in infancy.

Darius Moon spent all of his early life on his father's farm, this comprising a period of twenty years, during which time he learned the carpenter's trade. When war was declared, he was among the brave youth who enlisted, being enrolled in Company B., the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He served for two years and seven months. He was of the famous Sixth Corps of the Army of the Potomac, being first and second lieutenant of his company. He was in the battles of Winchester, the first and second Wilderness campaigns, and Cedar Creek, and was wounded at Manassas Junction, Maryland. During his long period of military service, Mr. Moon was popular both with officers and men.

At the close of the war, Mr. Moon purchased a drug store, and engaged in this business for the following thirty-four years, being successful enough to retire about thirteen years ago. Mr. Moon owns the valuable property on the corner of Broadway and Main streets, besides other houses and lots.

Darius H. Moon was married to Osee Frances Strawn, who was born on August 24, 1845, in Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio, the daughter of Thomas S. and Margaret (Williams) Strawn, pioneers of Warren county. Mrs. Moon's grandfather, Enos Williams, has the distinction of having been the first teacher in the township in which Lebanon is situated, having also held the position of county auditor, as well as other public offices in the county. The father of Mrs. Moon was a Republican, and formerly a Whig. He died in 1886, his wife living three years longer, and passing away at the age of seventy-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Moon are the parents of an only son, Alden M., who is a druggist of San Antonio, Texas. His wife was Pearl Scott, a daughter of David Scott, an attorney of Blanchester. Alden M. Moon and wife have one son, Marvin Scott.

Mr. Moon has been for many years, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and has been a Mason for fifty years. He is a man of estimable character, a citizen whom his city is proud to honor, a business man of strict adherence to principle, and a friend deserving of friendship.

W. L. DOWDEN.

From the time of Tubal Cain, the artificer in iron has been one of the most important factors in civilization. He it was who forged the first implements of the field and the weapons of war. The iron worker made possible the mail-clad knights of the middle ages, and later the cannon which changed the whole course of civilization. In all the communities of Ohio the blacksmith has made the tools the farmer used, the axes, the saws, the hoes and the horseshoes. No community could dispense with the services of the blacksmith for these reasons, and too much respect cannot be accorded this important vocation. W. L. Dowden, familiarly known to his friends as "Mont," is a well-to-do blacksmith at Sabina, this county, and the owner of a good farm in Fayette county.

W. L. Dowden was born in Fayette county, Ohio, on January 14, 1857, the son of Ashford and Elizabeth (Rowe) Dowden, the former of whom was a native of Ohio, born in 1835, and died in 1911, and the latter of whom also was born in 1835, and died in 1911. She was a daughter of John and Lydia Rowe. Mr. Dowden's grandfather, Thomas Dowden, married Lucinda Stewart, and was a pioneer blacksmith in the early days of Ohio. He and his wife were the parents of nine children, of whom Ashford was the eldest, the others being James, Jane, Otho, Reece, John, Sarah and Samuel.

Ashford Dowden, the father of W. L., worked on his father's farm while he was a young man, and also learned the blacksmith's trade, working in Buena Vista, Ohio. While living in Fayette county, he was superintendent of the Fayette county infirmary for six years. In 1881 he moved to Sabina, this county, and there followed his trade as a blacksmith, practically until the time of his death. He was mayor of Sabina for twelve years and was prominently identified with the Republican party. He and his wife were earnest and faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal church, while he was fraternally connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His death occurred in 1911. Ashford and Elizabeth (Rowe) Dowden were the parents of four children, of whom W. L. was the eldest. The second born was A. N., and the third in order of birth was Ida J., who became the wife of Charles Hough, of Washington C. H., Ohio, while Thomas, the youngest, also lives in Washington C. H.

W. L. Dowden was educated in the public schools of Buena Vista, Ohio, and when he was still a young man learned the blacksmith's trade, beginning his career as an artificer in iron in Sabina in 1883, more than thirty years ago, and during these three decades he has endeared himself to the hearts of the people of this community and prospered in a commercial and business way. Until 1896, W. L. Dowden was in partnership with his brother, A. N. Dowden, and since that time has operated a shop of his own. Mr. Dowden also owns one hundred and thirty acres of land in Jasper township, Fayette county, Ohio, which he rents out to reliable tenants. A. N. Dowden is also a blacksmith at Sabina, and is engaged in general blacksmithing. He was married in 1885 to Carrie B. Culberson, the daughter of William and Ann Culberson, and to this union were born four children, May Opal, Hazel (deceased), Louis and Evelyn.

W. L. Dowden was married in 1880 to Amanda Henkle, the daughter of Ephraim Henkle, and to this union have been born three children, two of whom, an unnamed infant and Earply E., are deceased. The latter died at the age of ten years. Leon B., the first born, married V. R. Day, and they have one child, Corwin Elson.

Both the Dowden families are members of the Methodist Protestant church. W. L. Dowden is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He served one term as a member of the Sabina school board, and one term as a member of the Sabina town council. Politically, he is a Republican. His brother, A. N. Dowden, is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and owns his blacksmith shop, as well as town property in Sabina.

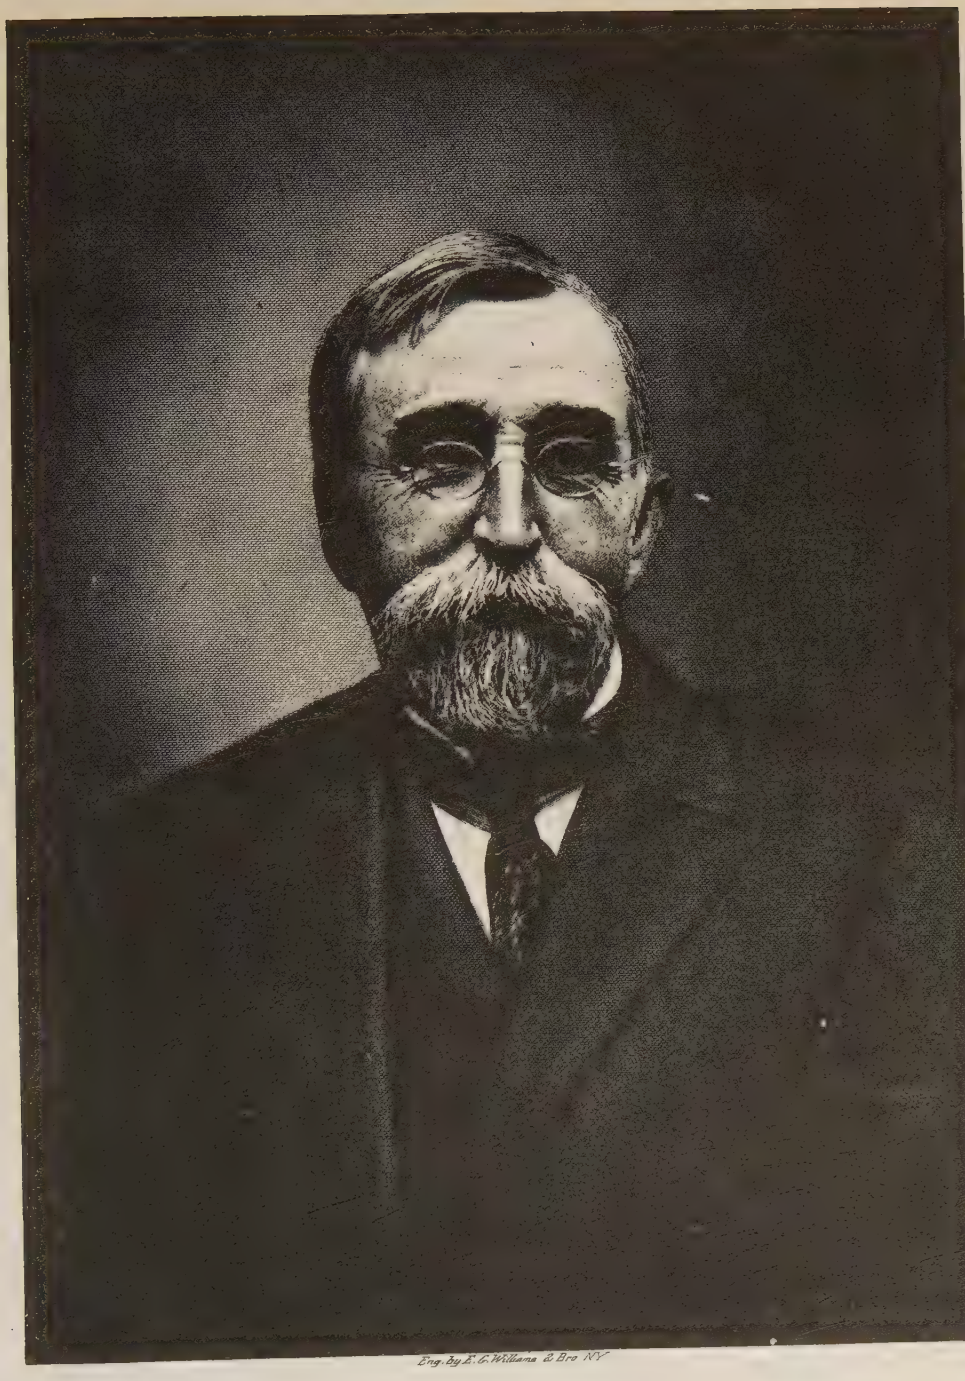
ELLIS A. LEWIS.

Great achievements always excite admiration and men who perform large deeds are those whom the world delights to honor. The man of initiative is the one who forges to the front in the commercial and financial world. Among the distinctive captains of industry, farmers and financiers of Clinton county, Ohio, a place of priority must be accorded to the venerable Ellis A. Lewis, of Sabina, who is president of two private banks; who owns one thousand acres of splendid farming land in this county, and who is descended from a very eminent family in this section. He is, in the fullest sense of the term, a progressive, self-made American, thoroughly in harmony with the spirit of the advanced age in which he lives. He is careful and systematic in his business affairs and has not permitted the accumulation of fortune to effect in any way his actions toward those less fortunate than he. He is a most sympathetic and broad-minded man and has a host of warm and admiring friends.

Ellis A. Lewis was born on April 6, 1842, at New Vienna, Clinton county, Ohio. He is the son of Isaac and Mary J. (Hoskins) Lewis, the former of whom was born on March 25, 1821, in Green township, Clinton county, and the latter of whom was born in 1820 in what is known as the Hoskins settlement of Green township, and who is the daughter of John and Hannah (Hocket) Hoskins. They were married in 1840.

The grandparents of Ellis A. Lewis were Amos and Phoebe (Nordike) Lewis, the former of whom was born in 1795 in Virginia and who, in 1812, left the Old Dominion state on horseback, crossed the mountains at Wheeling, West Virginia, and from there took a flatboat to Cincinnati. After remaining in Cincinnati about four months, during which he helped to build a small brick church on Fourth street, the first brick church ever erected in Cincinnati, he came to Highland county, Ohio. In 1813, the next year, he was married to Phoebe Nordike. They lived in Clinton county until 1862, at which time they moved to Harrisburg, Illinois, where they lived the remainder of their lives. Amos Lewis died at the age of seventy-three after having reared a family of six children: Lemuel, Isaac, Sarina, Priscilla, Aquilla and Acenth. All of the members of this family were identified with the Friends church.

Educational advantages were somewhat limited during the boyhood and youth of



E. A. Lewis.

Isaac Lewis, the father of Ellis A., and his schooling was confined to a limited attendance at subscription schools in Green township, where for a short time, he was enrolled about three months each winter. School houses in those days were built of logs, the windows consisted of oiled paper and books were very few. As a young man, Isaac Lewis learned the tanner's trade and engaged in this business for twelve years at New Vienna, after which he took up farming on the old home farm in Green township, where he farmed until 1888. After that time, he lived with his son, Ellis A., passing away in February, 1905, at the age of eighty-four. He and his wife had only three children: Ellis A., who was the eldest; Emily, deceased, who married William T. Haydock; and Hannah A., who married Seth Smith and lives at Selma, Ohio. All of the members of Isaac Lewis's family were identified with the Society of Friends. He was an ardent Republican.

Ellis A. Lewis received his education in the public schools of Green township and when a young man, he worked on his father's farm while not attending school. By the time he had reached his majority, he was taken into full partnership with his father in farming and stock dealing. This partnership lasted until the spring of 1878. Five years previously they became stockholders in the New Vienna Bank and Ellis A. had become assistant cashier of the bank. In 1877 he severed his connection with the bank except, however that he retained his stock. On February 13, 1875, he came to Sabina, Ohio, and opened the Sabina Bank as president and two years later became cashier with his father as president. After remaining cashier for several years, he again became president of the same bank and still holds this position. It was established and is still maintained as a private bank. When the bank was established, it had a capital of only ten thousand dollars but, at the present time, its general business amounts annually to about three hundred thousand dollars. In 1890 Mr. Lewis established a private bank at Glouster, Ohio, and is now president of this institution. For a period of twelve years he was connected with a brick plant at Glouster. He built his home in Sabina in 1885 and 1886 and at the present time owns about one thousand acres of land in Clinton county, most of which is rented. Mr. Lewis also has extensive coal mining interests at Glouster.

In 1877 Ellis A. Lewis was married to Emma Hadley, the daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Smith) Hadley, who bore him eight children: Mary Ruth, who is a practicing physician at Swathmore College and has her office with Doctor Grin, of Philadelphia; Flora H., who married Walter W. Jacob, of Mooreland, Pennsylvania, a druggist in the firm of Jacob Brothers, and has one son, Ellis Lewis; William E., who is a real estate dealer, married Anna Tanner and has two children, Emma Jane and William; Robert L., who is a salesman and treasurer of the Athens Brick Company at Athens, Ohio, married Edith Rannels and has two children, Allen R. and Robert Ellis; Samuel Hadley, who was superintendent of the Wassel Brick Company and who was killed on June 25, 1913, married Leona Smith and had one daughter, Mary Hadley; Isaac, who is a farmer near Bay City, Texas, married Ethel Burnett and has two children, Elizabeth and Richard; Ralph, who is assistant cashier of the Sabina Bank, married Catherine McKinstery; and John C., who is assistant cashier of the Glouster State Bank of Glouster, Ohio.

Mrs. Ellis A. Lewis, the mother of these children, died on February 5, 1898, and on July 31, 1907, Mr. Lewis was married to Mrs. Anna (Mills) Sewell, the daughter of Jonathan and Rhoda Mills, of Wilson township. Mrs. Lewis' first husband, William J. Sewell, was a graduate of Wilmington College, superintendent of the Sabina schools and county examiner.

No man living in Clinton county today is more highly respected than Ellis A. Lewis. Few men are better known in this section of Ohio than he and few have done more to promote the development of this great county.

ALBERT H. MILLS.

Albert H. Mills is a well-known rural-mail carrier of Sabina, this county, and one of the highly-respected citizens of Richland township. He was born on October 25, 1852, in Wilton township, this county, the son of Jonathan and Rhoda (Peelle) Mills, the former of whom was born on June 6, 1820, at Richmond, Indiana, and the latter on August 20, 1815, in Wilson township. They were married on November 23, 1844. Rhoda Peelle was the daughter of John and Lydia (Bundy) Peelle, the former of whom was a native of North Carolina and a farmer by occupation. He was an early settler in Wilson township, a large land-owner for the time in which he lived, and he and his wife were active members of the Friends church at Grassy Run, being also active in local affairs generally in their day and generation. Seven children were born to John and Lydia Peelle, William, Reuben, Mark, Emma, Rhoda, Mary and Lydia, all of whom now are deceased.

The paternal grandparents of Albert H. Mills were Hezekiah and Dorcas (Bentley) Mills, both of whom were natives of North Carolina. They were married in 1813 and had eleven children, of whom only three, Jonathan, Rebecca and John, are now living. The deceased children were Benjamin, Joseph, Jesse, William, Hannah, Thomas, Milton and Melinda. Hezekiah Mills and wife came to Ohio shortly after their marriage, in 1813, and purchased fifty acres of land in Wilson township, this county, later emigrating to Indiana, where they lived for a short time, after which they moved to Neoga, in Cumberland county, Illinois, where they spent the rest of their lives. Hezekiah Mills taught the first school in Wilson township, this county. He was a member of the Friends church and was very active in the affairs of that church.

Joseph and Hannah (Morris) Mills, the paternal great-grandparents of Albert H. Mills, were natives of North Carolina, the former of whom was the son of John Mills, also a native of that state. They were the parents of six children, Hannah, Jane, Jonathan, Hezekiah, John and Joseph. After their marriage they immigrated to Ohio and settled in Clinton county, where they spent the remainder of their lives, Hannah Mills living to be ninety-eight years old.

Jonathan Mills, the father of Albert H., was educated in the common schools of Clinton county at the time when only three books were generally used in the schools—a primer, a spelling-book and the Bible. Jonathan Mills moved to Clinton county in December, 1844, and settled on one hundred and ten acres of land. He built a house of hewed logs immediately after moving here and another house in 1854. He and his wife were always active in the Friends church, which held meetings in this community twice a week, and were regular attendants at the services. They were the parents of five children, Calvin, Lewis, Albert H., Elias and Anna. Of these children, Calvin, a resident of Illinois, married Fannie Janes, who later died, and after her death he married Jennie Jones. Lewis married Emma Bevan, of Wilson township. Elias, who lives on the home place, married Emma Fellers, and, after her death, Mertie Rayburn. Anna, who is a resident of Sabina, this county, married Prof. J. W. Sewell, and, after his death, married Ellis A. Lewis.

Albert H. Mills was educated in the common schools of Wilson township and in the normal school at Lebanon, Ohio. He taught four years in all, one year in the common schools of Clinton county and three years in Greene county, this state. On December 30, 1879, Mr. Mills was married to Anna Burris, the daughter of James L. and Amanda (Hall) Burris, of Clinton county. James L. Burris was a farmer, who owned about nine hundred acres of land at one time in Clinton and Fayette counties. He was an active member of the Friends church, a member of the Masonic lodge, and was also active in the Grange. He died on June 5, 1912, and his widow lives at Sabina. They were the parents of eight children, John H., Elizabeth Ellen, Anna, William, Emma, Harvey, Bert and Berdette, the latter deceased. John H., who lives in Sabina, is unmarried. Elizabeth E. married G. A. Pavey, of Sabina. Anna is the wife of Mr. Mills. William, who is also unmarried, lives at Sabina. Emma married Paul Palmer, of Washington C. H., Ohio. Harvey married Addie McKay, of Fayette county, and Bert married Rose Ellis, of Clinton county.

Mrs. Mills's father, James Burris, married Amanda Hall, a native of Kentucky, and the daughter of Harvey and Nancy (Vanhook) Hall, the former of whom was born in Kentucky, a farmer by occupation, who moved to Ohio about sixty-five years ago and settled in Wilson township, this county, where he became an extensive stock raiser. He was an active member of the Christian church. The grandparents of Mrs. Mills were William T. and Elizabeth (Arnold) Burris, natives of North Carolina and Fayette county, Ohio, respectively. William T. Burris came to Ohio before his marriage and became the owner of about four hundred acres of land in this section of the state, being also an extensive dealer in live stock. He and his wife, prominent members of the Friends church, were the parents of three children, John A., James L. and Hannah. After Mr. Mills's marriage he located at Sabina and has been living there ever since. He is the inventor of a rack used in the postoffice, which is especially efficient for handling mail.

To Albert H. and Anna (Burris) Mills have been born two children, Pearl and Elby R. The former married Luella Keller and is employed by the Standard Oil Company at Cincinnati. The latter is unmarried and is the proprietor of a garage at Sabina. Mr. and Mrs. Mills are members of the Friends church and active in church work. They own property in Sabina and Mr. Mills has been a mail carrier on Route No. 1 out of Sabina for the past twelve years.

JOHN H. NORMAN, M. D.

There is no other profession in which the vital interests of a community are so at stake as that of the physician. He must stand ever in readiness to serve his people at any and all times regardless of race or caste, poverty or riches, and this service must at all times be both honest and skilled. To have served a people well in such a capacity for over forty years is not only a mark of good service but it is a mark of honor of the highest order, and the subject of this sketch, Dr. John H. Norman, has performed just such a service as this and truly deserves the honor and distinction in which he is held by a whole community.

John H. Norman was born in Warren county, near Blanchester, on November 10, 1851. He was the son of Enos E. and Elizabeth (Watkins) Norman. Enos E. Norman was born in West Virginia on April 18, 1826. He was the son of Bailey and Tacy (Tyson) Norman who were both natives of Harrison county, West Virginia, who, after their marriage, came to Warren county and settled on a farm in 1831, where they lived until their deaths. They were both members of the Free Will Baptist church.

Enos E. Norman was educated in the public schools of Warren county and remained on the farm until at the age of forty he left the farm and moved into Blanchester where he engaged in the undertaking business until 1908, when he retired from active life. He is a Republican in politics and an active member of the Free Will Baptist church.

Elizabeth (Watkins) Norman, the wife of Enos E. Norman, and the mother of the subject of this sketch, was born on October 5, 1828, and died on March 26, 1913. She was the daughter of Harrison P. and Mary (Collins) Watkins, both of whom came from Pennsylvania to Warren county and settled on a farm. He was a member of the Baptist church and she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

John H. Norman remained on the farm until he was sixteen years of age. He was educated in the public schools of Warren county and afterwards was graduated from the Lebanon (Ohio) Normal School, after which he taught in the public schools for a period of five years and then attended the Eclectic College of Medicine at Cincinnati and graduated from that institution in 1875. He then took up the practice of medicine in Edenton, in Clermont county, where he remained for sixteen years, after which time he came to Blanchester, where he has been a practicing physician for twenty-five years. He is a member of both the County, State and National Medical Associations. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He is also a member of the Free Will Baptist church.

In August of 1878, John H. Norman was married to Mary Weller, of Hamilton county, Ohio, a daughter of Phillip Weller, now deceased. To this union were born three children as follow: Omar, who is deceased; Orris, who lives in Blanchester; and Edna, who is the wife of James P. Britton of Chillicothe, Ohio.

Few men in this exacting profession have ever been more faithful to their obligations than Dr. John H. Norman.

CHARLES F. ALLEN.

By his indomitable enterprise and progressive methods, Charles F. Allen has come to be one of the most successful business men of Sabina, Clinton county, Ohio. He is a man of most genial nature, but nevertheless painstaking and careful in his business relations and today is one of the most prosperous citizens of the community.

Charles F. Allen was born on May 5, 1852, at Bainbridge in Ross county, Ohio, and is the son of George and Amanda (Fort) Allen, the former of whom was born in 1818 in Highland county, Ohio, and the latter of whom was born at Bainbridge in Ross county, and died in 1863. George Allen was the son of George Allen, Sr., who was born in New Jersey and who came to Ohio in 1815 or 1816.

George Allen, the father of Charles F., was educated in the common schools of Ross county and when a young man learned the carpenter trade. In 1858 he came to Sabina and spent the rest of his life in this town. He was a contractor and builder and in 1875 established a lumber yard which his son, Charles F., still operates. He was engaged in the general retail lumber business until his retirement in 1897. He died in 1904.

George and Amanda (Fort) Allen were the parents of the following children. Ethan, never married; William, married Lydia Barlough; James; Charles; Emma, married C. B. Hill; John, married Ann Uptegraff; George; Ella, married Lewis Lappe; Henry, died in infancy; and another son died in infancy. The late George Allen was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and as a Republican served many terms as a member of the town council.

Charles F. Allen was educated in the common schools of Sabina and when a young man engaged in the lumber business with his father and became a partner with his father in 1875 and in 1897 succeeded his father in this business. In 1914 Mr. Allen's son, Ross, was taken into the firm. It was started originally on a capital of seven hundred and fifty dollars in 1875, and it has grown to a business with a capital stock of seven thousand five hundred dollars. The firm handles lumber and building materials of all kinds and has a large and valuable patronage in this part of Clinton county.

On November 25, 1874, Charles F. Allen was married to Anna Drake, who was born on November 10, 1856, in Clinton county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Daniel Drake. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have had three children: Harry R., who married Evelyn Robison, has one child, Arthur, and is engaged in the wholesale lumber business at Columbus, Ohio; Ross W. married Eva Leffel and they have one child, Russell; Charles J. is unmarried and lives at home with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Allen is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is an ardent and enthusiastic Republican.

HARRY L. LITTLETON.

Harry L. Littleton, an enterprising and successful young business man of Sabina, was born on April 6, 1883, in Greene county, at Yellow Springs. He is the son of Grenville and Clarinda (Sparrow) Littleton, the former of whom was born in Greene county, and the latter of whom was born in Clark county, Ohio, the daughter of John and Sarah (Johnson) Sparrow, natives of England. Grenville Littleton was the son of Joel Littleton, a farmer of Clark county, Ohio, and was one of five children. The other four were Joel B., John, Anna and Fay. Joel Littleton was a devout member of the Presbyterian church.

Grenville Littleton was educated in the common schools of Clark county, Ohio, and when a young man engaged in farming in that county. In 1882 he entered the undertaking business at Yellow Springs, Ohio, and has continued in business at that place until the present time. Since he first started in business he has several other enterprises, including furniture and livery. Grenville and Clarinda (Sparrow) Littleton have had five children, as follow: Daisy, married Lewis Reinwald; Earl, married Josephine Hutcheson; Morris, is unmarried; Harry L., the subject of this sketch, and Edwin. Mr. Littleton's father's family are members of the Presbyterian church. The father is an ardent Democrat.

Educated in the common schools of Yellow Springs, Ohio, Harry L. Littleton worked with his father after finishing his education and in 1901 attended the Clark School of Embalming at Cincinnati. In 1903 he took a post-graduate course at the same institution. For some time he was employed by W. H. Neal at Xenia, Ohio, until his coming to Sabina on June 3, 1905. At this time he purchased the undertaking business of George M. Haines and has continued in business since 1905, a period of more than ten years. He is well qualified for the business in which he is engaged and temperamentally suited to it.

On January 9, 1903, Harry L. Littleton was married to Margaret S. Dakin, the daughter of S. W. Dakin, of Yellow Springs. To this union there has been born one child, Roger W., born in March, 1904.

Mr. Littleton is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Mr. and Mrs. Littleton are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Littleton is a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Littleton is the owner of the first and only funeral car in Clinton county and conducted the first automobile funeral in Clinton.

HENRY L. LEWELLEN.

Henry L. Lewellen, a pleasant, prosperous and public-spirited business man of Sabina, Ohio, has stamped his individuality in no uncertain manner upon the locality where he resides. He is an excellent representative of that type of the much heralded American business man—the type that does things—Mr. Lewellyn having, by his own exertion, established at Sabina, a flourishing trade in furniture.

Henry L. Lewellen was born on January 17, 1870, near Sugar Tree ridge in Adams county, Ohio. He is the son of Morgan and Mary J. (Hunter) Lewellen, the former of whom was a native of Pennsylvania, who was accidentally killed in October, 1875, and the latter of whom was a daughter of John Hunter, who married a Miss Sloan. The grandparents on the paternal side were John and Nancy (Stantz) Lewellen. He was a blacksmith and farmer of Adams county and reared a family of six children as follow: Lydia, Catherine, Alfred, Abbie, William and Morgan.

The late Morgan Lewellen began farming early in life in Adams county, Ohio, and later branched out and engaged in the live-stock business. He was killed by the falling of a derrick pole at the building of the court house at West Union, Ohio, in the fall of 1875. During his life, he was actively identified with the Democratic party. His wife was a member of the Baptist church. Morgan and Mary J. Lewellen had eight children, of whom Henry L., the subject of this sketch, was the sixth. The others were: Anna, who never married; Frances, who married S. C. Spears; John, who is unmarried; Lewis, who married Nettie Roberts; Thomas, who married Margaret Thompson; Edgar and George, neither of whom ever married.

Henry L. Lewellen was educated in the public schools of Greene and Clinton counties, Ohio, and was graduated from the Sabina high school with the class of 1903. When he was a very young man, he worked with his brother in the vehicle business. In 1895 he entered this vocation as a clerk and later became identified with his father-in-law in the furniture business and in 1915 took complete charge of the business. Mr. Lewellen has been in the business for more than fifteen years and it was started with a capital of two hundred and seventy-five dollars. He has increased from year to year until now it is one of the most flourishing enterprises in this section. The firm owns the building it occupies.

In February, 1895, Henry L. Lewellen was married to Esa E. Gaskins, who was born on July 8, 1874, the daughter of Dr. Aaron J. Gaskins. Three children have been born to this union: Mary L., who was born on March 11, 1900; Doris, December 4, 1904; and Aaron, August 18, 1911.

It was during the years that Mr. Lewellen managed the furniture business for his father-in-law that it grew and prospered to its present condition. Mr. Lewellen keeps only a high grade of furniture and has a large business for a town of only fifteen hundred people.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewellen are members of the Friends church and he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Elected as a Democrat, he has served nearly six years as city treasurer of Sabina, a position he has filled with credit as his long tenure will well prove.

PATRICK J. CURREN.

It is the honorable reputation of a man in business more than any other consideration which gives character and stability to our public institutions, and which fixes the boundaries of one's personal reputation. Patrick J. Curren, a well-known business man of Sabina, Ohio, and a veteran of the Spanish-American War, has never lost sight of his obligations to the community in general, and during his residence in this city he has taken an active part in all public movements. During the war with Spain, he was a major in the Third Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was assistant superintendent in loading transports at Tampa, Florida. He was mustered out of the service in 1898.

Patrick J. Curren was born September 4, 1860, at Chillicothe, Ohio, a son of Martin and Ella (Linnehan) Curren, the former of whom was born in Clashmore, County Waterford, Ireland, in 1814, and died in 1898, and the latter of whom was born in the same county in 1815, and died in February, 1899. They were married in their native land, and came to America in 1848, settling in Chillicothe, Ohio. Martin Curren was a tailor by trade, and followed this vocation at Chillicothe, where he lived the remainder of his life. He and his wife were the parents of seven children: Mary, who became the wife of Yormand Thompson; Catherine, the wife of John Kennedy; Patrick J., the immediate subject of this review: Ella, the wife of John B. Caddon; and three children deceased. Martin Curren was a member of the Catholic church during his life, and was identified with the Democratic party.

Patrick J. Curren was educated in the public and parochial schools of Chillicothe, Ohio, and when a young man, learned the tailor's trade. He worked at this trade in Chillicothe for about three years, after which he went to New York City, where he remained four months learning to "cut." In April, 1876, he came to Wilmington, Ohio, and after working at his trade there for about one year, removed to Muncie, Indiana, where he was employed until about 1879, when he moved to Washington C. H., Ohio, and the next year came to Sabina.

After the close of the Spanish-American War Mr. Curren returned to Sabina, taking up his trade as a tailor. He now has a general men's and children's clothing store, with a prosperous and growing business.

Patrick J. Curren was married to Estella Johnson, the daughter of Henry Johnson, and they have had three children: Frederick L., born on December 27, 1900; Walter Paul, May 7, 1902; and Martin, June 1, 1905.

Mr. and Mrs. Curren are faithful and devoted members of the Catholic church. Mr. Curren belongs to the Fraternal Order of Eagles. As a Democrat, he has served as a member of the town council, corporation treasurer and township treasurer. He served as a member of the town council in 1897 and 1898, and was township treasurer for two years, and was corporation treasurer for four years. During this time the Sabina school house was built. Mr. Curren is a member of the Clinton county election board, and also a member of the Democratic central executive committee. He is highly respected and esteemed in Sabina, and his ever increasing business may be attributed to the high favor in which he is held by his fellow townsmen.

CHARLES WILLIAM CUSTIS.

Charles William Custis, a well-known business man and manufacturer of Sabina, Ohio, who is now living retired, was born in Clinton county, Ohio, on July 20, 1857, the son of William and Susan (Drake) Custis, natives of Clinton county, and New York state, respectively. Susan Drake was a daughter of Daniel and Ann (Musherue) Drake.

The maternal grandparents of Mr. Custis were Daniel Drake and wife, the former of whom was a native of New England and engaged in the oyster business. He was a prominent member of the Christian church, and moved to Ohio early in life, locating in this county, where he engaged in farming, being the owner of one hundred acres of land. He and his life were the parents of five children, Abbie, Elizabeth, Mary, Susan and Anna.

William Custis was the son of Douglas Custis, a well-known citizen of this county. William Custis, the father of Charles W., attended the common schools of Clinton county, and here completed his education. He removed to Sabina from New Antioch, Ohio, and for some time was engaged in the general mercantile business, handling hardware and dry goods for the most part. While engaged in business in Sabina, he lived on a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres at the edge of the town. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church and an active worker in that denomination. Fraternally, he was identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while, politically, he was an ardent supporter of the Republican party. He died in October, 1906, after having lived a most useful life. His widow is still living at the age of seventy-six years. They were the parents of eight children, Charles William, Frank, Ida B., Anna, James, Levi D., Lula and Grace. Of these children Frank is married and lives at Dayton, Ohio. Ida B. also lives at Dayton and is the wife of Samuel McGuire. Anna is the wife of L. A. Wysong, of Wilmington. James married Rebecca Perrell, and they live in Sabina. Levi D. married Georgia Kuhn, and they live in Canton, Ohio. Lula is the wife of Dr. F. G. Leightner, of Sabina, and Grace is the wife of Marion Kuhn, of Crooksville, Ohio.

Charles W. Custis received his education in the common schools, and after leaving school was engaged for some time in business with his father. After managing his father's hardware store for some time he retired from that concern and engaged in the restaurant and bakery business. After disposing of this latter business he next engaged with John Matthews as a partner in handling bankruptcy stocks of merchandise. He is the owner of one hundred and ten acres of land in Clinton county, also valuable property in Sabina, and is the owner of the ice-cream factory in Sabina. For the past ten years Mr. Custis has been retired from active business.

Charles W. Custis has been twice married, his first wife having been Ellie M. Dalgern, and to which union three children were born, Lauron A., Clyde Burtsal and Ethel Marie. Lauron A., who lives in Goshen, Indiana, married Margaret Shannon, and is engaged in the wholesale manufacture of ice cream in that city. Clyde, who is a resident of Sabina, married Mary Spurgeon. Ethel is the wife of Arthur N. Hains, a resident of Sabina. Mr. Custis married, secondly, Flora Johnson, daughter of Moses Johnson, of Port Williams, to which union one child has been born, a son, Earl Johnson, who is unmarried.

Mr. Custis and wife are members of the Methodist Protestant church and both take an active interest in church work. Mr. Custis is a member of the board of public affairs and is a Republican.

COL. CHARLES R. FISHER.

Col. Charles R. Fisher, the president of the Journal-Republican Company, publishers of the Journal--Republican, of Wilmington, Ohio, is descended from a line of distinguished ancestors, his great-grandfather having bee na soldier in the American Revolution, his grandfather having been a member of the United States Congress, his father having been, for twenty years, connected with the Clinton Republican as editor, served for several terms as prosecuting attorney of the county and, during his lifetime was a leading member of the Clinton county bar. Col. Charles R. Fisher is one of the leading citizens of Wilmington. Except for a period of fourteeen years, from 1870 to 1884, various members of the Fisher family have been connected with the leading newspapers of Clinton county, practically ever since the formation of the county. The present president of the publishing company himself has served as deputy postmaster of Wilmington, deputy clerk of the courts of Clinton county, postmaster of Wilmington and aide-de-camp, with the rank of colonel, to the late Gov. Asa S. Bushnell, of Ohio.

Charles R. Fisher was born in Wilmington, February 14, 1860, and is the son of William B. and Euphemia (Pegg) Fisher, the former of whom was born in 1818, at Mt. Pleasant, in Clermont county, Ohio, and married Euphemia Pegg in 1846. She was born at Batavia, in Clermont county, in October, 1826. They had four children: Mary, who married Dr. A. T. Quinn, of Wilmington; Katherine, the wife of C. C. Nichols and who died in 1888; William G., who married Effie Hunsicker, of Pickaway county, Ohio; and Col. Charles R., the subject of this sketch.

William B. Fisher and family were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was a Republican in politics and active during his entire life for the principles of that party.

In 1799 Adam Fischer, a German resident of Pennsylvania, who had just returned from the Revolutionary War, immigrated to Clermont county, Ohio, with his family, settling at Point Pleasant. About this time the spelling of the name was changed from Fischer to Fisher, because David Fischer, grandfather of the subject of this sketch and the eldest son in Adam Fischer's family, objected to the nickname "Dutch," which his schoolmates gave him. Here David Fisher grew to manhood and became a prodigious student of public affairs, being called upon frequently for political addresses in southwestern Ohio. He was elected to the General Assembly of Ohio from Clermont county in 1842, and four years later moved to Wilmington, where he became the owner and editor of the Clinton Republican, formerly known as the Western Whig, an organ favoring the high protective tariff. In the fall of 1846, he was elected to represent the Wilmington district in the United States Congress as a Whig.

FIFTY-FIVE YEARS IN THE NEWSPAPER BUSINESS IN WILMINGTON.

The eldest son of David Fisher was William Byrne, who derived his middle name from the maiden name of his Welsh mother. He grew up on a farm near Point Pleasant, studied law and was admitted to the bar. In 1846, he married Euphemia Pegg, of Batavia, and thereafter opened a law office in that village. In the fall of 1847, he came to Wilmington to take charge of his father's paper during his absence in Congress. He learned to like the newspaper business and also Wilmington, and in 1850 purchased the paper from his father. David moved to Cincinnati, where, a third of a century later, he died at the age of ninety-three years. William B. Fisher was connected with the Clinton Republican for twenty years, at the same time practicing his profession and serving as prosecuting attorney. For a short time, the late Franklin Corwin was associated with him as a partner and, subsequently, the late Dr. A. P. Russell. This latter arrangement continued until Doctor Russell's election as secretary of state in 1860. In 1866, William B. Fisher sold a half interest in the paper to Capt. D. L. Way, now a resident of Jacksonville, Florida. Four years later he sold out his entire interest because of failing health and died in 1874.

In 1884, William G. and Charles R. Fisher, the two sons of William B. Fisher, bought the Wilmington Journal, which had been established sixteen years previously by the Garvin brothers. At that time the Journal had a circulation of nine hundred copies and was a four-page paper. The prestige of the paper grew from year to year, until it attained a circulation of nearly four thousand copies, more than that of any two other papers published in the county. With the exception of the period from 1870 to 1884, the name Fisher has been connected with Wilmington's newspaper interests continuously since 1846.

On January 1, 1913 the Wilmington Journal, the paper of the younger Fishers, and the Clinton Republican, the former paper of the father and son, were consolidated and are now published under the name of the Journal-Republican. Col Charles R. Fisher is president of the company and actively engaged in its management; Thurman Miller is secretary and treasurer and William G. Fisher, T. M. Bales and Albert I. Bailey are the remaining directors.

Col. Charles R. Fisher was educated in the public schools of Wilmington and began working, when a lad of twelve, as a messenger for the First National Bank during his vacations. In 1876 he was made deputy postmaster, under Capt. W. P. Wolf, and was in the service for three years, after which he was made deputy clerk of the county courts. In April, 1884, he resigned the latter position and he and his brother, William G., purchased the Journal, as has already been noted, publishing it under the firm name of W. G. & C. R. Fisher until its consolidation as above stated. From 1890 to 1894, Colonel Fisher was postmaster of Wilmington and from 1896 to 1900, aide-de-camp to Governor Asa S. Bushnell.

On March 11, 1905, Colonel Fisher was married to Sarah Hinman, a native of Kentucky and the daughter of the late David S. Hinman. They have no children.

For twenty-seven years, Col. Charles R. Fisher has been in charge of the music of the Methodist church of Wilmington and his father was chorister of the same church for nearly as long a period before that time. Mrs. Fisher has been the organist for nineteen years.

It is doubtful if any enterprise in Clinton county has had a more successful career or plays an equally important part in the business and social life as the Clinton Telephone Company. It began business in January, 1900, with one hundred and twenty-five subscribers, which have been increased to sixteen hundred in Wilmington alone and over seventeen hundred in the remaining exchanges, making a total of about thirty-four hundred in the county. The company has a capital of two hundred thousand dollars, fully paid and all issued and owned by the citizens of Clinton county, and has just completed a handsome two-story, fire-proof home for itself in Wilmington. Colonel Fisher has been president of the Clinton Telephone Company since its organization, and gives to it much of his time and labor.

He has been secretary and treasurer of the Masonic Temple Company, the company which erected the Masonic Temple in Wilmington, ever since its organization, and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a charter member of Wilmington commandery, Knights Templar, and has served as presiding officer of all the Masonic bodies in this city.

HARRY STUNTZ, M. D.

Dr. Harry Stuntz is one of the leading physicians of Sabina, Richland township, this county, and for many years has enjoyed a large and lucrative practice in that section of Clinton county. He was born at Terrace Park, Ohio, the son of Prof. C. R. and Eliza (Hauck) Stuntz, the former of whom was a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Poland, Ohio, who is now living in Cincinnati at the age of eighty years. She was the daughter of Daniel Hauck, of Poland, Ohio.

Prof. C. R. Stuntz was graduated from Allegheny College, and, during his active career, was prominently known in educational circles in Cincinnati, having been for thirty years connected with the Woodward high school as professor of natural sciences. He was a member and at one time president of the American Chemists' Association. Prof. C. R. and Eliza (Hauck) Stuntz were the parents of eight children, George R., Mary, J. Edward, Frances, Frank M., Helen, Dr. Harry and Chauncey R.

Of these children, George married Emma Meader and lives in Cincinnati. Mary married W. T. Ritchie, a well-known lawyer of Cincinnati, Ohio, who resides at Madisonville. J. Edward married Birdie Sharp and is superintendent of the Cape Cruz Company, of Cuba, this county. Frances, who lives in Milford, married Dr. F. C. Curry. Frank M., who married Louise Sharp, is superintendent of the Central factory at Sinclaire, Louisiana. Helen married T. P. Walker, who is secretary of the Queen City Forging Company, of Cincinnati. Chauncey, who is assistant superintendent of the Cape Cruz Company, married Eveline Elliott and lives at Terrace Park.

Dr. Harry Stuntz married Lida Ruese, the daughter of Herman and Minnie (Tholke) Ruese, the former of whom was born in Germany and came to America at the age of sixteen years, locating in Cincinnati, where he became a well-known contract builder. His wife also was a native of Germany, and was brought to America by her parents when an infant, her parents also locating in Cincinnati. Herman Ruese was a soldier in the Civil War and served during the entire period of that great struggle. He died on February 24, 1900, and his widow on March 23, 1912. They were the parents of five children, Emma, Vina, Ella, Lydia and John. Doctor and Mrs. Stuntz have no children.

Doctor Stuntz is a member of the American Medical Association, the Ohio State Medical Society and the Clinton County Medical Society. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, and, while a student at that institution, was a member of the Nu Sigma Nu, a well-known and popular Greek-letter society. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and the Modern Woodmen of America. Doctor Stuntz has a well-equipped office at Sabina and is popular in the community, not only in a professional but in a private way.

EDWARD EVERETT TERRELL.

Edward Everett Terrell is descended from an old and cultured family of Clinton county and is an energetic, keen, well-educated and thrifty young business man, and has a host of friends in Clinton county.

Edward E. Terrell was born on July 4, 1877, in Wilmington, Ohio, the son of Allen and Matilda (Conard) Terrell, the former of whom was born in 1848 and died on February 15, 1892, and the latter of whom was born on May 19, 1851, the daughter of Abraham and Phoebe Conard. The paternal grandparents of Edward E. Terrell were Israel A. and Sidney (Huff) Terrell, the former of whom was born in 1818 and died in 1906, and the latter of whom was born in 1827 and died in 1902. Israel A. Terrell moved to Clinton county in 1848 and located in Wayne township on a farm. Roads were not even laid out and scarcely a trail was blazed. During his life he cleared and drained about half of eleven hundred acres of land, which he owned at the time of his death. He was also vice-president of the New Vienna bank and a stockholder of the bank at Leesburg. He and his wife had six children, James H., Allen I., Sarah, William, Charles and Annie. Israel T. Terrell was the son of Pleasant and Esther (Haines) Terrell, natives of Bedford county, Virginia, the former of whom was born in 1791 and died in 1837 and the latter died in 1846. Pleasant and Esther Terrell were the parents of six children: John, Israel, David, Mary, Narcissa and Ruth. Pleasant Terrell was the son of David and Mary (Anthony) Terrell, the former of whom was born near Lynchburg, Virginia, in 1763, and died in 1858, and the latter died in 1858. They came to Ohio in 1806 and located near Highland in Highland county. They had eight children, Pleasant, Christopher, David, Joseph, Mary, Judith, Sarah and Elizabeth. David Terrell was one of the early justices of the peace in Fairfield township. He was a great hunter and liked to ramble in the forest. David Terrell's father was David Terrell, Sr., who was married three times, the first time to Sarah Johnson, secondly to Sarah Clark, and thirdly to Martha Johnson. He was the father of nine children. David Terrell, Sr., was also the son of David Terrell, who was born in 1675 and died in 1757. He and his wife reared a family of twelve children. He was the son of William Terrell, who was born in 1650 and came to America in 1670 with his two brothers. They were sent here by King James II as explorers and hunters. They were granted large tracts of land in Virginia.

Allen I. Terrell, the father of Edward E., began his education in the common schools of Wayne township, and later was graduated from Earlham College with the class of 1860. After finishing his education he taught in the high school at New Vienna. Later he was professor of mathematics at Wilmington College, but on account of failing health he returned to the farm in Wayne township, in 1880, and lived there until his death, in 1892. At the time of his death he owned two hundred and twenty-five acres of land. Allen I. Terrell was the father of six children, of whom Edward Everett was the eldest. The others were: Howard V., married Elva Morrison; Clara A., is the wife of Maurice B. Starbuck, of Kirksville, Missouri; Rendall H., married Sarah Rannells and lives on the home farm; Daniel H., died on February 15, 1892; and Stanley P., died on September 20, 1894. A member of the Friends church, Allen I. Terrell was pastor of the church at Fairview and clerk of the Indiana yearly meeting. He was well known in religious circles, both in Ohio and Indiana.

Edward Everett Terrell received the rudiments of an education in the schools of Wayne township. In the fall of 1892 and the spring of 1893 he attended Earlham College, being at home for the succeeding two years. He then entered Wilmington College in the fall of 1895 and remained for one year. He then taught for one year in Wayne township, and in 1897 the family moved to Thomasville, Georgia, where he lived for eight months. He afterward lived with his grandfather, Israel A. Terrell, for one and one-half years, after which time he attended Wilmington College. Upon returning to Thomasville, Georgia, he taught bookkeeping in the business college there for two years. Later he taught in the business college at Macon, Georgia, for one and one-half years. Upon his return to Ohio he was graduated from Wilmington College in 1904. From 1906 until 1911 Mr. Terrell was secretary of the National Safety Snap Manufacturing Company, at Wilmington, Ohio. During 1904 and 1905 he had been bookkeeper for the Wilmington Gas Company. In 1910 Mr. Terrell was in the real estate and fire insurance business at Wilmington. In 1913 E. R. Bales was associated with him as a partner.

On December 15, 1896, Edward E. Terrell was married to Susannna B. McKay, the daughter of Robert F. and Mary F. (Nickerson) McKay. Two children have been born to this union: Allen M., born on April 18, 1910; and Mary M., July 19, 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Terrell are members of the Friends church and Mr. Terrell has served as superintendent of the Sunday school. He is a director of the First National Bank at Wilmington, a Republican in politics and a member of the Wilmington town council.

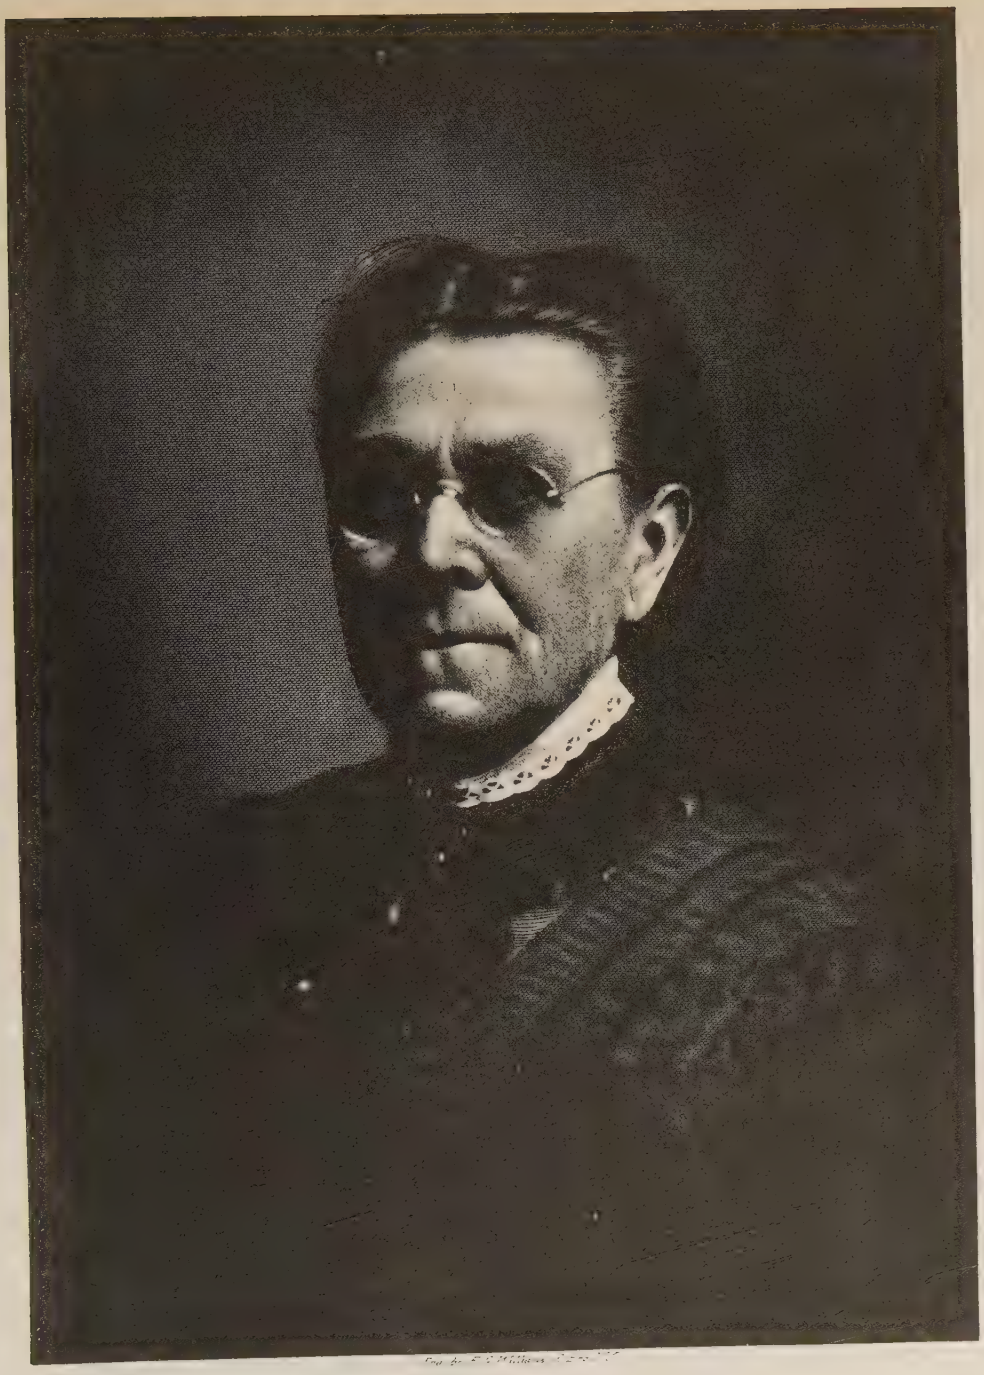
WILLIAM M. PAVEY, SR.

The venerable William M. Pavey, who is now past the age of eighty-two years and who, during the period of his active career, as one of the largest landowners of Clinton county, was born in Fayette county, Ohio, September 4, 1833, the son of William and Anna (Johnson) Pavey, the former of whom was a native of Highland county, and the latter of Fayette county, Ohio, and William Pavey's first wife. William Pavey was also an extensive farmer in Highland and Fayette counties, where he owned about eighteen hundred acres of land. By his first wife he had nine children, Isaac, William M., the subject of this sketch, George, John, Henry, James, Sophia, Lida and Mary. By his second marriage there were four children, Charles, Thomas, Gilbert and Kittora. William Pavey's father was Isaac Pavey, a native of Delaware, but an early settler in the state of Kentucky. He made an effort to settle in Ohio, but the Indians were so troublesome that he was compelled to return to Kentucky, where he remained three years longer. Subsequently, however, he brought his family to Highland county, Ohio, where he made a permanent home and resided until his death, which was caused by being thrown from a horse. William Pavey, father of William M., was born in 1803. He was twice married and the father of fourteen children, Isaac, William, Mary, George, John, Elizabeth, who died at the age of twelve; Sophia, Henry, James E., Eliza, Charles, Thomas, Kittora and Gilbert A. After the death of Mrs. Anna Pavey, he married Jordena Kirby, with whom he lived until his death, in 1862, at the age of fifty-nine years. His widow still lives and was ninety-two years old on March 21, 1915. William Pavey was a man of great energy and perseverance, kind-hearted and accommodating to his neighbors, even to his own disadvantage. He failed in business twice by going surety for others. Still, by his great industry and energy, at the time of his death he had again accumulated a good competency. He was a member of the Methodist church and devout in this faith.

William M. Pavey grew to manhood and was married in Fayette county, Ohio. He was first married, December 17, 1857, to Sarilda Conner, by whom he had one child, deceased. The first wife died in August, 1858, and in August, 1859, he married Mary A. Kirby, the daughter of William and Jordena Kirby, by whom there were twelve children born, ten of whom grew to maturity, as follow: Gilbert A., Anna Olive, Jennie, Frederick, William, Jr., Louitta, Minnie, Lovada, Lida and Carrie. William Edward and Sarah Catherine died in infancy.

Of these children, Gilbert A. married Elizabeth Burris and is one of the leading citizens of Sabina; Anna married Jacob Stoltz, of Sabina; Jennie married Charles Wilson, and lives in Fayette county. Frederick, who died on the old homestead farm in 1890, at the age of twenty-two years, had married Zada Jones; William, Jr., of Sabina, married Bell McCoy; Louitta married David Morris, of Fayette county; Minnie married E. O. Cline, of Sabina; Lovada married Ed Hains, of Sabina, Ohio; Lida married George Wilson, of Sabina, and Carrie is the wife of Thomas Conner, of Sabina.

Wm. Bovey



Mary A Tracy

Agriculture and the raising of live stock were Mr. Pavey's main pursuits during his active business life. At one time he owned eighteen hundred acres of land, but has given each of his children one hundred and fifty acres, and holds only his home in Sabina and some extra money. He was for many years vice-president of the Sabina Bank. He was a man who always attended strictly to his own business, and who never courted notoriety of any kind. Nevertheless, he performed all the duties of life, public and private, with a cheerfulness of a man of optimistic spirit and Christian faith. Mr. Pavey's beloved wife is still living, and they reside together in their home at Sabina.

FRANK HAINES.

The late Frank Haines, a former well-known farmer and banker of this county, was born on November 3, 1850, the son of Job R. and Rebecca (Noble) Haines, and died on June 3, 1913. Job R. Haines was born in North Carolina on September 14, 1809, the son of John and Lydia Haines, who settled in Clinton county in 1810. He received the rudiments of an education in the district schools and later attended McMillen College at Xenia, Ohio. He began teaching at the age of eighteen and taught continuously for sixteen years. On June 14, 1840, he married Rebecca Noble, who was born in Green township on June 14, 1821, the daughter of William and Ann Noble, pioneers of this county. For three years after his marriage he taught school during the winter months and farmed in the summer. In 1854 he purchased four hundred and six acres of land in Richland township. Having been reared as a member of the Friends church, he clung to that faith through life. He and his wife were the parents of six children: Mary J., born in 1841; William M., 1843; Stephen P., 1845; Samuel L., 1847; Frank, 1850, and Albert M., 1855. Job R. Haines was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, being affiliated with the Vienna lodge. He died on August 26, 1879, and his wife has also been dead for many years.

Frank Haines, the subject of this sketch, was educated in the common schools and spent his entire life in this county, where he and his wife owned twelve hundred acres of land. He helped organize and was a director in the First National Bank at Sabina and was was one of the most extensive stockmen of Richland township. He was a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as were all the members of his family. He was a self-made man and through his own well-directed efforts became one of the most influential and wealthy men in Clinton county.

On May 27, 1874, Frank Haines was married to Rosena Reed, who was born in 1855, the daughter of Alfred and Martha A. (Lyon) Reed. Alfred Reed was a well-known Clinton county farmer, the owner of twelve hundred acres of land. He and his wife were the parents of two children, Jennie and Rosena, the latter of whom married Mr. Haines. To Mr. and Mrs. Frank Haines were born four children, namely: Edith, who married W. C. Dakin and lives at Middleton, Ohio; Clyde, who married Jennie Culbertson and lives in Sabina; Arthur, who is hereafter referred to, and Martha, who married H. S. Gallaher and also lives in Sabina.

Arthur Haines was educated in Ohio State University at Columbus and in a business college at the same place. After finishing his education he entered the First National Bank at Sabina and was assistant cashier for a period of six years. He married Ethel Custis, a native of Clinton county, daughter of Charles W. and Ella M. (Valgarn) Custis, and to this union one child has been born, a son, Arthur Charles, born on January 14, 1913. Mr. Haines is a stockholder and director in the First National Bank at Sabina. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons and his wife is a member of the Methodist Protestant church.

GEORGE MANMEISEL.

Among the well-known citizens of Richland township, this county, and numbered among the leading business men of Sabina, is George Manmeisel, who has been in the butcher business for many years, and who, for the past five years, has been located at Sabina. Mr. Manmeisel also owns seventeen acres of good land in this county.

George Manmeisel was born on May 26, 1865, at Xenia, Ohio, a son of John and Mary Manmeisel, the former of whom was born near Berlin, Germany, and the latter of whom died when her son, George, was a small child. His father also died when George was quite young, and he was thus left an orphan in his youth.

John Manmeisel was the proprietor of a butcher shop in Xenia, Ohio, which business he conducted until the time of his death. He and his wife were the parents of five children, Caroline, Rosa, George, Maggie and Elizabeth. Of these children, the eldest, Caroline, who is now deceased, was the wife of John Glasiwints, and they had three children, John, Carrie and Mary. Rosa, the second born, who is also deceased, was the wife of George Amos, a resident of Columbus, Ohio, and they had one child, Scott. Maggie died unmarried. Elizabeth is one of the Sisters in a convent in Minnesota.

George Manmeisel was educated in the public schools of Xenia, and early in life learned the butcher business with his father. On January 5, 1889, he was married to Mary E. Channel, a native of Centerville, Ohio, daughter of J. W. and Laura (Pavey) Channel, the former of whom was born at Morrisville, this county, and the latter of whom also was born in this county, the daughter of John Pavey, a well-known farmer. J. W. Channel was a son of John H. and Sarah (Custis) Channel, natives of North Carolina, and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively. After coming to Ohio from North Carolina, John H. Channel became a well-known school teacher in Clinton county. He was active in politics, a leader in the Christian church of his community. Fraternally, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. To John H. and Sarah (Custis) Channel were born six children, Arminda, Mary, J. W., Lucy, Emma and Gertrude, all of whom are living save Lucy.

Mr. and Mrs. George Manmeisel have no children. They are earnest and devoted members of the Methodist Protestant church, and Mr. Manmeisel is a prominent member of the Sabina lodge of Odd Fellows. In a business way, Mr. Manmeisel enjoys a good trade among the people of Sabina and vicinity, where he is well liked and respected for his cordial manners and honest dealing with the public.

GILBERT A. PAVEY.

Gilbert A. Pavey, a son of the venerable William M. Pavey, of Sabina, Ohio, who is well known in this part of Clinton county for his prominence as a banker and a farmer, was born on May 22, 1860, in Fayette county, this state. An extensive sketch of the life of the venerable William M. Pavey and his beloved wife and their family history is found elsewhere in this volume. It may be said, however, in this place that Gilbert A. Pavey is the son of William M. and Mary A. (Kirby) Pavey, the former of whom was born in Fayette county, Ohio, September 4, 1833, and the latter of whom is the daughter of William and Jordena Kirby. William Pavey is the son of William Pavey, Sr., who married Anna Johnson. They were natives, respectively, of Highland and Fayette counties, this state. The senior William Pavey's father was Isaac Pavey, a native of Delaware, who first settled in Kentucky, and later in the state of Ohio. William Pavey, Sr., was twice married and was the father of thirteen children, of whom William, Jr., was the second born. The others were Isaac, Mary, George, John, Sophia, Henry, James E., Eliza, Charles, Thomas, Kittora and Gilbert A., ten of whom grew to maturity.

Gilbert A. Pavey was educated in the common schools of Clinton county, and on August 25, 1880, was married to Elizabeth Ellen Burris, the daughter of J. I. and Amanda (Hall) Burris, the former of whom was a well-known farmer of this county who owned twelve hundred acres of land. He was an active member of the Quaker church, and died on June 5, 1909. His widow is now living in Sabina. Mr. Pavey lived in Fayette county for one year, and then returned to Clinton county, locating on a farm on the Greenfield pike, where he lived until fifteen years ago, at which time he moved to Sabina.

Four children have been born to Gilbert A. and Elizabeth E. (Burris) Pavey, Gerdina T., who married Groville Wallace, of Wilmington; Leta M., who married Lewis Wilson, to which union three children were born, Ralph Austin, Fred Martin and Dorothea, the latter of whom died at the age of five years; Marie, who married Ray Wilson and has one child, Robert Pavey; and Frank, who married Margaret Richards.

Not only does Mr. Pavey own two hundred and fifty acres of land in Richard township, but he also owns a half interest in two hundred and sixty-three acres in Fayette county and a fourth interest in the Sabina bank, of which he is vice-president. He and his wife and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Pavey is a Republican and served twelve years as trustee of the township. Fraternally, he is a member of the Masonic lodge.

GEORGE W. GIFFIN.

George W. Giffin, a well-known rural-mail carrier of Sabina, Ohio, was born on June 24, 1845, in Ross county, Ohio, the son of David and Emily (Bragg) Giffin, the former of whom was born in Winchester, Virginia, in 1828, and the latter of whom was born near Stonebridge, Virginia. Emily Bragg was the daughter of William and Sarah (Muckelwing) Bragg, the latter of whom was born in Scotland. William Bragg was a native of Virginia, and a blacksmith and wagonmaker by trade. He and his wife had eleven children. Mr. Giffin's paternal grandfather was a wagonmaker near Winchester, Virginia.

David Giffin, father of George W., was educated in the common school. He was a well-known merchant of Sabina and Bainbridge, Ohio, who walked to Ohio from Virginia. Twenty-three years of his life were spent in Bainbridge and twenty years in Sabina. He was justice of the peace and mayor of Sabina for thirty years, and was a Republican in politics. He was a member of the Masonic lodge and a charter member of the Sabina chapter. He served three years in the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, but resigned at Atlanta, Georgia, his health having failed. At the time he resigned he was the first lieutenant. David and Emily (Bragg) Giffin had five children: George W., the subject of this sketch; Edward E., deceased; Sarah Margaret; David E., and Anna. Sarah Margaret married Cyrus Spurgeon, of Sabina. David E. was twice married, the first time to Jennie Clark, and, secondly, to Elsie Darbyshire. Anna married Milo Douglas, of Springfield, Ohio. David Giffin died in October, 1881, and his wife died on November 15, 1896. Mrs. Emily Giffin was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

George W. Giffin was educated in the common schools of Sabina, and has lived here his entire life. Since 1902 he has been a rural-mail carrier on Route No. 2 out of Sabina.

Mr. Giffin was married on November 27, 1892, to Orpha Shoop, a native of Ross county, Ohio, and a daughter of John and Melvina (Heizer) Shoop, who were prominent members of the Christian church and farmers in Ross county. Mr. and Mrs. Giffin have had three children, Grace Avis, Emily and Mary Elizabeth. All of these children are unmarried and live with their parents at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Giffin are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Sabina and both are active in Sunday school work.

OWEN A. WEST, M. D.

Clinton county has every reason to be proud of her medical men and on the roll of honored names which indicates the service of distinguished citizens in this profession there should be mentioned Dr. Owen A. West, who is descended from distinguished ancestry and who has long been regarded as one of the leading physicians in this section of Clinton county. Early in life he realized that there is no honor that is not founded on worth and no respect which is not founded on accomplishment. His life and labors have been eminently worthy because they have contributed to a proper understanding of life and its problems.

Owen A. West was born on May 10, 1864, in Martinsville, Clinton county, Ohio, and is the son of Col. Owen and Elizabeth (Roberts) West, the former of whom, a farmer, miller, business man and inventor, was born in Clark township, March 4, 1835, the son of James and Elizabeth West. Col. Owen West was reared on his father's farm, educated in the Martinsville schools and Ohio Wesleyan University. He was a teacher for twelve years and during the rebellion, aided in organizing the home guards at Cincinnati. In 1863 he was chosen their major-general and in the early part of 1864 was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Regimental Battalion of the Ohio National Guards. He had commanded them while at Fort Federal Hill and Baltimore, Maryland, and in the battle of Monocacy, September, 1864, he, with his regiment were honorably discharged for the valuable services they had so efficiently rendered in defense of the flag. Colonel West was married to Elizabeth Roberts, September 20, 1855. She was the daughter of James and Hannah E. Roberts and a native of Washington township, born on December 23, 1835. She died at the age of forty-six years. They had ten children: Margaret, James W., Anna M., Owen A., Hannah E., Amos F., Charles H., Laura E., Mary E. and Benjamin. Mrs. West died on February 1, 1879. Colonel West is a member of the Methodist church, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Masonic fraternity and the Republican party.

The West family in America dates from some time before the year 1716. Before that time John W. West, who had married Sarah Pearson, came from England and settled in Pitts county, Pennsylvania. They had seven children: Joseph, Mary, William, Sarah, Samuel, Rachel and Benjamin. Benjamin West, the youngest of this family, became an artist with international fame and today is considered one of the foremost artists ever produced by this country. Of this family, Joseph, the eldest, married Jane Owen, the daughter of John Owen, and they had nine children: Isaac, Facy, Owen, John, Sarah, Joseph, Hannah, George and Benjamin. Owen West, the third child of this family, was born about 1750 and married Elizabeth Martin. They moved to Virginia and from Virginia to Clinton county, Ohio. He and his wife had thirteen children: Nancy, Jane, William, Mary, Susan, Owen, Thomas, James, Plyton, Elizabeth, Emilia, Rebecca and John. Owen West, the father of these children, brought his family to Ohio and located in the valley of the East fork of the Little Miami, where he purchased nineteen hundred acres of government land, all in Clinton county, and nearly all in Clark township. There he and his wife died. James West, who was the eighth child in his family, was a farmer during his life and remained on the old estate, adding to his inheritance until he owned one thousand acres of the original nineteen hundred. He and his wife died on the old home place. For nine years he was justice of the peace. His wife was Elizabeth West and they were the parents of Col. Owen West, the father of Dr. Owen A., of Sabina.

Owen A. West was educated in the public schools of Blanchester, Ohio, and was graduated from the Blanchester high school. After finishing his practical education, he engaged in managing a general store at Lynchburg for two years. In 1888 he sold out the business and entered the Bellevue Medical College at New York City. After being there two terms, he entered the Eclectic Medical College at Cincinnati and was graduated there in 1891. After his graduation he located at Leesburg, in Highland county. After being at Leesburg for two years, he came to Sabina and took up the practice of Dr. A. J. Gaskins.

Doctor West owns the Clinton Manufacturing Company and was one of the organizers of the National Bank at Sabina and was a director for three years. The Clinton Manufacturing Company is a thriving business which manufactures barrel pumps.

Doctor West was married in September, 1901, to Mabel Sanderson, the daughter of Frank and Frances (West) Sanderson. Doctor and Mrs. West have had no children.

The Wests are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Doctor West is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America, and he is also identified with the Republican party. He is a member of the Ohio State Medical Association and the American Medical Association. In 1910 he built an office and house combined and has one of the most thoroughly equipped physician's offices and laboratories to be found in Sabina. His practice has grown from year to year and today he is regarded as one of the most popular men in the community.

HOWARD AND GEORGE C. BARNS.

Among the prominent citizens of Sabina, Ohio, are Howard and George C. Barns, the former of whom, since 1906, has been editor and publisher of the Sabina Tribune, and the latter of whom was formerly the proprietor of the Xenia Herald, but who, since 1907, has been engaged in the practice of law at Sabina. The Sabina Tribune was started by James H., Howard, George C. and M. D. Barns twenty-five years ago.

Howard Barns was born on December 14, 1871, in Sabina, and his brother, George C., on February 2, 1875, in Sabina. They are the sons of John H. and Maria (Shewalter) Barns, the former of whom was born in 1839, in Winchester, Virginia, and died on November 10, 1884, and the latter of whom was born on September 11, 1837, in Wilmington, Ohio, the daughter of Elias and Eliza (Hale) Shewalter.

John H. Barns for many years was the proprietor of a tinware shop at Sabina. His father died when he was a mere lad, and he lived in Virginia until 1860. His mother, Eliza Barns, came to Wilmington. In 1862 John H. Barns volunteered in Company G, Seventy-ninth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. His health was broken by the hard service and he was discharged on account of disability. In 1865 he was married to Maria E. Shewalter, the daughter of Elias and Eliza J. Shewalter, of Indiana. They had nine children, namely: Anna Bernice, deceased; Mahara D. (Harry); James H., deceased; Elias Howard (Howard); George C.; Alice Marie; Arthur Clyde, deceased; Frederick C., deceased, and Emma.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Barns were members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Sabina. Mr. Barns was prominent in local politics, having served as a member of the village council. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being a member of both the subordinate and encampment branches.

The paternal grandparents, John J. H. and Eliza (Shewalter) Barns, were residents of Virginia until late in life, when they came to this county. The paternal grandfather died in 1851. The paternal grandmother, Eliza Shewalter, was a sister of Elias Shewalter, father of Maria Shewalter. John J. H. Barns was a miller in Virginia, who located in Franklin county, Ohio, in 1851, living there until his death. He and his wife had ten children.

George C. Barns was educated in the public schools of Sabina, and graduated from the Washington high school in 1892. Two years later, in partnership with his brothers, he started the Sabina Tribune. During the years 1896 and 1897 he attended the Ohio State University Law School at Columbus, and was admitted to the bar on March 11, 1897. Before attending law school he had read law with the firm of Hayes & Swaim. In 1904 Mr. Barns bought the Xenia Herald, which he conducted for three years, until 1907. Since that time he has been practicing law in Sabina. Mr. Barns is now clerk of public affairs in Sabina, and clerk of the county board of elections at Wilmington. From 1908 to 1912 he was mayor of Sabina, having been elected twice on the Democratic ticket.

In 1896 George C. Barns was married to Miss Luna Spurgeon, who was born on August 9, 1877, the daughter of Cyrus and Margaret (Giffen) Spurgeon. To this union have been born five children, Virginia, George, Hazel, Cyril and Howard. They are members of the Christian church.

Mr. Barns is a Democrat in politics, is past master of Sabina lodge of Masons and also high priest of the Wilmington chapter of Royal Arch Masons.

Howard Barns was married in 1898 to Eva Kelso, who was born on June 16, 1877, and died on March 31, 1914. She was the daughter of Thomas L. and Anna (Custis) Kelso. She bore Mr. Barns three children, Frederick K., John H. and Anna Lee. Howard Barnes is also a Democrat in politics and past master in the Masonic lodge.

FRANK T. HAZARD.

Frank T. Hazard, a successful hardware salesman of Wilmington, Ohio, was born on July 9, 1855, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Zebulun and Phoebe (Wolary) Hazard, the former of whom was born in Clinton county in 1826 and who died in 1861, and the latter of whom was born in Union township on the Waynesville pike in 1827, and died in 1870. Zebulun Hazard's parents were John and Rebecca (Conger) Hazard, who were born and married in Virginia, descended from English stock. They were devoted members of the Friends church. John Hazard came to Clinton county, Ohio, in 1820 and settled on what is now known as the Petticord farm, one mile east of Wilmington. He died at the age of sixty-five years, after rearing a family of ten children. His wife lived to be ninety-two years of age.

Phoebe Wolary was the daughter of Michael Wolary, who was born in Maryland, and who, about 1825, settled west of Wilmington, Ohio, on what is now known as the Leonard farm. He and his wife lived to advanced ages. Zebulun Hazard was a farmer and rented land. He died at the age of thirty-five years near Dover in Clinton county, Ohio. He had been first married to a Miss Dwiggins, who had borne him three children, all of whom are dead. His wife had been previously married, to Isaiah Dwiggins, and had one child by that marriage, Isaiah, who died at the age of fifty years in Kansas, where he was a farmer.

Frank T. Hazard was the only child born to his parents. After the death of his father his mother married, secondly, Moses Hudson, who died five years later. Frank T. Hazard's mother died when he was fifteen years old and he made his home during his early manhood with his uncle, Louis Lewis. As a young man he worked as a farm hand and was subsequently married and rented land for four years, finally purchasing a farm in Union township, where he lived for three years. Upon selling out in 1887 he came to Wilmington, where he worked for one year in the David People's hardware store. On January 1, 1889, he began working in J. W. Sparks's hardware store and is now the head salesman in this store.

On October 26, 1876, Frank T. Hazard was married to Luella Miars, a native of Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, born on December 6, 1856, the daughter of Isaiah and Matilda (Babb) Miars, both natives of Clinton county. Mrs. Hazard's father is deceased, but her mother is still living. Her father was a farmer in Union township, north of Wilmington. Mr. and Mrs. Hazard have been the parents of two children, Ethelbert, who conducts a laundry in Wilmington, and Loren M., a prosperous tailor in Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazard and family are all members of the Friends church and take an active part in the affairs of this denomination. Mr. Hazard is an ardent Republican.

ELMER W. SHARP.

Elmer W. Sharp, a farmer of Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, owns one hundred and six and three-fourths acres of land in this township, comprising a neatly-kept and fertile farm.

Elmer W. Sharp was born in Huntington county, Indiana, on November 16, 1862, the son of John and Margaret (Blair) Sharp, the former of whom was born in Ohio, and the latter of whom was the eldest daughter of Ezekiel Blair, a native of Indiana, who was twice married, his second wife being Louise Irwin.

John Sharp was educated in the common schools, and lived in Huntington county, Indiana, where he farmed eighty acres of land. He was a member of the Christian church and died in August, 1885. His death occurred as the result of an accident when a log, which he was hauling to mill, lost its moorings and rolled on him. His wife died in April, 1863. By his marriage to Margaret Blair there were born three children, Ralph P., Lot F., and Elmer W., the subject of this sketch. Ralph and Lot F. live at Fort Wayne, Indiana. John Sharp was married, secondly, to Sarah Heffner, who died in 1908. To this union were born five children, Ellie, William, Matilda, Charles (deceased), and Emmet. Elmer W. was educated in the common schools of Huntington county, Indiana, and reared on the farm.

On September 16, 1884, Elmer W. Sharp was married to Hannah Mary Wall, a native of Clinton county, born on December 5, 1861, the daughter of Alfred and Lovina (Holoway) Wall. Alfred Wall was a native of Clinton county, a farmer by occupation, and owned two hundred acres of land in this county. He had a birthright in the Quaker church, and died in February, 1910. His widow is now living in Wilmington. They had four children: Jennie A., Hannah H., Charles J. (deceased), and Minnie.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Sharp were Absalom and Hannah (Haines) Wall, who were farmers by occupation, and members of the Quaker church. Absalom Wall was born on February 10, 1805, and on April 17, 1828, married Hannah Haines, who was born on November 12, 1808. Absalom Wall was the son of Azariah Wall, who was the son of Absalom, Sr., and Margaret Wall, and was born on September 1, 1772, and died on August 29, 1853. Azariah Wall married Rebecca Leech, daughter of Thomas and Phoebe Leech, of York county, Pennsylvania, who was born on March 24, 1778, and who died on October 13, 1873. They were married in York county, Pennsylvania, about 1795, and lived in Center county, Pennsylvania, until 1809, when they moved to what is now Clinton county, Ohio. Absalom and Hannah (Haines) Wall had seven children, Louisa, Elisha, Alfred, Zimri, Mary E., Joseph and Jonathan. Joseph was a soldier in the Civil War and died in service from the measles.

After living in Marion, Grant county, Indiana, for two years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Sharp moved to Ohio, in 1886. They have had four children, Leta, Goldie M., Eva (deceased), and Irma. Leta married John W. Compton, of Wilmington, Clinton county. They now live at Winchester, Kentucky, and have two children, Merle A. and Audra. Goldie married Marion R. Starbuck, of Starbucktown, and they have one child, Maynard R. The remainder of the children are unmarried.

Mrs. Sharp is a member of the Christian church. Mrs. Marion R. Starbuck is a member of the Friends church. Mrs. John W. Compton is a member of the Presbyterian church. For some time Mr. Sharp served as trustee of Liberty township. He is a member of the National Union.

EDWIN C. LINTON.

Every man is a quotation from all his ancestors. "Rely upon it," declared William E. Gladstone, "that the man who does not worthily estimate his own dead forefathers, will himself do very little to add credit or do honor to his country." The pride of race and of family is one of those paronable bits of mental self-indulgence which serve to stimulate and promote the blander impulses of humanity. That man surely is a better man who can point with pride to a sterling ancestry; surely is better equipped for the duties of earnest citizenship by the knowledge that the memories of other generations of those of his name are back of his efforts to advance the conditions of the present. When this sterling ancestry is one's birthright by double inheritance, then, indeed, is the possessor of such a legacy fortunate. The descendants of the merger of two old families in a community reasonably may be expected to partake of the better qualities of both lines, and, naturally enough, may be expected, by the same right, to take their places among the leaders of such communities as may be favored by their residence therein. These thoughts have come to the biographer during his consideration of the important points in the life of the well-known grain dealer of Wilmington, this county, whose name heads this interesting biographical sketch, Mr. Linton being a descendant of two of the best-known families in Clinton county, both his father's and his mother's families having been prominent in the early settlement of the county, the Lintons having settled here in 1804 and the Hadleys about the same time. The founders of these two families in Clinton county were devoted members of the Society of Friends and the faith of their fathers, descending by birthright, has been kept alive in the hearts of their descendants to the third and fourth generation since that time.

Edwin C. Linton, prominent grain dealer in the city of Wilmington, this county, was born on the old Nathan Linton farm on Todd's fork, in Union township, Clinton county, Ohio, on October 14, 1862, son of Cyrus H. and Eliza Hadley, the former of whom was born in this county in July, 1826, and died in August, 1914, and the latter of whom was born in Union township, this county, and died in Wilmington. Eliza Hadley was the daughter of Jonathan Hadley, an honored pioneer of this county, whose name will be preserved in local annals as long as history shall be written.

The Linton family in America was founded by John Linton, who married Rebecca Relf in 1691, and the next year came to America with his bride, landing at Philadelphia on November 8, 1692, an earnest associate of William Penn, both before and after the arrival of the latter in this country. John Linton was one of the six sons of Sir Roger Linton, of Yorkshire, England, the other sons being Jacob, Samuel, Benjamin, Roger and James. John Linton was sent by his father to Oxford College, where he was educated for holy orders in the established church. At that time Quakers were being persecuted in England on account of their religious views, and one night young Linton, the ardent theological student, was sent by the authorities, being given an escort of soldiers, to attend one of the Quaker meetings for the purpose of ascertaining if anything should be said against the established church, with a view to making a report upon which further persecutions might be based. While sitting in this meeting as an investigator, he was so deeply impressed with the simplicity, earnestness and faith exhibited that he became a convert of the religion he had gone to condemn, and publicly avowed himself to be a Quaker. When information of this action reached his fathers ears, young Linton not only was expelled from the paternal home, but was formally disowned and bidden thereafter to rely wholly upon his own resources. Reared, as he had been, in luxury, and unaccustomed to doing for himself, it was no small matter to the zealous young convert thus to be cast upon his own resources, but with the same fine courage which induced him to give up home and family for the sake of his faith, he set out for London and resolutely began to learn the carpenter trade. In 1691 he married Rebecca Relf, a Quaker girl, and after formally accepting the tenets of the Friends' meetings, engaged in the ministry of that faith, and so continued for years. Desiring greater religious freedom and the privilege of publicly worshipping God as their consciences dictated, John and Rebecca Linton emigrated to America in 1692, landing in Philadelphia on November 8 of that year, ten years after William Penn had founded his historic colony, and became prominently identified with that earnest community.

To John and Rebecca (Relf) Linton were born four children, Mary, Joseph, Benjamin and John. Benjamin Linton was born in Philadelphia on October 6, 1703, and early learned the weaver's trade, in time becoming one of the most extensive weavers in the new colony. He was an able and a learned man and achieved much fame as an astronomer, to which science he devoted much study and time. Benjamin Linton was twice married, his first wife, Elizabeth White, born on September 9, 1705, to whom he was married on March 25, 1727, bearing him two children, John and Mary. The mother of these children died on January 25, 1732, and the father married, secondly, Jane Cowgal, born on July 3, 1708, to which union eight children were born, namely: Lucia, Benjamin, Joshua, Sarah, Samuel, Jane, Daniel and Hezekiah.

Samuel Linton, fifth child and third son of Benjamin and Jane (Cowgal) Linton, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, on December 17, 1741, and was reared on a farm, also learning the trade of a weaver. On May 10, 1775, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Harvey, born on March 8, 1748, and to this union were born Samuel, Nathan, David, Jane and Elizabeth (twins) and James. Early in the year 1802, Samuel Linton and his family emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio, at that time the "far west." They proceeded by wagon, over the mountains, to Pittsburgh, at which place Samuel purchased a raft, onto which he loaded his household effects and his family and thus floated down the Ohio to Cincinnati, proceding thence, by wagon, to Waynesville, in Warren county, this state, where he purchased a house and lot and there engaged again at this trade of weaver, continuing thus engaged, however, but a short time, the inducemnts offered by the fertile lands hereabout persuading him to take up the life of a farmer. In 1804, six years before Clinton county was organized, he entered from the government five hundred acres of land three miles northwest of where Wilmington later was laid out, and there he and his wife spent the rest of their lives. They were leaders among the members of the Society of Friends who early began settling hereabout and were persons of large influence in the formative period of that now well-established section.

Nathan Linton, the second son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Harvey) Linton, was born on the banks of the Delaware river, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, on January 17, 1778. When the territory now comprising Clinton county was organized in 1810, he was appointed county surveyor, which office he held for about twenty years. He surveyed the various townships of Clinton and Fayette counties and surveyed and laid out the village of Wilmington, the county seat, and during his life was a widely recognized authority pertaining to boundaries and divisions of lands in this section of the state; the unassailable titles which the citizens of this county hold to their lands today, owing, in large degree, to the care which he used in making and keeping a correct record of surveys. Nathan Linton was an enterprising and progressive pioneer citizen. He was among the first to introduce and encourage the growing of fine wool and the propagating of fine fruit. He was a strict Quaker, upright in his relations to his fellowmen and temperate in all his ways. During the early days, it was customary for the farmers to supply their harvest hands with whisky; but this custom Nathan Linton never would countenance, nor would he permit liquor to be brought onto his place. He took a foremost part in educational matters in that day and may properly be regarded as one of the chief factors in creating the early standard of excellence which ever has marked the schools of Clinton county. He also did much in the way of establishing a proper highway system hereabout, his interest in good roads giving an impetus to that movement which is felt to this day. Nathan Linton died on February 11, 1858, honored and respected by all worthy persons within the range of his acquaintance. Among his descendants who have achieved notable public distinction in the third generation are Benjamin Butterworth, member of congress, a son of his daughter, Elizabeth, and Nathan Linton, a member of the Ohio General Assembly, another grandson.

To Nathan and Rachel (Smith) Linton were born twelve children, Elizabeth, Abigail, Samuel, Seth, David, James, Mary, Nathan, Benjamin, Cyrus, Ruth and Jane, whose descendants today form a numerous and influential connection throughout southern Ohio.

Cyrus Linton was reared as a farmer's boy and remained on the old home farm until the spring of 1864, at which time he went to Wilmington, where the rest of his life was spent. He probably was the first man in this county to deal on a particularly extensive scale in coal and grain and his operations were quite successful. He also was proprietor of a large and popular grocery store in Wilmington and for many years was accounted among the foremost business men in the city. On September 15, 1870, Mr. Linton's son, Samuel, was admitted to full partnership in the business, the firm thereafter being known as C. Linton & Son. Cyrus Linton was a very public-spirited citizen and took a prominent part in the civic affairs of the county. He served the county as commissioner from the Wilmington district; served several terms as township trustee and for eight years served in the Wilmington city council, having been elected on the Republican ticket.

In 1847 Cyrus Linton was united in marriage to Lydia Harvey, a native of this county, to which union one child was born, a son, Samuel S., of whom mention is made above. Mrs. Linton died in the spring of 1852 and Mr. Linton married, secondly, in the fall of 1853, Eliza Hadley, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Dimberlake) Hadley, and to this union three children were born, as follow: Olive, who married Dr. Charles Welsh, a well-known Wilmington dentist, both of whom now are deceased; Lydia, now deceased, who married Francis Martin, of Chattanooga, Tennessee; and Edwin C., the immediate subject of this sketch.

Jonathan Hadley, maternal grandfather of Edwin C. Linton, was born in North Carolina on August 20, 1800, the son of William and Sarah (Clark) Hadley, members of old colonial families. Upon reaching manhood Jonathan Hadley engaged in the live-stock business, came to Ohio, and was very successful. He was marrried three times, his third wife having been Elizabeth Dimberlake, who was born in Highland county, this state, of English descent, the date of this latter marriage having been May 25, 1848. To this union but one child was born, a daughter, Eliza, the mother of Mr. Linton. Five children were born to Jonathan Hadley's first union and one to his second union, namely: Charles, who manages the Hadley dairy farm in this county; Frank, a merchant of Springfield, Ohio; Eva; Calvin, a farmer, who lives near Kokomo, Indiana; Carrie, and Jonathan. The senior Hadley died in Iowa on January 25, 1864, he having moved to that state with a view to locating permanently there, and upon his death his family returned to this county, locating on a farm of one hundred and twelve acres, west of Wilmington.

Edwin C. Linton received his elementary education in the public schools of Wilmington, and supplemented the same by a comprehensive course in Wilmington College, after which he entered his father's office and acquired a thorough acquaintance with the coal and grain business, later becoming owner of the business, which still later he sold to his half-brother, Samuel S., thereafter giving his exclusive attention to the business of buying grain and hay in car-load lots in Clinton and surrounding counties and has been very successful. He also owns a fine farm of two hundred and eighty acres in Union township, which he manages from his home in Wilmington. He owns a handsome residence in the city, besides considerable other property there and is regarded as one of the most substantial citizens of the county seat town.

On April 30, 1913, Edwin C. Linton was united in marriage to Florence McCune, of Brooklyn, New York, who early in life was left an orphan. Mr. Linton is a member of the Friends church and Mrs. Linton is a member of the Presbyterian church. Both take a warm interest in the affairs of their respective denominations, as well as in all good works of the community in which they live. Mr. Linton is a Republican and takes an active interest in the political affairs of the county; for some time having acted as treasurer of the Clinton county Republican central committee. He is an enterprising and progressive business man and possesses the confidence and respect of commercial and financial circles hereabout, as well as the highest esteem of his many acquaintances throughout this part of the state.

ROBERT HILDEBRECHT.

Among those whose declining years are blessed with the memory of a well-spent life is Mrs. Florence Starr Hildebrecht, widow of Robert Hildebrecht, whose career may fittingly be described in this volume, and whose companion she was. Many were the years of happy associations granted to these well-known residents of this county, and, though sad with the loss of the departed loved one, Mrs. Hildebrecht hereby pays a lasting tribute to his memory.

Robert Hildebrecht, who was born on April 26, 1874, and who died on June 13, 1914, was the son of Rudolph Frederick William Hildebrecht, a biographical sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this publication. He spent his early years on the farm on which he was born, this being in Vernon township, and was educated in the Clarksville schools, this including graduation from the high school. Choosing farming as his occupation, he cultivated the tract of seventy-two and one-half acres in that township, which has been the family home for years. While a successful farmer, he gave some attention to other matters, for he was road superintendent for several years.

On June 16, 1906, Robert Hildebrecht was married to Florence Starr, who was born in Highland county, this state, on January 23, 1882, the daughter of Daniel Alexander and Mary Malissa (Swartz) Starr, both natives of the same county, the former born on September 4, 1844, and the latter on September 114, 1858. Daniel A. Starr was the son of Alexander and Martha (Johnson) Starr, pioneers of Highland county, and his wife was a daughter of Benage and Emily (Hildebrecht) Swartz, who settled in Highland county when its now prosperous and populous towns were mere settlements on the outskirts of the dense forests. He died, and his widow is now living in New Vienna, this county. Mrs. Hildebrecht's father is a well-known farmer, and a member of the Democratic party. His wife attends the Christian church. They are parents of the following children: Katie Elizabeth, Florence Mary, Claudia May (deceased), Amanda Emma, Matilda Josephine, Homer Leslie, Lula Esther, Vera Marie, Frank Erwin, W. Alexander, Martha Gabrielle and Reba Bowena. Daniel A. Starr has been twice married, his first wife having been a Mrs. Johnson, to whom three children were born, Clarence (deceased), Lafayette and John. Mr. and Mrs. Starr live on a farm near Clarksville, in Warren county, this state.

To Robert and Florence (Starr) Hildebrecht one child was born, a son, Carroll LeRoy, who was born on August 26, 1907.

The late Robert Hildebrecht worked for and voted with the Republican party. He was also greatly interested in the work of the Methodist Episcopal church. An estimate of Mr. Hilbebrecht's standing in the community may be gleaned from the fact that he was a man of influence in the Odd Fellows lodge, as well as the Knights of Pythias.

While the life of Robert Hildebrecht was not spent in the busy marts of trade, nor yet where the battle of life rages fiercest, it was faithfully and usefully lived, and thus contributed its share to the world's good. It, therfore, may truthfully be said of him: "The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden underground, secretly making the ground green."

SAMUEL CARPENTER.

Clinton county has many honorable citizens and successful farmers of southern birth, among whom is Samuel Carpenter, a retired farmer of Cuba, who owns a hundred and fifty acres of land in Washington township. He is well known to the residents of Washington township for his long and honorable career.

Samuel Carpenter was born March 27, 1842, in Frederick county, Virginia. He is the son of John and Elizabeth (Paton) Carpenter, both of whom are natives of the Old Dominion state. The former was educated in common schools of Virginia and farmed in Frederick county, Virginia, all his life, owning a tract of about forty acres in that county. He and his wife had ten children, of whom Samuel, the first born, is the subject of this sketch. The other children were: Anna Jane, Sarah C., Charles M., Virginia, Mary E., Bush, James W., John W., and George Washington. The parents were members of the Methodist church and the father was a Democrat politically.

Mr. Carpenter was educated in the common schools of Frederick county, Virginia, and early in life learned the blacksmith trade. During the Civil War he was attached to the Twelfth Virginia Regiment as a blacksmith. After the Civil War he operated a blacksmith shop for a short time on his own responsibility. He then farmed a few years until March 16, 1874, when he left Virginia and came to Vanwert county, Ohio, locating near Convoy. There he worked on the farm until the spring of 1878, when he moved to Clinton county. In 1883 he began farming for himself on rented land in Washington township, and nine years later he purchased eighty-one acres of land, which he has since increased to one hundred and fifty acres. Mr. Carpenter was engaged in general farming and stockraising until his retirement in 1898, when he removed to Cuba. He still manages the farm, however, and enjoys its fruits.

Subject was first married to Elizabeth Gillen, in 1865, and they were the parents of three children, Thomas, Emily and Benjamin. She died early in life. Mr. Carpenter, on March 15, 1879, married Mary E. Berlin, and they were the parents of two children, Earl deceased, and Fred, who married Minnie Mart.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter are members of the Universalist church. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs. Politically he votes the Democratic ticket.

FRANK D. HART.

Frank D. Hart, a well-known citizen of Liberty township, who owns a farm on the Port Williams pike, was born near Port Williams, Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, on January 11, 1851, the son of James and Mary (Holloway) Hart, natives of Virginia and Clinton county, Ohio, respectively. Mary Holloway was a daughter of Dayton and Cynthia Ann Holloway, the former of whom was a blacksmith and hotel proprietor in Port Williams. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Hart, who was Charles Hamlet Hart, was a native of Virginia, who, after his marriage, settled in Clinton county, where he engaged in farming. The late James Hart was educated by home study altogether. He was eight years old when his parents brought him to Ohio. For fifty years he was engaged in the undertaking business at Port Williams. During the Civil War he assisted in making gunboats and was a head man in the building of the "Monitor." He and his wife were earnest and devout members of the Quaker church, and were the parents of eight children, Elizabeth, Frank D., Charles H., J. W., Harry, Lavina, Cynthia and Alford. Elizabeth died at the age of one year, and Alford at the age of six years. Charles H. is a resident of Dayton, Ohio, and married Orpha Turpin. J. W. is unmarried. Harry married Ellie Hiney and lives in Cincinnati, Ohio. Lavina became the wife of Abe Conklin, lives in Dayton, Ohio, and she and her husband, in partnership with her brother, Charles, operate the Manhattan hotel in that city. The father of these children died on September 3, 1899, at the age of seventy-six years, and the mother died on Septembr 27, 1908.

Frank D. Hart received his education in the common schools of Clinton county, Ohio, and was reared to maturity at Port Williams. He was married on September 21, 1874, to Mary E. Wall, a native of Clinton county, Ohio, a daughter of Absalom and Hannah Wall, who were farmers in this township. After his marriage Mr. Hart continued to live in Port Williams, where for twenty-five years he was engaged in the undertaking business with his father. Mr. and Mrs. Hart are the parents of two children, Elisha and Purilla, the former of whom is the owner of two hundred and forty acres of land. Purilla is the wife of James Kibler. Mr. and Mrs. Hart own in their home farm forty-five acres. Mrs. Hart is a member of the Friends church, in which she takes an active interest. Mr. Hart is identified with the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

ALLEN C. WHINERY.

Allen C. Whinery, farmer and landowner of Liberty township, Clinton county, Ohio, is descended from Joseph Whinery, who was one of the first white children born in Clinton county after its organization. The county was organized on February 19, 1810, and on April 20, 1810, Joseph Whinery, the father of Allen C., and the second in the family, was born. His parents were Thomas and Ruth (Miller) Whinery, both natives of York county, Pennsylvania, the former having been born on October 5, 1779, the latter having been about seven years his junior. They lived in York county, Pennsylvania, during their early life, and in 1808 emigrated from Pennsylvania to Clinton county, Ohio. At the time they had one child, Phebe, who had been born in Pennsylvania. She died at the age of seven years from eating what was supposed to be poison-vine buds. The family settled within what are now the present limits of Union township, near the Center meeting house, where in time he owned one hundred and seventy acres of land. He was one of the hardy pioneers and adventurous settlers of this region, to whose calm endurance must be attributed the progress, growth, development and present prosperity of Clinton county.

In 1837, Ruth (Miller) Whinery died of consumption. She was the mother of ten children, of whom eight were living at the time of her death. Only two, however, remained at home at the time. Thomas Whinery was married, secondly, to Mrs. Charlotte Hoddie, the widow of John Hoddie. Thomas Whinery died in 1856. Mrs. Charlotte Whinery lived to be more than seventy-five years old.

Joseph Whinery, father of Allen C., was reared in a log cabin amidst the wilds of nature. He enjoyed the average educational facilities of his day and generation. His first teacher was Robert Way, who taught a few pupils in a log hut in the neighborhood. He owned two hundred and seventy acres of land in Liberty township, and was a prominent member of the Quaker church. He was also prominent in the "underground railway" movement before the Civil War and his house was a station. In 1827 he was employed in driving a drove of cattle from Clinton county to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The journey was made on foot and took eleven weeks.

On May 23, 1833, when Joseph Whinery was twenty-three years old, he was married to Sarah Hiatt, daughter of Hezekiah and Anne (Perkins) Hiatt, who were farmers in Clinton county and prominent members of the Quaker church. She was born on April 7, 1811, in Union township, and was the eldest child born to her parents. The others were Isaac, Allen, Mary, Susan, Lydia, Narcessa, Phenia and Amos.

At one time the late Joseph Whinery served as trustee in this county and occupied other positions of trust and responsibility. He died in June, 1892, and his wife in December, 1899. They had five children, Thomas, Ann, Ruth, Allen C. and Susan L., all of whom are deceased except Allen C., the subject of this sketch. Thomas, the first born, was the only one of the children, except Allen C., that ever married. He married Lucinda Conklin, and they had four children, Susan T., Joseph B., Frank C. and Charles D.

Allen C. Whinery was born in Liberty township on December 14, 1846, and was educated in the district schools and reared on the farm. He was married on November 17, 1868, to Louisa Haynes, the daughter of Allen and Amy (Guckley) Haynes, who were farmers in Clinton county and members of the Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Whinery had one child, Anna, married Charles H. Oren, who died on June 16, 1898, leaving two children, Frank C. and Ruth Amy. Mrs. Oren, since the death of her husband, has lived with her parents.

Allen C. Whinery owns six hundred and twenty acres of land in Clinton county, all in Liberty township. He has always been an extensive raiser of Shorthorn cattle. Mr. Whinery is a member of the Quaker church and has wife of the Methodist Episcopal church. Allen C. Whinery is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

AMOS WARREN BRADY.

Notwithstanding the general gravitation of the population to the cities, there are those who still believe that the man who chooses to earn his livelihood by cultivation of the soil is not a subject for commiseration, but rather of sincere congratulation. Here, as everywhere in life, is operative the law of compensation; for here, if anywhere, for every loss there is a gain. May it not truly be said that—

"Converse with men makes sharp the glittering wit,
But God to man doth speak in solitude."

The man whose life in this county furnishes the theme of this sketch was one of those who found real pleasure, as well as remuneration, from an agricultural environment. Amos Warren Brady, who for many years was one of Clinton county's well-known farmers, was born on November 12, 1854, in Brown county, Ohio, the son of William and Phoebe (Colvin) Brady, both natives of that county, and died at his home in Vernon township, this county, on July 24, 1914. William Brady was born on January 1, 1825, his father having been a pioneer of Brown county. The maternal grandfather of Amos W. Brady, Amos Colvin, and his wife, Mary, came to this county at an early date in its history and spent the rest of their lives here. William Brady was a well-known farmer, who died on September 24, 1898. His wife had preceded him to the grave many years before, her death having occurred on April 23, 1867. Both were stanch believers in the doctrines of Methodism. They were the parents of seven children, Mary (deceased), Amos Warren, John, Jane, Eva, Martha and Lee.

Amos W. Brady received a public school education and upon reaching manhood followed the occupation of his father. In 1891 he bought three hundred and thirty-four acres in this county, and later increased his agricultural possessions by the purchase of one hundred and seventy-six acres in Vernon township. He did not, however, devote all of his attention to farming, for he served twelve years as township trustee, and was school director for several years. A source of help and inspiration in all of his undertakings was his wife. On March 15, 1883, Amos W. Brady was married to Louisa Moore, who was born in Brown county, Ohio, on September 24, 1860, the daughter of Cury and Mary (Snedaker) Moore, both natives of the same county, the former of whom was born on December 24, 1819, and died on January 8, 1889, and the latter of whom died in 1867. Cury Moore was the son of William and Julia (Cury) Moore, both of whom were born in Brown county, where their entire lives were spent. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Brady was William Snedaker. To Cury and Mary (Snedaker) Moore were born the following children: George, Emma, Ellen (deceased), William, India (deceased), Louisa and Albert.

To Amos W. and Louisa (Moore) Brady five children were born, namely: Minnie, who married Clem Wells; Henry, who lives in Monroe, Ohio; Clarence, who lives on the home farm; Alma (deceased); Charley, who also is living with his mother on the home farm, one mile from Clarksville.

The late Amos W. Brady was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Clarksville, and also belonged to the Knights of Pythias lodge at that place. He was affiliated with the Republican party, in whose principles he was a firm believer. His widow and children mourn the loss of a faithful husband and a loving father, and are blessed with the memory of his useful, industrious and unselfish life, their sorrow being shared by a large circle of friends.

WILLIAM BERLIN.

The history of Clinton county could not well be written and leave out of its pages the name of such a man as William Berlin, who was born and reared in the county and who has been one of its most useful and worthy citizens.

William Berlin was born on August 22, 1847, near Cuba, in Washington township, Clinton county, Ohio, the son of Henry and Hannah (Crouse) Berlin. To Henry Berlin's parents three children were born, as follow: Henry, the father of the subject of this sketch; William, who died in Clinton county, and Emily, who married Ezra Hays, and who, with her husband, is now deceased. Mary Berlin, the mother of Henry Berlin, died at the home of Henry Berlin. Henry Berlin was born in 1824 and died in 1908. Hannah (Crouse) Berlin was born in 1818 and died in 1901. She was the daughter of John and Rhoda Crouse, who were both born in Virginia, and at an early date came to Clinton county and located on a farm in Washington township, where they spent the rest of their lives, both dying about 1860. Henry and Hannah (Crouse) Berlin were the parents of the following children: Mary, who married Samuel Carpenter and who lives on a farm near Cuba, this county; William, the subject of this sketch; John, who died in 1895; Jacob, who was killed by a falling tree about 1885; James, a farmer, who lives near Ogden, Ohio; Charlie, who lives on a farm in Washington township, this county, and Emma, who lives in Cuba, the widow of George Kearns.

Henry Berlin, as a boy, worked on a big slave plantation in Virginia, but later, after his father's death, he came, with his mother and her two other children, to Ohio, locating in this county. After coming to Clinton county he worked for a time on the John Crouse farm, where he met and married the daughter of his landlord. For a while after his marriage he continued to work the farm for his father-in-law until he purchased a seventy-acre tract of his own near Cuba, on which he located. He continued to own and farm this land until the death of John Crouse, when he sold his seventy acres and bought the entire Crouse estate of two hundred and forty acres, where he lived until 1895, when he decided to retire from farming and moved into Cuba, where he died in 1908. Both he and his wife were members of the Universalist church at Cuba and he was a life-long Democrat. About a year after the death of his first wife, which occurred in 1901, he married, secondly, Mary Pope, who is still living.

William Berlin, the subject of this sketch, attended the district schools at Burtonville, and at Cuba, but being the eldest child, was compelled, early in life, to labor hard on his father's farm. He helped his father pay for the big farm, and later he and his brother, John, rented the farm and ran it for awhile for themselves, his brother, Charlie, later taking the place of John until, finally, William rented and operated the farm on his own account until his father's death and afterwards until 1911, when he purchased seventy-five acres of the Probasco farm on the Prairie road, in Union township. He still lives on this latter place and rents other land.

On September 1, 1893, William Berlin was married to Cora Collins, who was born in Vernon township, this county, a daughter of John and Sarah Collins, who were farmers, but who are both now deceased. To this union have been born the following children: Emily Rowena, Mary Ellen, George Ray, who died of scarlet fever at the age of fourteen months on March 24, 1894; Nola Alice and William Espey.

William Berlin is not only an industrious farmer, but he is firmly conscious of his political and social and religious obligations. He is an active worker in the Democratic party, is a faithful member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and he and his family are faithful members of the Friends church at Wilmington.

JAMES HANNAH.

James Hannah is a well-known farmer of Washington township and a resident of Cuba, who was born on March 1, 1849, in Clermont county, Ohio, near Moscow. He is the son of Fulton and Almeda (Bryant) Hannah, the former of whom was born on February 6, 1819, in Brown county, near Georgetown, and the latter the daughter of Josiah and Sarah (Gool) Bryant. Fulton Hannah spent all of his life as a farmer in Brown county, Ohio, and passed away there at an advanced age in 1898. Fulton and Almeda Hannah had ten children, of whom James, the subject of this sketch, was the third. The other children in the order of their births were: William H., Josiah, John, Jesse, George, Edward, Martha, Sarah and Ruhamah. During his entire life, Fulton Hannah was identified with the Democratic party. His father was James Hannah.

James Hannah, the subject of this sketch, was educated in the common schools of Brown county, Ohio, and began life as a farm hand in his native county. In 1895 he came to Clinton county and located in Vernon township, where he farmed for three years, at the end of which time he moved to Washington township, where he now lives. Mr. Hannah has his home in Cuba and goes back and forth from his home to the farm. He is engaged in general farming and stock raising.

On June 13, 1878, Mr. Hannah was married to Eva L. Work, a native of Brown county, born near Russellville, the daughter of Elijah and Melinda Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Hannah have had two children, Albert L. and Florence E. The latter married Ernest Hirt and has one child. James Edwin. Albert L. is an undertaker at Blanchester, Ohio. He first married Blanche Urton, who is deceased. Then married Arena Jay, and they have one child, David Benjamin.

The Hannah family are members of the Friends church and take a prominent part in the affairs of this congregation. For several generations the various members of the family have been people of strong religious impulses, who have lead honorable and upright lives. For many years Mr. Hannah has voted the Prohibition ticket and he is an implacable foe of the liquor traffic and the licensed saloon.

A. J. DARBYSHIRE.

A. J. Darbyshire, of Sabina, Ohio, was the pioneer manufacturer of Clinton county, but he is now engaged in farming.

A. J. Darbyshire, the eldest son of B. J. and Maria (Moore) Darbyshire, was born on November 22, 1857. His father, who is now living at Sabina, at the age of ninety-two, was born on November 7, 1823, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. He was married on April 6, 1851, to Maria Moore, who died on August 17, 1905. She was the daughter of John P. and Margaret (Large) Moore, who were farmers of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. B. J. Darbyshire was also a brick manufacturer back in the days when brick were made by hand. Later he became a well-known brick contractor, and erected the college at Wilmington, and also the school building at the same place. Until nine years ago the father lived on the farm. At that time he deeded two hundred and seventy-six acres of land to his children and removed to Sabina. A. J. Darbyshire is one of seven children born to his parents. The others were B. F., Oliver M., Lydia, Oma, Maggie (deceased), and James (deceased).

At the age of fifteen years A. J. Darbyshire began his apprenticeship under Darbyshire & Sanders in the manufacture of brick by hand, near Sabina. Five years later, at the age of twenty years, he began the manufacture of brick on his own responsibility. In 1881 he added the manufacture of tile to his business, and in 1896 began the manufacture of stiff-mud brick by new machinery. In the meantime he had constructed many houses and other buildings in Clinton county. Mr. Darbyshire moved his factory in 1902 to the farm known as the Elias Roberts farm, because it had grown beyond its earlier quarters. At the time, the factory had forty thousand square feet of floor space. At present Mr. Darbyshire is living in Sabina and looking after his farming land in Richland and Wilson townships. Besides his farm real estate, he owns the hardware building and the home in Sabina.

A. J. Darbyshire was married to Rosa A. Morrow, who was born near Sabina, a daughter of W. M. and Sarah (Smith) Morrow, of Sabina. The former is a well-known farmer of Clinton county. He and his wife had eleven children, John, Addie, Mary, Martha, Charles, Ellsworth, Clinton, Josephine, Minnie, Rosa M. and William.

To Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Darbyshire have been born four children, Porter M., Hortense A., Affa Arlene and William Benjamin, all of whom are single and are living at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Darbyshire are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Darbyshire is a member of the Odd Fellows. He is a member of the local school board and has been a member of the town council.

HARRY GASKILL.

In all the great list of county officials who have held offices in the Clinton county court house since the creation of this county away back in 1810, it is doubted that any were more popular among the fellows of their own day than is the present county auditor of Clinton county among the fellows of his day. For twelve years previous to his election to this important and responsible position, in 1912, Harry Gaskill served as deputy auditor of Clinton county, during which time he made so fine an impression upon all who had business about the court house that, upon receiving the nomination of his party for auditor, his election was taken for granted, his popularity with all classes making the same well nigh a foregone conclusion. And so it proved. In discharging the duties of this office as chief, where before he had been merely a deputy, Auditor Gaskill further demonstrated his fine abilities in this direction, creating so favorable an impression upon the public that his re-election in 1914 seemed assured. And so it proved, again, he being returned to his present office without opposition.

Harry Gaskill was born in Wilmington, Ohio, where he now resides, on March 1, 1881, son of Mahlon R. and Laura (Gustin) Gaskill, the former of whom was born in the town of Rochester, Warren county, this state, on March 28, 1838, and the latter of whom was born at Enon, Ohio.

Mahlon R. Gaskill is the son of Milton S. and Ann (Roach) Gaskill, the former of whom was born in Wilmington, this county, on October 5, 1811, the first white male child born in Wilmington, son of Thomas and Nancy Gaskill, whose names are enrolled among the very earliest settlers of Clinton county. Milton S. Gaskill grew to manhood in the then struggling village of Wilmington and married Ann Y. Roach, who was born in Virginia on August 15, 1812, daughter of Mahlon and Elizabeth Roach, who came to Clinton county about the year 1815. Milton S. Gaskill was a tanner and operated a large tannery in Wilmington, the same having been located for some years on Main street, between South street and Walnut street. Later he traded this tannery for a farm of one hundred and sixty acres near Burtonville, in Union township. This farm then was mostly swamp land, but he drained the same and converted it into a valuable farm. Finding this operation profitable, he followed the same course in numerous other instances, buying swamp lands, draining the same and then selling at a large profit, and in this way became one of the wealthiest men of his generation in this county. He presently bought a clothing store in Wilmington and after operating this store for a couple of years traded the store for a store and a farm at Westboro, this county, moving to that place where he spent the rest of his life.

Milton S. Gaskill was twice married, his first wife, Ann Roach, having died when Mahlon R. Gaskill, Harry's father was two years of age. To this first union there were born three children, namely: Orlando, a merchant, who for thirty years was postmaster at White Oak, Iowa, where he died; Thomas, now deceased, a former prosperous farmer in the neighborhood of St. Johns, Kansas; and Mahlon R., who is now living retired in Wilmington, this county. Upon the death of the mother of the above children, Milton S. Gaskill married, secondly, in 1842, Louisa Tribby, and to this union there were born two children: Jennie, who married Spencer Vestal and lives in Yakima, Washington, and Charles, a farmer of the Westboro neighborhood, in this county, who died at the age of twenty-five years.

Mahlon R. Gaskill was reared in Wilmington and learned the trade of house painter. In 1861 he went west, prospecting for gold, and made an extended trip through California and Oregon. On his return, and while prospecting in Colorado, he enlisted, in January, 1864, at Denver, in the First Independent Colorado Battery, for service during the Civil War, and served until the close of the war, this battery being engaged mostly in the frontier service, guarding against Indian depredations. At the close of the war Mr. Gaskill returned to Ohio and until his marriage farmed for his father. After his marriage he took a six-months prospecting tour through Kansas, at the end of which time he returned to Wilmington, where he resumed his trade of house painter in which he was engaged quite successfully until the time of his retirement from active business some years ago. Mr. Gaskill's wife was born in the village of Enon, near Dayton, this state, daughter of Jonathan and Lucinda (McKay) Gustin, the former of whom was born in Warren county and the latter in Highland county, this state. Jonathan Gustin was a blacksmith and for many years conducted a smithy in Wilmington, in his day being one of the best-known men in the city. To Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon R. Gaskill there were born two children: Harry, the immediate subject of this sketch; and Carrie, who married Walter V. Connard, owner of a livery, feed and sales stable, as well as garage, on a very large scale at Newport News, Virginia, where he also is employed as an inspector of horses by the United States government and buys horses for use in the naval yards there.

Harry Gaskill was reared in Wilmington, the city of his birth, and was graduated from the high school. Upon leaving school he was employed for a time in the office of the local telephone company, where his ability as a clerk attracted the attention of others and on February 22, 1902, he was installed in the court house at Wilmington as deputy county auditor, a position which he held for twelve years. In 1912 Mr. Gaskill was nominated by the Republicans of Clinton county as their choice for auditor and he was also declared the people's choice in the following election. His renomination and re-election in 1914 was a very flattering indorsement of the capable manner in which he had administered the important affairs of the auditor's office, and he is now serving his second term, to the general satisfaction of the entire community.

On October 19, 1902, Harry Gaskill was united in marriage to Lucy Ham, who was born at Ogden, in Adams township, this county, daughter of Finley and Martha Ham, both of whom are now dead. Mr. and Mrs. Gaskill are members of the Friends church, as are the former's parents, and all are deeply concerned in the general welfare of the community, taking an active part in furthering all measures designed to promote the common good. Mr. Gaskill is a jovial as well as a most capable young man and is immensely popular in and about Wilmington. He is a Mason, having attained to the chapter in that ancient order, and also is a member of the Elks, the Odd Fellows, the Eagles and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, in all of which he takes an active part, being popular with all his lodge associates.

Auditor Gaskill is a painstaking and thorough public official, his long familiarity with the books of the auditor's office having equipped him thoroughly for the proper transaction of the business of that office and he has the entire confidence of the community. He is widely known throughout the county, few men in Clinton county having a more extensive acquaintance, and his friends are limited only by the number of his acquaintances.

LOREN M. HAZARD.

Almost from the time of the very beginning of the social order in Clinton county, the Hazard family has been honorably represented here. The first of the name to locate in Clinton county was John Hazard, a Virginian, of English descent, who married Rebecca Conger, also a native of Virginia, of colonial stock, and emigrated to Ohio, locating in Clinton county in 1820, settling on a farm one mile east of the then struggling village of Wilmington, which farm is known in that neighborhood today as the Petticord place. John Hazard and his wife were prominent figures in that section during pioneer days and did much to bring about proper social and civic conditions in the formative period of the neighborhood. After rearing a family of ten children, John Hazard died, at the age of sixty-five years, his widow surviving him many years, she living to the advanced age of ninety-two years. One of the sons of John and Rebecca (Conger) Hazard was Zebulon Hazard, born in this county in 1826, who died at the early age of thirty-five years. Zebulon Hazard was twice married, his first wife, who was the widow of Isaiah Dwiggins, bearing him three children, all of whom died without issue. Upon her death he married, secondly, Phoebe Wolary, daughter of Michael Wolary, a native of Maryland, who, with his wife, settled on a farm west of Wilmington, in this county, about the year 1825, where they spent the rest of their lives, both living to advanced ages. To Zebulon and Phoebe (Wolary) Hazard but one child was born, a son, Frank T. Upon the death of Zebulon Hazard, in 1861, his widow married, secondly, Moses Hudson, dying five years later, without further issue.

Frank T. Hazard was but twelve years of age when he was left an orphan and he was reared by an uncle on a farm, subsequently buying a farm in Union township, on which he lived for three years. In 1887 he sold the farm and moved to Wilmington, where for one year he was engaged as a clerk in the hardware store of David Peoples. At the end of that time he was engaged by J. W. Sparks, as a clerk in the latter's hardware store, and ever since has been found attending to the wants of the customers of that store, he having been for some years manager of the store.

On October 26, 1876, Frank T. Hazard was united in marriage to Luella Miars, who was born in Union township, this county, daughter of Isaiah and Matilda (Babb) Miars, to which union two children were born, both sons, Ethelbert, who operates a laundry in Wilmington, and Loren M., the well-known merchant tailor of Wilmington, the immediate subject of this sketch. Additional details regarding the Hazard family in Clinton county are set out in a biographical sketch of Frank T. Hazard, presented elsewhere in this volume, while the genealogy of the Miars family is set out in a sketch relating to Frank B. Miars, to which the reader is referred for further details regarding the history of that well-known family in this county.

Loren M. Hazard was born in Wilmington, this county, on July 16, 1877, as noted above, son of Frank T. and Luella (Miars) Hazard, and received his elementary education in the public schools of his home city, supplementing this course by a course in Wilmington College. Upon leaving college he entered the tailoring establishment of William Sharkey, in Wilmington, and thoroughly acquainted himself with the details of the tailoring trade as well as modern methods of management, after which, in the year 1904, he opened a tailoring establishment of his own in Wilmington, where he ever since has been very successfully engaged in business. Mr. Hazard is an energetic and enterprising young man and his many customers have come to rely upon the excellent quality and the up-to-date character of the products of his establishment. He has educated his customers to expect none but the best treatment in his place and has built up a very fine and growing trade.

On May 8, 1914, Loren M. Hazard was united in marriage to Jessie Smith, who was born in Highland county, this state, daughter of Elgar and Josephine (Sammons) Smith.

Mr. Hazard is a Mason and has attained to the council degrees in that ancient order. He is a member of the Wilmington lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and is very popular in both these orders. He is public spirited and progressive and holds a high place in the esteem of his older associates in the commercial circles of Wilmington. He keeps a fine-looking place, his shop and show-room, located at No. 112 East Locust street, being arranged for the greatest convenience and comfort of his customers and is well equipped with the most modern appliances for the proper demonstration of the latest developments of the sartorial art.

ALBERT L. HANNAH.

Albert L. Hannah, the proprietor of the Hannah funeral parlors, of Blanchester, Ohio, and a graduate of both the Champion College of Embalming, of Springfield, Ohio, and the Cincinnati College of Embalming, at Cincinnati, was born near Georgetown, in Brown county, Ohio, May 31, 1879, the son of James and Eva (Work) Hannah.

James Hannah is a well-known farmer of Washington township, born March 1, 1849, in Clermont county, Ohio, near Moscow, and the son of Fulton and Almeda (Bryant Hannah, the former of whom was born on February 6, 1819, in Brown county, near Georgetown, and the latter of whom was a daughter of Josiah and Sarah (Gould) Bryant. Fulton Hannah spent all his life as a farmer in Brown county and died there at an advanced age in 1898. He and his wife were the parents of ten children, of whom James was the third in order of birth. The others were William H., Josiah, John, Jesse, George, Edward, Martha, Sarah and Ruth Anna. Fulton Hannah was a Democrat in politics. Educated in the common schools of Brown county, James Hannah began life as a farm hand. In 1895 he moved to Clinton county, and farmed three years in Vernon township, after which he removed to Washington township, his present residence. On June 13, 1878, he was married to Eva L. Work, a native of Brown county, born near Russellville, the daughter of Elijah and Melinda (Brown) Work. Mr. and Mrs. Hannah are the parents of two children, Albert L. and Florence, the latter of whom married Ernest Hurt, and they have one child, James Edwin. The Hannah family are earnest and loyal members of the Friends church. For many years Mr. Hannah has voted the Prohibitionist ticket.
